DICTATION

THE inferentially most exciting and provocative tidings of the week come from the Federal Communications Commission which has decided to decide how much, or if any, the publishers of newspapers may have to do with the broadcasting industry. It started with consideration of the impending F-M, or frequency modulation, system which so lends itself to territorial coverage, and now we are officially informed: " . . . the Commission is placing in its files all applications by newspaper interests for new standard broadcast stations. . . . "

Newspaper control of broadcasting stations, currently, and presumably from now on, so much concerned with the promulgation of the news, would, obviously, carry over to the air the issues of the principle of the free press.

The "free press" has, or is presumed to have, vested institutional rights. The radio, as administered, is not in quite such a position.

A question which seems to be coming forward is whether the function of dissemination of the news, or the method of dissemination, is to be considered the institution. In that the motion picture, too, can have something at stake. Newspapers, it can be remembered, have at times had quite a hand in newsreel production and distribution, and might again. And, besides, the theatre screen is a medium, quite as truly as is radio.

WHAT IS ADVERTISING?

ADVERTISING may be said to sort out into two categories: something to be looked at, or something to be read. One is impression or reiteration of impression—that's to be looked at, felt. Copy to be read, laden with "reason why", is addressed at persons who think, or think they think.

For the last twenty-five years the impression and "proclamation-without-reason" technique has grown in weight and influence, becoming dominant.

The swift, unargued, impression-approach, while pervading all appeals by radio and printed page, has come to its most complete efflorescence and demonstration on the billboards. Billboards always state, and almost never debate or reason.

So now special interest attaches to a presentation of the one hundred best posters, recorded in brochure by Outdoor Advertising, Inc., for the season of 1940 and selected by a jury of advertisers at the eleventh annual exhibition of the art and craft in Chicago.

The foremost manifestation is discovered in an averaging of the verbal appeal. The wordiest billboard carried eighteen words; the most silent, one word. The average for the hundred is 7.8 words per message. That means hit-and-run attention.

Since the address is to the same persons who are to have their attention arrested by motion picture lobbies, advertisements, poster and ballyhoo, an examination of the basic appeals of the chosen one hundred billboards rates examination and attention.

The ratios may, perhaps, be considered as indicative as a possible cross-section of American taste—not determinative, but surely indicative.

DESIGN, surprisingly, dominates eighteen of the boards. It is the appeal of a mere patterning of the display—reminding one not a little of the period in which the motion picture camera technique often overshadowed the story.

ACTION is the essence of fourteen boards; sheer suggestion of movement and speed.

PRETTY GIRL, on her own just because she is pretty, without relevance to anything, is the eye appeal of fifteen of the hundred.

COMEDY commands in six appeals, with the privy or toilet room, a Chic Sales derivative, making four showings. Out-and-out leg-sex commands only two boards. Additionally, the sex impulse covers only six.

HE-MAN presentation rules on five boards, while the "pretty boy" covers six displays.

KIDS, just youngsters interesting because they are young in fact and reaction, make up a significant total of sixteen appeals. By contrast, the "old folks" interest appears in only three instances. The baby, who or which might be expected to be conspicuous, appears in only one of the hundred posters.

ANIMAL appeal is the eye-stopper for fourteen boards, with: four dogs, one hen, one rooster, one horse, one giraffe, one bear and five birds.

PRODUCT, depicted with photographic realism calculated to show the customer what he is to buy, is the essence of fourteen of the billboard messages.

STARS carry the message on only two of the hundred boards. One is Mr. Grantland Rice, sports commentator,; the other is Mr. Mickey Mouse, who appears unnamed—but we'd know him anywhere.

Outstanding in the over-all appearance of this array of the one hundred best boards is the low average quality of the drawing, color and composition. Unhappily, it seems that a certain vagrant abandon, saying "it's good enough and to hell with 'em", has come to advertising art, on the billboards as elsewhere. This represents the general decay of discipline. By far the best poster job in the hundred was on the boards for a Los Angeles beer, called Eastside. There was no motion picture poster in the chosen hundred.

It is dogma of merchandising, and advertising, that "the customer is always right". If he is, he is not an art critic.

AS perhaps not a few of our constant readers will be a-remembering, it has these many years been the contention of Motion Picture Herald that the business of the theatre of the screen is the business of entertainment only.

In consequence, it is with a certain sense of satisfaction that one finds Mr. Buddy G. DeSylva, executive producer for Par-

A Minnesota Solution

AN EXODUS of exchanges from Minnesota was foreseen by some among the major distributors at midweek as an answer to the new Minnesota anti-consent decree law which became effective on Monday, compelling the continuation of the present system of large block sales. (See page 17.)

As a result of Minnesota's outlawing blocks-of-five sales the Big Five were seen facing a confused state as they approached 1941-'42 selling, which, under the consent decree, is to be confined to the offering of blocks of no more than five pictures.

If all other avenues of offsetting the Minnesota law fail, it was indicated that the consenting companies and others might close their offices at Minneapolis and service Minnesota from nearby points in Wisconsin. Business in Minnesota would be solicited by direct mail. The Minnesota territory comprises about 485 theatres in 306 cities and towns, it is reliably estimated. The annual income to distributors from this market is reckoned at $5,000,000.

amount Pictures Corporation, declaring in an interview with Mr. Irving Yergin, of the Chicago bureau of Motion Picture Daily, that: "There is a definite public demand for lighter and gayer film entertainment and therefore Paramount will have an increased number of comedies. . . ."

It is probably still rather clear that the customers are not inclined to go to the theatre seeking something more to worry about. The morning paper and the radio can be depended upon to take care of that.

AN important proportion of the status of our industry of the motion picture reposes in the relation of the local representative, the exhibitor, to his community. That remains a constant of decided stability, while the tides of opinion about the foibles of stars and screen wares rise and fall. So it is pleasant to record that in Detroit Mr. George Trendle, now in radio broadcasting and so long identified with the screen theatre, has been reappointed, to his fifth term, as fire commissioner. This will give Mr. Trendle twenty years of that community service.

Breen Moves

JOSEPH I. BREEN, confirming rumors, has authorized announcement that he is terminating his connection as head of the Production Code Administration in Hollywood.

No successor has been announced, neither has it been stated when Mr. Breen might be leaving his present post, or what arrangements may be made for the continuing of his functions.

It is understood that Mr. Breen has had under consideration a proposal to head the production staff at the RKO studios, at which some changes of personnel are announced and impending.

Arbitration Costs

THE American Arbitration Association on Thursday turned the first quarter-year as conductor of the motion picture exhibition system under the consent decree. With field machinery in 31 tribunal centers now moving with comparative smoothness, the AAA now is turning attention to arbitration costs to exhibitors and to an advanced education of the local arbitrators.

Costs under study by AAA include the $10 filing fee which exhibitors must pay and the $10 for each day of hearings which each party to the hearings must post to cover the arbitrator's fee. The latter amount, or a substantial part of it, may be refunded, however, according to the arbitrator's allocation of costs among the parties involved. Only other costs to the exhibitor are any legal fees, which he may or may not incur. In many cases exhibitors have not hired counsel for the hearings.

Findings of the AAA survey are expected to show that arbitration is even less expensive than originally estimated.

Special Showmanship

FAVORED because of their flexibility in that largely they may be instituted whenever the managers' judgment decides are some "Special Weeks" institutional promotions suggested by E. C. "Manny" Pearlstein, Cleveland Warner theatres advertising and publicity manager. Such promotions as: "See a Picture," "Take a Picture Week"; "Laugh or Happiness Week"; "Home Industries" or "Boost the City Week" and "Community Week" are described in this issue, in the Managers' Round Table, starting on page 51, along with other ways and means of stimulating the boxoffice as reported by theatremen.

'Blue Eagle' Echo

PRESIDENT Roosevelt on Tuesday declined to renew Hugh S. Johnson's commission as a General in the Army reserve. The War Department explained that the General was overweight.

The motion picture industry will remember General Johnson at "fighting weight" when he was the battling administrator of the NRA, out of which came the motion picture code, the largest, considered the strictest, and most all-embracing of the "Blue Eagle" applications of U. S. governmental control of this industry. General Johnson's code application gave the film industry its first real taste of federal supervision. That ended with the nullification of the National Recovery Act in the famous "chicken case" decision of the Supreme Court in May, 1935. Now, six years later, the industry again faces governmental supervision under the consent decree effected by the Department of Justice.

Press Agents Bow

COAST studio publicity directors last Thursday capitulated to the demands by newspaper and magazine correspondents and columnists in Hollywood that they be given opportunity to see films before they are shown to the press in other cities. The formal statement of the Studio Publicity Directors Committee said the publicity directors would "do everything within . . . power to assure that the Hollywood press previews all pictures in advance of any other showings in the United States."

The Newspaper Correspondents Committee, headed by Douglas Churchill of the New York Times had threatened "action" (unspecified) if the current situation persisted.

Capt. Jimmy quits Films

JAMES ROOSEVELT'S interests in the film industry will be "suspended" for the duration of his service in the U. S. Marine Corps and his return to the business at the termination of his tour of active duty is doubtful, it was disclosed in Hollywood this week. His mother, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, told reporters her son would stay in the Marine Corps as long as they needed him, and that he had "forgotten all about business activities."

Confirming the suspension of Captain Roosevelt's film activities was a plan to borrow $350,000 from the Bank of America, Los Angeles, to consolidate all debts remaining from his production of "Pot o' Gold," United Artists release. The loan was revealed when Mr. Roosevelt's agents filed papers with the Los Angeles county clerk. It was indicated that Paulette Goddard and Horace Heidt, stars of the film, had underwritten costs and that Mr. Roosevelt gave his personal note for $50,000. Other liabilities listed included $32,842 to Loew's, Inc.; $15,158 to RCA Manufacturing Co.; $60,960 to Consolidated Film Corp.; and $24,647 to RKO.

Captain Roosevelt meanwhile was reported to have arrived Tuesday at Chunking, provisional Chinese capital, where he is on a confidential U. S. government assignment to confer with Chinese leaders and observe military ordnance and transport.

War Taxes

SIGNS of reactions to a threatening U. S. "double-taxation" of theatre receipts were seen Wednesday.

Anticipating a lowering of the Federal tax exemption on tickets, from 20 cents to nine cents, to bring an additional $55,000,000 annual income to National Defense, independents in Ohio, through the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, cited the reported proposal in Washington to tax film rentals, for another $12,000,000; as "palpably unfair," on the grounds that terms of film contracts provide that any such taxes "shall be borne by the theatre owner." (The war-defense tax story appears on page 15.)

According to the ITO, if the rental tax—of five per cent—is adopted—it would mean that theatre owners would pay additional levies of approximately the following amounts:

Theatre owners paying $100 weekly in film rental, a tax of $5.00 per week; $200—$10; $300—$15; $500—$25; $1,000—$50.

Fiddle Mystery

"SURREALISM," a strange malady which has affected some of the remoter margins of the art world, is now erupting on the screen, with the announcement of a showing of "Object Lesson" at the Embassy Newsreel Theatre in New York, starting May 8.

This week's issue of the HERALD presents a review of the production (on page 41.) by Joseph Coughlin, a distinguished graduate of Fordham University who was, it appears, unable to decide with certainty what the picture was about. It does seem to star a fiddle, an engine, a silk hat and a tennis racket. It is reported that it took one Christopher Young five years to make the picture. No official reason for making it has been revealed. Mr. Coughlin unofficially observed that five years more work would not impair the product.

Mr. Young has made some other professional pictures including one for the government on soil erosion on the Navajo reservation. This was the first indication that there was any soil on the reservation.

Who Owns What

MOTION picture companies are listed prominently among the 200 largest, non-financial, non-banking American corporations, the distribution of whose securities was analyzed by the Temporary National Economic Committee and disclosed Wednesday in a 1550-page monograph released by the TNEC, at Washington.

Designed to show how "a relatively few groups dominate in the ownership of corporate enterprises in this country," the report was based almost entirely on statistics of the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Thirteen groups, it was shown, own over eight per cent of the stock of the 200 companies selected for study. The total number of persons owning corporate stock is placed at between eight and nine million.

Number one corporation in size was the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which also has the largest number of stockholders, 3,859,293.

Film companies listed were Warner Brothers, 108th in size, with 177,545 stockholders; Loew's, Inc., 129th, with 142,544 stockholders, and Paramount Pictures, 148th, with 120,219 stockholders.

Atlas Option Extended

OPTION of the Floyd-Odlum Atlas Corporation to purchase a remaining block of 21,000 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred stock, was extended Wednesday another 60 days. The original option would have expired yesterday. Terms of the extended option remain the same, calling for an indicated aggregate purchase price of $3,500,000 for the M. J. Meehan block.

RKO's board of directors, at a meeting scheduled for Thursday, was expected to approve final arrangements for a $9,500,000 loan from a bank syndicate and Equitable Life Assurance Society, which would be used to acquire the Meehan shares for the RKO treasury. The $6,500,000 balance would be used for the retirement of outstanding B. F. Keith Corporation six per cent bonds, permitting the consolidation with RKO of its two principal theatre subsidiaries, B. F. Keith and KAO.

Jam's 'Jukes'

THE juke-box film industry was further complicated recently by the entrance of Jam Handy into the field with free advertising pictures for the film-slot machines. Jam Handy is a producer of advertising sponsored reels with headquarters in Detroit and an office in New York. Jamieson Handy is president.

The first consignment of 500 machines has been manufactured and is ready for installation. They advertise Lucky Strike cigarettes.

"SHOW 'EM & SELL 'EM" ON THE SPOT, DISTRIBUTORS' AIM UNDER DECREE

Home Office Plans for New Blocks-of-Five Showings Progressing; Morning Screenings in Key Theatres Expected

The where, when and how to trade show pictures in advance of blocks-of-five selling in each of the country's 31 exchange districts as prescribed by the U. S. consent decree is one of the big problems now before the "Big Five" sales executives as they push preparations for the change in selling methods that becomes mandatory on September 1, 1941.

Exhibitors in all sections of the country are turning equally anxious attention to the same problems, and are querying salesmen and branch managers for a hint as to how easy or how difficult it will be for them to view new product before they buy under the new Department of Justice arrangements.

Home office plans for advance screening of the 1941-42 product for buyers in the field are progressing. Sales officials report that they have been devoting extensive study to the question, visiting exchange centers, and talking with district managers and salesmen in order to gauge exhibitor attitude towards the manner and method of the pre-sale screenings ordered by the government in its settlement of its anti-trust suit against the "Big Five."

Local Selling Seen

Conclusions to date indicate that at least a majority of the "Big Five" intend to exercise local selling effort right on the spot of the local screenings, at least among subsequents; that the regional selling and showing will preclude large and expensive national "junkets" for trade and press in behalf of special new-product showmanship promotions; a community of interests will probably result in many key cities in engaging a theatre for advance showings of any number of the "Big Five," where branch office screening accommodations are inadequate; some will have "relay" screenings in their exchange projection rooms; morning hours appear the most practical for the advance showings; pre-release showings of key pictures, in regular exhibitions, may be offered to subsequent run exhibitors as the source of the compulsory advance showings; screening and selling will go hand in hand, at least insofar as subsequent run customers are concerned; screenings, generally, will run about a month ahead of actual release date.

Some sales chiefs express the opinion that attendance at trade showings, after the first month or two, will be negligible. They point out that such was the experience in Great Britain where advance screening has long been required. Other executives feel that by careful planning the trade shows can be made an important part in selling each picture to the exhibitor and in promoting its box office possibilities. It will be remembered that an exhibitor does not have to attend an advance decree showing; the decree merely stipulates that the distributor shall make advance showings available before offering product for sale. There is nothing to stop an exhibitor from buying without seeing.

Among the questions raised by the trade show problem is how far in advance of release will feature be shown to exhibitors. All the consent decree signatories are currently engaged in building substantial backlogs of top product with which to launch their new season in September. RKO Radio, first of the big five to announce a 1941-42 convention, will have its first block ready for the gathering in New York on June 16th, Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of sales disclosed on April 17th. The announcement indicated that they will be available for license, and presumably trade showing, in the field soon thereafter.

The Hollywood production boom as reported in Motion Picture Herald for April 26th (page 14) contains a further hint that all of the consent decree majors are pushing their new product to have it ready for selling by early summer. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was reported to have 14 pictures currently in preparation. Twentieth Century-Fox, it is reported from the studio, will have two blocks ready by July 15th. Paramount is expected to have between ten and fifteen pictures ready by late August with at least one block on hand early in July. Warner Brothers have at least four new season pictures before the cameras now and will probably have their initial block on hand by the end of June.

The capacity of exchange screening rooms, the use of theatres or outside projection halls, the number of pictures to be shown at one screening, the best time, place and conditions for trade shows, and how to correlate trade shows and selling operations are part of the advance trade show problem now being worked out in home offices and exchanges.

Spot Selling Forecast

Screening and selling will go hand in hand to a large extent at the trade shows, a consensus of home office executives indicates. Blocks of five will definitely not be screened in mere compliance with the decree. Exchange managers, salesmen and district chiefs will build entire sales programs around the exhibitor screenings in the belief that by seeing a major picture at the trade show center an exhibitor will learn its exploitation values, and special sales points and realize the value of extra promotion by the theatre, executives declare. They report high morale among their field forces and great interest in giving the new sales system a full trial.

"Certainly we will attempt to sign a contract with the exhibitor following the trade show," one general sales director said. "Salesmen and exchange managers will attend our trade screenings, and there could be no better time to make the sale than then, when an exhibitor has just seen the new product, is enthused over it, and aware of its drawing points."

Promotion for the key pictures in each block of five is likely to center around the trade screenings, which will be shown, according to present indications, from two weeks to a month before general release. In some quarters it is felt that regional promotional efforts will bring an end to the present practice of a "national hoopla," with press and star junkets, to build publicity simultaneous with release in first run spots throughout the country. Under the decree selling, the necessity of trade showing to exhibitors in advance of sale may lead to varied release dates, according to the sales region, it was stated, placing emphasis on a regional buildup rather than national as at present.

At least two companies expressed dissent with this view however. They will continue with national advertising and publicity and their officials expressed the belief that there would be slight variance in the date of regional trade shows or release. Distributors are not worried over the availability of sufficient prints for simultaneous trade showings. It is pointed out however that the manufacture of prints from negative and lavendars will probably be speeded up, to meet the demand for trade show copies as soon as possible after completion of a picture.

Screening Maximum Set

The number of pictures screened at a single trade show will be limited to two, or at a maximum three, the home offices report. In many instances when an outstanding film, or extra long feature is exhibited it will be the sole picture on the particular trade show billing. It is pointed out that in most cases a block of five will be used by a theatre over a period of several weeks or a month or more, making simultaneous trade showing unlikely. A block of five will probably be trade shown over a period of three to five weeks.

Distributors admit that it will be impossible for an exhibitor to attend all screenings of all companies. But they will make special efforts to have him present at trade showings of the leading picture in each block of five.

Selling efforts following the trade shows will be a strictly business proposition, it is indicated. "There will be no wining or dining, or high pressure promotion" one official asserted. "We are going to sell our pictures on their merits, and are confident they have many." His view found echo in other home offices where officials said their plans include promotion on sound merchandising principles rather than ballyhoo.

Trade papers, as specified by the decree, will remain the most important medium of advising theatre operators of screening dates and locations, sales heads agreed. In addition, one company will mail notices to exhibitors when so requested, another will place supplementary notification in the hands of branch managers and salesmen in contact with exhibitors. None of the companies as yet has announced that it will send trade show notices to its entire mailing list for every screening. It is generally felt that the cost of such a project would be excessive.

The consent decree, as signed by Paramount, Loew's Inc., RKO, 20th Century-Fox, and Warner Brothers, is very specific in its prescription of tradeshows and the definition thereof. Section III of the decree signed at New York on October 29, 1940 states:

"No consenting defendant engaged in the distribution of motion pictures shall license or offer for license a feature motion picture for public exhibition within the United States of

ADVISE HALT ON TICKET BUYING

Theatre owners are advised to wait at least one month before ordering any additional supply of tickets, by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a bulletin which predicts that the new tax measures advocated by the Treasury Department, one of which recommends the dropping of exemptions on tickets to 9 cents, would "undoubtedly be enacted and approved some time within the next 30 days".

GOVERNMENT WOULD KEEP THE "FREE PRESS" AND RADIO FURTHER APART

FCC Forbids New Press Activities in Either FM or Standard Broadcasting Pending Probe of Newspapers' Air Control

The Government, through the agency of the Federal Communications Commission, this week again "cracked down" on newspaper ownership or control of radio stations, serving notice that no action would be taken on applications and no transfers of existing stations to newspapers would be permitted pending review of newspaper participation in radio at public hearings before the Commission, at which the Government will rule on newspaper participation in any radio activity. A similar policy, but restricted to FM stations, was announced March 20th.

The official statement of FCC policy on newspaper standard broadcast stations received hardly any attention in the press, having been sent out over the weekend when newspaper city rooms are ordinarily quiet and the release was given an uninformative title, "Policy with respect to applications by newspapers for new or extended standard broadcast facilities."

At the time the FCC order was being issued publishers controlling several hundred newspapers were attending the closing sessions of the American Newspaper Publishers Association convention in New York. At the convention it became known that newspaper publishers who control about 32 percent of the nation's broadcast stations had voted a $200,000 "war chest" to fight the FCC order against newspaper activity in FM radio.

Wide Significance Seen

In Washington it was reported that the actions of the FCC against newspaper participation in radio would lead to a complete reexamination of the effects of such dual control. It was also indicated that if the control of any radio station by a newspaper is finally decided as not "in the public interest, convenience and necessity," the FCC might consider activities of other groups such as motion picture interests in radio.

The Government move against the press in radio was said by some observers to be not without political significance also. It was pointed out that a high percentage of the country's newspapers opposed the New Deal at the last election.

The FCC announced that the temporary ban on new or extended newspaper participation in radio was "intended to protect newspapers from incurring substantial radio expenditures prior to the Commission's fact-finding inquiry." This was interpreted by some to mean that newspaper activity in broadcasting was seriously on trial.

The dates for the hearing at which the whole matter will be explored have not been set. It was reported that the hearing might not be held until the autumn, meanwhile newspaper applications for new radio stations which receive no consideration and no permission for acquiring an existing station will be granted. But improvements may be made in stations already licensed to newspapers provided that the improvements are shown to be "in the public interest, convenience and necessity, and in conformity with prescribed engineering requirements."

Last week newspaper publishers owning radio stations voted $200,000 for a "war chest" and established a permanent organization to defend their interests in radio before the FCC. Harold V. Hough, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and representing KGKO and WBAP in Fort Worth, is head of the committee.

E. M. Antrim, representing the Chicago Tribune and station WGN, resigned from the committee claiming that there was not "sufficient assurance" that the $200,000 "war chest" would be "devoted exclusively" to protect press interests in radio. It was asserted that the newspaper stations might be drawn into a "harmful" alliance with the networks. Mr. Antrim is executive secretary and a director of the Mutual Broadcasting System which has opposed the position of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System on the so-called monopoly report of the FCC.

WGN had been asked to contribute $10,000 to the press-radio "war chest," being the only station in the class with an income of over $1,000,000. Rates ranged down to $50 for stations with an income of $15,000. Former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher, author of the "Thacher decision" which outlawed the original motion picture compulsory arbitration system in 1930 and acted for Paramount in the Federal anti-trust suit which ended in the consent decree, is counsel for the publisher's radio committee. His associate is Sidney Kaye, counsel and general manager of Broadcast Music, Inc.

Specific Policies Attacked

Newspaper radio operations which may be the target of attack from the FCC are said to include the use of a joint rate card, use of newspaper space to advertise a controlled radio station and corresponding discrimination against competing radio stations and any other activity which might show that publishers were attempting to use stations to further newspapers and newspapers to further radio stations rather than operating the stations, as required, "in public interest, convenience and necessity."

During the ANPA convention in New York observers pointed out that this was the first time in many years that questions concerning radio were not brought up from the floor for discussion. It was reported that the publishers wished to leave the whole radio problem in the hands of the special broadcast committee, especially until the situation brought up by the FCC is clarified.

On the subject of advertising in the newspapers and in radio Edwin S. Friendly, chairman of the committee in charge of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, told the delegates that during the past year:

"The ninety-six largest magazine advertisers added 13.9 per cent to their newspaper expenditures, while the eighty-four largest radio advertisers spent 6.1 per cent more in newspapers. In passing it should be said that these radio advertisers showed a loss in their newspaper expenditures of $261,000 in 1939, as compared with 1938, but in 1940 they showed a gain of $3,586,000 over the previous year."

National newspaper advertising has increased 8.2 percent in the period from 1938 to 1940 and shows promise of further substantial gains, it was also reported.

THEATRE SEAT TAX PROPOSED

If the borough council of Munhall, Pa., passes an ordinance, given its first reading April 16th, the city's only theatre will have to pay a tax of $5.65 a month to continue operating.

According to the present terms of the projected bill, all theatres with a seating capacity of 300 or less will pay the $3.00 fee, and all theatres with more than 300 seats will pay one cent more for every seat over 300.

Munhall has one theatre, the Park, with 565 seats. It is operated by Robert Stahl, whose family also own the Leona and Stahl theatres in Homestead, an adjoining suburb.

Distributors Aim At Spot Selling

America at which an admission fee is to be charged, until the feature has been trade shown within the exchange district in which the public exhibition is to be held. Every trade showing shall be preceded by a notice, published in a trade publication having general circulation among exhibitors in such exchange district, which shall state the title of the picture and the date and the time when and the place or places where it will be trade shown."

Screening rooms in most of the exchanges contain no more than 50 or 60 seats. In many a maximum of 20 exhibitors can be accommodated. If the response is large, as it is expected to be for at least awhile, managers of exchanges will exhibit their product in local theatres, or run screenings in relays. Several of the distributors, with extensive theatre holdings, will try to schedule trade shows for their circuit houses during the morning hours. In other situations they will rent theatres for the exhibitor screenings.

Plans to use a common trade show location by all of the "Big 5," or any combination of the "Big Five," are reported to be under consideration in several cities. Home offices have received numerous bids from theatre operators seeking to rent their screens for trade shows during morning hours. In some instances theatre owners have offered to reopen dark houses as a trade show center if assured of a sufficient number of screenings. The communal scheme is still under debate with problems of time allotment, division of the cost and other factors still to be worked out. If response to the trade showings is heavier than is currently anticipated there is a possibility that the majors will contract for the long term use of a screening center, or, in some locations, even build a common screening room capable of accommodating several hundred exhibitors.

In larger cities such as New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Francisco and Los Angeles it is held likely that each company will conduct its trade shows independently. Communal screening arrangements will be restricted to areas where the limited number of customers would make separate screening theatres or new screening rooms uneconomic, exchange supervisors predict.

CONGRESS LOOKING FOR 67 MILLIONS IN TAXES FROM RENTALS, THEATRES

Exhibition and Hollywood Study Possible Effects of Lowered Ticket Exemption, Greatly Increased Levies on Income

The Congressional House Ways and Means Committee, preparing to write the emergency and regular Revenue Act of 1941, this week had before it a number of proposals, some to affect films and theatres, for the raising of the $3,500,000,000 or more which the Treasury desires in the way of new revenue, and was hearing witnesses from various affected industries.

The committee had under consideration the Treasury proposal for a reduction of the admission tax exemption to nine cents, from the present 20 cents, which it is estimated would develop an additional $55,000,000 a year; and, as one of the alternative ways to raising funds to offset lower income taxes than proposed by the Treasury, a plan for re-adoption of the World War rental tax which, at five per cent, would bring in about $12,000,000 annually.

As first witnesses appeared before the committee it became evident that opposition to any of the new or increased business taxes would receive no sympathy unless based on something more substantial than fears of reduced business.

Increase Protested

Meanwhile, Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, this week pledged his organization to "do everything possible to keep the industry from being discriminated against in the matter of taxation." He added:

"Because of the insistence of treasury officials on the defense needs, little can be done on admission tax proposals. The MPTOA is working on changing the student tax, and that on men in uniform. However, present proposals may be changed to include all amusements that are now exempt."

In Hollywood, reaction became more marked each day, as speculation grew on what the situation of each person in the production capital would be, under possible new tax situations. It was pointed out that many players and directors operate on a free-lance basis, and that, because new taxes may assume all their income above a certain point, these persons might find it profitable not to work, or to work less, after reaching certain income levels. The situation is fraught with significance for the studios in the instances of certain well known players who have refused to remain on contract bases.

Speculation, too, in Washington, is centering upon a possible wave of buying to counter the expected excise taxes. Strangely enough, it was noted, this wave would not flow to theatres; it would be a wave of buying of necessities and certain luxuries before steep excise taxes hit them. Theatre attendance does not enter into these calculations.

There is some optimism felt, however. Defense spending, already seen in some localities, is expected to reach theatres shortly. However, in this case, the smaller, neighborhood type theatres are expected chief gainers.

Apropos of the new taxes' effect upon production and distribution, the Wall Street Journal remarked on Monday that companies with chains of theatres would suffer heavily by expected lower exemption rates on capital investments; and it mentioned Paramount and its chain of affiliated theatres. It also remarked that the proposed rates on film rentals will come out of the earnings of the big producers, and that the picture companies may soon suffer from the excess profits taxes, if their improvements in profits continue.

Over the weekend, Colin F. Stam, chief of staff of the joint Congressional committee on internal revenue taxation, recommended re-adoption of the World War I tax on the lease of films, which, as mentioned, would bring an estimated $12,000,000 annually. That rental tax was 15 cents on each reel of approximately 1,000 feet, collected from the exhibitor by the distributor for the Government.

A seating tax was predicted by some observers.

The committee started hearings Tuesday. As it began, signs appeared of a break between it and the Treasury department.

Last week, as the full extent of the new taxes only gradually became apparent, it was also apparent the film industry would be hit in more ways than by direct taxes or income of its patrons reduced by direct income taxes. The Treasury had proposed, it was understood, taxes of two cents each on bank checks; of 10 per cent on photographic apparatus of all kinds; of the same on phonograph records; increased rates on long-distance telephone, telegraph, and cable messages; five per cent on telephone bills; five per cent on transportation tickets costing more than 35 cents; an increase of from 5½ to 10 per cent in taxes on radio sets and parts; and a one cent additional tax per gallon on gasoline.

Although Mr. Kuykendall's statement was the first from a large national exhibitor group, and represented the film industry's alarm over the new situation, the national Allied States Association was expected to declare shortly.

Abram F. Myers, general counsel, said last week in Washington the organization's directors were being asked their opinions, and that organization policy would rest upon these.

The Cooperative Theatres of Michigan on Monday conveyed its thoughts to the members of the House committee. It also conveyed those of numerous exhibitor groups throughout the nation which it had wired Friday, April 25th, for a stand on the following Cooperative proposals: That the present tax exemptions of 21 cents be eliminated except on children's tickets; that the tax cover all amusements; and that it be applied to amusements as such, not only to admissions.

It was said the following organizations backed Cooperative's stand: Butterfield Theatres circuit; the MPTO of Kentucky; the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri, and Southern Illinois; the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana; the MPTO of Connecticut; the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska; the South Dakota Exhibitors' organizations; the Intermountain Theatres Association, and the Allied of Louisiana.

Lower State Levy in California Asked

Speaker Gordon Garland last week proposed to the California Assembly that it lower state taxes to counter-balance increased Federal levies. He envisioned reduction of from 3 to 2½ per cent in the state sales tax, and a drop of 15 per cent in taxes on banks and corporation franchises, personal income, inheritances, gross premiums of insurance companies, distilled spirits, beer, and wine.

His proposals were immediately opposed. The politicians at Sacramento called Mr. Garland's ideas "premature." They said the state should think of building a surplus before easing the burden of the taxpayer.

Increased admissions taxes for amusements were rejected last week by a free conference committee of the South Carolina legislature. The committee is now considering a higher income tax measure, recommended by the House.

The Florida legislature this week still mulled the proposal to authorize Sunday showings.

20% War Tax to Raise $7,000,000 Surprises Canadian Owners

While the U. S. Congress debated new revenue measures for the 1942 budget, added war tax burdens surprised Canadian exhibitors on Tuesday when a 20 per cent amusement tax was announced in a new national budget. The new federal impost, expected to secure $7,000,000 a year for the dominion government, came as a complete surprise following recent belief that a new Canadian theatre levy could be avoided because of its inconvenience. The levy will be in addition to the $2,000,000 a year now collected by the provincial governments with the exception of Ontario.

Theatre interests will demand an interpretation of the tax's scope it was reported at Toronto, because Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley referred only to motion picture entertainment. He will be asked why legitimate theatre, sports events and concerts will not also be taxed, as in the case of provincial admission levies.

J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., largest circuit in the Dominion, said it was "a complete surprise that it should be such a high tax", and added that the industry expected some tax but had not expected to be hit so hard.

A further burden to the Canadian film industry was included in a prohibition of all erections, alterations and additions for business property except under license. The ban will stop theatre construction to conserve labor and materials. A tax exemption on business materials will also be ended, restricting film industry construction.

WILL FIGHT 'SABOTAGE', SAYS U.S., AS MINNESOTA ENACTS ANTI-DECREE LAW

Constitutional Test of State Law To Be Sought; Arnold Sees Companies Which Signed Decree in "Hazardous" Spot

The Department of Justice and the "Big Five," faced with states-rights legislation threatening the motion picture consent decree, looked to a test of the validity of the Minnesota anti-blocks-of-five selling statute, which became law on Monday. Governor Harold E. Stassen signed the bill at Minneapolis Monday afternoon, less than a week after the measure was approved by thumping majorities in both houses of the Minnesota legislature.

The Minnesota bill, which outlaws the blocks of five selling provision of the federal decree was considered a victory for small town exhibitors who urged its passage through Northwest Allied, under the leadership of Fred Strom, executive secretary. The law became effective immediately upon Governor Stassen's signature. All pictures of a season's program in the state of Minnesota must be offered for sale, with exhibitors receiving the right to cancel up to twenty per cent of the total yearly offering. In effect, the law maintains the present system of large block sales. The offering of single "special" productions is no longer permissible, under the law, thus abolishing an old selling practice.

"Hazardous Position"

Thurman W. Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney-general, gave the first hint of federal opposition to the Minnesota bill when he arrived in New York on April 23rd for a speaking engagement. "The Minnesota legislation places the consenting companies in a hazardous position," he told reporters. At the time Mr. Arnold denied the Department would ask Governor Stassen to veto the bill, saying that it was federal policy not to intervene in state legislation.

No specific indications of how the Department of Justice would attack the Minnesota block-booking law were disclosed in Washington this week, but officials were said to be determined not to permit the new law to sabotage the consent decree without a fight. Questioned regarding their future plans, officials said it was "too early" to discuss them, but it was definitely indicated that the statute would be challenged sooner or later, either by the Federal Government, the distributors, or both.

Although there was no official comment, there were suggestions that the department might leave it to the distributors to attack the act, possibly intervening as amicus curiae in any court proceeding that might be brought. As an alternative the Government might wait until the distributors filed a petition for relief from the consent decree, under Section XXIII, and then ask the Federal court to pass on the validity of the Minnesota law.

Justice officials were represented as feeling definitely that the relief section of the decree was not to be invoked merely because some state had passed a law running counter to the decree's selling provisions and that the court would want to take into consideration the question of the validity of such an enactment. Since Minnesota has attempted, in its booking law, to deal with interstate commerce, they were said to believe the statute was vulnerable to attack on constitutional grounds.

Text of First Anti-Blocks-of-5-Law

The Minnesota bill which Governor Harold E. Stassen signed into law on Monday, at Minneapolis, in the first successful states-right attack on the blocks-of-five consent decree requirements, as set down by the U. S. Department of Justice, is considered in some quarters to be a model of similar bills expected to be introduced in other states. The complete text of the bill follows:

S. F. No. 651

Introduced by Messrs. Sletvold and Mullin.
February 21, 1941.
Referred to Committee on General Legislation.
Reported back March 20, 1941.

A BILL for an Act Relating to the Distribution of Motion Picture Films, Providing Terms and Conditions of Licensing the Same, and providing Penalties for Violation of This Act.

Whereas, The motion picture industry is made up of three branches, namely, production, distribution and exhibition; and

Whereas, The production and distribution branches are dominated and controlled by eight major companies with great economic power, and exhibition is accomplished through two classes of theatre owners, namely, those wholly owned or affiliated with the producer-distributors, and independent exhibitors; and

Whereas, The major producer-distributors license, lease and distribute substantially all of the feature motion pictures exhibiting in the State of Minnesota and the other States of the Union; and the needs of the independent exhibitor require that he license or lease feature motion pictures from substantially all the major producer-distributors; and

Whereas, By reason of arbitrary terms and conditions imposed by the producer-distributors, the independent exhibitor has been:

(a) compelled as a condition precedent to licensing feature motion pictures, to also license short subjects, newsreels, trailers, serials, re-issues, foreign and western pictures far in excess of his needs or requirements;

(b) unable to cancel feature motion pictures injurious and damaging to his business, and therefore compelled to play pictures offensive, on moral, religious or racial grounds, and undesirable and harmful to the public; and

Whereas, The long established trade practice of licensing feature motion pictures for a full season (one year) is essential to the best interests of the producer-distributors, exhibitors, and the public; but the above conditions imposed by the producer-distributors have subjected the independent exhibitors to unfair disadvantages, preventing him from responding to the community and local public influence and preferences with respect to selection of desirable feature motion picture films and are inimicable to public welfare and against public policy;

Now, Therefore,
Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Minnesota:

SECTION 1. DEFINITIONS. For the purpose of this act, unless the context otherwise provides:

(a) the term "person" includes an individual, partnership, association, joint stock company, trust or corporation;

(b) the term "distributor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the distribution of motion picture films and is a resident of or legally authorized to do business in this State;

(c) the term "exhibitor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the exhibition of motion picture films and is a resident of or legally authorized to do business in this State;

(d) the term "license" includes the offering, intending or making of a license agreement, contract, or any type of agreement whereby a film, the distribution of which is controlled by one of the parties is to be supplied to and exhibited in a theatre owned, controlled or operated by the other party;

(e) the term "feature motion picture film" means all motion pictures, whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted, including positive and negative prints and copies or reproductions of such prints, which films contain photoplays or other subjects and are produced for public exhibition. The term shall not include films commonly known as short subjects, news-reels, trailers, serials, re-issues, foreign and western pictures, and road shows;

(f) the term "exhibition season" shall mean a period of twelve months as may be selected by the producer-distributor; provided, however, that there shall be no lapse of time between the termination of one season and the beginning of the next.

SEC. 2. No distributor shall hereafter license feature motion picture films to an exhibitor to

Wires from Minneapolis distributor quarters Wednesday reported that distributors' representatives there were without any instructions as to what to do under decree selling for the new season, fast approaching. Since the bill has become law and operations will have to be carried out under its terms, the sales managers there were expecting orders from New York within a few days.

Department Guidance Sought

Meanwhile counsel for the Big Five met at New York to consider what course of action was open to contest the Minnesota bill. At a preliminary conference on April 23rd lawyers expressed their positive intention of testing the validity of the law signed by Governor Stassen. Specific steps were postponed, however, pending an examination of the bill as signed and consultation with the Department of Justice in the hope that the United States would offer guidance on the course to be followed.

Two avenues of challenge appeared open to the distributors. One would involve a violation of the Minnesota statute and a test conviction and appeal through the Minnesota courts. Another method would involve a direct appeal to the Federal courts seeking relief from the blocks-of-five provision of the decree, now in conflict with the Minnesota law. This, if denied, would open the way to a ruling by the United States Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the state law. Attorneys expressed the belief that the government would permit the distributors to initiate action.

Governor Stassen signed the block booking law in his executive offices on Monday in the presence of Senator A. O. Sletvold of Detroit Lakes, its co-author, and E. L. Peaslee, president, and Fred Strom, executive secretary of Allied Theatres of the Northwest, who marshalled support for the bill at House and Senate hearings and urged its passage by the legislature.

"I am convinced the seasonal block purchase plan is better for exhibitors in Minnesota than is the plan set up in the New York consent decree," Governor Stassen stated, adding that he had studied the bill and discussed it with several exhibitors. He rejected numerous appeals for his veto. J. A. A. Burnquist, state attorney general, had previously approved the statute.

"Chaos" Denied

The bill's sponsors, and other observers in Minneapolis admitted that the Minnesota law would complicate sales procedure of the Big Five, now being adapted to blocks-of-five selling, but denied that it would preclude selling in Minnesota. They asserted the film distributors were already planning dual sales systems for next year to supply product in seasonal blocks to Canada and to affiliated circuits exempted from the consent decree provisions.

Mr. Strom and Mr. Peaslea credited rural and small town theatre operators with swinging the legislature behind the Northwest measure. "Their relentless drive and continuous contact with their local representatives and senators made victory possible. It shows what a determined membership, and coordinated effort between Twin City and country exhibitors can do," the Allied officers said. Following passage of the bill by a Senate vote of 53 to 8, Allied drafted a resolution of thanks to Senator Sletvold, a legislative veteran, for his "masterly handling" of the bill.

A Nebraska bill to divorce film distributors and producers from the operation of theatres or the control of exhibition was buried this week under a heap of 15 bills tabled indefinitely to await committee action. Lincoln observers considered the measure, last of four designed to cost the state show business $600,000 a year, as dead for the rest of this session. An exact duplicate of the bill died in the 1939 session. Senator E. M. Neubauer of Orlean offered both measures.

More Michigan Curbs

A bill limiting screen performances to two and a half hours was submitted to the Michigan House of Representatives at Lansing on April 24th, in a new drive to curb the film industry, by Representative Raymond J. Snow who recently filed an anti-consent decree bill closely patterned on the Minnesota law. The time bill, House Act Number 468, was introduced as a health measure amending the existing statute which transferred theatre control from the state fire marshal to state police.

Patterned closely after the Missouri anti-double feature bill sponsored by the St. Louis Better Films Council, the proposed Michigan law limits continuous screen performances to 150 minutes, and specifies that a 15-minute intermission shall intervene at the start of each hour in excess of two and a half. Unlike the Missouri bill it does not require a 15-minute intermission between repeat performances if the bill does not exceed 150 minutes.

Representative Snow said his measure, aimed at double, triple, and super-length shows, was introduced at the request of numerous correspondents and of persons who had supported his block booking bill. The latter is still pending on the legislative calendar.

be exhibited, shown or performed in this State unless the license provides:

(a) that all the feature motion picture films, which such distributor will license during the exhibition season, or the unexpired portion thereof, shall be included. The term "all the feature motion picture films" shall apply to each producer for whom the distributor is acting.

(b) that the exhibitor shall have the right to cancel a minimum of twenty per cent of the total number of feature motion pictures included in such license where the exhibitor deems the same injurious and damaging to his business or offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds. Such cancellation shall be made proportionately among the several price brackets, if there be such price brackets in the license agreement. Any number of cancelations to which an exhibitor is entitled, may be made from the lowest price bracket at the exhibitor's option.

The right to cancellation shall not be effective, unless the exhibitor exercises such right by giving notice thereof, to the distributor, by registered mail, within fifteen days after being notified of the availability of a feature motion picture. In determining the number of feature motion pictures that may be cancelled, fractions of one-half or more shall be counted as one and fractions of less than one-half shall not be counted.

Sec. 3. No distributor shall license feature motion picture films to an exhibitor to be exhibited, shown or performed in this State, upon the condition that the exhibitor must also license short subjects, news-reels, trailers, serials, re-issues, foreign and western motion picture films.

Sec. 4. Any provision of any license hereafter made and entered into which is contrary to any provisions of this Act, is hereby declared to be against public policy and void.

Sec. 5. Every person violating any provisions of this Act, or assisting in such violation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or, in default of the payment of such fine, by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year. In the case of a corporation, the violation of this Act shall be deemed to be also that of the individual directors, officers or agents of such corporation who have assisted in such violation, or who have authorized, ordered or done the acts or omissions constituting, in whole or in part, such violation, and upon conviction, thereof, any such directors, officers or agents shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, as in this section provided.

Sec. 6. If any provision of this Act is declared unconstitutional or the applicability thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Act and the applicability of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 7. The provisions of this act shall not apply to the licensing of motion picture films to any school, college, university, church, or any educational, fraternal or religious organization in this State.

William F. Wrightnour Joins Springer Pictures

Springer Pictures, Inc., New York, through its president, Ray W. Springer, has announced the appointment of William F. Wrightnour to the position of general sales manager. Mr. Wrightnour resigned as manager of budget merchandising for United States Rubber Company to assume his new duties.

Mr. Wrightnour has had many years in sales management and merchandising, during which he lectured and taught the subject of "Psychology of Merchandising."

Pioneers Dinner Planned

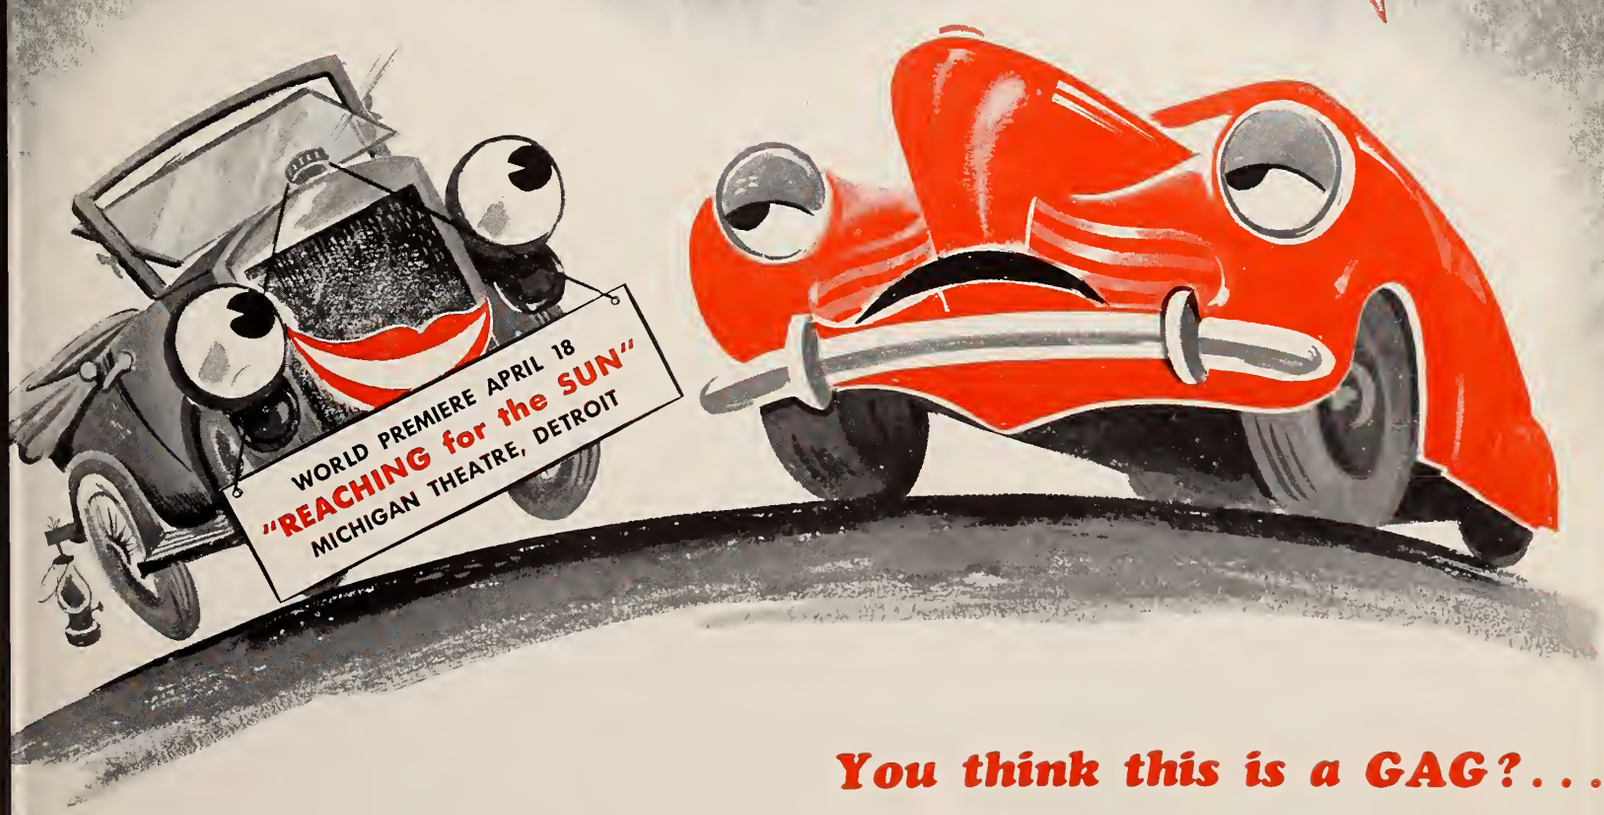
Plans are now being formulated by the executive committee of the Picture Pioneers in New York for the annual Spring Conference Dinner during the third week of May, according to Jack Cohn, House Manager for the organization. Applications for membership have been received by the organization from Pete Smith, MGM short subject producer; Hal Horne, Disney representative; Max Lefkowich, Cleveland exhibitor; William R. Ferguson, MGM exploitation head, and Jack H. Levin, head of the Copyright Protection Bureau.

"Warner Follies" in Capital

House managers, ushers and Warner circuit executives joined the chorus line and contributed song and dance specialties at the Earle theatre, Washington, last Saturday late Saturday midnight in the first version of the "Warner Follies." The employe's show was dedicated to John J. Payette, Warner zone manager, and presented before 2,000 guests.

Bausch Museum Building Begun

Construction has begun on the new Edward Bausch Hall of Science and History, to be part of the Museum of Arts and Sciences, in Rochester. The cornerstone was laid last week at special ceremonies attended by several thousand persons, among them civic officials and scientists. Principal speaker at the ceremonies was Dr. Robert A. Milliken, physicist and head of the California Institute of Technology. Other speakers were Mayor Samuel B. Dicker and Dr. Arthur C. Parker, director of the Museum. Among those present were Dr. John R. Williams, and members of the Municipal Museum Commission; and Dr. Albert Kaiser, president of the Museum Association.



Dr. Milliken said in part: "In the history of any institution, the word 'progress' is dependent upon two things. It means the passing on of the accumulated knowledge of the past, and adding something to it as we transmit it from generation to generation; so that, in the long sweep of time, every institution that is concerned with the history of progress must have that history represented in libraries and museums."

Court Ends Paramount Claims

Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe in New York on Tuesday expunged claims against Paramount for $1,000,000 each filed by De Forest Phonofilm Corp. and General Talking Pictures, Inc., during the Paramount reorganization in 1934. The claims, involving patent infringement, were dropped with consent of all parties.

METROPOLITAN FINAL EDITION

"Reaching for the Sun," based on Wessel Smitter's popular novel, "F.O.B. Detroit," had its world premiere at the Michigan Friday, without the fuss and feathers marking some similar occasions in the past. The usual Hollywood fanfare was not missed by those who gave close attention to the engrossing story. At the same time the comedy angle is stressed, particularly in the matrimonial and paternal angles, which helps to lighten the story, while the battle between the newlyweds, the flashes that come so near to wrecking their bark, give frequent emotional tugs. William A. Wellman's direction is good and the picture will please adults particularly.

—LEN G. SHAW

"Paramount's 'Reaching for the Sun' is mainly slapstick comedy . . . but the fight scene is really big stuff and thoroughly thrilling." —James Francis Crow, Los Angeles Citizen News

"Paramount's 'Reaching for the Sun' is an entertaining and delightful tragi-comedy of marriage. This definitely is one of William Wellman's inspired productions." —Jimmy Starr, Los Angeles Evening Herald and Express

"Paramount's 'Reaching for the Sun' is off the beaten track, a refreshing change from the repetitious similarity of much of the ordinary film material." —Daily Variety

"William Wellman packs all the comedy possible into his direction of Paramount's 'Reaching for the Sun' . . . a brief synopsis does not do justice to the picture's many comedy scenes." —Hollywood Reporter

RCA CALLS ON FILMS FOR SHOWS FOR $30,000 THEATRE TELEVISION SETS

Motion Picture Industry Asked to Recognize "Opportunity" as Program Source; Complete Theatre Projection Televisors

The Radio Corporation of America, number one developer of television in this country and now ready with large screen television for theatres, last weekend hurled a challenge at Hollywood in particular, and the motion picture industry in general, to recognize "the opportunity" of becoming the source of program supply for the new art "before some one else," of undescribed identity, moves in ahead.

Radio, as represented by RCA and its affiliates, including National Broadcasting Company, definitely has no intention of acting in any other capacity than the telecaster to homes. Public television to theatres and auditoriums, believes RCA, is another, and distinct business. The film industry has remained aloof to any television bids for programs.

This was the declaration made on behalf of RCA on Friday of last week at a luncheon meeting for the motion picture trade press at the Waldorf Astoria in New York by Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president in charge of sales for the RCA Manufacturing Company, the organization which has developed and now wishes to market its television projector designed for theatre use. The equipments will cost $30,000 each, take five months to deliver.

The Federal Communications Commission, meanwhile, let it be known from Washington that the "go-ahead" signal for commercial television operations is to be given within the next few weeks. Enthusiasm created in television circles by this word from the Commission was dampened by the announcement by General Electric this week that it would freeze its radio models for the duration of the emergency. This was interpreted to mean that facilities would not be available for the manufacture of television receivers even if commercial operations were permitted.

Allen B. DuMont Addresses SMPE

Allen B. DuMont, president of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate, addressed the Atlantic Coast section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers last week on the subject, "Latest Developments in Television." Mr. DuMont indicated an order for early commercialization of television was expected from the FCC.

Following a special demonstration for exhibitors and other members of the motion picture industry on May 9, next Friday evening, at the New Yorker theatre, RCA will be ready to market the $30,000 project, although the corporation plans no program service, Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president in charge of sales for the RCA Manufacturing Company, explained last week.

In the February 1, 1941 issue of Motion Picture Herald (pages 30 and 31) there was printed a description of the RCA projector and the effects of theatre television as demonstrated for the FCC, as well as pictures of the projector in the theatre.

The chief purpose of the demonstration on May 9 will be to show the "possibilities of theatre television," Mr. Joyce said. After that, he added, it will be up to "Hollywood or some other group to organize a program service for theatres.

"If the motion picture industry does not see the possibilities, some one else will," he remarked.

The aim of theatre television is to supplement and not supplant motion pictures, it was said. Programs such as sporting events of all kinds, including prize fights, horse races, baseball and football games, have been suggested for theatre television.

Mr. Joyce even advanced the idea that some day theatre box-offices might serve also as betting windows when the theatre, equipped for television, was featuring horse races.

RCA believes, it was reported, that from 50 to 100 theatre television sets can be sold immediately, which would mean delivery probably within from nine months to a year or more Within five years, a national or sectional network of some 500 theatres equipped for television is considered the goal, Mr. Joyce said.

The $30,000 projectors which probably would eventually sell for about half that figure if orders warrant anything like mass production would be sold on a cash or credit basis by RCA. After acquiring the projector the exhibitor would have to contract with the Telephone Company to set up special wires to bring the programs to the theatre. It was estimated that a typical wire charge in New York City would be about $200 per week. Programs of special sporting events will cost additionally, per event.

RCA Unit Requires Special Size Lens

The RCA television projector, based on the Schmidt astronomical camera principle, requires a special lens which is several feet in diameter. As installed in the New Yorker theatre where a 15 by 20 feet image is projected the throw is about 60 feet and the equipment is installed in the first rows of the balcony. A number of seats would have to be removed in any theatre which installed the television projector. Rear projection would solve that difficulty, it was said, but the amount of light is not sufficient for this in the present RCA theatre television system.

The motion picture projectionist could be trained to operate the television apparatus, it was said.

The principal obstacle in the way of theatre television progress at this time, assuming that the demonstration of the equipment impressed exhibitors, is a guaranteed program supply.

Mr. Joyce admitted that it would be a mistake for an exhibitor or anyone else to buy or contract for a projector until some arrangements were made for programs. This fact seems to limit the practicality of theatre television, in the near future, to the metropolitan New York area. But it was pointed out that Philadelphia is linked to New York by a telephone company co-axial cable and programs can now be carried from those two cities—that is if cost is not a factor. The coaxial cable to Philadelphia was installed at a reported cost of 10 cents per foot or about a half million dollars.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, was said to believe that the company and its affiliates should confine their attentions to home television and and for this reason neither RCA nor NBC will furnish a television program service for theatres even though, at present, the RCA Manufacturing Company is the only group attempting to market theatre television projectors in this country. RCA wants to make and sell the $30,000 machines but wants the film interest or other groups to organize a program company which would service the houses equipped with the apparatus.

Mr. Joyce said that some group shortly will be offering such a service in the New York area. Among the groups expected to take a part in such an organization, if the motion picture industry does not assume the task, were said to be Madison Square Garden, Mike Jacobs and his 20th Century Sporting Club and possibly producers of stage plays.

Mike Jacobs was reported to be thinking about offering such a service. About 65 events are presented in Madison Square Garden each year and all of these would be suitable for theatre television, it was said, although the best attractions are said to be the prize fights, many of which are controlled by Mr. Jacobs.

Equipment Maintenance Would Cost $25 to $50

In addition to the $30,000 inital investment for the projector and the $200 a week line charges an exhibitor would have to pay from about $25 to $50 for maintenance of the equipment. All of this would not bring a single program to the theatre, it was said. Program costs would be an additional fee based on the seating capacity and perhaps varied for each program. Estimates of possible costs ran anywhere from 10 cents to one dollar per seat for one program. The usual events would probably cost about 10 or 20 cents and special attractions as much as a dollar. Also the programming company might be paid on a percentage of the gross basis, it was pointed out.

According to a survey made by NBC-RCA there are from three to five events every day in the New York area which are regarded as suitable for theatre television. However, to bring these events to theatres the programming company would have to have an extensive organization, including $100,000 or more of equipment and a large staff of trained television engineers and program producers to pickup the events which would be carried by special telephone wires to the subscribing theatres.

RCA believes that a number of theatres in the same city, but not in the same competitive zone, could carry the same program simultane-

RADIO AS LIBELOUS AS PRESS—OREGON

"Defamatory statements are just as libelous whether they are printed or broadcast"—so ruled Governor Arthur B. Langie, of Oregon, last week, in vetoing a bill to free radio stations of blame for libelous statements made spontaneously by speakers. The Governor refused to allow the differentiation between radio and press which the bill would have made, adding that statements can "do just as much and perhaps more damage to the person whom they unjustly reflect upon, where they are permitted to come by means of radio into the homes all over the state, as when statements are printed in periodicals of more limited distributions."

Television Seeks Films for Theatre Television Screens

ously. It was estimated that there were over 40 of these zones in New York City.

Theatre television, according to Mr. Joyce, could be a means of increasing matinee business, eliminating games and providing high grosses on special attractions.

Hollywood could obtain additional exploitation of its product, when a national network of theatres equipped for television is organized, by setting up television cameras on the sets on flash to screens throughout the country a trailer on a coming attraction which would actually show scenes being filmed and stars preparing for their parts.

The theatre television demonstration on May 9 is described by RCA as the "preview of the newest force in the entertainment field." The program will feature the Billy Soose vs. Ken Overlin middleweight championship prize fight and other television programs originating in the NBC television studios in Radio City. The programs will be carried to the theatre from the studio and Madison Square Garden by special wires.

FCC Go-Ahead Order For Television Due

The FCC has decided that television has reached such a state of development in this country that it is now ready for commercial operations, it was reported from Washington last week.

The reasons for the decision were said to be that the difficulty of synchronizing the transmitter and the receivers had been largely solved and the 525-line standard proposed for images by the National Television System is a figure which will permit large and clear television pictures.

If the FCC gives the "green light" to television, a decision eagerly sought last year by the larger companies but not this year, the future progress of television will depend, in a large measure, it was said, on the attitude taken by these large companies.

Television Hit By GE Decision

Possibilities of a set-back to the development of commercial television were raised this week in the announcement by General Electric that it would make no changes in its radio sets in order to have more opportunity to work on defense orders.

Should the plan to abandon new models, already adopted throughout the automobile industry, spread throughout the radio industry, it might have an effect on everything in the field of radio, it was admitted by James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission Monday in Washington.

However, Mr. Fly said, he saw no necessity for industry-wide abandonment of new models.

The FCC chairman refused to conjecture where General Electric's action would have any effect on the commercialization of television, which he said will be taken up by the commission in the near future.

In other quarters it was said that if the major radio manufacturers abandoned work on new models it might set television back, since it has been presumed that once commercialization is authorized the producers would seek to develop cheaper sets for mass distribution.

"Television will certainly have to rely on the motion picture business if it is going to be a success," Allen B. DuMont, president of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, television affiliate of Paramount Pictures, said during a speech on Thursday of last week to the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers meeting at the Engineering Societies Building in New York City.

Mr. DuMont stressed the part motion pictures would play in television. Discussing the use of films, shorts, advertising pictures, sponsored reels and trailers were mentioned. It was noted that the use of feature films, long a subject of attack by exhibitors, was not cited as proposed material. Motion pictures will also be used for "recording" in television, Mr. DuMont pointed out. For this events which occur when the television station is not transmitting or a large audience is not available will be filmed and later telecast, it was said. Also special television shows could be filmed and shipped to other television stations for "re-telecasting."

Large screen television for theatres was also mentioned briefly by Mr. DuMont. He said that work had been done on a projector for theatre use but it was not on the market yet.

To introduce his subject, "Latest Developments in Television," Mr. DuMont gave a brief history of the art, pointing out that television and motion pictures both really started at about the same time, the end of the 19th century. He remarked that the growth of television had been much slower than motion pictures but he hoped that television some day also "would be a great industry like the motion pictures."

Developments of the year discussed by Mr. DuMont included: color, fluorescent lighting for studios, 625-line, 15-frame pictures, improved receivers, FM for sound transmission.

A television transmitter in 50 of the largest cities of the country would cover 70 percent of the nation's population, Mr. DuMont also pointed out.

GOVERNOR URGES FILM ATTENDANCE

Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio, has issued a proclamation in connection with the RKO Theatres "Maytime Movie Jubilee" in which he praised the industry for its "important part in stirring American patriotism" and interest in our traditions, and urging the citizens of the State to attend film shows during the month of the celebration. Nat Holt, division manager of RKO Theatres in Cleveland, will have charge of the jubilee campaign in that territory.

Casanave-N.S.S. Matter To Be Arbitrated

Charles Casanave, executive of Advertising Accessories, National Screen Service subsidiary, must submit to arbitration of allegations made by Herman Robbins, president of NSS, and Toby Gruen, vice-president, that he made secret agreements to obtain illegal profits for himself. Furthermore, NSS has the rights to terminate his contract, and to sue for recovery of $45,000.

This was decided Tuesday by the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court in Kings County which in forcing Mr. Casanave to submit to arbitration, reversed a stay of such proceedings granted Mr. Casanave by the Westchester County Supreme Court.

Pending in New York County Supreme Court is the suit by Mr. Robbins and Mr. Gruen, and their company, seeking the $45,000 from Mr. Casanave.

Gustave Simon, attorney for the latter, had argued that the suit deprived the trailer company of the right to arbitrate, under its employment contract.

Joseph M. Schenck, Moskowitz Appeal

Citing contentious reversible errors allegedly committed by Federal Judge Grover H. Moscowitz during their trial, Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph H. Moskowitz, on Monday served notice they would appeal their jail sentences and fines, imposed in New York Federal Court on Thursday, April 24th, for income tax evasion in 1935 and 1936.

Mr. Schenck had been sentenced to three years and a $10,000 fine on each of the two counts of income tax evasion, the sentences to run concurrently. Mr. Moskowitz was given a year and a day and a $10,000 fine. Both men, on bail, were to surrender to the Court Monday, May 12th. However, the notice of appeals stays sentence pending decision of the Appellate Court.

Joseph M. Proskauer, newly retained to represent Mr. Schenck and Mr. Moskowitz on argument of the appeal, asserted Wednesday before Judge Moscowitz that the court had committed six reversible errors in its conduct of the trial. He secured continuance of the freedom of the defendants under a bail increased from $1,500 to $5,000 each. U. S. Attorney Mathias F. Correa, contended that no error had been committed.

The bail of $5,000 was allowing pending an appeal to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Moscowitz, Wednesday, said the court wished to extend a fair and reasonable opportunity for the defendants to review the entire question. Continuance of bail was conditioned upon an agreement by Judge Proskauer to make every effort to present his appeal before the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in June.

Among the points raised Wednesday by Judge Proskauer were: (1) that overpayment by Mr. Schenck of 1937 taxes should have been credited also to 1935 and 1936; (2) that the court failed to properly define legitimate deduction for business expenses: (3) that the court failed to aid the jury sufficiently in deciding upon the legitimacy of stock sales; (4) that the court should have stated to the jury that securities sold by Mr. Schenck were absolutely worthless; (5) that the court failed to give sufficient weight in its instructions to character testimony; (6) that the court actually convicted the defendants in telling the jury to draw its own conclusions on the failure of either side to present witnesses.

Anent defendants' inability to question Treasury agents, Harold Corbin, attorney for Mr. Schenck and Mr. Moskowitz, charged violation of their constitutional right to obtain testimony from any source available.

Three Receive MGM Awards

Metro Goldwyn Mayer has awarded "Honor Roll Buttons" to Fred Osterstock, of the Wilmer and Vincent theatres in Easton, Pa., Harold H. Thomas, Macco-Memphis Theatres in Fulton, Ky., and Fred Forry, of the Colonial theatre, Lancaster, Pa., for campaigns on "Land of Liberty."

Maugham Joins Selznick

David O. Selznick announced in Hollywood this week that he has signed W. Somerset Maugham, the novelist, to write an original screen play based on an idea by Mr. Selznick.

Release "Camera" Short

"You Can't Fool a Camera," seventh in the MGM series, "The Romance of Celluloid," was released Friday.

GOLDWYN, BREEN, O'CONNOR, SISK, MEYERS, TOP PERSONNEL SHUFFLINGS

Realignments Made as 'New Order' Selling Approaches; 'Little Three', Independents Prepare Product for Release

The roster of motion picture personnel was changed considerably this week, in all branches, in moves significant in many instances of the realignment of top ranks attending the coming of a new producing and selling season, more important this year than ever before because of the approaching "new order" of decree sales starting September 1st.

The axis of the changes was at RKO, where Samuel Goldwyn, long out of production because of other matters at United Artists, became an RKO producer. And where Joseph I. Breen, retiring Production Code Administrator, is reportedly considering and being considered for the post of chief of the producing staff at the company's Hollywood studios (see page 8.)

At RKO, too, John J. O'Connor and Fred Meyers resigned as that company's circuit operators, presumably joining Universal.

C. W. Thornton joined Hal Roach studios, going over from Edward Small Productions; Whitney Bolton joined David Selznick, and Graham Baker joined RKO as a "top producer." There were other changes announced and pending.

In these companies, and others, there were further signs of new product, new policy developments, the while those studios with commitments still to be met for the closing season were winding up shooting in Hollywood.

More new circuit contracts were being closed this week, more new season's conventions planned.

UA Postpones Meeting Pending More Deals

United Artists postponed the regional sales meeting scheduled for New York this Friday, and four subsequent regional gatherings, until pending negotiations to add several more independent producers to next season's product roster are completed. Arthur W. Kelly, vice president in charge of domestic distribution postponed the conventions last Friday before flying to California to confer with Maurice Silverstone, chief of UA operations, and the new producers who may release their product under the UA banner.

Mr. Silverstone reported that at least one actor-producer and one actress-producer will be represented on the 1941-42 production list and said that the conventions had been set back at their request until arrangement for the releasing tie with United Artists are completed. He said the change was in line with the original United Artists policy of encouraging and releasng productions by independent artists.

Mr. Kelly said that United Artists will continue to sell its pictures individually and denied that a UA block booking plan reported from Hollywood had been dropped because of a veto by several of the company's leading producers. He said it had never been seriously considered.

Shirley Temple will be released through United Artists for the first time next Autumn in an Edward Small production for the 1941-42 UA lineup. Mr. Small signed the child star at Hollywood on April 24th. She will complete "Kathleen" for MGM before reporting to the Small studio to make either "Lucky Sixpence", from a novel by Emilie and Alden Knipe, or one of three other stories under consideration.

"EARLY BIRD" SHOWS PROVE SUCCESSFUL

Success of "defense workers" matinees at the Warners' Lindy theatre in Philadelphia has encouraged Ted Schlanger, circuit zone chief, to inaugurate similar matinees and midnight performances at eight additional neighborhood houses in the city for the convenience of workers engaged in national defense industries. Made to conform to the pay days and hours at the plants in the neighborhood of the theatres, "defense workers" matinees were started at the Forum, Liberty, Midway, Richmond and Kent Theatres.

In Bridgeport, Conn., the "early bird" matinees for defense workers has proved to be so successful at the Poli theatre there, the Poli circuit has inaugurated the policy in four additional theatres—the Poli theatre in Hartford, the Palace, Meriden, the Poli in Waterbury, and the Poli theatre in Worcester.

Two from Goldwyn For RKO Radio

Films produced by Samuel Goldwyn, according to an announcement by George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, which will be distributed by that RKO. The first two films will be Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes" and a Gary Cooper picture. The announcement settled reports that Mr. Goldwyn would release through Warner Brothers.

About the middle of March Mr. Goldwyn sold his interest in United Artists for a reported $300,000 which settled the legal action which he had against the company aimed at terminating his releasing contract. During the year in which the matter was in the courts there was considerable discussion about releasing arrangements for "The Westerner". But United Artists finally handled the film.

Mr. Goldwyn has signed William Wyler, director, to an exclusive two-year deal. Mr. Wyler is now in his sixth year with Mr. Goldwyn.

O'Connor, Meyers Leave RKO for Universal

John J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of RKO Theatres, and Fred Meyers, chief film buyer, resigned last week and it was reported that both would join Universal. Resignations were sent by wire to George Schaefer, president of RKO, who was on the coast and given verbally, it was reported, to Malcolm Kingsberg, executive vice-president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum.

Mr. O'Connor has been with the Keith and RKO organizations for over 20 years. He started in the business in 1914.

Mr. Meyers has been in the industry for about 25 years, about 13 of these with RKO during which time he was assistant to Mr. O'Connor.

Robert F. Sisk and Lee Marcus, producers, have left RKO, Mr. Sisk to join Paramount as an associate producer beginning on May 12 and Mr. Marcus taking an extended leave of absence from RKO.

Mr. Sisk was formerly advertising and publicity director for RKO. Mr. Marcus was formerly vice-president of RKO and president of RKO Pathe.

Thornton, Capra-Riskin, Bolton, Baker Changes

C. W. Thornton, who recently resigned as treasurer and business manager of Edward Small Productions in Hollywood, on next Monday will assume duties as executive vice-president and general manager of the Hal Roach Studios.

The excess profits tax was cited as the reason in Hollywood this week for the dissolution of Frank Capra Productions, the Frank Capra-Robert Riskin unit, which made "Meet John Doe" for Warner Brothers. The company will cease functioning as an independent outfit. Meanwhile, Warners have announced that it is negotiating with Capral-Riskin for the unit productions of two more films on the same basis as that of "Meet John Doe."

Whitney Bolton of the RKO publicity department in Hollywood has been appointed publicity head for David O. Selznick. Victor Shapiro, who held the post, will handle the newly-created position of head of pre-production exploitation.

RKO has signed a contract with Graham Baker, that makes him one of the company's "top producers". His first two films will be "Valley of the Sun," and "Through the Thin Wall." James Craig will have a starring role in the former; Charles Laughton in the latter.

Following these, Mr. Baker will produce a film on Theodore Dreiser's "Sister Carrie".

Nathanson's Status Up At Canadian Meeting

Whether N. I. Nathanson will continue as head of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., was discussed at the annual meeting of the corporation in Toronto last week. Also discussed, it was reported, were his acquisition of more theatres in that country.

Results of the meeting were not disclosed. However, it was said the same subjects would be talked over at a second meeting to be held in Toronto Friday, at which time Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, Neil Agnew, its sales manager, and Austin Keough, its general counsel, were to again be present.

One announcement was made: Famous Players will redeem all outstanding series A first mortgages bonds June 1st, although they do not mature until next year.

Mr. Nathanson had been reported leaving FPC to head a national new Canadian circuit.

DeSylva, Paramount Chief, Reports from the Public

B. G. De Sylva, Paramount's production chief, said in Chicago Monday, en route to conferences at the New York home office and with executives of his legitimate theatre interests, that the public wants, increasingly, lighter and gayer film entertainment; and that therefore, his company will have more comedies in its 1941-42 program. Mr. De Syvla based his opinion on public taste upon a survey in the company's 1,100 theatres.

"As a result of this survey," he remarked,

"we know exactly what pictures are doing throughout the country."

Mr. De Sylva, in New York, was scheduled to see plays purchased by Paramount: "Lady in the Dark" and "Out of the Frying Pan".

Six 1941-42 "U" Films Finished

Six Universal pictures for the new season have already been completed and about half will be finished by September 1st, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, said this week in a letter to stockholders.

Mr. Cowdin said, "Production for the 1940-41 season has been substantially completed and within the over-all budget for the program. Of 56 features and 4 serials scheduled for delivery, all but four are completed."

He also added that completion of so many pictures for the 1941-42 season by September 1 will put the company in "an unusually favorable competitive position. Universal's production has never been so far advanced in its history."

"Selling for the new season is going forward aggressively and with results that reflect the satisfactory experience of exhibitors with Universal's improved product during recent years," Mr. Cowdin remarked.

Citing the 10,000 contracts already signed for 1940-41 product Mr. Cowdin concluded by saying, "The record performances of the studio and sales organization are outstanding factors in current operations which evidence that Universal's business is holding the momentum which it has developed in the past three years."

Forty Republic Films Delivered

By August 11 Republic will complete production on its schedule of 58 features and western for the 1940-41 season, it was said. Forty have already been finished and release dates as follows have been set on the others:

"Country Fair," May 5; "Sheriff of Tombstone," May 7; "Desert Bandit," May 12; "Angels With Broken Wings," May 15; "Saddlemates," May 24.

Approximate release dates have been set as follows: "Under Fiesta Stars," June 3; "Puddin' Head," June 16; "Milkman's Matinee," June 18; "Nevada City," June 20; "Kansas Cyclone," June 24; "Down Mexico Way," July 7; "Ice Capades," July 17; "Gaucho of Eldorado," July 24; "Rags to Riches," July 31; "Outcasts of Poker Flats," Aug. 5; "Doctors Don't Tell," Aug. 6; "Old Faithful," Aug. 9, and "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," Aug. 11.

Producers Releasing Corporation has delivered 24 of the 38 films on its 1940-41 schedule. The others will be finished by September 1st. The release dates follow:

"The Lone Rider in Ghost Town," May 16th; "Paper Bullets," May 30th; "The Texas Marshall," May 30th; "Criminals Within," (formerly "Murder in Khaki"), June 13th; "Billy the Kid" No. 6, June 20th; "Motorcycle Squad," June 27th; "Gambling Daughters," July 4th; "The Lone Rider" No. 4, July 11th; "Reg'lar Fellers" Special, July 19th; "Desperate Cargo," July 25th; a Harry Langdon Feature (tentative title "He's in The Army Now"), July 25th; August 1st; "The Lone Rider" No. 5, August 8th; Feature No. 19, August 15th; "Swamp Woman" Special, August 29th; "The Lone Rider" No 6, September 19th.

Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager for PRC has left New York on a tour of the company's exchanges.

Monogram will release the following pictures during May: "House of Mystery," made in England; "The Pioneers," Tex Ritter; "Redhead," produced by I. E. Chadwick; "King of the Zombies" and "Silver Stallion," produced by Edward Finney.

Sales and exploitation plans for the 1941-42 season were discussed at a regional sales meeting held last weekend at the Warwick Hotel in New York presided over by Steven Broidy, general sales manager. Other meetings have been held recently in San Francisco and Chicago.

Einfeld and Others in Product Travelings

Production, distribution, and circuit chiefs continue their East-West travel, to confer with home office, and with studio, with field and with exchange staffs, on product and policy for the 1941-42 pictures.

Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, arrived in New York this week, for conferences at the home office with Major Albert Warner, Gradwell Sears, Carl Leserman, and Mort Blumenstock. Not only new product was to be discussed, but selling in the field and in the public, under the new consent decree.

James R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, left New York Monday evening by airplane, for a visit to the studio, which will also include stopovers en route, to exchanges in Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Herbert J. Yates, head of Consolidated Film Industries, arrived at the Republic studio in Hollywood on Monday, for regular quarterly production conferences. He was to remain three weeks, then return to New York.

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of the Warner circuit, left New York Monday for Chicago and Milwaukee, where he was to conduct managers' meetings, and confer with zone chiefs. Harry Goldberg, director of advertising and publicity for the chain, accompanied him.

Universal, Republic Close Circuit Deals

Continuing circuit selling for next season Universal and Republic this week closed several large circuit contracts and were reported to have other chains ready to sign. Universal renewed long term franchises in Florida and Hawaii with the Wometco circuit and Consolidated Theatres in Honolulu. W. A. Scully, vice president and general sales manager, reported that the Wometco deal is for five years and the Consolidated franchise for three. He said a number of two-year pacts have also been signed with independent circuits throughout the country.

J. R. Grainger, Republic president and general sales manager, from Washington this week reported contracts with Warner theatres for its entire 1941-42 output in 44 theatres at the capitol and a pact in the Pittsburgh territory with Warner circuit for 80 theatres for next season's entire output. Deals are reported under discussion with other Warner chains in Philadelphia, New Jersey and other sections. Mr. Grainger is currently on a tour of Republic outlets in Detroit, Buffalo, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha and San Francisco to expedite circuit negotiations.

Mrs. Paul Mooney Dies

Mrs. Paul C. Mooney, Sr., wife of the retired film executive, died Wednesday, April 30th, at her home in Jackson Heights, L. I. Besides her husband she is survived by her son, Paul C. Mooney, Jr., of the staff of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, another son, and a daughter.

U.S. Government Answers Bioff

Willie Bioff, Hollywood studio labor leader, did not report gifts of stock, household furnishings, and $120,000 in cash, in 1936-37 income tax returns, the Federal Government charged in a bill of particulars filed in Los Angeles Federal Court Tuesday. In the lengthy bill, demanded by attorneys for the IATSE chieftain, the Government listed the various alleged sources of income, including studios and persons named, and "persons and corporations unknown to us at this time."

Trial on two counts of the income tax evasion is slated to open June 24th.

Charges Itemized

The Government listed the following as unreported 1936 income: salary and expenses from the IATSE, $2,448; from sources unknown to the Government, $20,000 in currency, which was deposited in the Bank of America, Hollywood, in June, under the name of Lora Nelson; income from RKO in June and July in the form of goods, merchandise and draperies, $1,925; income from RKO in the form of goods, merchandise, and furnishings, June to December, $2,140; income from the IATSE in the form of Oriental rugs, $1,334.

The alleged unreported 1937 income follows: salary and expenses from the IATSE, $3,000; income from dividends of 500 shares of Consolidated Oil Corporation stock, 500 shares of Continental Can and 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox; income from Joseph M. Schenck and other persons and corporations unknown to the Government at the present time, $100,000 in June; income in the form of Hollywood Turf Club stock, $10,000, in September; income in the form of 500 shares of Consolidated Oil stock, $5,462; income in the form of 500 shares of Continental Can, $24,404; income in the form of 500 shares of Consolidated Oil, $4,875; income in the form of 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox stock, $22,000. The last item listed was $4.08 interest from a small savings account in an Eastern bank, which Bioff allegedly failed to report.

Bioff, according to the Government, reported an income of $57,020 in 1936, and $7,205 in 1937; whereas it is the contention that he should have reported $27,853 more in 1936 and $169,211 additional in 1937.

Royal Crown, PRC Tieup

T. H. Richmond of Producers Releasing Corporation has concluded a tie-up with the Royal Crown Cola Company, whereby the soda company will feature the names of the film company's stars in a nation-wide advertising campaign. Shortly 500 newspapers throughout the country will carry quarter-page ads in colored cartoon sections featuring Henry Armetta enjoying a bottle of Royal Crown Cola, and giving complete credits to his picture "Caught in the Act" and P. R. C. Similar advertisements will appear during the spring and summer featuring other stars and pictures of the company.

Hart Quits Law

Vincent G. Hart, formerly of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and lately in private law practice, has withdrawn from the law firm of Friend, Holbrook, Reiskind, and Hart, in New York, and is devoting his time as assistant to the state chairman of the Republican New York State Committee.

CLEARANCE FORGES AHEAD AS NO. 1 EXHIBITOR ARBITRATION COMPLAINT

Seven Filed in Week on Disputed Question; New Cases Filed in Los Angeles, New Haven, Pittsburgh, New York

Exhibitors are turning more and more to the arbitration system established by the consent decree for settlement of clearance, the subject most frequently in dispute, with seven cases of this type filed during the week period, a new high. In three months 38 clearance demands have been filed, over twice the number of the second most frequent cause for complaints, some run cases.

Hearings were held and scheduled this week in Albany, Boston, Milwaukee, New York and St. Louis and new cases were filed in Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, New Haven, Denver and New York.

The arbitration demand of the Shirley Theatre Corporation, Cape Girardeau, Mo. (St. Louis Case No. 2) was withdrawn this week after a compromise settlement had been reached. The clearance complaint was directed against RKO and the Rialto, RKO; Broadway and Orpheum, Fox Midwest theatres, were also named. The hearing was to open Wednesday morning before Ethan A. N. Shepley, arbitrator. The only other case in St. Louis to date, filed by the Sosna theatre, Mexico, Mo., was withdrawn a few weeks ago after a settlement had been worked out.

Hearing in Milwaukee

On Thursday of last week the second day of hearing on the Milwaukee Case No. 1 was held. The case was brought by the Evansville Theatre, Inc., operator of the Rex in Evansville against Paramount. Clearance is the subject of the dispute and the Jeffris in Janesville, Wis., was named as an interested party.

Harry Perlewitz, business manager of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin, continued with his testimony on the second day. Also heard were Charles W. Trampe, head of the Monogram-Midwest Film Co., Inc., operator of four theatres and president of the Film Board of Trade in Milwaukee for ten years prior to its discontinuance, and Mark Morgan, head of the Evansville Theatre, Inc.

Mr. Trampe, evidenced his displeasure with the manner in which the case was proceeding, saying that the manner in which questions had been asked by the attorneys in the case clouded the issue rather than helping to clarify it for the arbitrator. He said he believed that if the two parties had been permitted to present their stories before the arbitrator without benefit of attorneys, the case could have been disposed of within an hour.

Mr. Trampe testified that a zoning and clearance schedule was drafted for the state by a committee of eighteen, comprised of six independent exhibitors, six affiliated exhibitors and six exchangemen, in 1930; that it was amended in 1933 and that it is substantially the same schedule in use today for determinating availability between theatres.

He said it was his opinion that the failure to specify clearance in the Evansville Theatre company's Paramount contract was rather a case of omission and not malicious intention. The contract, it was testified, merely referred to first run product without reference to clearance, while the Jeffris Theatre Company's Paramount contract specified that it was to be given fourteen days clearance over the Rex.

On Wednesday the New York Case No. 4 brought by Jack Fields of the Cameo theatre, Jersey City, was withdrawn after the hearing lasted several hours before Frank Weil, arbitrator. It was reported that a "better run" and not a clearance adjustment was sought. The original complaint had named the five distributors who had signed the decree. The Fulton, Apollo and Orient, operated by Skouras Theatres, were cited as interested parties.

Two in Albany

A hearing was held in Albany on Tuesday on the two complaints of Alex Papayanakos, American Theatre, Canton, N. Y., involving clearance and naming RKO and Warner Brothers. The Schine Circuit's Strand and Pontiac in Ogdensburg were cited as interested parties. It was asserted that the clearance after the Schine houses should be 14 days instead of the present 60 to 90 days. The two complaints were consolidated and Morton J. Hall, manager of the Albany Life Insurance Company, was named arbitrator.

At the first hearing Mr. Papayanakos testified. The case was outlined by F. L. Wiswell, counsel. The hearing was then postponed to next week. RKO was represented by Morton Siegel and Warner Brothers by Harold Berkowitz.

The third Denver case was filed this week by W. J. and J. L. McDonald, operators of the Nile theatre, Mitchell, Nebraska. The petition asks that the present 30-day clearance given the Egyptian, Bluffs and Oto theatres in Scottsbluff, Nebraska, over the Nile be reduced and that the Nile be given clearance over the Delmar at Morrill, Nebraska, and the Grove and Riviera at Gering, Nebraska. Paramount, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox were named in the complaint. Also cited was the Midwest Amusement Realty Company, Scottsbluff, which is operated through the Gibraltar Enterprises, Denver.

In the New York district M. L. Rothman, Colony, Sayreville, N. J., filed a clearance complaint against the five major distributing companies which signed the consent decree (New York Case No. 9). The demand asked that the clearance given the Capitol, South River be cut from 14 days to one day and the clearance given New Brunswick first runs be cut from 21 days to seven.

Another clearance case (New York No. 10) was filed in New York by John Carbone of the Temple theatre, Union City, New Jersey. The "Big 5" were cited. Day and date run with the Summit and Roosevelt in Union City instead of the present 10 day clearance was requested.

In Pittsburgh David Green, operator of the Beacon, in that city filed a clearance complaint against all five distributors (Pittsburgh Case No. 2.) Day and date run with the Squirrel Hill theatre was asked.

Frank and Concetta Biordi, Majestic theatre, Elwood City, Pa., filed a case against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO Radio and Warner Brothers (Pittsburgh Case No. 3). Day and date run with the Manos in Elwood City was requested in the clearance complaint. Enough product to operate as a first run house was asked and it was asserted that the circuits were unfairly favored over independent houses.

First in New Haven

The first arbitration case in the New Haven area which includes all of Connecticut was filed this week by E. M. Cascioli operator of the Forest theatre, West Haven and Paramount, Warners, RKO and 20th-Fox were named. The Forest is a 930 seat house, it was said, and must at present wait 30 days after New Haven and 14 days after the 930 seat Rivoli in West Haven. Elimination of the 14 day clearance is asked in view of the Forest's location, investment and type of house. The hearing will be held around May 19.

The third case in the Los Angeles territory was filed by A. L. Sanborn and John Rennie of the El Monte, El Monte, California. Uniform clearance in the El Monte area was requested in the demand. In addition to the "Big 5" which signed the decree Columbia, United Artists, Republic and Universal were named in the complaint. The Edwards Theatre Circuit of Alhambra was also cited as an interested party. A detailed clearance schedule was proposed for adoption.

The fourth Boston case was filed this week by the Waltham Amusement Corporation, operator of the Grand in Whittenton, Mass. The "Big 5" were named in a clearance dispute. Also cited were the Strand and Park theatres in Taunton, Mass. It was requested that the 14 day clearance granted the competing theatres listed be reduced.

The Alhambra Amusement Company and the United West Coast Theatre Corporation have intervened in the Los Angeles Case No. 1 brought by O. W. Lewis of the Mission Playhouse, San Gabriel, against all five theatre-owning distributors. The two companies claim that their contracts provide for 21-day clearance over the Mission Playhouse and any cut would hurt their business.

The hearing of the Cleveland Case No. 1, brought by Louis Israel of the Ellet in Akron has been postponed; this time to June 17th. Paramount, RKO, 20th-Fox and MGM were the distributors named. Interested theatres were said to be the Norka and Rialto in Akron.

'ESSENTIAL INDUSTRY CLASSIFICATION' SOUGHT BY EXHIBITORS IN ENGLAND

Movement Launched as Part of Drive for "Reservation" of Industry Manpower; Studios Announce 50 Films Planned

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Efforts of the British industry to secure some measure of protection for its continued existence are not, it is clear, to be confined to getting its manpower "reserved." A movement has already been launched—specifically in exhibitor circles—to have the business graded as "essential."

KFS interests have made individual approaches to the Government with this as an objective. Now the exhibitor body, the CEA, is formally pressing that the industry be graded under the Essential World (General Provisions) Order. Formal deputations from both sources by time this reaches print probably will have been dispatched to the Ministry of Labor. The production and labor groups, presently concentrating on the reservation of their keymen, will continue, of course, to use the channels of the recently formed Ministry of Labor Committee to cover all these ends.

It is as yet far too early to forecast the net result of these moves, but whether the industry is graded as "essential" or not, some degree of safeguard is by no means improbable, it is believed by those in contact with governmental circles. The mood of the Ministry of Labor officials, say those who have dealt there, is sympathetic and helpful.

Employment Would Be Controlled

The results, if the motion picture industry here were graded as "essential" under the Essential Work Order would not be specifically the same as would be the case if all industry technicians were reserved. They would be supplementary. Key workers or all workers—according to the extent of the order—would, of course, be reserved and exempted from military service. There would, however, be strict limits placed upon their freedom of movement and action in regard to their occupation. The order limits the rights of workers in essential industries to leave their employment, limits also the rights of an employer to dismiss them. Provision is made also for protection of the conditions or work, and reasonably good hours and wages are among the matters covered.

Picture house projectionists are, of course, not covered by the Ministry of Labor Committee upon which no exhibitor representatives sit. It is concerned exclusively with workers in the production field. The activity of exhibitors in the direction of an "Essential" scheduling of the industry would secure protection for the 3,200 men likely to be called from the projection booth to the Forces in October next.

Though it is the moves of the parent association which are likely to have greatest effect—if any at all—and which are being propelled at the present time, first direct impetus came from the London Branch of the CEA, who pressed for the matter to be discussed at the General Council and who will be one of the heaviest losers if the men are called up.

British screen writers, whose association lists among its more prominent members such literati as H. G. Wells and A. P. Herbert, have pleaded the industry case in a manifesto which caustically compares the situation of the industries here and in Nazi Germany.

"Here in Britain, where the resources of the film industry are much greater than in Germany, there is no activity, apart from a limited program of short films made by the M. O. I. and the British Council.

The manifesto urges the Government to attach at least as much importance to films as to broadcasting; that every capable screen writer, technician and star artist now serving with the forces should be immediately released; that British stars, writers and technicians now remaining in Hollywood on the advice of the British Ambassador should be invited to return, and placed under the aegis of a far-seeing experienced film showman responsible only to the Government, with wide powers to plan and organize a film propaganda system capable of outmatching the efforts of the enemy.

The screen writers deplore the present status of the M. O. I. Films Department, and the setting up of separate ministrial film units operating along independent lines "because no great good can come of uncoordinated efforts."

"Now is the time for a tremendous expansion in British film production—not for commercial considerations, but for a great and imperative national purpose."

50 Films Planned

Meanwhile British producers who hesitate to embark on any serious work without guarantee that they will have the men and the material to finish the job, have, they state, a minimum program of 50 films ready for the launching—these apart from any films to be made by exclusively American interests and over and above the shorts and documentaries likely to be needed during the coming war year. Details of these are, of course, being submitted to the Ministry of Labor Committee as suggested at the initial meeting, together with details of the minimum manpower demands to be made as their basis. The question of documentaries is greatly dependent upon the needs and intentions of the Ministry of Information and the other Government Departments. The Forces are likely to take a more direct and practical interest themselves in the production of the films they need.

BRITISH PRODUCERS GET HINT OF AID

Oliver Lyttleton, president of the British Board of Trade, hinted in the House of Commons on Tuesday of the Government's future intentions regarding film legislation, promising that it probably would be found possible to maintain British production at a level which would enable both distributors and exhibitors to conform to quota requirements. He gave no indication as to what form the aid would take. Members of the House had asked Lyttleton to declare the Government's intentions, stressing the urgent need of swift action, especially in regard to propaganda films. The Board of Trade plans are awaiting the results of consultations with the Ministry of Labour.

It is claimed that, though a minimum 1,200 technicians are needed to operate the studios and produce the motion picture, only 680 would be immediately affected by the call-up—covering six studios.

Maurice Ostrer analyzing the mathematics of the situation estimates that the 60 films made last year in Britain cost approximately £25,000,000, of which 60 per cent went in labor costs. Of that half, says Ostrer, went back to the Government as income tax, and another £25,000 in income tax from the producers' gross. Over and above this British films earn £500,000 on the U. S. market.

The exhibitors meanwhile seem bent—knowing they can't have it both ways—on having it one way if they can't have it the other. If the Government will not release men, material and studios, and thus make film production possible, then, asks the CEA, repeating its recent requests, it must reduce the Quota, if not abolish it altogether.

The CEA had threshed out the whole situation jointly with the KRS, discussed the Board of Trade's suggestion that trade practices in regard to British films should be altered, single feature programs and one-week bookings be established, bars be abolished, agreed that both organizations should tell the department what was wanted was more films, and that these were only likely if the men were released to make them.

Ask Lower Exhibitors Quota

They have replied to the Board of Trade, not neglecting to mention this, but reiterating forcibly that what they really want is a lower exhibitors' quota. They would really like the quota abolished for all time or at least for the war, but at any rate, they ask for it to be reduced to 15 per cent.

A natural law of supply and demand now operates, they say, and an exhibitors' quota is no longer necessary.

None the less, despite this unwillingness to leave the cherished subject of quota reduction, some support is given the case for protection for technical workers—not alone, of course, in the studios, but also in the projection booths. Leave the studios to the producers, they say, and the men to the studios, and there will be films made, if the projectionists are left to the theatres and there are cinemas to show them! If the men are taken from the booths then at least half the British cinemas will have to close.

That the trade platform is not completely unanimous in the matter is clear from the KRS reply to the Board of Trade.

Though they wholeheartedly and almost exclusively plead the case for reservation of technicians and release of studios and material, a backhander is thrown at the exhibitor camp with an agreement with the B. O. T. on one point the advisability of removing bars. Upon this the KRS are at one with the Government Department, claim they have devoted much attention to it, long believed in the case for abolition.

It is, of course, a fact that there is considerable and widespread opposition to the bar system among exhibitors, but the circuits still holding the bargaining power—and much of the power within the association—little has been achieved.

Altec Signs David

Altec Service has signed with Harry David David, of the Intermountain Theatres, Inc., for care of the sound equipment in the Ada, Boise and Granada theatres, at Boise, Idaho.

Hearst Throws a Party for Films But Omits RKO

The Hearst press, amalgam of newspapers and magazines, on Monday in New York gave a party for the moton picture industry, one of the country's largest advertisers. It was a "community affair" intended to bring out how the motion pictures and the press have a common public interest and "cordial and mutual relations." All major distributors were invited with the conspicuous exception of RKO which is currently releasing Orson Welles' motion picture "Citizen Kane." (Pictures on page 13.)

To close the round table series at which it has feted representatives of food, clothing, automobile and other industries who are large advertisers the Hearst Organization, representing the three dozen newspapers and magazines published by William Randolph Hearst, called film executives to a Motion Picture Day luncheon at the Hotel Warwick, New York. With exceptions, conspicuous in absence, the gathering was large and gala. Principal advertising and home office executives from seven major film companies were on hand with a full battalion of Hearst advertising managers, publishers, and William Randolph Hearst, Jr., there to greet him.

Stars and Entertainment

Hollywood stars were plentiful, along with Hearst reviewers and editors. The committee of Hearst and film men provided screen entertainment that included two reels of "blow-ups" by screen stars, muffing cues or lines, and a "quickie" produced from cutting room clips and dubbed dialogue replete with reminders of the many Hearst readers and his publications' services in the "betterment and promotion of films."

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, expressed the motion picture view of cinema-press cooperation in a brief response to a keynote speech by Luke J. McCarthy, chairman of the Hearst Cooperation Committee. Citing his first contact with Hearst papers, "selling them in Chicago," Mr. Balaban paid tribute to press efforts to promote more intimate relations between press and films. "We are serving two great mediums of expression, industries that throw on us a great responsibility. Let us work on the constructive side of things," he urged.

Mr. McCarthy in his introduction declared the round table's purpose was to bring together film leaders and members of the Hearst organization "led by an editor-in-chief who is the wisest brain in the institution. You know him as beneficial to the motion picture industry as well as to the press," he told the film representatives.

Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Metro Goldwyn Mayer reiterated the community of interests of press and films noting that in a large measure each served the same public. Each must keep working hard and do its best despite difficult national times, he asserted.

Film representatives at the luncheon included, from MGM: Mr. Dietz, S. F. Seadler, advertising manager; Art Schmidt, publicity manager; Oscar Doob, advertising manager of Loew's theatres, and Milton Weiss; from Warners: Mort Blumenstock, advertising manager; Mitchell Rawson, publicity manager, and Gradwell Sears, general sales manager; from Twentieth Century-Fox: Charles McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, and Maurice Bergman, advertising manager; from Paramount: Mr. Balaban, J. W. Hicks, vice-president; Al Wilkie, publicity manager; Paul Raibourne and Austin Keough, general counsel.

Representing Columbia pictures were Nate Spingold, vice president and general manager, and Dave Lipton, director of advertising and publicity. Monroe Greenthal, advertising manager, represented United Artists. Charles D. Prutzman, vice president, and Lou Pollock, advertising and publicity director, led the Universal pictures delegation. W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, was also present. Donahue and Coe, Buchanan and Company, Katon Spiro, Biow Company, and Blaine, Thompson and Company were among the film advertising agencies there.

The luncheon committee included Al Wilkie of Paramount and Edward Hatrick, News of the Day, who assisted in preparation of the entertainment program. Rose Pelswick, film critic of the Journal-American, and Kenneth McCaleb, film and Sunday editor of the New York Daily Mirror, collaborated on their first production as producers, authors, directors, editors, dialogue writers, and art and music directors of "Romeo and Juliet—or the Locomotive Engineer's Revenge," a one reel "thriller" from the cutting room.

Among the Hearst officials in attendance were R. E. Berlin, president of the Hearst Corporation; A. J. Gortatowsky, general manager of the Hearst newspapers; Earl McHugh, director of advertising for Hearst magazines; T. J. Buttikoffer, circulation director; William Randolph Hearst, Jr., publisher of the Journal-American; Charles B. McCabe, publisher, and Jack Lait, managing editor of the Daily Mirror, and advertising and editorial representatives of all Hearst magazines published in New York.

RKO Plugs "Kane"

Directly across 56th Street from Hearst's MGM News of the Day newsreel headquarters, in New York City, RKO has plastered the walls of broken, battered and bare tenements with posters advertising "Orson Welles", not forgetting to add "Citizen Kane--It's terrific". The posters joined a host of others advertising, as shown, "The Virgin Bride" and "School for Husbands" and, as not shown, "Fantasia".

New RKO Jersey House

RKO will build an 800-seat theatre in Hamilton Township, near Trenton, New Jersey. Construction, costing about $30,000, is expected to begin next Fall.

RKO Has a Big 'Kane' Opening, But Omits Hearst

The picture had been completed long before its original national release date of February 28th. Variously alleged and denied to be a story of a particularly celebrated American newspaper publisher, "Citizen Kane's" public circulation had been postponed until now because of some controversies over the subject matter. At one time, producer Welles threatened to sue his distributor to force release. RKO's directorate authorized distribution.

The RKO home office, late Wednesday, reported it had arranged for "Kane's" first-night audience, "a brilliant array of society, public figures of national interest and celebrities." Not on the usual list of those invited from New York Society and Park Avenue cafe circles were William Randolph Hearst, Jr., and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

Flying east from California, at the last minute, Mr. Welles arrived in New York Wednesday evening in order that the author, director and principal actor might be present for the "Citizen Kane" showing. George Schaefer, RKO president, the company's board of directors, Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of sales, Phil Reisman, foreign chief and vice president, Major L. E. Thompson and other top executives were to represent RKO at the opening.

To decorate the facade of the Palace, which until Wednesday played second run double bills, RKO erected a gigantic figure of Welles, as Kane, outlined in neon and reaching skyward to a height of four stories. "Scintillating lights will cover the marquee and clouds of steam lighted by red and green lights will add to the effect of the Kane figure," explained RKO.

Link Welles with Bridges

The New York Journal-American, which, with other Hearst newspapers have been attacking the Orson Welles-Free Company dramatic shows on the air, on Tuesday, headlined the following story:

"Formation of a 'Citizens' Committee for Harry Bridges' to fight the American Government's effort to deport the alien radical as a Communist was announced here today by Orson Welles, actor-producer; John Henry Hammond, Jr., and Prof. F. O. Matthiessen.

"Bridges is now being tried at a special Federal hearing in San Francisco.

"The announcement of Orson Welles' committee to aid Bridges in his fight against the Government's efforts to deport him as a "dangerous alien' said the committee includes educators, writers, stage and screen personalities, clergymen, artists and others.

"In their letter of invitation to sponsors, Orson Welles; Hammond, who is a music patron and art critic, and Matthiessen, who is an English professor at Harvard, pointed out:

"...We join in an attempt to inform public opinion as to the realities behind Mr. Bridges' second trial, which we consider an attack on all organized labor, on the rights of minorities and focal point of the entire current attack on civil liberties.'"

BMI OFFERS FREE MUSIC LICENSES TO THEATRES

Policy Announced by Radio's Music Unit in New Move Against ASCAP Royalties

Any theatre may use the music of Broadcast Music, Inc., music publishing house established by the radio broadcasters as competition to the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers—and, furthermore, whether the music be on the screen, from a performer, or emitted by an orchestra, the theatre owner need not pay for it.

This is the policy revealed in its full extent this week by the broadcasters' organization, which from its beginnings, last year, has endeavored to enlist the film industry as an ally against ASCAP—despite the industry's deep involvement in ASCAP, via ownership of ASCAP publishing firms by motion picture companies; notably, MGM, Paramount, and Warner Brothers.

Temporary Policy

The free-music policy for exhibitors is admittedly "temporary," BMI spokesmen cautioned Tuesday. But while it lasts, they noted, the theatremen, without paying any seat tax, as with ASCAP without bothersome contract, may have in his theatre the latest song hits of BMI.

While gaining BMI music without charge, the exhibitor, nevertheless is not absolved from his responsibility of paying ASCAP its usual seating tax, regardless.

The general announcement by BMI that its songs may be used in any theatre without charge was contained in a recent publicity release which mentioned that the company's songs are "being performed rather generally in motion picture theatres now as the result of (1) 'clearance at the source' of BMI tunes granted Hollywood producers and (2) special licenses granted the larger theatres by BMI."

The clearance at the source is a phrase for the imposition of but a single charge by BMI, and that upon the producer. It is called a "regular synchronization rate" and has no special significance for the theatre owner.

The "special licenses" mentioned are in reality "free licenses"; and, at BMI New York offices, it was said on Tuesday the company did not wish to state, baldly, the word "free" lest it give the impression the policy was permanent. It is not permanent, BMI officials were at pains to emphasize; but it is being used at present to allow theatre owners to publicize BMI songs without hindrance, at a benefit for BMI and the theatres. Obviously, they noted, they cannot give away their music forever.

A feature of the present practice is the use of BMI tunes by band leaders and vocalists at New York theatres owned by majors who also own ASCAP publishing houses. Thus, according to a BMI release, Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra at the New York Strand (Warners) featured "I Hear a Rhapsody," BMI song. Warner Brothers owns the Harms, Witmark, and Remick music publishing houses. And, at the Paramount Theatre, owned by the producing and distributing company, Siggy Lane, vocalist, recently sang another BMI song, "My Sister and I." Paramount owns the music firms, Famous Music and Paramount Music.

Anent the clearance at the source, BMI officials, through their publicity release, and by statements of the past year, have intimated "clearance at the source" is a policy as practical for the film industry as it is for radio; that is, that all music expenses would be borne by the film companies, as they now bear the score charge and the fees for using ASCAP and BMI music.

Emphasizing as they have before, the cooperation between BMI station subscribers and the film industry, BMI this week called attention to the boosting of the James Roosevelt film, "Pot O' Gold" over almost 50 stations. The boosting was done in the use of songs from the films. The film was mentioned, with credits, in using the songs. A BMI executive said on Tuesday the stations are not required by their contracts to do this; it was purely voluntary, and a gesture of friendship for the film industry.

Three numbers from the film's score are published by BMI.

Supreme Court Hears Arguments on ASCAP

Constitutionality of the Nebraska and Florida anti-ASCAP laws, both passed in 1937, will be decided by the U. S. Supreme Court before it adjourns for the summer next month, on the basis of oral argument heard in Washington on Tuesday.

Both of the state laws, which sought to restrict the activities of copyright owners in licensing the use of their music, have been rejected by the lower courts, in each instance the state appealing for a final decision from Washington.

Under the Nebraska law, it would be unlawful for a "substantial" number of copyright owners to form any organization having for an objective the setting of license fees for the use of copyrighted music in that state. An injunction proceeding was brought by ASCAP and the District Court held it invalid because on provision relating to the requirement that the selling price be affixed to the musical composition was in violation of the U. S. Copyright Act.

The Florida law, also fought by ASCAP, was declared invalid by the District Court on the ground that it sought to limit the right of copyright owners to make license contracts based only on a performance per piece basis of payment.

The question of state laws directed at the music organization has been before the Supreme Court in the past but no clear-cut decision as to their constitutionality ever has been rendered.

ASCAP Pacts Seen Near; Mutual Rejoining

First agreement in over a year between ASCAP and a major network was pending at mid-week between the Society and the Mutual network. Directors and stockholders of the latter met Tuesday morning and afternoon, with lawyers, and ASCAP officials to draft a proposal for submission to the affiliated stations, only a few of which were represented on the board or among the stockholders.

Because the ratification by the affiliated stations was to be speeded by the use of telephone and telegraph, it was expected at mid-week that Mutual would be the first of the "big three" broadcasting chains to sign an ASCAP contract after the rift last year over the new five-year ASCAP pacts, which were declared too high by the chains, and which they combatted by forming their own music publishing firm, Broadcast Music, Inc.

Though negotiations have been proceeding between the Society and the Columbia Broadcasting System, and the National Broadcasting Company, no results from these are expected by New York radio circles before the convention in St. Louis on May 12th of the National Association of Broadcasters.

E. S. Porter, of 'The Great Train Robbery', Passes

Edwin S. Porter, a true "picture pioneer," and regarded as the screen's first director, died early Wednesday morning, in New York's Hotel Taft. He was 71 years of age. A brother, E. M. Porter, survives.

Mr. Porter entered the film industry with the Vitascope in 1896. Later, with Harry Daniels, he toured the Caribbean areas with another machine, Kuhn and Webster's Propectorscope—with Mr. Porter billed as "Mr. Thomas A. Edison, Jr." Returning to New York in 1897, Mr. Porter displayed advertising films, again with the Projectorscope. These he took on tour through the United States and Canada.

The Eden Musee was then prospering in New York. It tried films and Mr. Porter operated the projection equipment. Following this, he became a cameraman for Thomas A. Edison, making the first motion pictures of the Lipton Cup yachting races. He stayed a while, making, notably, a 500-foot subject entitled, "The Life of an American Fireman," one of the first screen narratives. This led to "The Great Train Robbery," for which Mr. Porter, among other achievements new to the screen industry at the time, hired a special train from the Lackawanna. "The Great Bank Robbery" and "Kleptomaniacs" followed and the photodrama idea was launched.

Mr. Porter gave David Wark Griffith his first screen opportunity—as an actor. It was in 1907. Mr. Porter was then an Edison director.

Around 1909, he left Edison and as an independent producer, formed the Rex Company, which made films in the Actophone studios, starring Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley. Later the company made films for Universal. There followed then the Engadine Corporation, with Mr. Porter, Adolph Zukor, and Joseph Engel. The corporation acquired American rights to "Queen Elizabeth" and produced it with Sarah Bernhardt in the title role. Engadine became the Famous Players Film Company.

Success of "Queen Elizabeth" and of "Prisoner of Zenda" led to a clamor for more films and there ensued a schedule of two and three dozen per year, classified "A," "B," and "C," another new practice.

One of Mr. Porter's more noteworthy creations, at this phase, was "Tess of the Storm Country," with Mary Pickford. There was also "The Eternal City," filmed in Rome, starring Pauline Frederick, and regarded as Mr. Porter's final effort for he then withdrew from Famous Players, and from production, becoming affiliated with the Precision Machine Company, makers of the Simplex projection machine.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Manager Fred Hermann, of the Irving Theatre in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., tells this one to give an idea of today's troubles of a theatre manager. The other day one of the stagehands rushed into his office and said that the windows in the dressing rooms would have to be painted from the inside. The actresses performing in the three-day-a-week vaudeville show at the house were complaining that boys in the alley were scratching off the paint on the outside of the dressing room windows.

While objecting to the President meddling with the calendar, the New Jersey Legislature was not averse to a little meddling of its own, fixing a new date for Labor Day. The New Jersey House adopted a bill designating the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day in New Jersey. For the last two years, the state went along with President Roosevelt in the observance of the holiday one week earlier. As the House was thus engaged, the Senate passed a measure fixing the second Monday in September, rather than the first, as Labor Day.

"It's becoming so," Majority Leader Boswell remarked, "we don't know whether we are going to have Christmas on one day or another, or whether we'll have it on the Fourth of July."

Having started on some English angles, Adversting Age goes on to report the charming item in The Advertiser's Weekly, of London, to prove that, war or no war, British advertising and newspaper men are gentlemen, sir, with an altogether proper appreciation of the finer things of life.

"Fleet street advertising and newspaper men have an opportunity of serious war service—at their own leisure," declared London's Advertiser's Weekly, announcing the formation of a home guard section "which already includes some well-known men from the street."

"This is a special machine-gun section, with an exclusive 'posse' on the river front, at a strategic point. Gun-tuition is, of course, provided, there is a chance of doing some really valuable war service in interesting surroundings and good company."

Keeping up with the holidays and other events worthy of flagging is too much for Ted Emerson, the Omaha theatre manager and Tri-States Circuit press agent in Omaha. So, he has posted these instructions for the janitor:

"Go out of the theatre at 8:00 o'clock each morning, and take a look up the street. If other places have their flags out, put ours out. If they haven't, keep ours inside, too."

The comedy sketch on "Heel Hitler" in Charlie Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" got Henry Vogt, of Freeland, Pa., into trouble. Vogt was accused of attacking a man when the latter accused Vogt of giving a Nazi salute and shouting "Heil Hitler." However, a jury found him not guilty. Vogt, who disclosed he had served six years in the U. S. Army, maintained that "all his friends are now giving the Nazi salute and shouting 'HEEL HITLER' after having enjoyed a similar sketch in Charlie Chaplin's motion picture of 'The Great Dictator.'"

Some Requisites of A Film Salesman

Bert Sanford, in New York, whose motion picture selling runs from the old Mutual and the beginnings of Pathe, to Western Electric, ERPI and Altec sound, speaks with authority in recommending the "requisites of a salesman," as proposed by Bob Bartlett, of the Racquet Club, who borrowed from an author unknown, as follows:

The salesman must be a man of vision and ambition, an after-dinner speaker, before and after dinner guzzler, night owl, work all day and drive all night and appear fresh the next day. He must learn to sleep on the floor and eat two meals a day to economize on traveling expenses to entertain his friends in the next town.

Must be able to entertain customers, wives, sweethearts and stenos. Inhale dust and drive through snow 10 feet deep at 10 below.

Must be a man's man, a lady's man, a model husband, a fatherly father, a good provider, a Plutocrat, Democrat, Republican, and New Dealer, an old dealer and a fast dealer, a technician, politician, and mathematician.

Must be a sales promotion expert, create a demand for obsolete merchandise, be a good credit manager, correspondent, attend all dealer meetings, tournaments, funerals, visit customers in hospitals and jails, contact all accounts every six weeks, in spare time look for new business, do missionary work and attend sales conferences.

Must have unlimited endurance, and frequent indulgence in 'wine, women and song', wind and gab. Must have a car, attractive home, belong to all the clubs, pay all expenses at home and on road on 5 per cent commission. Price chiseling and bad debts will be deducted from monthly commission, plus 2 per cent excise tax, 1 per cent old age pension, and 2 per cent "Lost Sales Tax."

Must be an expert driver, talker, liar, dancer, traveler, bridge player, poker hound, golf player, diplomat, financier, capitalist, philanthropist, and authority on palmistry, chemistry, physiology, pathology, psychology, dogs, cats, horses brunettes, blondes, redheads, and what have you.

The "Hollywood-opening" influence on outside fields has been running far and wide. Now it is running wild. We have in hand on engraved invitation, announcing "a cordial invitation" to attend the "new and modern funeral home" of Ralph Giordano, on Crosby Avenue, in the Pelham Bay section of New York's Bronx.

Metro has given its "Ziegfeld Girl" a new ending, following criticism of the tragic note struck by the original finale by trade press reviewers. Instead of dying from a heart attack at the premiere of a new Follies, Lana Turner now is reunited with Jimmy Stewart and settles down to raise ducks on Long Island.

Leslie M. Posner, a London theatre manager, writes from the Gaumont State of some of the trials and tribulations of theatre managers over there.

Bombings and blitzkriegs require ordinary sacrifices, he pens, but his greatest sacrifice was his parting with his only child, on the young one's evacuation to the U. S. to the care of a Massachusetts family, "removed from the bombing of innocent women and children."

The Gaumont State Theatre, which Mr. Posner manages, is said to be the largest cinema in all of Europe. In his letter, written to Jack Markle, at the Coolidge Corner Theatre in Brookline, Mass., Mr. Posner says he has circulated widely through the British trade press his feelings of how "really close and sincere are the American exhibitors to the British."

"Forty million of us Britishers are prepared to give our lives, in a determination to wipe out once and for all that evil thing called 'Nazism,'" continued the London exhibitor. "At this very moment, while I am dictating this letter to my secretary, an air raid is in progress—bombs are dropping and the guns are going hammer and tongs. One, therefore, does not know how long one is for this world."

The only favor Posner asked Markle in behalf of his son was to slip the youngster a coupla passes now and then to Mr. Merkle's Coolidge Corner Theatre in Brookline, Mass.

Edward Arthur Sparkman, known from Bangkok to Bangor as Ned Sparks, self-described "No. 1 Sourpuss", returns to the Realm of Risibility with his own show over the Columbia network, sponsored by his own home Government, the Province of Ontario, in Canada, where he has been resting for quite a spell from stage and screen.

Ned has made 75 pictures, but, before Hollywood, he was a breast-heaving, breast-thumping honkeytonk tenor in the Alaskan goldfields. After that, he became a stock company tourist.

Ned's first role was that of a killer. Dawson liked its mellerdrama plenty realistic. So, a gallows was erected on the stage, with a real trapdoor and rope.

The rope was supposed to be cut and rejoined with silk thread, the quicker to break. As further precaution, Ned wore a harness to which the noose was to be attached in such a way as to prevent strangulation.

Came the big night and the final act before the proverbial breathless audience. The victim was led to the trapdoor, the noose was adjusted, the trapdoor sprung. But the rope didn't break—the harness did! Sparks found out his stage debut had been a success, even though it took four hours to revive him sufficiently to tell him about it. For some reason, probably surprise, he had fainted.

TRUST SUIT CASES NOT CUT BY ARBITRATION

Legal Actions in Three Cities; "Little Three" May Be Dropped from Field Suits

Despite the increasing number of arbitration complaints by independents coming under the consent decree (see page 29), anti-trust suits involving distributors continue to be filed in the courts, substantiating a statement made in Washington this week by U. S. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, the Government's "trust-buster," that the decree should be considered an additional remedial measure and not a substitute for the Federal anti-trust laws (see page 43).

Columbia Pictures this week was enjoined by an Ohio Common Pleas Court, from selling its product away from a Columbus, Ohio, theatre. In New Haven, service of all defendants in Ed Peskay's $5,452,575 Pickwick Theatre, Greenwich, anti-trust suit against the majors, was being completed this week. In Minneapolis, a theatre owner successfully resisted a restraint of trade suit which charged her with buying all available product to prevent competition. In New York, it was reported this week the Government might drop the "Little Three," Columbia, United Artists, and Universal from its three field anti-trust prosecutions, in Oklahoma City against the Griffith circuit, in Nashville against the Crescent chain, and in Buffalo against the Schine theatres.

Clearance Violation Charged

The case in which Columbia was enjoined from selling away from a theatre, the 600-seat Hudson, in Columbus, Ohio, arose when the Hudson Amusement Company recently sued the company, charging violation of a two weeks' clearance over the 200-seat Olentangy, under a contract entered December 9th, last. The Hudson operators had asserted that, despite the clearance agreed, the contract had a clause waiving clearance if the Olentangy would increase admission from 20 to 25 cents; and they pointed out that this increase was not made. Advertisements by the Olentangy that "This Thing Called Love" would play this week was a point in the case. The court ruled the film could not play at the theatre before next Tuesday.

In the Pickwick Theatre, Greenwich, Connecticut, $5,452,575 anti-trust case against the majors, New Haven observers waited service this week on all defendants, and return of the complaint to the Federal Court there, by the U. S. Marshall. Presumably, then, answers can be expected.

Exchange managers in New Haven were served April 10th. Though answers are officialy due within 20 days, none were filed by Monday. A date for hearing has not been assigned, either.

The 16 page printed complaint of the Prefect Theatres, Inc., Fairfield Holding Corporation, and Grenfield, Inc., Mr. Peskay's operating companies for the Pickwick Theatre, against the majors, and the Skouras theatre interests, alleges inability to obtain product because of unfair clearance given to competitive houses in Stamford and Portchester. The house has 2,000 seats, cost $1,000,000 when built in 1929, and assertedly operated without difficulty when owned by a "subsidiary of RKO" before 1933, when the present owners took it. The complaint charges pictures are not available to the Pickwick until 20 to 40 days after Stamford theatres, or "until they had been played in practically every motion picture theatre in the State of Connecticut within a radius of 40 or 50 miles."

The suit in Minneapolis occurred in the Federal Court, and was brought by David Ratner, operator of the White Bear Theatre, of the town of that name, Minnesota, against Mrs. Jessie L. Jensen, operator of the Avalon, in that town. It charged Mrs. Jensen with buying so much product that Mr. Ratner's house, opened last summer, had difficulty remaining open. It had asked $75,000 triple damages, alleging restraint of trade under the Federal anti-trust laws.

It was defeated by Federal Judge Robert Bell's verdict, over the weekend, that the theatres were not engaged in interstate commerce; hence the Federal law did not apply.

Mr. Ratner's suit was unusual in that he sued his opposition theatre only, not the majors who supplied her with product, and who are usually named along with the opposition theatre, in such cases.

May Dismiss "Little Three"

New York observers of the Government's moves in its drawn-out prosecutions of its three "field" anti-trust cases, against the Schine circuit in Buffalo, the Crescent circuit in Nashville and the Griffith circuit in Oklahoma City, said this week the Department of Justice might shortly move for dismissal of the "Little Three", Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, as defendants. The five majors, parties to the consent decree arrived at in the New York anti-trust case, have already been dropped from the field suits.

It was added the reported Government move would follow study by Government attorneys, of the answers given by the three little majors to the Government interrogatories in the Schine case in the Buffalo Federal Court.

Seymour Simon, Assistant Attorney General, was reported to have told Federal Judge John Knight in Buffalo, last week, that his department regarded the three majors are "secondary defendants" in the field suits; and that, if their answers in the Buffalo suit indicated the Department would not find it profitable to continue them as defendants, they would be dismissed. It was additionally said, however, that the Federal anti-trust suit in New York would be continued against them.

U. S. Rejects Schine Offer

Meanwhile, Willard S. McKay, counsel for the Schine circuit, revealed, in conversation with Judge Knight in Buffalo, that reports the circuit had offered to sign a decree similar to that signed by five majors, were true. He added the Government had rejected the offer. Mr. Simon indicated last week the Government preferred to try the Schine case first, of its field suits.

Judge Knight informed Mr. Simon last week the Schine case could not come to trial before September; and allowed him two weeks to indicate whether the Government still desired this case to be the first. Edward Raftery, counsel for United Artists and Universal, had asked the court to delay proceedings until determination of the Nashville trial, pointing out the three majors in the cases, if retained as defendants, would find it difficult defending themselves in two anti-trust cases simultaneously. He also asserted the Nashville case "will require a baggage car full of exhibits, and will take at least four months to try."

The Nashville case, only one on a court calendar, is scheduled for trial July 7th.

NYU to Have Course in Films

The first motion picture department in an eastern institution of higher education will be established next fall at the New York University Washington Square College of Arts and Science, it was announced by Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase. The new curriculum, designed to train young men and women in writing and production, will consist of a four-year combination of liberal arts and motion picture courses leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, Dr. Chase said.

Robert Gessner, author and scenarist, will head the new department. Mr. Gessner wrote the screen play, "Massacre," based on his own book of the same name, and was technical adviser in the production of the film by First National Pictures. He has also written screen treatments for Warner Brothers and Frontier Films. Since 1930 he has taught in the English department where for the past two years he has offered a screen writing course and a course called "The Cinema as Literary Art," the first course to treat the medium as a narrative art form.

Approximately three-fourths of the new curriculum will be composed of courses in the liberal arts and sciences and one-fourth of the courses in motion picture techniques, Dean McConn said. The work in motion pictures starting the first year of study and continuing as an expanding core throughout the four years, will include courses in motion picture literature, writing and screen play, production, photography and lighting, documentary films, and the artistic, educational, and social aspects of the motion picture.

300 Colleges Offering Courses

Dean McConn explained further that more recently the motion picture has received some recognition from educators and educational institutions. Over three hundred colleges, universities, and teachers' colleges are now offering one or more courses touching upon some phase of this newest art form. The most common type of course discusses the sociological and educational significance of the motion picture as a factor in contemporary American culture, and is given in departments of sociology, or in departments or schools of education or teachers' colleges. The next most numerous type, Dean McConn said, is concerned primarily with appreciation, and is offered in departments of English, speech, dramatics, or fine arts. Only one institution, the University of Southern California, he said, has heretofore undertaken in any extensive way to provide training for creative workers in this art, the writers and producers.

New York University's first motion picture course was offered for adults in the early 1920's and since 1932 the School of Education has been presenting courses on the educational aspects of the motion picture.

PARAMOUNT EARNINGS, $7,633,130; "U" 17-WEEK NET IS $931,280

Total Includes Undistributed Earnings of Partly Owned Subsidiaries of $1,231,000; 100% Increase Over 1939

Paramount in the fiscal year (53 weeks) ended January 4, 1941, earned a consolidated profit of $6,304,064, according to the annual statement issued last week to stockholders by Barney Balaban, president. A $523,782 reserve for contingencies was provided and the company had a net interest in the combined undistributed earnings of partially-owned companies amounting to about $1,-231,000, making a total of $7,633,130 when the undistributed profit of partly owned companies is included.

In 1939 the consolidated earnings were $2,737,533 after $70,000 provision for contingencies, while discount on purchase of the company's debentures and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned companies totalled $20,411 and $1,117,000 respectively, a combined total of $3,874,944.

$2.14 on Common Stock

The consolidated results of $6,402,130, after deducting annual dividends of $1,124,620 on the first and second preferred shares outstanding on January 4, 1941, were equal to $2.14 per share on the 2,465,927 shares of common stock outstanding on January 4, 191. Calculated on the same basis the combined consolidated results and share of undistributed earnings of partly owned subsidiaries of $7,633,130 would be equal to $2.64 per share on said common shares. The earnings per common share for the year 1939 were $.63 and $1.08 respectively computed on the same basis.

The consolidated balance sheet shows that cash and marketable securities on January 4, 1941 amounted to $12,593,455 of which $1,829,604 represented balances in Canada, $1,453,371 in Great Britain and other Dominions and $45,-121 in other foreign countries, principally South America. The total inventory was $18,344,063. Total current assets were $35,304,371 and current liabilities $7,974,516 leaving a net working capital of $27,329,855.

In summary as compared with 1939, earnings for 1940 (53 weeks) were as follows:

Consolidated earnings, after deducting all charges, including interest, federal taxes and depreciation	$6,827,846	$2,807,533
Less—Reserved for contingencies	523,782	70,000
Consolidated earnings	$6,304,064	$2,737,533
Discount on purchase of company's debentures	98,066	20,411
Total	$6,402,130	$2,757,944
Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed net earnings for the year of partially owned subsidiaries	1,231,000	1,117,000
Total consolidated and share of undistributed earnings	$7,633,130	$3,874,944

During the year the interest bearing indebtedness of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries was reduced by approximately $3,900,000. it was reported. This amount included the prepayment of a substantial portion of amortization payments falling due in 1941 and the purchase of $925,000 principal amount of the company's 3¼% Convertible Debentures which were acquired at a discount of $98,066. Preferred stocks of consolidated subsidiaries owned by outside interests were also reduced by approximately $1,750,000, principally through the retirement of $1,274,500 of 7% preferred stock of Balaban & Katz Corporation, and the retirement on December 31, 1940 of some of the 7%preferred stock of a Canadian subsidiary. In addition the company acquired during the year 10,482 shares of its first preferred stock and 22,600 shares of its second preferred stock, or an aggregate par value of $1,274,200. These shares were acquired at a discount of $203,500, which amount has been credited to a special capital surplus account. In the aggregate these debt reductions and preferred stock retirements represent a decrease in these accounts for the year of approximately $6,900,000.

The company's investments (including receivables) in subsidiaries operating in foreign countries, other than Canada, aggregate $8,300,-000. Of this amount $6,200,000 represents investments in England, $1,600,000 in Continental Europe, principally France and Belgium, and the balance of $500,000 in other foreign countries.

During 1940, the war in Europe continued to have an adverse effect on the foreign revenues of the company, it was announced. The invasion of Norway and the Low Countries and the collapse of France resulted in the loss of markets in a large part of the European continent.

Increased difficulties of distribution and transportation, the reduction in the dollar equivalent of foreign currencies and currency exchange restrictions also reduced the dollar revenues, it was added. Continued efforts are being made to revise the foreign and domestic operations of the company, to meet the condition of the present world markets, Mr. Balaban concluded.

Universal First Period Net Is $931,280

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of Universal, in a statement to the stockholders sent out last weekend announced that, "Consolidated profit and loss figures for the 17 weeks ended March 1, 1941, show net profits after all charges—but before Federal income and excess profits taxes—of $931,280. This compares with a profit, similarly computed but after provision of $85,000 as a special amortization reserve, of $588,866 in the corresponding period a year ago.

"After providing $203,000 as a reserve to cover present normal Federal Income taxes but without providing for excess profits taxes which it is impossible to estimate at this time, earnings for the seventeen weeks were $728,280 or $139,414 above the net before provision for normal Federal income taxes in the first seventeen weeks of the past fiscal year," Mr. Cowdin also said.

Mr. Cowdin also told the stockholders that at the annual meeting April 22 in Wilmington, Delaware, the new seven year contracts from January 1, 1941, for the seven chief operating executives were approved by a vote of 461,133 to 5,547 or by a ratio of about 83 to 1.

The Universal executives which received the new contracts last March subject to the approval of the stockholders at the annual meeting were Mr. Cowdin, Charles D. Prutzman, William A. Scully, Matthew Fox, Joseph H. Seidelman and Clifford Work.

At the same annual meeting, it was announced, the amendment to the company by-laws to indemnify the directors against suits, except where they have acted in bad faith or are liable because of wilful misconduct, was approved by about the same vote as the contracts were ratified.

Mr. Cowdin said, "The new contracts assure to Universal Pictures Company, Inc., for a reasonable term of years ahead the services of the men, who, working as a group, have been responsible for Universal's advancement in a highly competitive industry. This is particularly important in relation to the long-term planning which is essential in a business in which selling is done a year ahead, in which manufacturing commitments have to be made months or more in advance and in which the returns from a picture are realized long after it is produced. Such planning is particularly difficult under conditions of unsettlement and uncertainty existing today in all world markets."

RCA Borrows $10,000,000

Under an agreement made in October, 1940, the Radio Corporation of America has borrowed $10,000,000. Last Fall RCA and several banks made an arrangement under which the company could borrow up to $15,000,000 for five years at 1½ percent interest. $5,000,000 was borrowed when the deal was made. At that time it was announced that the credit had been arranged to meet the needs of expansion for national defense orders and other purposes.

SEC Reports on Film Stock Deals

No current transactions in film stocks are shown in the second March summary issued April 30 by the Securities and Exchange Commission, but three delayed reports were incorporated, one running back to 1938.

The 1938 report was filed for Louis Phillips, New York, Pathe Film Corporation director, showing that he acquired 200 shares of common stock through his wife, and was accompanied by a report for June, 1939, showing also the acquisition of 200 shares of common stock through his wife.

A December, 1940, report for Harry Cohn, Hollywood, President of Columbia Pictures, showed the disposition by gift of 100 shares of common stock and the sale of 2,160 shares of common stock held in the "Joan Perry Account."

A third belated report, filed for Nathan J. Blumberg, New York, President of Universal Corporation, showed the receipt on January 1, last, of 5,000 common voting trust certificate warrants as compensation under an employment agreement.

The SEC summary showed that no securities of their companies were held by John M. Whitaker, Jersey City, N. J., when he became a director in Radio-Keith-Orpheum on December 26, 1940, or by General Malin Craig, Washington, D. C., when he became a director in Columbia Broadcasting System March 5.

Technicolor Meeting Set for May 17th

The annual stockholders meeting of Technicolor, Inc., has been scheduled for May 17. Business to come up before the meeting includes election of four directors and voting on an amendment to the by-laws of the corporation to reimburse officers and directors for expenses incurred in a lawsuit unless they acted in bad faith or are liable on account of wilful misconduct.

SEC Lists Salaries Of Executives

Salaries of officers of corporations and motion picture stars, options granted to officials, and stockholdings of directors of companies were disclosed Tuesday in proxy notices and annual reports of corporation published by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Among the companies whose reports and proxies were released were the following:

Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation was paid $265,000 last year. As a part of his employment conract, Mr. Zanuck was granted an option to purchase 100,000 shares of common stock at $13 a share, the option to be exercised in whole or in part before March 31, 1947. Henry Fonda, moving picture star was paid $172,208 last year and Tyrone Power was paid $169,009 during 1940.

Joseph M. Schenck Resigns From Fox Board

Joseph M. Schenck withdrew from the payrolls of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. several weeks ago on his last arrival in New York from Hollywood. Although no public announcement has been made it is is understood that Mr. Schenck has also resigned as chairman of the Twentieth-Fox board. The board was to meet Thursday to act upon the resignation.

Cooke Forms Corporation

William G. Cooke, owner of the State theatre in Winnemucca, Nev., has formed a corporation called the Silver State Amusement Co., Inc., which will include the State theatre, as well as the new Tower theatre in Reno, which is now under construction. The Tower theatre will seat 800.

Amusement Group Aids Greek Relief

More than $500,000 has been collected by the amusement industry division of the Greek War Relief Association and substantial sums are still to be received, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the division announced in New York last week. The amusement industry's quota was exceeded, Mr. Zukor said, and $500,000 of the amount has already been transferred to Athens for medical supplies, food and clothing for Greek women and children.

The advisory committee of the division includes Will H. Hays, Martin Quigley, Sidney R. Kent, Sam H. Harris, Joseph Bernhard and W. G. Van Schmus. Samuel Goldwyn was active in the drive on the coast as chairman of the Motion Picture Permanent Charities Committee in Hollywood.

Division committee chairmen are: distributors, Gradwell L. Sears; exhibitors, John H. Harris; exhibitor organizations, Harry Brandt; trade papers, M. D. Kann; newsreels, A. J. Richard; sports, Bill Corum; legitimate theatres, Sam H. Harris; accessories, Charles L. O'Reilly. M. S. Gowthorpe is treasurer and L. E. Thompson chairman of the campaign committee.

Alex Manta, director of the Chicago Greek relief drive, says theatres in that territory will continue Greek aid. Van Nomikos, Allied vice-president, was in Washington conferring on continued theatre cooperation in raising funds for Greek war sufferers.

Greek relief in Kansas City, Mo., exchange area, according to a report from Robert Withers and Sean Lawler, respectively chairman of the distributors committee and acting chairman of the exhibitors committee, has netted $17,800 from about 300 theatres reporting, with a few still to be heard from. It is estimated the total will be about $18,000, still $3,700 short of the area's quota of $21,700. This discrepancy is explained in the fact that the area, essentially a farming area, did not have the necessary cities for special showings, and it was felt the smaller communities would find such special showings impractical.

The Philadelphia motion picture industry is reported to have gone over the top in its collections for the Greek fund with $23,902. Ted Schlanger, Warner theatre zone head, and William G. Mansell, Warner branch manager, headed the drive. $11,950 was collected from the Stanley-Walker circuit, $11,952 from the independents, and a special midnight performance at the Earle theatre at $1 a ticket with the Variety club cooperating resulted in an additional $1,800.

Connecticut Allied Elects Officers

The Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut unanimously elected Dr. J. B. Fishman, president, and Charles Repass and Ralph Pasho, vice-presidents, at a meeting in New Haven on Tuesday.

Other officers elected are: Joseph Shulman, treasurer; Lawrence Caplan, executive secretary; Joseph Reed, chairman of the board, and board members, Daniel Pouzzner, Maurice Bonoff, Morris Jacobson, Jack Schwartz, Barney Calechman. It was said at the same time that the organization will watch with interest to see if the consent decree provisions are closely carried out.

New Developments in Sound Recording and Reproduction To Highlight Spring Session at Rochester Opening May 5

New developments in motion picture sound recording and theatre reproduction highlights the program of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' convention, opening at the Sagamore Hotel, Rochester, Monday. The 1941 spring meeting will give special technical sessions to sound, illumination and projection in addition to general and business sessions during the four-day gathering.

Several hundred engineers and manufacturers' representatives are expected from Hollywood, Chicago, New York, Rochester and elsewhere. The SMPE will conduct a joint session on Wednesday, with the Acoustical Society of America to study problems of sound fidelity and control.

The sound session on Monday evening, May 5th, will center on reports on control-track and multiple horn systems such as developed for the Vitasound and Fantasound processes. The report of the standards committee, headed by D. B. Joy, will feature the illumination session on Monday afternoon. Committees on Projection Practice, Theatre Design, and Screen Brightness will report at the projection session on Thursday, followed by a symposium on projection practice.

Republic Sets Deal With Warner Theatres

Republic Pictures has closed a 1941-42 product deal with Warner Theatres for 80 theatres in the Pittsburgh territory, and for 44 houses in the Washington area. The Pittsburgh deal was concluded by James R. Grainger, Republic president, with Harvy Kalmine and Harry Feinstein, representing the circuit. J. H. Alexander and Sam Fineburg worked with Mr. Grainger on the deal.

The Washington deal was closed by Mr. Grainger and Jack Flax, Republic Washington franchise holder, with John Payette and George Crouch representing the circuit.

Rookies on Parade

A Band and a Barrack

If this script on selective service has no other message, it should convey at least to the boys of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians some serious substance for study. Take the fictional and film draft story of one of the gentlemen of the "down beat" calling, "Duke Wilson." Up to the time that "Duke" answered the bugle call to barrack life, he wasn't much of a character, musically or otherwise. His gambling habits had spiked his romance with a sweet songstress, "Lois Rogers" and apparently his one main ambition was to write all the ten numbers in the hit parade. Shouldering a gun instead of waving a baton does things to "Duke" and by the time the picture has reached final foot of its unreeling he has abandoned the plans he had of cashing in on the success of an army life musical review which he cooked up in between drill sessions and chalked up the song and dance endeavor to the non-monetary benefit of bettering camp morale.

That's all there is to this reform story. But in between the telling of the redemption of a "boogie woogie" and the triumph of patriotism over a piano there are lots of sequences devoted to horse play army life. The gags and situations, although none too subtle or original, carry frequent laugh results and an additional value of being timely and topical. The musical portions are tuneful, if not memorable. Song sequences are handled by Bob Crosby, Ruth Terry and Gertrude Niesen. Crosby, playing the bandmaster who becomes a good military recruit, keeps his poker-faced expression intact and his slump stance unmoved despite his exposure to the toughening up tactics of a soldier's education. Gertrude Niesen, a chanteuse in the category of a torch singer, is seen in a superfluous role so far as plot necessities are concerned and appears only at set intervals to demonstrate her husky vocal wares. One of Miss Niesen's number is particularly uncalled for wherein the singer does a seductive, sibilant and suggestive impersonation of a former screen personality with a penchant for selling sex. Comedy business is entrusted to a trio of players, Eddie Foy, Jr., Marie Wilson and Cliff Nazarro of double talk patter with honors going to Foy.

Adventure Below Zero

In this continuation of their adventurings for the matinee trade Messrs. Richard Arlen and Andy Devine invade the polar region in quest of a radium-bearing deposit, meet dangers and disasters in terms of ice floes, bears, plotters who would filch from them their findings, returning to civilization after triumphing over a variety of obstacles and situations such as have been set up for chapter-play heroes to conquer since the beginning of the cinema.

Such interest as the film holds for the mature accrues from stock shots of glaciers, icebergs, bears in combat and a band of Esquimaux seen in and around their village, the story being written around this material. There are fisticuffs, sluggings and such activities for the followers of this school of entertainment.

Direction by John Rawlins is for action throughout, long stretches proceeding without dialogue. Ben Pivar produced.

The Singing Hill

Autry to the Rescue

This latest Gene Autry has the singing cowboy persuade a scatter-brained girl to renounce her intention of selling her family ranch to a land hungry banker. The banker, already having indicated that he intends to stop grazing privileges on the land when he takes title, manages to stop a trail herd, but is finally frustrated in his attempts to get the ranch.

In addition to the star, the picture's story is told through Smiley Burnett, Virginia Dale, Mary Lee, Spencer Charters, Gerald Oliver Smith and George Meeker.

Five new songs and an equal number of more familiar melodies are heard in the film, and production is enhanced by shots of pictorial value both in action and dramatic sequences.

The People vs. Dr. Kildare

(M-G-M)

Diagnosis Saves the Doctor

The Lew Ayres-Lionel Barrymore series steps up several rungs in the entertainment ladder at this point, delivering a picture packed with story and devoid of irrelevancies. It is a film in no wise dependent upon any that have gone before and as suitable for first timers as for followers of the group. In point of suspense and plausibility it ranks with the best product in its price range.

This time the young medico performs an emergency operation on an ice skater injured in an auto crash and is sued for damages when on recovery, she is discovered to be partly paralyzed. How the senior doctor's diagnosis proves that paralysis preceded the accident, establishing the fact by an operation correcting the condition, makes up a sequence of events fascinating to the beholder and dramatically informative.

As in the past, dialogue developments combine to reflect honor and a measure of glory upon the medical profession, although gracefully. Also, and in common with many another film of recent release, the traditions of court procedure are sacrificed in the interests of narrative convenience and an expedient as well as happy ending. Much of the action takes place in a court room, the remainder in a hospital and, a brief portion, on a highway.

Direction by Harold S. Bucquet is best in dramatic stretches, although comedy sequences also produce worthwhile results.

The Black Cat

(Universal)

Edgar Allen Poe Up-to-Date

Derived by four writers from the original work by the late Edgar Allen Poe, this tale of murder and suspicion of murder, in a house full of cats, secret passages and heirs to a fortune, stands head and shoulders above most of the season's contributions to the thrill-chill-kill school of production. It treats its origin and its function with respect, offends the plausibilities no more than is minimum for this type of story, and it supplies comedy that serves its purpose as relief without diluting the sense of menace on which it depends for satisfaction of its audiences.

The plot contains ingredients which have been used by many a producer for many a purpose—the last will and testament of the wealthy eccentric, in this case a woman fond of cats, the several heirs covetous of the inheritance, the servant who looks capable of any variety of crime, the storm, the banging shutters, all the trimmings—but they are employed as befits a commonsense job of scaring the customers into ecstacy before explaining how it all happens. The story stays on the beam and the tension is unbroken from start to finish.

Although all the members of the cast satisfy the demands of the occasion, Hugh Herbert is a standout as the member in charge of comedy and Broderick Crawford impresses as the young man who carries the ball, so to speak, as to narrative. Basil Rathbone and Gale Sondergaard are the runners-up.

Production by Burt Kelly is a solid job, as is direction by Albert S. Rogell, and the art direction of Jack Otterson gives to the investiture the Poe atmosphere with distortion neither to the right nor to the left of realism.

Lady from Louisiana

Love and Lotteries

Although the players are costumed in overstuffed bustles and flowing cravats and despite an occasional bit of Southern atmospheric flavor, chiefly when the dialogue is pronounced with a broad and drawling "a" and the actors chivalrously don their waistcoats upon the entrance of a lady into a room, this story of love and lotteries concerns an underworld vs. clean-up attorney theme closely connected to modern melodrama of gangsterism. Despite this the nineteenth century piece lags in pace and interest except for a thrilling finale of blood and slug fest.

John Wayne and Ona Munson are teamed. Wayne is seen in the role of the crusading lawyer who falls in love with the daughter of a New Orleans lottery runner whose racket he is bent on breaking. Miss Munson, whom audiences may remember as the picturesque but not very polite "Belle Watling" of "GWTW," is the gambler's daughter and the assignment hardly allows Miss Munson the dynamic characterization scope of the "Watling" portrayal. Helen Westley, humorously effective as a genteel lady with a reformer complex, Ray Middleton, as a heavy, and Henry Stephenson in the part of Miss Munson's parent are prominent in supporting roles. Until the waters rise for a smash suspense climax, some captious spectators may believe that associate-producer-director Bernard Vorhaus was composing a sly burlesque on the theme of stern Northerner and soft, sweet Southern belle.

The deluge not only douses the principals but eliminates the menace-murderer of Stephenson and reunites Wayne and Miss Munson, previously estranged because of their social spheres.

The Pioneers

(Monogram)

Tex Ritter Saves the Day

Inspired by the James Fenimore Cooper novel, this picture retains none of the high excitement engendered in the youthful mind by the famous "Leatherstocking Tales."

Instead, through repeated use of stock shots, the film follows an easily determined path in which western settlers finally are successful in setting out for new frontiers, despite raids by Indians and whites who would prevent them.

Tex Ritter is cast as a scout who finally unearths the plot against the would be settlers. Arkansas "Slim" Andrews portrays his side kick, Wanda McKay the girl in the case. Others are Doyle O'Dell, Red Foley, George Chesebro, Del Lawrence. Five songs are heard in the production.

Strange Alibi

Detective Melodrama

Under the directorial guidance of D. Ross Lederman, "Strange Alibi" is a swiftly paced and compact picture of a young detective who fakes enmity with his superior officer in order to further cement his connection with the underworld. Starred in this production is Arthur Kennedy, who appeared in "City of Conquest" as James Cagney's younger brother, and who in this turns in a creditable performance as the zealous detective willing to risk all for the sake of justice. Handling the feminine romantic lead is Joan Perry as the faithful sweetheart who, despite his seemingly obvious guilt, still believes the young detective to be innocent of a crime for which he is sent to prison.

In an effort to uproot the crooked gambling syndicate which is terrorizing the city, "Detective Joe Geary" joins the gang and finds that its leaders are two police officers. Later when the officers uncover "Geary's" reason for joining the gang they have him sent away on a murder charge of which he is innocent. The only witness to his innocence dies, but "Geary" following a prison break, proves to the Governor who the real thing leaders are.

Supporting Arthur Kennedy and Joan Perry the cast includes Jonathan Hale as the detective friend who is murdered, Florence Bates, remembered for her characterization in "Rebecca," and who appears here as the owner of a gambling den who later aids the detective, Howard da Silva, as the much hated and cruel prison guard, and others who competently bring the plot to its surprise climax.

South of Panama

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Spy Melodrama

With Roger Pryor and Virginia Vale in the starring roles, producer T. H. Richmond brings to the screen another of the currently popular pictures with a Latin American background. Using the familiar theme of a foreign government's espionage activities in the Panama Canal Zone, the picture progresses steadily if not swiftly in telling its tale of adventure.

Directed by Jean Yarborough the picture concerns a camouflage invented by "Paul Martin," brother of "Jan," and the attempts of the foreign agents to get possession of it. "Mike Lawrence" (Roger Pryor) innocently becomes involved when he is believed to be "Jan's" brother. From there the plot develops into a series of adventures for all concerned.

Supporting Mr. Pryor and Miss Vale, who has the opportunity to sing the new BMI song, "Madame Will Drop Her Shawl," are Hugh Beaumont as the inventor and brother of the girl; Lionel Royce, the spy-ring's leader, and Sam McDaniel, the hotel's handy-man who aids in outwitting the criminal element.

Tumbledown Ranch in Arizona

(Monogram)

Western with Trimmings

This sixth in the series of Range Busters westerns produced by George W. Weeks for Monogram profits by song numbers of above normal quality and by novelty in the way of beginning and ending. It loses by a lack of conviction in the climax where the villainy afoot in re the tumbledown ranch should pull the story together but doesn't. Mayhap the entries on the profit side will outweigh the one opposite them.

The film opens with Range Busters Crash Corrigan and Dusty King portraying their sons as of now and as participants in the collegiate rodeo of 1941. A blow on the head sends one of them back into the past, by a sort of application of what he calls fourth dimension, and it is in this past that Corrigan, King and Terhune, the Ranger Busters, thwart a plot to steal "Mother Rogers'" ranch, this portion of the film sticking to formula and giving the trio opportunity to provide their accustomed entertainment. Return to 1941 is had at the conclusion.

They Dare Not Love

(Columbia)

Refugee Drama

Starring George Brent and Martha Scott and featuring Paul Lukas, Columbia's "They Dare Not Love" tells the story of the escape of an Austrian Prince from the Nazi invasion of 1938, and his efforts to effect the release of other Austrians from a concentration camp. For the most part laid in America and on board ship, the picture treats Nazis as the villains and while showing the workings of the Gestapo in the United States, does not sermonize nor preach. There is an indirect message, however, that some day Austria will rise again.

Supporting the three principals are Egon Brecher, Roman Bohnen, Edgar Barrier, Kay Linaker and Frank Reicher.

The story starts on a melodramatic note, but bcomes a conversational picture, rather than moving, until the climax. An underlying current of peril is openly strived for, but is not achieved to any marked extent.

The film has been given a handsome mounting by producer Sam Bischoff, it being one of Bischoff's first productions at Columbia where he went upon leaving Warners recently. James Whale's direction seemed uninspired, there not being in the story a proper balance of motion and dialogue.

Brent and Miss Scott, two highly capable performers, were apparently bogged down by their material, the Prince, played by Brent, flees Austria and makes his way to America. On the same boat is "Marta," who is betrothed to another Austrian now reportedly in a concentration camp. The pair fall in love, but his indifference to the fate of the Austrians cause her to spurn him. When he realizes the cause, he offers himself to the Gestapo in exchange for seven men, including her sweetheart.

The Wildcat of Tucson

Western Melodrama

Again in the role of "Wild Bill Hickok," Bill Elliott continues further on his one-man crusade against lawlessness on the western frontier. This time "Wild Bill" becomes entangled with racketeering politicians when his younger brother is framed and jailed on a false charge for trying to expose the crookedness of a gang, who, through a legal loophole, are swindling the local ranchers of their land. Directed by Lambert Hillyer, "The Wildcat of Tucson" creditably follows in the path of its predecessors and brings to western fans all the elements of action, comedy and romance to make it enjoyable film fare.

When "Dave Hickok" is jailed "Bill" sets out to uncover and bring to justice the criminal element which has been terrorizing the local citizenry. With the aid of "Vivian Barlow," daughter of a one-time honorable judge turned crooked, "Bill," in his usual easy-going manner exposes all members of the gang and their purpose and clears his brother's name. This is accomplished only after much travail.

Supporting Bill Elliott are Evelyn Young as the daughter of the crooked judge, Stanley Brown, the hot-headed brother of "Wild Bill," Dub Taylor, who offers the comedy and musical renditions while aiding the cause of justice, and Kenneth MacDonald as the heavy in the plot.

Buzzy and the Phantom Pinto

(Arthur Ziehm, Inc.)

Moppet Mustang Melodrama

Kiddie western fanciers, whose youthful gift of believing make believe perhaps will blind their juvenile eyes to an infantile script, zero technical dressing in the matter of recording and photography and amateurish acting, may find this western extravaganza to their liking because of the presence in the cast of a child bronco buster as the lead. Adult audiences, accustomed to superior brands of out of door productions will find in the film nothing to interest them except for an occasional laugh over some not humorously intended sequence of staging, such as when, during a chase scene, the sound track gives out a recorded Wagerian operatic accompaniment.

The moppet Gene Autry is played by a school age youngster, Buzzy Henry. He can ride and that's about all.

The story concerns the efforts of a clique of bad men to obtain some grazing land, which conceals beneath its worthless surface a rich chemical deposit. The chief culprit is portrayed as a teutonic toned gent with a hand kissing habit and a following of boot clicking stooges. "Buzzy" is mainly responsible for rounding up the villains, whom he classifies as "un-American."

The picture was screened in New York for some newspaper and trade publication personnel and the gentlemen in the gathering found the film something to laugh over.—J. F. C.

Object Lesson

(Distributor Not Set)

Surrealistic Short Subject

The appraisal of a short subject predicated on the theme and technique of surrealistic art projection is a task difficult for a reviewer whose taste and understanding of artistic delineations does not advance beyond the Peter Arno level. Accordingly, the meaning and matter of this miniature is a bit beyond sane and conventional critical appraisal. However, this reviewer has been assured that the producer of the reel, Christopher Young, has in mind a definite purpose and message—the decadence of art through mechanical and militaristic influences. According to the work's commentator, it seems there is some connection between the works of nature and the product of man's manufacture. There is then paraded a panorama of sculpture, principally a brand of chiseling along the Venus de Milo lines, a violin, and a top hat, all shot in weird positions and angles. During these sequences no word of explanation is offered as to the interpretation of these bizarre arrangements and the only sound effects are a choral background and a female singer chanting some lyrics which sound strikingly like the spiel of a tobacco auctioneer. Mr. Young, producer-director, is identified as the offspring of an arty family, who devoted several years to the photographing and assembling of the eccentric gallery collection. It is reported that previous to the present production Mr. Young was connected with the shooting of a pair of ski reels. The film evidently will be most enjoyed in theatres catering to an art or intellectualistic toned gathering. This reporter found some enjoyment in watching Mr. Young's work, not so much in interpreting his double meaning designs as in being pleasantly surprised with the odd formulation of his production.—Running time, 10 min.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Marching With Old Glory

(Wm. J. Ganz)

Gratis American Red Cross Reel

This miniature pictorial review of the meritorious work conducted under the auspices of the American Red Cross should meet interested and partisan inspection throughout the country, especially in such centers where the work of this philanthropic organization is known and sponsored. Because of the times, the association's connection with the preparation for the country's defense situation is emphasized. However, there are reported brief snatches of additional Red Cross activity in non-military fields, such as relief work at flood and famine crises. The reportial account is given a proficient production handling except for a colored sequence which is unfortunately below technical perfection. The subject is being distributed nationally by William J. Ganz on a gratis basis for a release date around the middle of May. Lowell Thomas has contributed an informative commentary.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Give Theatre Managers Showmanship Leeway, Says Columbia's Jack Cohn

Theatre managers should be more than "office managers"; they should be showmen—and, to be showmen, they should be given more leeway.

This was the advice, Monday, of Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, at his New York office. Mr. Cohn, emphasizing that his company sold pictures to the public "individually" and that it puts "everything it has" in back of good films, noted also that his company practised cooperative local advertising with exhibitors and hence needed showmanship from the exhibitor.

"I think theatre managers, as they are now, by and large are showmen; but I think they are showmen in a latent way only," Mr. Cohn continued. "That is because of their handicaps. They would be showmen in actuality if they had more leeway. I mean not only in money for themselves, and in money for field showmanship; I mean in more 'power', more authority to act without successive authorizations."

Mr. Cohn, talking on managers' salaries, said their budgets were in so many instances insufficient to properly support a good film. But his more caustic comment was reserved for the "red tape" necessary before a theatre manager may make a promotion. In many instances, Mr. Cohn observed, by the time the manager has received authorization, the picture has played and left his house.

Theatre managers, in pursuit of good theatre practice, should see films playing their theatres, Mr. Cohn said, adding: "A good theatre manager usually does. I know he used to. He certainly should. You can't sell a picture properly, if you don't know what it is about."

Mr. Cohn advocated selling "only the good pictures."

"Let the bad ones go," he advised. "Even if one came from my company, I would not spend foolish money advertising, plugging, it. And I wouldn't expect the theatre manager to do it, either. Our job is to get behind good pictures, give them everything we've got.

"That has been our policy," he concluded; "we survey our films carefully; calculate every angle of exploitation; then we get in back of it. And we expect the exhibitor to do the same. After all, our thorough support of a picture, even into the town in which it plays, is 100 per cent to the good of the exhibitor—as most of them realize.

"It is the ones who sometimes sit back and let us do the work, who are my complaint; and I sometimes feel they are not worthy of the great profession and tradition in which they now work. Showmanship is something more than merely a word to worship; it is a thing to practice daily; even, I might say, night and day, seven nights and days a week."

Films, Radio on Defense Board

Governor Herbert L. Lehman of New York this week appointed a State Defense Information Committee. The purpose of the group, according to the Governor's letter of appointment to members is "to facilitate the dissemination of information on defense activities and defense responsibilities of New York State and its localities."

The men appointed were:

Henry M. James, president of the State Publishers Association; Walter Lister, president of the New York City News Association; Alfred J. McCosker, chairman of the board of directors, Mutual Broadcasting Company; J. Reagan McCrary, chief editorial writer, New York Daily Mirror; Martin McEvilly, president of Press Photographers Association; John M. Mooney, president of Legislative Correspondents Association; William S. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting System; Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; James M. Stiles, chairman of Newspaper Defense Committee; Niles Trammell, president of National Broadcasting Company; Clarence Wheeler, National Association of Broadcasters.

Mason Heads Navy Radio

Frank Mason, vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, has been appointed by Secretary Knox as a $1-a-year man to reorganize the Navy department's radio activities. He will also retain his post at NBC. Mr. Mason was head of the International News Service when Mr. Knox was general manager of the Hearst newspapers.

M. H. Aylesworth, former publisher of New York World-Telegram and chairman of the board of RKO, may be named by the President as a $1-a-year man to direct radio activities in the Office of the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics, the Nelson Rockefeller group, according to reports from Washington.

Jewish Appeal To Get Industry Aid

Barney Balaban, David Bernstein and Major Albert Warner will be hosts at a special luncheon to be held on May 9th at the Hotel Astor in New York on behalf of the Greater New York Committee for the 1941 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal.

An amusement division has been organized and 100 members of the amusement industries have been invited to serve on a reception committee for the luncheon.

The organizations benefiting through the United Jewish Appeal are the Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal and the National Refugee Service.

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Films

Of the seven motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week one was found unobjectionable for general patronage and six were classified as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Mutiny in the Arctic." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Black Cat," "The Cowboy and the Blonde," "The Flame of New Orleans," "For Beauty's Sake," "Penny Serenade" and "The Ziegfeld Girl."

Theatre Building Up $1,000,000

According to a summary prepared by the Dodge Reports, construction news service, theatre construction projects for the first quarter of 1941, in 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains, showed a substantial increase to $5,557,000. The figures involve new houses and major remodeling.

The three-month project valuation compares with a valuation for the first quarter of 1940 of $4,651,000, with the increase attributed largely to national defense programs.

In the 1941 period, there were 192 theatre building projects, with a total floor area of 881,000 square feet, compared with 173 projects with a floor area of 549,000 square feet in the first three months of last year.

In March, 1941, there were 58 houses, with an area of 167,000 square feet and a contract valuation of $1,250,000. In March, 1940, there were 61 projects, with an area of 122,000 square feet, valued at $1,178,000.

In February this year, there were 63 projects, involving 356,000 square feet, valued at $2,114,000. In the same month last year 61 projects, with an area of 262,000 square feet, were valued at $2,157,000. In January this year, there were 71 theatre projects, with an area of 358,000 square feet, with contracts valued at $2,193,000 compared, in January, 1940, with 51 projects, involving an area of 165,000 square feet, with a total valuation of $1,316,000.

DECREE AN ADDITIONAL REMEDY, NOT A TRUST LAW SUBSTITUTE—ARNOLD

Charges TNEC Report Omitted Decree Clauses Not Favorable to Its Conclusions; Theatres' Right to Sue Unchanged

The motion picture consent decree is an additional remedy for exhibitors against violations of the U. S. antitrust laws and not a substitute for those statutes, it was emphasized last Friday by U. S. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, in Washington, in a criticism of the monograph on motion pictures issued recently by the Temporary National Economic Committee, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on March 8th.

A memorandum by Mr. Arnold, criticizing the monograph discussion of the decree as "misleading and inadequate," together with a reply by W. Duane Evans, co-author, was made public by the TNEC in a document of "supplemental data" in which were incorporated a number of protests against various TNEC reports.

The assistant attorney general charged that the authors of the monograph had quoted only excerpts supporting their conclusions and had omitted other parts of the decree which would have disproved their contentions. More important, however, he said, the authors failed to realize that the decree gave additional remedies to exhibitors without depriving them of any of the remedies they formerly enjoyed.

Relief Cited

"For example," he said, "any exhibitor suffering a discrimination prohibited by the decree has two alternatives: (1) He may bring an action for triple damages, or equitable relief, or both, under the antitrust laws, in which action it will usually be necessary to prove, subject to the rules of evidence, a conspiracy between the offending companies. (2) He may use the more convenient and less expensive arbitration machinery set up by the decree in which proof of conspiracy is not required and conformity to legal rules of evidence is not necessary. The author does not realize that this machinery is an additional safeguard rather than a substitute for the antitrust laws.

"If the decree limited the application of law to exhibitors, it would be a dangerous experiment," he pointed out. "No one can foresee the possible abuses of monopoly power which may arise in the future, and therefore no one should attempt to legislate against them by any form of decree. The Government has not done this. The exhibitors are not bound by the decree in any way except for their own advantage. They are not compelled to utilize any of its provisions unless they so desire.

"At the time the decree was entered, the consenting defendants were faced with many problems which did not exist at the time the action was filed. Most of them were confronted with the loss of a substantial part of their foreign business. Huge investments had been made both here and abroad, and it appeared that a further dislocation of these companies at this time would not be warranted if their operations could be brought into harmony with the antitrust laws."

Mr. Arnold complained that the monograph quoted the statement issued by the department when the suit was initiated, concerning the purpose of the action, but did not present a complete picture of the department's position by printing the statement issued at the time of settlement, explaining the purpose in signing the decree "to provide a forum for the expeditious settlement of disputes between exhibitors and distributors."

"What the decree itself does is to provide the dominant trade, upon which people depend for amusement, with an instrument of government," he explained. "It represents an attempt to shape the judicial process to the life of an industry at work. It is a series of additional privileges given to exhibitors to protect them against the practices of the larger organizations which distribute motion pictures on a nation-wide scale."

Only Decree Excerpt Printed

In his response, Mr. Evans explained that only excerpts from the decree were printed because it was decided the average reader would be bogged down in the "long and legally worded" document.

"To Mr. Arnold, as a master of both forms, this choice between the legal jargon and everyday English may have appeared unfortunate," he admitted ironically. "But it must be remembered that the purpose of this appendix was to examine the bearing of the consent decree on certain matters discussed in the body of the report rather than to provide a road map through the decree itself."

Mr. Evans denied that any suggestion had been made that the decree deprived the exhibitor of any of his remedies under the antitrust law. At the same time, he suggested in his rejoinder that it might be found that the exhibitor had lost a powerful weapon.

"Before the decree was entered," he said, "an exhibitor was free to make a complaint to the Department of Justice that unfair methods of business in violation of the antitrust laws were being used against him. He presumably could feel confident that, were his complaint well-founded, the Department would act in the matter. It is a matter of common knowledge that many complaints of this nature were adjusted by mutual agreement after it became known that the Department of Justice was investigating the matter. Is this possible avenue of relief, inexpensive at least so far as the complainant is concerned, still open to the exhibitor? One cannot, of course, anticipate the policy of the Department, but it seems likely that the complaining exhibitor in a case involving one of the major companies would be referred back to the arbitration method of adjustment. Having created the arbitration machinery, the Department would appear to be under some obligation to encourage its use."

Claiming inability to understand why Mr. Arnold dragged the loss of foreign markets into his discussion of the decree, Mr. Evans commented that "the grievous financial plight of the companies involved has not been visible to the naked eye," and suggested that the connection between foreign trade and a suit based solely on domestic operations appears remote, while the connection between the loss of foreign business and an analysis of the decree itself is still more tenuous.

"The authors are gratified that only in the matter of the consent decree does Mr. Arnold find the monograph inadequate," he concluded. "The authors made every effort to treat the consent decree as objectively as any other subject discussed in the monograph."

Exchangemen Who Can't Settle Local Differences are 'Stalling': Rodgers

by AL WEISMAN
in St. Louis

Film exchange managers who claim they cannot adjust differences with exhibitors but must refer the matter to their New York offices are "just stalling," said William F. Rogers, general sales manager of MGM at a luncheon meeting of exhibitors in St. Louis territory last week.

Mr. Rogers said the New York office of MGM, for one, has authorized its men in the field to negotiate adjustments of controversies arising between the distributors and exhibitors under the consent decree.

He urged exhibitors to take advantage of the arbitration tribunals when unable to reach an agreement with branch managers.

Mr. Rogers said occasionally some exhibitors were unintentionally oversold by the policy of the company to be helpful at all times. "Of course we have chronic kickers," he added, "but we try to adjust the differences as fairly as possible. We know the exhibitors cannot be outsmarted and it's asinine to try to. We are not interested in any individual theater; we are trying to treat all alike. We don't want a dime more than we are entitled to, but our prices are fixed on what we consider to be good business judgment."

Mr. Rogers pointed out the additional cost of production results in additional cost to the exhibitor "and it is up to the American public to offset the deficit caused by the closing of the foreign market; however, I have no new ideas on the possible hike of admission prices."

He was accompanied by Ted O'Shea, MGM's western division manager and Alan Cummings, chief of operations, making his annual tour of the company's exchanges.

Columbia pictures have signed four radio and editorial commentators to appear in the second of the company's "International Forum" series. Dealing with the topic "Can England be Invaded?" the new short subject will have this question debated by Major George Fielding Eliot, commentator and New York Herald-Tribune military columnist; Ralph Ingersoll, editor and publisher of New York's PM; Linton Wells, foreign correspondent and CBS newscaster, and Wythe Williams, author, journalist and MBS commentator.

Robert Taplinger, Warner studio publicity head, has been appointed chairman of a new group, known as the Publicity and Trailer Division of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, for the promotion of the sale of defense savings bonds and stamps. Howard Diets, in charge of the promotional work, made the appointment.

J. Walter Ruben, producer, has been placed under a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has just collaborated with Root Wells in the writing of "The Get-Away" which Mr. Ruben will produce next. His most recent films were "Flight Command," "Bad Man" and the "Maisie" series of pictures.

Wallace Beery has received a new Metro Goldwyn Mayer contract marking his 31st year in motion pictures, according to a studio announcement. It is his 10th year with MGM.

Laurel and Hardy have been signed by Twentieth Century-Fox for "Forward March," a war comedy. This will be their first film appearance in 18 months.

". . . IN EVERY PORT," ESPECIALLY WARNERS

Warner Brothers' publicity department last week engaged in a research project which almost had the film world hanging onto the ropes. It was:

"The Navy likes 'em (gals, dames, women, etc.) tall and willowy and doesn't care much whether they're blondes, brunettes or redheads."

The story was to the effect that the Warner freres' publicity department conducted a survey (a word worth much in any unit publicity man's dictionary) and discovered that the U. S. Naval forces preferred Georgia Carroll, Alexis Smith, Lorraine Gettman, Kay Aldridge, Marguerite Chapman, and Peggy Diggins for the "sextet" in "Navy Blues".

Although the studio announced that three of the young women were under contract to it and three weren't, the actual figures aren't that close. More than half of them are.

Artists in Demand

For the two-month period which ended May 1st, a new all-time high was set at Warners for employment of off-the-lot stars, featured players and bit players. Within those 60 days, artists engaged and already assigned to pictures totaled 24 stars and featured players and 354 bit players, the studio announced this week.

Off-the-lot artists engaged during the two months were Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Margaret Wycherly, Stanley Ridges, Dickie Moore, June Lockhart, Ward Bond, Noah Beery, Jr., and Charles Trowbridge, for "Sergeant York"; Sylvia Sidney for "The Wagons Roll at Night," with Warner contractees Humphrey Bogart, Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie; Jack Oakie, Martha Raye and Jack Haley for "Navy Blues," with Ann Sheridan; Marlene Dietrich and Frank McHugh for "Manpower," with Edward G. Robinson and George Raft; Rita Hayworth and Merle Oberon for "Affectionately Yours," with Dennis Morgan; Stuart Erwin for "The Bride Came C.O.D.," starring Bette Davis and James Cagney; May Robson for "Million Dollar Baby," starring Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and Ronald Reagan; Fred MacMurray and Allen Jenkins for "Dive Bomber," with Errol Flynn; Philip Dorn and Kaaren Verne for "Underground," with Jeffrey Lynn, and Thomas Mitchell and John Qualen for "The Gentle People," with John Garfield and Ida Lupino.

During the same period 62 off-the-lot bit players were engaged for "Manpower," 44 in "The Flight Patrol," 46 in "Dive Bomber," 44 in "Bad Men of Missouri," 31 in "Navy Blues," 64 in "Sergeant York," 23 in "Underground," 19 in "Passage from Hongkong" and 21 in "The Gentle People."

The injuries of Thomas Mitchell, hurt when a horse on which he was riding ran away on the RKO lot, will confine him to the hospital for several weeks and RKO is faced with the necessity of replacing him in "The Devil and Daniel Webster," 10 days of which have been shot.

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Therese Wright of the New York stage cast of "Life With Father," for a role in the forthcoming "The Little Foxes," which he will produce. Miss Wright left for Hollywood at mid-April.

Sam Wood has formed his own production company and has signed a deal with RKO to release through that company one or more pictures a year for the next three years. This will not, however, prevent Mr. Wood from working for other studios.

IATSE CANNOT STOP 'CANNED MUSIC' SHOWS

New York Court of Appeals Rules Unions Cannot Combine Against Recordings

Musicians and stagehands may not combine to prevent performances of a show using "canned" (recorded) music instead of musicians. This was the substance of a concededly far-reaching decision handed down Thursday, April 24th, by the New York State Court of Appeals, in the long-fought case of Opera-on-Tour, Inc., of New York City, against the American Federation of Musicians and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. The ruling reversed an Appellate Division decision upsetting previous New York State Supreme Court injunction preventing the two international unions from combining against the road companies of Opera on Tour.

The ruling was taken as important by leading newspapers—as each of the previous rulings had been. Counsel for the AFM said this week it might take the case to the United States Supreme Court, if only for the legal questions involved, inasmuch as Opera on Tour is no longer an active factor.

The case first came to public attention in the fall of 1938, when a road company performance of the "canned" opera company was halted in Birmingham, Alabama, by a strike of stagehands, the international headquarters of which had been importuned to act by the AFM. The AFM and IATSE have a working agreement; and this was an instance of its effectiveness. The road tour of the opera company halted shortly thereafter in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, after more difficulties with stagehands; and officers of the company returned to New York city headquarters, to file suit in the New York Supreme Court, for an injunction.

This injunction was granted in February, 1939, by New York Supreme Court Justice Kenneth O'Brien. He said he saw "no labor dispute" between the opera company and the two unions; that they had no right to "enter into any plan or scheme to prevent" the opera company from doing business; and he called the IATSE action an "Exercise of arbitrary power."

In January, 1940, the New York Appellate Division reversed Judge O'Brien's decision, with Justice Joseph M. Callahan remarking:

"The defendants (the unions), in order to secure what they believed to be their economic betterment, are endeavoring to prevent the use of a mechanical contrivance, which is in the nature of a labor saving device. Such conduct on the defendant's part is justified as a legitimate endeavor of labor, even though it results in some injury for the plaintiff (the opera company)."

Justice Callahan added that "there are those who question the fact that we 'progress where we use machinery to such an extent that we destroy the opportunity for men to live by employment, and thus create vast numbers of permanently unemployed."

The decision last week was written by Justice Edward R. Finch, and concurred in by associate Judges Edmund H. Lewis and Albert Conway. A dissenting opinion was offered by Chief Judge Irving Lehman, supported by associate Judge John T. Loughran.

Judge Finch said, in part: "For a union to insist that machinery be discarded in order that manual labor may take its place and thus secure additional opportunities of employment, is not a lawful labor objective. . . . There is involved in the case at the bar solely the demand that a new enterprise shall not make use of machinery in order to create places for live musicians.

"Neither in the previous judicial decisions of this court has it been held, nor in any statutes enacted, that a dispute is a labor dispute which has no connection with, or relations to, terms of conditions of employment, collective bargaining, protection from abuses, or respective interests of employer and employee. In the case at bar, there is no actual employment at all."

He also said that the "right to strike" was not involved in the case, adding "the leader of a labor union cannot make an illegal objective legal merely by use of a legal method (the strike) to obtain that objective."

Judges' Views Differ

Chief Judge Lehman differed with this view, in the dissenting opinion, by saying that Judge Finch's ruling was an "injunction against a strike and nothing else." He further said:

"The controversy here is no less a labor dispute because the strike of the plaintiff's employees is primarily to assist members of an affiliated union in the same industry, in an economic conflict, for the purpose of procuring employment. That is a dispute 'concerning employment relations' and under the express terms of the statute is clearly a labor dispute."

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, where the big news was expected to be the forthcoming determination by the National Labor Relations Board of disputed classifications of studio workers under the Wages and Hours Act—that same board this week was holding over the figurative head of the Disney studio a charge of unfair labor practices, dependent upon the outcome of conferences Tuesday between officials of the board, the studio, the Federation of Screen Cartoonists, and the Screen Cartoonists Local 852.

Bargaining Agency Sought

The conferences were to reach an agreement for an election to determine the proper bargaining agency for cartoonists at the studio. William R. Walsh, acting regional director for the NLRB, said Monday if no agreement was reached he would recommend the national board issue a formal complaint that the studio is unfair to labor.

Walter Spreckels, former regional NLRB director, now Disney labor counsel, has been barred by board rules from appearing in the present case. He was formerly Mr. Walsh's superior.

Studio locals of the international unions signatory to the basic labor agreement this week were reported pressing their officers for an "immediate" meeting with producers on a new agreement, and for changes in conditions of the agreement.

In New York the Eastern unit of the Screen Publicists Guild on Wednesday evening auctioned the art works of its members; works which had ben on exhibition to the public at the Hotel Barbizon Plaza Gallery, in New York City. The auction closed the exhibition.

The Laboratory Technicians Union Local 702 on Tuesday signed a four year contract with the De Luxe Laboratory, New York. Negotiations had been on since January. Reported were agreements to the terms in this contract, by the Pathe Bound Brook and the Consolidated Fort Lee laboratories, who were expected to sign shortly. The contracts provide wage increases, a closed shop, one week vacation with pay.

Films "Essential" Editorial Argues

Argument and support for the screen as an essential service of a nation beset with world problems and continuing crises, is presented in an editorial expression of the Independence (Kansas) Daily Reporter, forwarded to the attention of MOTION PICTURE HERALD by William H. Wagner, manager of the Booth, Beldorf and Mainstreet theatres of that mid-western city. Says the Independent:

In the war of nerves, entertainment plays even a larger part in national defense than it had in previous wars in which it was recognized as an essential industry.

The motion picture exhibitors realized, however, that they could play an important part in addition to affording relaxation from strain and were among the first to organize in the task of national defense.

On their screens is presented visual news of the defense effort and in their theatres much money has been raised for war relief.

The American screen recognizes its obligation rising from the fact that it is a beneficiary of freedom of expression and has acted to support the institutions of a free government which have nurtured it.

But even where there is no freedom, the films render an essential service. It was not just special pleading when Will H. Hays, in his annual report to the organization which employs him as its head, said, "It is significant that even those who would substitute bombs for butter dare not strike entertainment off the list of necessities, however distorted and adulterated is the product they provide."

The theatres remain open in Germany and occupied countries.

In England the therapeutic value of entertainment is fully recognized. The movie houses are open and the studios are making pictures, despite the great difficulties, in a country which has stripped itself of all non-essentials.

We remember how our government sent Elsie Janis and a host of other entertainers to the A.E.F. in the last war, and picture machines and films are part of the essential equipment of our naval vessels and army camps.

But it is not forgotten that the civil population, under the strain of a defense effort, also is in practical need of these means of relaxation.

Entertainment has a definite place in keeping up morale. The motion picture industry has a large part of this place and is doing a commendable job in the effort to maintain a free America.

AMPA Elects New Slate

The annual election meeting of the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers in New York was held Thursday, April 24th, in the College Room of the Hotel Edison. Following a luncheon meeting the officers for the 1941-42 season were elected.

The new slate of officers, to which no opposition was made, includes Vincent Trotta, president; Edward Schreiber, vice-president, and Elias Sugarman, treasurer.

At the election meeting, the retiring regime, led by Leon Bamberger, of RKO, as president, reported on the state of the organization and the stewardship of the outgoing officers in 1940-41. It was reported that 44 became active members of the organization; the signing of a committee to draft a new, revised and up-to-date constitution; the furtherance and establishment of relief and other recommendations fulfilled in the past season.

GENERAL DISTRIBUTION FOR DISNEY 'FANTASIA', MINUS 'FANTASOUND'

Re-recording to Allow Showings in Theatres without Special Equipment; "Major Barbara", "Flame of New Orleans" Open

"Fantasia," the Walt Disney feature-length cartoon which "illustrates" music played by the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Leopold Stokowski and which up to now has been shown only in about a dozen cities on account of the special RCA Fantasound system used for reproduction, has been re-recorded for standard sound systems and will be generally roadshown and distributed by RKO.

The decision of the Disney organization which has been handling the special engagements to turn over "Fantasia" to RKO for general roadshow distribution has been interpreted as questioning the economics of multi-sound track recording requiring multi-channel reproducing equipment and installed in theatres at substantial cost. The new three-dimensional sound systems developed by the Bell Telephone Company and the Radio Corporation of America and others being tested in Hollywood also require changes in the present theatre sound systems.

Sixteen Showings

"Fantasia," with the special Fantasound RCA sound equipment, which weighs some eight and a half tons when packed for transport between theatres, two weeks to install and an expenditure of tens of thousands of dollars, has already played in 11 cities and is about to open in five other key cities.

The Disney film is now in its 25th week in New York, 14th week in Boston, 14th week in Los Angeles, 12th week in Philadelphia, 11th week in Detroit, 11th week in Chicago, 9th week in San Francisco, 7th week in Cleveland, 3rd week in Buffalo and 3rd week in Minneapolis. It has just closed an engagement of eight weeks in Pittsburgh and is about to open in Washington, Baltimore, Louisville, Hartford and Memphis.

The box-office gross in the first 11 engagements, 10 of which are still running, has been $1,300,000, it was announced, and the net results in seven of the engagements have exceeded those achieved by "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in the same cities.

The three-sound tracks and one control track on the special, separate sound film as used for the first roadshow engagements have been combined and a single track, alongside the picture, in the conventional manner will be used for the roadshows handled by RKO and in world-wide general distribution, which, presumably, will follow completion of all roadshow runs. It will now be possible for any theatre to play "Fantasia" instead of the small number which could be taken over entirely by the Disney organization for the two weeks needed to install the special sound equipment and for the roadshow run of the picture and removal of the apparatus following the engagement.

"Major Barbara" Opens May 6th

The premiere of "Major Barbara," produced by Gabriel Pascal from the play by George Bernard Shaw, will open at the Four Star theatre in Los Angeles on May 6 with a premiere for the benefit of the Royal Air Force. One week later the film will have a premiere at the Astor theatre in New York. A continuous run, popular price engagement will open on May 14th.

The stars of "Major Barbara" are Wendy Hiller, who appeared in "Pygmalion," and Rex Harrison and Robert Morley. The cast also includes Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams, Sybil Thorndyke, Deborah Kerr, David Tree, Penelope Dudley-Ward, Marie Lohr, Walter Hudd, Marie Ault and Donald Calthrop. Mr. Pascal was producer and director and Mr. Shaw wrote many scenes himself and supervised much of the production, it was said.

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists, which will distribute "Major Barbara," made the deal for the Astor theatre engagement in New York with Joseph Vogel, executive of Loew's Inc., operators of the theatre.

A number of Twentieth Century-Fox executives, including Sidney R. Kent, president; Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; Herman Wobber, distribution head; William Sussman and William Gehring, division sales managers, are expected to participate in a studio conference next week on special plans for "Blood and Sand," which was filmed in color and stars Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth and Nazimova.

"I Wanted Wings"

At the end of May Paramount will open "I Wanted Wings" in a selected group of key cities in advance of general release, according to present plans. It was reported that these engagements would be at advanced admission prices. The film has been playing a roadshown, two-a-day engagement at the Astor theatre in New York.

"Buck Privates," Universal's comedy about army life, closing its seventh week (May 2nd) in Minneapolis, tied the local record for the first-run engagement of a domestically produced picture.

"Wings" ran seven weeks in 1928. "The Awful Truth" later did six weeks first run. "Gone With the Wind" did six weeks on its road show engagement and four more regular release.

Only pictures to do more than seven weeks in Minneapolis have been foreign-made films playing at the small "art" World theatre.

"Kipps," Twentieth Century-Fox British production will be screened for the English press at a special showing next week in Folkestone, locale of the film and now a militarily restricted area. The "junket" opening has been arranged by Francis L. Harley, managing director for Twentieth-Fox in England, to let the press see the picture in a locality under "front-line" war conditions. The premiere will be held before a paying audience in the Central theatre, Folkestone. The West End, London, opening will be held at a later date.

"Flame of New Orleans"

Universal's "Flame of New Orleans," starring Marlene Dietrich, Roland Young and Bruce Cabot, and directed by René Clair, was given an "on the spot" premiere at the Orpheum theatre in New Orleans on Thursday night of last week. Those present included M. Clair, Joseph Pasternak, producer, Bruce Cabot, Gene Murphy, Roland Young, Hugh Herbert, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, Helen Parrish, Evelyn Ankers and Peggy Moran.

This week Universal had four pictures playing simultaneously on Broadway: "The Flame of New Orleans," at the Rivoli; "The Lady from Cheyenne," Roxy; "The Black Cat," Rialto, and "Model Wife," Palace.

Dramatists Guild, Managers Will Again Discuss Pact

Theatre managers and authors, of the legitimate stage, are to meet in New York City next week, to consider changes to the amended basic agreement, submitted March 1st by the Dramatists Guild and since then the subject of criticism by some of the managers in the League of New York Theatres.

The meeting is the result of the withdrawal of a suit in New York Supreme Court by the League, against the Guild, charging restraint of trade. The League withdrew its suit recently, with the proviso talks be resumed.

Columbia

ACROSS THE SIERRAS: Bill Elliott, Luana Walters, Walter "Dub" Taylor—O. K. western, but a little bit too much on serious side. "Cannonball" quite a musician as well as comedian, which helps Elliott a lot. If Columbia would only add a musical score to these and their Starretts, it would soften the harshness of hoofbeats and gunshot. What about it, Columbia? Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 17-19.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—Top in western entertainment. Bad roads due to spring breakup did not hold them away on this one, which goes to prove if you have the attraction the patrons will come. Running time, 128 minutes. Played April 13-15.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theater, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—A very good historical dramatic western that has box office possibilities and did a fair business for me. It is about the only thing this company has so far this season with the one exception, perhaps, "The Howards of Virginia." Running time, 125 minutes. Played April 20-21.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

BLONDIE ON A BUDGET: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—I hope Columbia can keep making as good as they have so far. This was good. So are all of these "Blondies" good.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

BLONDIE PLAYS CUPID: Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton, Larry Simms—I have run all the "Blondies" to date and this one tops them all. The best one that they have ever made for laughs and box office. They get 'em. What I mean, for the small town they really bring the house down on this one. It's worse than any circus you were ever to. To those exhibitors that operate in small towns, cash in on these as we find they are better stimulants than anything yet to satisfy the patrons. Running tmie, 70 minutes. Played April 23.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

GIRLS UNDER 21: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly, Bruce Cabot—A very good little picture, which did nice business. Everyone seemed pleased. Business good. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 16-17.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

LONE WOLF STRIKES, THE: Warren William, Eric Blore, Joan Perry—I have only played a couple of these "Lone Wolf" series but they turn out fairly good for them. They have quite a bit of comedy and some action. All in all, they will entertain for the hour that they run. Each one has a different story but Warren William is always the "Lone Wolf," and Eric Blore is quite funny. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 29-30.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

LONE WOLF TAKES A CHANCE: Warren William, Henry Wilcoxon, June Storey—This one just as good as the others. Comedy situations bring many laughs. Attention held throughout. Business very good when doubled with "Robin Hood of the Pecos." Running time, 76 minutes. Played April 10-12.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MISSING TEN DAYS: Rex Harrison, Karen Verne—Double featured with "Triple Justice," George O'Brien, and did swell business. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 11-12.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Melvyn Douglas, Rosalind Russell—Very good business. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 30-April 1.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

First National

EAST OF THE RIVER: John Garfield, Brenda Marshall, Marjorie Rambeau—Double featured with "The Girl in the News" and receives all the credit for what little business came our way. A losing proposition for me. Played April 22.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino—Certainly a great picture. It has two most important features, box office draw and entertainment value. An exhibitor cannot ask for anything more. It attracted a full house and they all went away smiling and happy with the feeling that they received their money's worth. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 11.—Jerry L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino—This is a surprisingly good film that did surprisingly good business. It certainly has a thrilling ending that left the audience limp. It does not emphasize the gangster end of the plot too much. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 17.—W. Varick Nevins, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LETTER, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—Played this mid-week because "All This and Heaven, Too" was my worst Sunday business last fall. Actually took in more money at half the price and during the middle of the week, too, on "The Letter." Both good shows. Can't figure out star drawing power. Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, Alan Hale—We gave this extra advertising as John Brown's home was in Chatham, only 17 miles away, but for some reason I can't explain, business was only average. Still a good picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, Alan Hale—A fairly good action picture. A strong attraction for men's trade. Did not appeal to women. Business poor. Running time, 110 minutes. Played April 13-15.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SHADOWS ON THE STAIRS: Frieda Inescort, Paul Cavanagh—Poor picture. Had some walkouts. Compalined about the English lingo. Running time, 63 minutes. Played April 15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SAILS AGAIN: Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Hale, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan—Warner Bros. have a swell start on a series with this team. They evidently made it on a close budget but it's good entertainment and won't let your audience down. You bet they'll come to see it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 11-12.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Kathryn Grayson—The best but still the lowest grosser of this series yet. Guess maybe our public is getting tired of the "Hardys" but to me they're still swell and I personally enjoyed this one tops of all. You can't go wrong giving it your best playdates. Played April 9-10.—Burris and Henley Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Kathryn Grayson—Good picture. Business fell off the second night due to cloudburst. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Bobs Watson—Played this late to excellent business. Feature outstanding. Waiting for "Men of Boys Town." Running time, 90 minutes. Played Apirl 5.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: Hedy Lamarr, James Stewart—Don't let anyone tell you this will do business or is as good as the "Philadelphia Story." Played Easter Sunday. I guess it was the title for my audience didn't show up. Stewart is god and Lamarr is at her best but it's just another picture. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 13-14.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE GOES HOME: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DULCY: Ann Sothern, Ian Hunter, Billie Burke, Roland Young—This picture just stays on the borderline, never getting slapstick enough to be funny and too impossible to be good. It's just dumb like "Dulcy's" supposed to be. Ann Sothern, good trouper, though, does her best. Don't compare this with the "Maisie" stories. Running time, 73 minutes. Played April 9-10.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

FLIGHT COMMAND: Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon—An excellent picture and timely. It will please everybody. Entertainment value 100 per cent. My audience just loved it. Running time, 113 minutes. Played March 28.—Jerry L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

GO WEST: Marx Brothers—Best Friday-Saturday business in six months. This gang is sure corny but the week-end crowd ate it up. There is a definite place in the entertainment line-up of any theatre for the brand of humor the Marx Bros. put out. I believe this is their best. Running time, 82 minutes. Played April 4-5.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

LAND OF LIBERTY: All Star—Very good history of America composed of small sequences from the best pictures of all the major companies. My patronage is nearly all composed of young people and they complained because there was no story. A very hard rain storm just at show time Sunday cut the attendance to practically nothing. Running time, 98 minutes. Played April 4-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE NELLY KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy, Charles Winninger—Fine but business not average on it due perhaps to my Easter playdate. People spent all their money for Easter clothes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PHIADELPHIA STORY, THE: Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart, Cary Grant, Roland Young, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Weidler—And what a story. It's impossible and sophisticated but, boy, how it sparkles. They don't come any better. People came to see this one because they had it down on their "must see" list. Running time, 110 minutes. Played April 6-7.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: James Stewart, Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Roland Young, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Weidler—Plenty of raves on this one. It certainly is a good film and it drew a very good crowd on Good Friday week-end. That's something! Lots of good comedy in it. Play it up! It won't let you down. Running time, 112 minutes. Played April 11-12.—W. Varick Nevins, II, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter—Opinions were divided on this one. However, majority of my patrons were well entertained during very rainy weather. Running time, 120 minutes. Played April 12.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN: Robert Young, Laraine Day—Very good pieture which pleased all. Good enough for Sunday. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 18-19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Ann Rutherford—Fine picture but lost money on it. My folks do not come to see Beery.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Monogram

LAST ALARM, THE: Warren Hull, J. Farrell MacDonald, Polly Ann Young—These kind of pictures have been made over and oved but they come to see them anyway. Of course, this one done up a little different. A firebug started all the fires but he meets his Waterloo in the end. Recording just fair and photography fair. Print scratched quite a bit. Did better than average business on cash night and that's what counts. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 16.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

DANCING ON A DIME: Grace MacDonald, Robert Paige—Good program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—Was all set for the biggest business of the season and didn't get it. Benny used to be tops here; maybe he's slipping. A much better show than "Buck Benny Rides Again." "Rochester" doesn't shine in this one, however. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 23-24.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—The picture will bring out the crowd. They will like it, too. 100 per cent entertainment value. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 21.—Jerry L. Thayer, Leddy's Thetare, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard—Did fair business when this was doubled with "Tall, Dark and Handsome." This has some good comedy and music and all too short dance sequences, but all in all it is nothing to write home about. People expect something bigger of Fred Astaire so a picture of this caliber turns out to be a disappointment even though it is quite good. Get it? Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 18-19.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard—A loser. Played April 6-8.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

VICTORY: Fredric March, Betty Field, Sir Cedric Hardwicke—Booked this upon recommendation of salesman. My audience thought it was pretty bad. I thought so, too. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 18.—Jerry L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

Republic

BARNYARD FOLLIES: Mary Lee, Rufe Davis, June Storey—Very fine program picture. Book it right and push it. It's fine for its type. Rufe Davis and balance of cast all good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BARNYARD FOLLIES: Mary Lee, Rufe Davis, June Storey—Just what the doctor ordered for week-end business, when the farm boys come in. Many came twice.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontrio, Canada. General patronage.

BORDER LEGION: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Carol Hughes—Another instance of an exhibitor playing a picture he doesn't want. Played April 10-12.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

BOWERY BOY: Dennis O'Keefe, Jimmy Lydon—Just what the folks from the country love. Many compliments from very good business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 17-19.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY AND MOONLIGHT: Johnny Downs, Vera Vague (Barbara Jo Allen), Mary Lee, Jerry Colonna, Jane Frazee—Good little musical. Vera Vague is very good. My folks like her.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RIDE, TENDERFOOT, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Believe it or not, my patrons come to see Burnette, not Autry. Series losing a little in popularity. Played April 17-19.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF THE PECOS: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Sally Payne—Very good western. Addition of Sally Payne to this series sure helps them out. Business very good. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 10-12.—R. F. Netzel, Palace, Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

CONVOY: Clive Brook, John Clements, Judy Campbell—Very good picture. Good business. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 8-10.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

I'M STILL ALIVE: Kent Taylor, Linda Hayes—A very pleasing picture. No stars to bring them in but an excellent performance from the entire cast. Business very good first day. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 16-17.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, James Craig—Swell picture; swell business. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 108 minutes. Played April 6-7.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH: Robert Montgomery, Carole Lombard, Gene Raymond—Some very good laughs and good directing make this a good comedy. My bunch seemed to like it quite well. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 10.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RAMPARTS WE WATCH, THE: Documentary—Wonderful picture. A picture all America should see. It did not do average business, even though I advertised it well.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Batholomew—An excellent picture. Book this if you haven't done it yet. One of RKO's best. Running time, 93 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

TRIPLE JUSTICE: George O'Brien.—Virginia Vale Double featured with "Missing Ten Days" and done swell business. Enjoyed by all. Played April 11-12.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

TRIPLE JUSTICE: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—Not bad for a western but George has made better. However, a western goes good in any small town, such as we have. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 2.—H. D. Furnace, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

WALT DISNEY FESTIVAL: "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and Four Shorts—A special attraction for kids only; the adults that did come brought a youngster along with them below the age limit to get any admission. The novelty of its first appearance has worn off. Not worth the price. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 18-19.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GIRL IN THE NEWS, THE: Margaret Lockwood, Barry Barnes—A British production that is well conceived but hard to understand. Double featured with "East of the River", a Warner Bros, feature that receives all the credit for what little business came our way. A losing proposition for me. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 22.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, John Sutton, Gene Tierney, Laird Gregar—It is to bad to waste film on such a picture. Most Northern pictures go over well here but this has very little to recommend it. It is impossible to understand Paul Muni. The scenery is beautiful but it did not please anyone. Running time, 94 minutes. Palyed April 11-13.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Milton Berle, Virginia Gilmore, Stanley Clements—Ran this with "Second Chorus" to fair business. People seemed to like this better than the other film because of its very clever plot and unusual kid star. It may not have drawing power but I'll guarantee it as one that will please those who come to see it. Advertise it as a satire on gangster pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 18-19.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

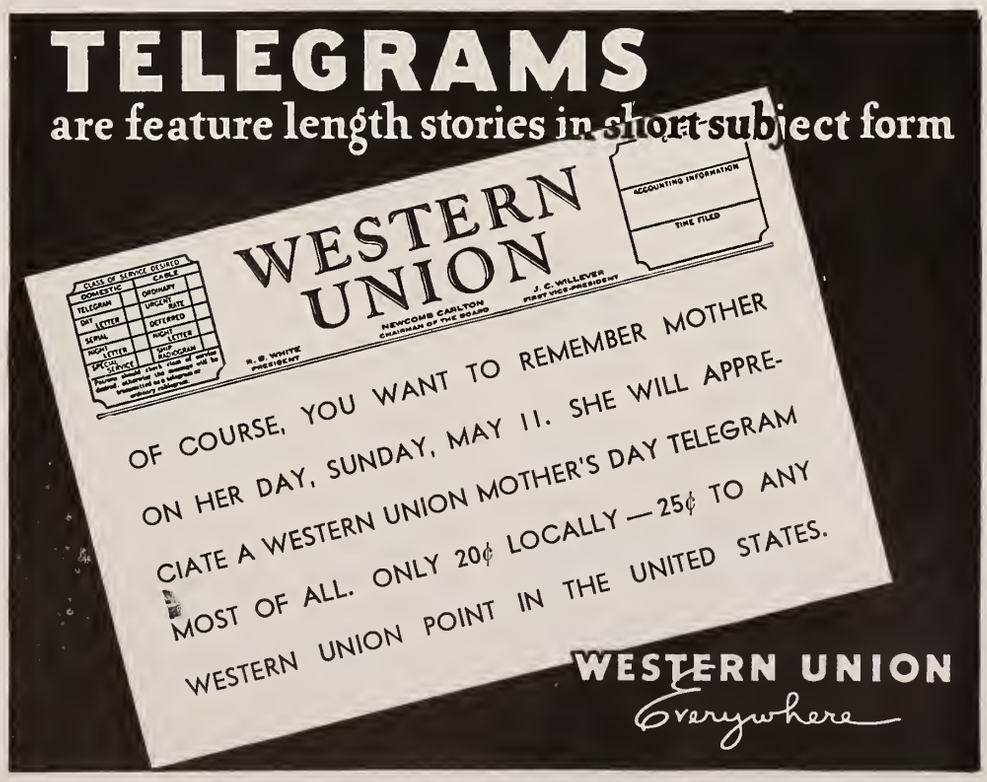
TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Best picture from Fox this year. Hit biggest flood in 10 years the last two days. Played April 13-15.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Dean Jagger, Randolph Scott, Robert Young, Virginia Gilmore—Better than "Jesse James" in story value. Of course, won't gross the money but a swell piece of outdoor entertainment and will please all. Played April 16-17.—Burris and Henly Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES: Robert Stering, Jean Rogers—O. K. for bargain night or double bill. We played it too old to get top possibilities from it. Played April 18.—Burris and Henley Smith, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Victor McLaglen, Brian Aherne—A good western. Running time, 90 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.



GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard, Jack Oakie—We are now on the second day of the run and business is holding up good. Must say it is a wonderful picture but I think it is too deep for some people. They just do not get the meaning of it all. I recommend this picture as a great piece of entertainment. Running time, 126 minutes. Played April 20-23. E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

SAPS AT SEA: Laurel and Hardy—When they named it "Saps at Sea", they really struck it right. These two guys are about as silly as you can make a human being but do they ever go for it in a small town. Did just fair business on it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 12-13.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

inal and a poor grosser. Certainly not worth what we paid for it. Played April 20-21.—Burris and Henly Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

BANK DICK, THE: W. C. Fields, Una Merkel—It was hard to find anyone who liked this picture. Played it Foto Nite so got by. Would advise passing it up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CHIP OF THE FLYING U: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Bob Baker—A fair western to average business. Running time, 55 minutes. Played April 18-19.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

NICE GIRL?: Deanna Durbin, Franchot Tone, Robert Stack, Walter Brennan, Robert Benchley, Helen Broderick—Fine production. Everybody enjoyed it.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

PONY POST: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—Had to buck a carnival on this date and picture held up swell. Up to standard in this series of action pictures. Running time, 56 minutes. Played April 19.—Burris and Henley Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

RIDERS OF PASCO BASIN: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Bob Baker—See report on "Legion of Lost Flyers", Universal. Running time, 56 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDERS OF PASCO BASIN: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Bob Baker—Pretty fair western. What ever happened to Smith Ballew? He was popular here. Would like to have him in another western series.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SPRING PARADE: Deanna Durbin. Robert Cummings, Mischa Auer—We can't put these over in our town; the paying public does not want to hear this type of singing. Business way off. Running time, 89 minutes. played April 20-23.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN THE DALTONS RODE: Kay Francis, Randolph Scott, Brian Donlevy—A good action picture. Personally I liked this a lot better than "Jesse James".—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Bellamy—Fair picture; fair business. Is similar to the "Thin Man" detective stories which Will Powell made. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON FOR THREE: George Brent, Ann Sheridan, Jane Wyman—This is the poorest "A" picture from Warners in ages. They've lost their knack of putting the entertainment in them now. Played April 2-3.—Burris and Henley Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—A good second. But the print was rotten on the second and third reel. I kept my fingers crossed, hoping that it wouldn't break. But it did.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CALLING ALL CURS: Three Stooges—A fair Stooge comedy.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

HAPPY TOTS' EXPEDITION: Color Rhapsodies—Not bad for color but have seen better. They take a trip to the dump and explore it. Running time, six minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

MONEY SQUAWKS: Andy Clyde—The best Clyde I have seen. Had the people in the aisles.—George S. Carporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

NEW YORK PARADE, THE: New York Parade Series—Excellent black and white scenes around New York City. My crowd thought it was exceptional, especially as many of them come from New York. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Century
"THE PROJECTOR OF THE CENTURY"

PEEP IN THE DEEP: Fables Cartoons—"Scrappy" and his brother are on a fishing boat and he has quite a time with the treasure chest and the octupus. Well liked and the grownups laughed, too. Done in green color which was very pretty. They should make more in this color. Running time, six minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

POOCH PARADE: Fables Cartoonst—This one O. K. They laugh and that's what we want them to do. I don't believe they enjoyed it as much as "Peep in the Deep", though. Running time, six minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

SPLITS, SPARES AND STRIKE: World of sports—A very fine short subject on ladies bowling.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOU'RE NEXT: All Star Comedies—Don't miss booking this. It was excellent.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HAPPIEST MAN ON EARTH: Miniatures—A prize-winning short story is brought to the screen with good acting and direction. I am not too sure, however, that a large number of these as short subjects would be well received. This one, although practically devoid of action, held interest fairly well. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MORE ABOUT NOSTRADAMUS: Minatures—Extremely interesting to all who are willing to do a little thinking. It caused plenty of comment for a few days around this town. It continues the phophecies made by Nostradamus centuries ago and shows how they have come true. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Very good. Played it since opening.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tiblury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PENNY TO THE RESCUE: Pete Smith Specialities—Clever kitchen work in color shows how a meal can be served out of odds and ends if you happen to have the right ones around. Pete Smith inserts plenty of humor. Close your eyes when the meatballs and spaghetti come on the screen; they'll make your mouth water. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RESPECT THE LAW: Crime Does Not Pay Series—To my mind this is the best of the "Crime Does Not Pay" series. It shows how carelessness in obeying sanitation laws starts the bubonic plague. It is not particularly pleasant but it certainly makes an impression on the one who is watching it. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RODEO DOUGH: Mary Treen, Sally Payne—I thought Metro had forgotten how to make shorts but here is a dandy. More entertainment in it than in lots of their features. Wish they would forget about Hedy Lamarr and some of the supposed to be stars and give these two girls a chance. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SEA FOR YOURSELF: Pete Smith Specialities—This contains some good Pete Smith items but the thrilling moment stretched one's imagination just a little too much to seem real. This subject is a little weak. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. small college town and rural patronage.

STUFFIE: Pete Smith Specialities—Single reel—of two dogs. Good filler. Running time, nine minutes—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

TORTOISE BEATS THE HARE: Merrie Melodies—"Bugs Bunny" is a favorite here and this cartoon is a good one so we are watching for the next one. People seemed to think "Bugs Bunny's" voice was different in this one. It certainly sounded that way. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Paramount

BOB CHESTER AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Good orchestra reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DIVING DEMONS: Sportlights—Very good diving subject. One of the best. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FEMALES IS FICKLE: Popeye the Sailor—Amusing.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

GENE KRUPA AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—This is a fairly good band reel. As far as I can see each college student likes a different band so that each band reel pleases a small handfull. Such is life! Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GREECE FIGHTS BACK: By the time you get one of these propaganda pictures, the situation has been reversed and they are out of time.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BILLPOSTERS, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—The usual Disney entertainment which is generally enjoyed by all.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 8—This one shows Australia's part in the war and is decidedly better than some of the other recent issues. After a brief lapse, March of Time is back in favor with my crowd. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

SYMPHONY IN SNOW: Sports Reviews—Just a fair sports reel. No bricks, no bouquets. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SYMPHONY IN SNOW: Sports Reviews—Skiing subject which is just a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 71—A trip to some foreign country where they make quite a number of things. Every time you see these things, of course, you would like to take a trip there. Running time, nine minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: No. 80—Fair reel. Some good and some not interesting. Running time, nine minutes. H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

KITTEN MITTENS: Lantz Colored Cartoons—Good.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 71—Contains several good subjects, especially the rubber tree which has a spring of water coming from it. It's hard to believe but it's true. Running time, nine minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BED TIME FOR SNIFFLES: Merrie Melodies—A fair filler.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DOG IN THE ORCHARD: Howard De Silva, Barbara Pepper—A very good murder mystery story. Played as second feature on a single feature program. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

ELMER'S PET RABBIT: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FIGHT, FISH, FIGHT: The Sports Parade—Good sport reel in color. Will please the men. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOOFY GROCERIES: Merrie Melodies—Again a very clever cartoon by Schlesinger. The gags come so fast that you have to se it twice to keep track of them. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARCH ON MARINES: Dennis Morgan, John Litel—A very good two reel color subject with feature stars. Play it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SKINNAY ENNIS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This is a cleverly done orchestra reel but the numbers are far too old to please the college students. Isn't this a reissue? Some of my crowd were sure I passed on old one off on them. Does anyone know? Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SNIFFLES BELLS THE CAT: Merrie Melodies—Another cute and clever cartoon from Schlesinger. Of course, it is well worth playing. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

TO DO ABOUT IT

Revision of the federal structure will make for more attentions to showmanship—in production and exhibition—even more than government anti-trust suits and consent decrees. That would be indicated by Doug Churchill in last Sunday's New York Times, in noting that higher income taxes will keep boxoffice names from turning out as many pictures. Quoting from the Hollywood Times-man:

"According to Hollywood opinion, while the addition of taxes and surtaxes will not compel the abandonment of the star system under which the industry has operated since nickelodeon days, it will restrict it materially and will necessitate revision of production and exploitation policies. . . .

"A large number of the industry's outstanding films each season are made by a group of free-lance stars. Most of them make three or four pictures a year. . . . Under the projected tax schedule they will turn over such a substantial share of their earnings to the government that when a maximum net is reached additional films will mean nothing to them. . . .

"Many of them have limited the number of pictures they have been making, and with the new levies they will curtail their activities still more. . . .

"Now emphasis must be given the picture, for stars will not be available. . . .

"Whether the exploitation geniuses will be able to shift the loyalty from stars to stories is a question. . . .

"It will be up to the publicity and advertising men. . . ."

If it comes to that, the situation, of course, is not to be sneezed at. It will be no mild stretch for those who have coupled showmanship exclusively with stars to switch to an overnight selling of stories instead. But there is no immediate cause for total alarm. The prospect is not entirely bleak.

Plenty of showmen have been and plenty of showmen are selling showmanship, star or no star. That's been going on a long, long time, as these pages bear out. In fact, a very handsome instance comes currently to attention in the job done by Manager John Galvin on the record five-week run of "Buck Privates", playing to more than half the city's population at the Penn, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

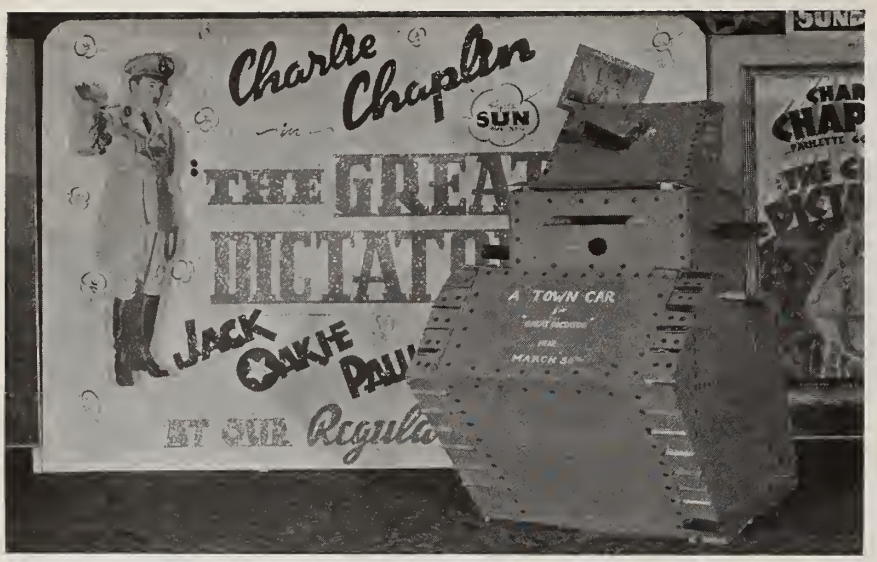
Galvin knew there were no million-dollar stars in the picture. He did know that the Universal showmen had turned out a timely yarn with a boxoffice title and laden with boxoffice fruit. Galvin needed no more to pick himself plenty.

The Wilkes-Barre date was set in to open as the local National Guard regiment prepared to go into federal service. So John spread the word widely at drills, at messtime, to his friends among the top-ranking officers. The city chosen as an induction station for that part of the state entertained busloads of selectees who had time to spare before leaving for camp. The theatreman brought them in to get a closeup of what army life was like. Visiting friends and relatives also rallied around. Soldiers on furlough and veterans of former wars were attracted. Also, and importantly, John Q. Fan and family. Throughout the engagement, Galvin kept plugging a unique advertising campaign, kept squeezing every possibility for exploitation that the story presented.

Recently, Moon Corker, L & J City Manager, in Athens, Ga., was called into military service and, after due deliberation, the spot filled by Frank Bickerstaff, district publicity head, who now announces the news as follows:

"I know you will be glad to learn that another of your Round Table boys has been promoted. This one feels that it is due very largely through his participation in the activities of the Managers Round Table."

Of course, the picture backed up his campaign, and very handsomely, too. That would be something Hollywood might ponder, beyond taxes and consent decrees, for instance.



And beyond the same taxes, decrees, and suchlike, the one inescapable conclusion comes nearer and nearer. That conclusion can be nothing less than this is showbusiness depending only upon showmanship to survive.

Let the motion picture be framed, studded, impregnated with that vital showmanship at the source—in production. Then turn it over to the showman in the field who knows what to do with it—and does.

Taxes and decrees have little to do with that. The solution to those who seek a solution is really quite simple.

Round Table In Pictures

Small compo baby tank to represent "The Great Dictator's" town car was constructed by Jerry Fowler at Schine's Geneva, Geneva, N. Y., ahead of that date and planted in lobby.

To exploit "Gone With the Wind" at Loew's Oriental, Brooklyn, Manager Clyde Fuller and his assistant, Harold Zeltner had girl dressed as Scarlett O'Hara seated in lobby reading copy of the book. Over fireplaces were portraits of the two stars.

Street bally arranged by Manager George French and Publicist Bill Morton for "Lady from Cheyenne" at the RKO Albee, Providence, featured man dressed in cowboy attire carrying title-lettered grip. Ballyman took in circus, races and other spots.

Promoted by Lou Cohen at Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn., was an RCA repeating phonograph planted in lobby ahead of "That Night in Rio" plugging hit tunes from the picture. Life-size cutout of Miranda was stationed alongside.

Below is blowup of letter sent from the Governor of Arizona to Chairman of the Brookline, Mass., Board of Selectmen praising Jack Markle's opening of "Arizona" at the Coolidge Corner Theatre. Placed out front ahead, easel was moved into lobby during run and good for newspaper breaks.

Contests Feature "Ziegfeld" Dates

Under the supervision of B&K publicity director Bill Hollander, and carried through by his assistant, Dorothy Deere, and Manager Ben Feldman at the United Artists Theatre in Chicago, the world premiere of "Ziegfeld Girl" got underway with a contest in the Herald-American with a roving photographer snapping girls he considered "pretty as a Ziegfeld Girl." Five were published each day for three days, each receiving cash and guest tickets. The Evanston-Index ran a contest to find a local girl approximating the physical measurements of Judy Garland to participate in a fashion show at leading department store. Stunt was duly publicized by cooperating merchant.

The Windy City was the first stop of the MGM "Ziegfeld" truck with two of the beauties who appear in the picture. Upon their arrival in the city, the girls were taken to the Municipal Airport to receive the first print of the picture, shots taken of this episode landed in daily papers. The girls also had several radio interviews and participated in fashion shows. The truck toured downtown area and the girls made personal appearances at leading hotels and night spots. The Herald-American ran a special "world premiere" edition of the paper day before opening.

Callow Holds Doubles Contest

Everett Callow, publicity head for the Warner theatre circuit in Philadelphia, coordinated a "Judy Garland" double contest in the "Philadelphia Daily News" with an elaborate fashion display at Gimbel's department store for the opening of "Ziegfeld Girl" at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia. The newspaper conducted a search among its readers for a young lady whose measurements came closest to fitting the elaborate gown which Judy wears in her "Minnie from Trinidad" number in the picture. The winner modeled the gown in the department store's fashion show. Store models wore the gowns featured in the picture and interest was heightened by Virginia Cruzon and Myrna Dell, two of the Ziegfeld girls, coming into town to participate in the display of fineries.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Cheerleading Contest Held By Bovim on "Andy Hardy"

Tying to the fact that Andy Hardy graduated from Carvel High School in the picture, "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," Russell Bovim, manager Loew's Ohio, in Columbus, Ohio, staged a high school night opening day. High school students throughout the city were invited, and a cheerleading contest was held. The five who withstood elimination were presented on the stage at the 9:30 P. M. show by Dick Overmyer, Ohio State University cheerleader. The winner, determined by audience applause, was presented with an engraved loving cup, and invited to be Mr. Overmyer's assistant at the Ohio State-Missouri football game next Fall. The two runner-ups were invited to the opening game of the Ohio State University series in Columbus.

"SPECIAL WEEK" TIEUPS

Suggested in the current "Ohio Mouthpiece", exploitation zone manual edited by Manny Pearlstein, advertising manager, Warner Ohio theatres, under the supervision of Nat Wolf, division manager, are numerous "special weeks" which, if properly executed, can create unusual interest because of their novelty and opportunities offered for new and different exploitation, Pearlstein finds. Here are a few of the ideas, quoted from the Warnerman's suggestions:

This can be worked in cooperation with photographers, film supply stores and developing studios. Your newspaper might desire to sell a cooperative page to these places, with an announcement on the same page of a snapshot contest and prizes extended by the theatre. In the absence of newspaper cooperation, photographers might take candid shots of people on the streets for a lobby display. Those identifying themselves receive guest tickets.

"LAUGH WEEK" or "HAPPINESS WEEK"

Nothing better when you notice one or more comedies have been booked in to play the same week. Designate it as "Laugh" or "Happiness" week. Get the Mayor to issue a "Laugh Week" proclamation; run an advance trailer and spot boards in lobby. Suggested copy: "What this city needs is a good laugh. And we have just the thing. . . . Week of ..... hereby acclaimed to be 'Laugh Week'. Your sides will ache, your eyes will shine, but you'll feel yourself again. Come! For the longest and loudest laughs, join the revelers here."

Display frame masks might be made to resemble a wide-open mouth in laughter. Stills as well, masked in similar manner. Outside gag can consist of man walking through downtown streets laughing continuously—back sign with copy: "Don't be envious of me. You, too, can have a good laugh. Attend the ..... Theatre during 'Laugh Week' and see . . . " etc. Conduct a laugh contest in papers for best sense-of-humor quips. Prizes awarded to those writing best letters on what tickles their funny-bone most.

Set up a "laugh thermometer" upon which is lettered "uproarious", "comical", "laughable", "shrieks", "howls", "fun", etc. Copy: "Keep your temperature and blood pressure down. Make the 'laugh thermometer' your guide. See . . ." etc. During the engagement a barker garbed in clown suit can lend emphasis. For laughs he can pull inoffensive pranks on passersby.

"HOME INDUSTRIES" or "BOOST-THE-CITY WEEK"

This can be worked in cooperation with Chamber of Commerce or leading businessmen and manufacturers. They take ads to make up special section of paper. If the lobby is of sufficient size, the public is persuaded to attend the exhibition. Each night, or on last night, prizes are raffled off to those in attendance. Or a similar idea can be worked with a single product, or dealer, to result in a "Radio Week", a "Flower Week", "Electrical Week", etc.

"COMMUNITY WEEK"

Each evening during the course of some particular week, different nearby communities are honored at the theatre. Leading citizens of the various districts should be willing to cooperate. Newspapers, in connection with this stunt, might sell a page of ads to merchants in the communities being recognized. Glee clubs, bands, and any marching organization that the different districts have can likewise participate on the stage or in front of the theatre nightly.

Walsh Ties Western Union To "Men of Boys Town"

Round Tabler William Walsh, manager of the Comerford Theatre in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., made an unusual tie-up with his local Western Union manager on Easter and the fact that "Men of Boys Town" was held for a second week. Under the plan the patrons helped plug the show for a Western Union desk was set up in the lobby and patrons were permitted to send telegrams free to their friends. The telegram read: "Just saw 'Men of Boys Town' at the Comerford where it's held for second week. It's really great and know you'll enjoy it. Happy Easter," or "Easter greetings. Know your holiday will be all the more happy by seeing 'Men of Boys Town.' Just saw it at the Comerford and it's wonderful." Telegrams were delivered by regular W.U. messengers.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon from the brush of Milt Rosenfeld, Round Table cartoonist.

Usher: We're sorry, Madam, but it is absolutely against house rules to divulge the killer.

Street Repair Job Used By Hall for "Dugan" Bally

A repair job on a water main situated directly in front of the theatre provided Henry Hall, of the Jefferson, Charlottesville, Va., with an opportunity for a novel bit of exploitation for "The Trial of Mary Dugan." The main burst two days before the picture opened and Hall immediately set up a sign standard in the mound of dirt reading: "We're digging for evidence to be used in 'The Trial of Mary Dugan.'" On the day of the premiere, the sign was changed to: "We found the evidence to be used in 'The Trial of Mary Dugan,'" and, in addition, planted a dagger, plus an exhibit card, on the sign.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Early Bird Matinees Sell "Miss Jones"

Tying in with the department store background of "The Devil and Miss Jones," M. L. Maloney of Loew's Poli, in Worcester, Mass., staged an early bird matinee starting at six a.m., with attendance largely from stores, telephone companies and general business concerns. Trailer was used four days in advance and when it appeared on the screens of the three circuit houses, installed alarm clocks placed beneath the front row of seats went off with a bang.

Through a promotion effected by the theatreman, promoted doughnuts and coffee were served to those attending. Also arranged through tieup with Station WLCO was a 15-minute broadcast consisting of interviews with patrons, which was held on the mezzanine.

Manager Lou Cohen of Loew's Poli, in Hartford, arranged a similar early morning show for his date, opening at seven a.m. Coffee and doughnuts were also promoted here and both managers secured spot announcements on bulletin boards of various business establishments.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Breakfast Show Held By Vaughn for "Foyle"

"Breakfast Show for White Collar Girls" featured the campaign arranged by Manager Ed Vaughn of the Chief Theatre, Greeley, Col., for "Kitty Foyle." The early morning show drew a capacity audience of secretaries from offices in the downtown district. Promoted coffee and doughnuts were served following the screening.

"Kitty Foyle" blotters were distributed to all offices in the downtown district and all busses and taxis were placarded with special imprinted cards and bumper strips.

"Kitty Foyle" fashion stills were placed in the local dress and hat shops and the advertising campaign included a generous allotment of daily stories and photographs. Spot announcements pluggging the picture were held on the local radio station the day before and on opening day.

Ties Three Dates Into "Laff Week"

Having three comedy attractions booked consecutively in one week, at the LeClaire, Moline, Ill., Manager Francis Gillon struck upon the idea of incorporating the trio into a "Laff Week," the pictures being "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," "Buck Privates" and "Honeymoon for Three." The project was advanced first with a special trailer, urging patrons to see all three of the fun shows, copy running along the line "if you don't like to laugh, you won't enjoy a single program at this theatre next week." The laugh theme was also carried out in the lobby displays, and all ads carried laughing heads and other appropriate copy.

Important in the promotions were a number of radio tieins, wherein prominent being the cooperation of the man-on-the-street program over WHBF. On the Saturday day-ahead, the announcer plugged the "Week" with a laughing contest for passers-by, also asking questions on how the public reacted to an all-laugh program of such magnitude.

Gives "Road" Script to Library

For his date on "Tobacco Road," Gillon gave the engagement an added authority by presenting a copy of the picture script to the public library for lending purposes. The presentation was considered sufficiently newsworthy for featured publicity in the local dailies. For novelty purposes, Francis switched to a lighter tempo in his outside exploitation by distributing turnips in cellophane bags with explanatory tags attached.

On "Pastor Hall," the Round Tabler adapted the recent widely advertised offer of free messages to the German government by inviting patrons to submit their idea of messages to Adolph Hitler. In addition to newspaper copy on the offer, the Tri-Stater had an unusual setpiece placed in the lobby to plug the stunt and supplied pencil and paper for those who took the offer seriously.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Nugget Displays Aid "Pot o' Gold" Dates

Bowls of small stone painted to simulate gold nuggets were used variously by Harold Thomas at the Malco Fulton, Fulton, Ky., and Sonny Shepherd at the Wometco Lincoln, in Miami, for their dates on "Pot o' Gold." For a week ahead of playdates, Thomas' display created much attention, the theatreman reporting that folks went so far as to walk off with the "nuggets" for souvenirs. Spotlights were used to enhance the effect with 40 by 60's alongside. By gilding rock salt with gold paint, Thomas enclosed them in imprinted pay envelopes and distributed them at theatre week ahead, house-to-house and left them on counters of business establishment and hotel and card tables.

For the date at the Lincoln, Shepherd held a guessing contest wherein a large bowl of candy chips was placed in the lobby and cards distributed by ushers for patrons desiring to guess the numbers of coins in the bowl. Number of entries ran into the thousands, according to Shepherd, for the prizes offered by the theatre.

Round Tabler Getting "Hot" On Hot Months Promotions

All Manner of "Cool" Campaigns Planned in Various Sectors to "Beat the Heat"

That the hot weather is upon us is definitely noted in the extensive preparations by Round Tablers in different sections of the country to cope with that opposition. Plans are already underway to make the theatre a "harbor from the heat" as indicated in the reports on this page and promotions having to do with the comfort of patrons.

Visual appeal obviously predominates, especially in lobby and frontal decorations as represented, for instance, by a cut on this page from Joe Epstein of Loew's Spooner, in the Bronx, where the theatreman strives for an airy summer note with picket fences, spring blooms and flowery art to spot the titles of his coming attractions.

Fitzpatrick Features Rock Garden

It is also represented in the white enamel lattice work now covering the walls of the Loew Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., where Ed Fitzpatrick has framed potted green plants throughout his summer displays, also trimming his boxoffice with green artificial hedges with artificial roses covering all of the lattice work. To carry the effect further, Fitz has planted corrobuff awnings atop reader boards and inside frames; pastel corrugated backgrounds are used in the wall frames and masks in sky blue are used to set these off. Summer atmosphere is added too with the construction of a rock garden on a lobby corner stage, with a sprinkler system in the center.

The Loewman is going after ice cream manufacturers and bottlers for free giveaways for children; newspaper ads will be decorated with "cool" slugs, these also to be carried in heralds, posters, etc.

In Utica, N. Y., at the Warner Avon, Arnold Stoltz is stressing his regular showmanship barrages to sell summer attractions, the atmosphere of the theatre being featured in display with a large "cool" sign constructed of a piece of lead pipe covered with plaster of paris and white flitter. This is run under each end of marquee with a blue spotlight upon it.

Conner's Trailer Carries Message

Spring trailer copy is called upon by Marlowe Conner at the Warner Sheboygan, Sheboygan, Wis., to bring institutional attention to summer attractions in this fashion: "Yes, siree, week in and week out your Sheboygan Theatre brings you the tops in entertainment. Look at the delightful fun-loving hours that are in store for you this Spring when you bring the family to see these great hits of the stage and screen. Here they are. everyone a winner." This copy is followed by the names of the the attractions.

A herald idea to build his shows, paid for by local insurance agency, is a policy issued by Conner, each of which is numbered, with certain of the numbers posted at the boxoffice to be exchanged for free admissions. Tiein copy reads: "You are hereby insured"; inside given over to the layout devoted to art on coming attractions and back page for the agency. The same idea was carried out in two-column art "Try this Spring tonic," panels on the coming pictures set within the outline of a large medicine bottle.

SPRING LOBBY BY JOE EPSTEIN AT LOEW'S NEW YORK SPOONER

Reliables that have proven effective in the past and set for adaptation for this year by "Kal" Kalberer, city manager for Switow's Indiana and Liberty Theatres, in Washington, Ind., are featured, of course, by spring institutional copy on behalf of the cooling plant. In addition, Kalberer is a believer in fresh flowers at the boxoffice, these promoted from local florists and amateur horticulturists in that sector who are rewarded with guest tickets. The Switow city manager makes it a policy to impress a clean and cool front upon the passersby by watering the streets and sidewalks before opening time and builds this atmosphere further with light colors in all display signs and all other advertising.

Beaches, Camps Not Neglected

Cool lighting effects inside the theatre, of course, are are not neglected and entire house staff is outfitted in summer garb. Where people gather in the summer is also stressed as important by Kalberer, who increases his outside advertising and posters at ball games, beaches, etc. Tourist camps, highway eating places and gas stations are also covered, as are soft ball games, golf courses, etc.

County and surrounding town schools are contacted for graduation parties with offers of special prizes for groups, "Kal" stressing the necessity of detailing the programs to be given and the price inducements. He also finds that tieins with newspapers for childrens' contests effective, such as special cartoon shows on Saturday mornings street ballys, etc.

Amateur Talent Shows Encouraged

Carmon Phillips at the Onate, in Belen, N. M., finds that the featuring of local talent in the summertime, especially among the younger generation, returns dividends that are fancy, this year with a Hollywood World Premiere, in which is incorporated star impersonation contest on the stage. Slated to come by Phillips are Tom Thumb Wedding, Tiny Tot Revue, Men's Bathing Beauty Burlesque Show, etc. Also predominating in the program is a "Beach Fashion Parade and Beauty Pageant" held on two nights and conducted as follows: The audience that attends the first night is given a voting blank to vote for the contestant that they think is best. After the show, the judges count the votes and no one knows the outcome until ALL the girls have appeared again once on the following night. Then the 10 girls receiving the highest amount of votes from the audience the night before, are called on the stage and out-of-town judges pick the winners from this group. In this manner, all the girls appear both nights and help draw

EASTERTIDE ACTIVITIES RELATED BY THEATREMEN

Emphasis on Children's Parties Found Effective in Calling Attention to Spring Season

What with Easter egg and treasure hunts, displays, giveaways, campaigns, etc., Round tablers generally have comported themselves ably in the stimulation of this season's activities, typical being the campaign put on by Howard Sexton at the Indiana-Illinois Roxy, in LaPorte, Ind., in which he put on a kiddies' Easter party which was practically costless. In this connection, the theatreman promoted 12 live rabbits, bags of candy, prizes in connection with his "Gloom Chasers" quiz program and hams for the adults. Programs delivered house-to-house plugged the event, as did trailers run ahead, and cooperating merchants' window displays.

At the Onate, in Belen, New Mexico, Carmon Phillips arranged an Easter egg hunt which was advertised well in advance. Local merchant donated the eggs, the hunt starting off with a free show for the kids at the theatre, children arriving behind school band and parading after show with banners to local park for the hunt. Boy Scouts were tied in ahead with members secreting the eggs and aiding generally in the transportation of the children from theatre to park.

Merchant Sponsors Kid Show

Clayton Cornell called his party at Schine's State, in Tupper Lake, Tupper Lake, N. Y., a "Kiddies Easter Vacation Matinee Party," feature being "Thief of Bagdad" and run in conjunction with the N. Y. State Milk publicity short "Our Milky Way" and tied in with largest dairy for cooperation. Bottles of chocolate milk were promoted for giveaway to the kids attending, each child, in addition, receiving a photo of Sabu, also paid for by the dairy. Stunt was well advertised, both by theatre and cooperating milk dealer, who was sold on a co-op herald which was delivered to each home a few days ahead.

To stimulate attendance on Good Friday at the El Rancho, in Victoria, Texas, Round Tabler Ken Prickett put on an old fashioned country store night which worked as follows: Purchasing 10 large bags of groceries, these were placed on display in the foyer day of the night. The theatreman then advertised that these would be sold at auction and then, in turn, the money received from the auction, would itself be sold to bidders. Announcement was carried on all monthly programs and in all newspaper ads.

Country Store Night Recommended

In setting up the show, Ken lined the bags across the stage and showed the contents of one. After displaying the articles, he asked the audience to pick the bag they would like auctioned first. This was offered immediately and sold to the first bidder for 25 cents. After selling three bags, Prickett took a dollar that he had received from the sale and offered it for sale, and sold it when the bid reached 60 cents. He then continued with the groceries until all were sold and repeated the process of reselling the money thus gained. Entire stunt took 25 minutes.

A pre-Easter giveaway was staged by Round Tabler R. Gustafson at the Roxy, in La Porte, Indiana, which the theatreman chose to call a "picnic." Local packing company was tied in here and promoted for 15 hams. In this connection, lucky number coupons were distributed with each theatre admission and each 25-cent purchase at the merchant's store. Stunt was advertised storewide and in ads, in addition to theatre programs and heralds.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

MATINEE UTENSILS GOOD FOR ADMISSION

Main attractor for the "Mickey Mouse Easter Party" at the Schine Athena, Athens, Ohio, put over by Manager Francis Nolan, was a tiein for national defense and especially for the collection of aluminum utensils. Admission to children was free to those bringing two old aluminum utensils, some 200 pounds being redeemed by the Schiner and turned over to a local junk dealer at regular prices.

As to be expected, much publicity was gathered as a result, with announcements made in other places where it would do the most good.

Yudin Distributes Institutional Copy

Promotional pieces recently distributed by Harry Yudin at the Circle, in Toronto, to sell his theatre consisted of tinted bookmark carrying comic cut of man afloat on a raft. Copy below read: "Don't be at sea for entertainment. Come to the New Centre Theatre." Second piece was in the form of a puzzle with copy below: "You had to puzzle this one out—but it is no puzzle to find good entertainment at the" etc. From time to time, Yudin changes his approach but the message remains the same.

For "Sea Hawk" action front was constructed with eight foot cutout figure of Errol Flynn on a boat, arm extended with sword was animated by small concealed motor. On "The Villain Still Pursued Her," Yudin used the same motor to move eyes in cutout figure of Alan Mowbray, the villain in the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hosts Recruits' Parents

Foster Norton of the Strand Theatre, Oshkosh, Wis., invited the mothers and wives of men who have recently joined the navy as one factor in his far-reaching campaign on the RKO Radio Harold Lloyd comedy "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob." They attended the opening show along with a delegation of the Sea Scouts.

Summer Style Show Favorable with "Rosy"

some of the first night audience back again to see if one for which they they voted is in the final 10 selected.

In Bridgeport, Conn., Morris Rosenthal at Loew's Majestic has devised a means of attracting patronage at nearby beaches by having Liberty Magazine boys make the beach homes distributing heralds and programs. Rosy has slated a summer style show and is further utilizing the beaches for publicity by sending out girls in bathing suits with title lettered parasols. The same idea will be utilized on boat or launch drawn up and down in front of local beaches. Lobbies are decorated, obviously for the hot months with lattice work, flowers and a cooling display built with running water. To make this more appealing, the Loewman tied in with several drink distributors for free refreshments to patrons, decorating lobby with small tables and chairs to convey an atmosphere of street cafe.

Warnerman Ryan Offers Suggestions

For the various theatres in the Chicago and Wisconsin Warner zone, Charles Ryan, district manager and assistant to James Coston, zone head, has made available a number of pertinent suggestions for managers in the zone house organ which he edits. Among important advices are the "billets" which have to do with making sure that patrons are informed of the coming attractions in addition to the coolness and comfort of the theatre. Ryan stresses care in keeping away from anything pertaining to the heat, with managers warned to stay away from such phrases as "hot stuff," etc., in copy. Managers are also warned against mention of the warm weather or the use of hand fans, also against hot colors of red or orange in any lobby decorations, etc.

For lobby displays, the Warnerman goes for such ideas as stuffed polar bear, promoted from local taxidermist, to be centered in Arctic scene together with Eskimo, igloo, etc. Borrowing refrigerator for the summer from a local dealer to check foodstuffs is another service appreciated by women shoppers.

A shadow box is also suggested with an exhaust nozzle, such as a vacuum cleaner has, attached to the bottom. Inside the box have a V-shaped space at the bottom of which is an opening for the nozzle. Drop enough white cutout paper into the V-shaped compartment and turn on the juice; this will blow the paper, so that it resembles swirling snow. The face of the shadow box covers the "V," thus giving a chance to put in an Eskimo and igloo, icicles, icebergs, etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Roberts' "Devil" Ballyhoo

Manager Bill Roberts of the California Theatre, San Diego, used a beautiful girl and a "Devil" in a bright red costume for a ballyhoo phase of his campaign on "The Devil and Miss Jones." The couple, bedecked with signs, made their appearance on main street at peak hours. The couple also rode around the city in an open Studebaker appropriately bannered.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Teaser heralds were distributed ahead of "Come Live With Me" at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass., by Francis Faille which were addressed to wives and asked them if they could budget their families on $17.50 a week as was done in the picture. Faille also received permission from various grocers to stuff the heralds in outgoing packages.

An old telephone gag was worked by Charlie Moyer, manager of Warners' Hanover Theatre, Hanover, Pa., for "Philadelphia Story." His cashier asked: "Can you tell me which picture won an Academy Award for James Stewart?" From that point, she plugged the picture and playdates.

Barricading the front of his theatre with sand bags stuffed with paper, J. R. MacEachron at the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn. ushered in his date on "Buck Privates". Copy on sacks read: "Caught in a draft of laughs", "Pack up your troubles and come down to see" etc. etc. Borrowing suits from station attendants, Mac dressed several of his staff and put them out on the streets drilling. Tieup with recruit station brought display of posters while five and ten featured toy window display of all type soldiers.

First 50 private secretaries attending the Poli-Palace, Hartford, opening of "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" received roses as part of Fred Greenway's campaign for the picture.

Bootblack tie-ups were made by Sid Munter, manager of Warners' Grand Opera House, Wilmington, Del., to exploit "Dead Man's Shoes." All shoe stores and bootblacks in town displayed cards reading: "Don't Wear Dead Man's Shoes when you attend the Grand Theatre," giving playdates. Munter also conceived a 3-sheet board appended with a pair of shoes as a teaser which brought many curious observers to his display.

Dom Lucente, manager of Warners' Alhambra Theatre, Philadelphia, finds that by adapting regular heralds to different classes pays dividends. He set out on such a venture with a completely Italian herald on "Son of Monte Cristo," selling "See" copy, "Romance" and "Intrigue" and got nice results.

Marty Aninsman, manager of Warners' Leader Theatre, Philadelphia, promoted a newspaper contest for "The Face Behind the Mask." He used masks over prominent stars asking the readers to identify each and offering passes to those who guess correctly.

Free kisses in the lobby of Warners' Vernon Theatre, Philadelphia, were offered to the first 500 men attending the opening performances of "This Thing Called Love" by Manager Al Simko. The daily newspapers and radio stations picked up the idea, giving it mentions, and helping to crowd the lobby for the "chocolate kisses."

LOST AND FOUND TIED TO "BUNDLES"

How to dispose of unclaimed articles in the Lost and Found department has been solved ingeniously by Round Tabler James Wagner at the Cedar, in Philadelphia, and for the benefit of the local British Relief Drive. All items held up to a certain period are turned over to the local "Bundles for Britain" unit for distribution overseas.

Tying in with schools for his date on "Foreign Correspondent" at the El Rey. in Glendale, Ariz., Art Halbrooks offered a ten dollar cash prize for the best speech written along the lines of the one given by McCrea in the picture. In addition, newspaper tied in by offering another five dollars to the one who delivered the best.

For his date on "Western Union" at the Schine State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., Clay Cornell created a false front with mounted three-sheets. Coloring contest was planted in papers and giant telegram was displayed in Western Union windows. Book counter displays were secured and one sheet was planted in library along with copies of Zane Grey's books.

Roy Robbins, manager of Warners' Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia, arranged an "Americanization Broadcast" for "Buck Privates." "Good citizenship" was the theme of a special broadcast on WFIL that included a round robin forum with Milt Young, of the Warners' publicity department; Martha Payne, of the radio station; a member of the city police force, the national field secretary of the American Legion, and Robbins.

To exploit "Li'l Abner," John H. Neuer, manager of the Lemoyne Theatre, Lemoyne, Pa., used the words "Reserved for Sadie Hawkins Day" backwards on the marquee. He also displayed a lobby board urging the women to bring their husbands and beaus.

Sammy Teitlebaum, manager of Warners' Commodore Theatre, Philadelphia, obtained music sheet covers to plug "Invisible Woman." He placed a cartoon mat on the picture in the "Daily Pennsylvanian," college paper, for passes and offered tickets for the best pen drawing of Virginia Bruce. Teaser cards in five drug stores heralded the appearance of "Invisible Woman" at his theatre.

A coast-to-coast telephone interview with Kathryn Grayson, who plays the title role in the picture, was the highlight of the "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" campaign put over by U. K. Rice, Carolina, Winston-Salem, N. C. A local newspaperman spoke from the Eastern end of the line. Miss Grayson is a native of the city.

Fans who recovered the "lost" notebook (several of them) of "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" were rewarded with guest tickets by Eddie Doob, Loew's, Wilmington, as part of his campaign for the picture.

In addition to securing numerous indorsements from organizations and prominent individuals, including the Mayor, Fred Forry, Colonial, Lancaster, Pa., tied in his "Land of Liberty" engagement with a local Democracy Days celebration.

As a teaser gag ahead of "The Bad Man," Arnold Stoltz at Warner's Avon, in Utica, New York, artfully dropped inexpensive change purses on streets of downtown area ahead of opening. On opening, folks found fake bills enclosed carrying cut of Beery with playdate and picture copy.

Contacting local merchants, Carmon Phillips at the Onate, in Belen, N. M., sold them on the idea of holding a spring and summer fashion show on his stage. Each store supplied its own models and advertised the show storewide and in their ads, theatre plugging it through trailer and house programs.

Typist was planted in the lobby of the Frolic Theatre, in Chicago, by Manager Ben Cohn ahead of "Kitty Foyle" batting out picture copy messages which were distributed to patrons. To give more realism to the stunt, Cohn had the staff typist sent to local beauty parlor with a still of Ginger so that her hairdo could be copied.

For "Philadelphia Story" at the Schine Dixie, in Rochester, Sam Shafer distributed tabloid heralds with headline banners stressing fact that Jimmy Stewart had won an Academy Award. Inasmuch as Philip Barry, the author, and George Cukor, director, are former Rochesterians, inside spread was devoted to them. Merchants' ad included in the tabloid paid for cost of printing and distribution.

Eye-arresting was the lobby setpiece created by Reek Feliziani ahead of "Foreign Correspondent" at the Midtown, in San Francisco, consisted of eight by twelve foot map of the world. At side of map were photos of leading foreign correspondents, with pieces of tape drawn from a particular name to the European capitol from which that correspondent made his broadcast. Flanked at bottom were scene stills and at right was cutout of Joel McCrea.

OBITUARIES

Armand J. Moreau, M & P District Manager, Dies

Armand J. Moreau, 45, theatre promoter and in recent years district manager of M & P Theatres Corp., died in Portland, Maine, on April 22d. Early this winter Mr. Moreau was ill with double pneumonia, and upon recovering went to Florida. Returning to Portland in March, he had since given attention to his business, making a few trips to different parts of the state.

Following the World War, in which he saw action, Mr. Moreau received his first executive appointment as manager of the Suffolk theatre in Holyoke, Mass., in 1920. After service there he went to Springfield, Mass., to hold a similar position with the Bijou theatre. In 1921 he joined Famous Players-Lasky, Inc., being immediately appointed manager of the Palace theatre at Arctic, R. I., and similar service followed with the Broadway theatre in Chelsea; Haines, Waterville, and the Opera House in Bangor, Maine.

He later was appointed personal representative of the late William P. Gray, who had been named general manager of the Famous Players-Lasky interests in New England. When Publix took over the Famous Players-Lasky theatres, Mr. Moreau was transferred to New York City to make a survey of theatre properties in the southern and southwestern section of the country. When Publix interests were taken over by Mullin and Pinanski, Inc., Mr. Moreau continued in their employ, continuing in the position he had filled with the former company.

He is survived by his wife, two sons and two sisters.

Stanley Fields, 57, Character Actor, Dies

Stanley Fields, motion picture actor, died in Hollywood, Wednesday, April 23d, of a heart attack at the age of 57.

Following a career on the stage as a chorus boy, and in vaudeville with Frank Fay, Mr. Fields went to Hollywood and appeared in Little Caesar." Since that time he has appeared in many motion pictures as the heavy, his most recent being Universal's currently releasing "The Lady from Cheyenne."

Eddie Conrad

Edward (Eddie) Conrad, stage and screen character actor, died in Hollywood Sunday, April 28th, of a heart attack. He was 50 years old. Before entering films Mr. Conrad toured the major vaudeville circuits and later became a film actor. His most recent films were "Foreign Correspondent," "Murder Among Friends" and "Lucky Partners."

Theodore Liebler

Theodore A. Liebler, 89, who as a theatrical producer brought to America the great actresses Duse, Rejane and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, died Tuesday, April 22d, at his home in Old Greenwich, Conn., at the age of 89. He leaves a widow and three sons.

Thomas W. Chatburn

Thomas W. Chatburn, retired manager of the Richmond theatre, former executive of the old Vitagraph Co., and one time manager of the Hippodrome theatre in New York, died in North Adams, Mass., Tuesday, April 22d.

Theodore Copping

Theodore Copping, 53, motion picture theatre owner who for nearly 30 years has operated the theatre at Rawdon, Canada, died in the Montreal General Hospital, Monday, April 28th.

Jacob Fabian, 76, Theatre Operator Dies in New York

Jacob Fabian, one of the first in establishing large motion picture theatres and long active in philanthropic work in Paterson, N. J., died in New York, Thursday, April 24th, of a heart attack. He was 76 years old. Mr. Fabian maintained a home in Paterson, but had spent most of his time since 1929 in his Southern home in Miami Beach, Fla.

Mr. Fabian was born in Austria on February 25th, 1865, and at the age of 17 came alone to this country. He engaged in the clothing business in New York for fourteen years before going to Paterson in 1896.

In 1914, Mr. Fabian, who had also been in the clothing business in Paterson, entered the motion picture field and erected the 2,500-seat Regent theatre. For many years it was one of the largest and most modern theatres in the country. Later he built other houses in Paterson and extended his chain to other New Jersey municipalities, including Newark, Elizabeth and Passaic.

In a transaction said to involve $1,000,000 Mr. Fabian leased the Salaam Temple property in Newark and operated the Mosque theatre there. He also had owned the New Jersey First National Exchange and was vice-president of Associated First National Picture Producers. He retired several years ago and since that time the Fabian enterprises have been directed by his son, Simon H. Fabian, who operates about 40 theatres, including some in Greater New York.

Funeral services were held Sunday morning at the Temple Emanu-El, Paterson, N. J., followed by the burial at the Temple Emanu-El Cemetery, Rochelle Park, Paterson.

Surviving, besides his son Si, who now operates the circuit, he leaves a widow, the former Miss Rose Glascheib; a daughter, sister and eight grandchildren.

Ben Hicks, Retired Film Executive, Dies

Captain Ben Hicks, connected with the motion picture industry for many years, died of a heart attack in New York, Saturday, April 26th, while visiting at the town residence of Jack Cohen, Columbia vice-president.

Mr. Hicks handled the European distribution of the early Charlie Chaplin pictures for Mutual. A native and resident of London for many years, he built and acquired a number of theatres there which were later sold to Paramount.

Funeral services were held Sunday at the Park West Memorial Chapel. Mr. Hicks is survived by his widow, and a brother.

B. H. Rolston

Funeral services were held in Port Jefferson, Conn., Sunday, for B. H. Rolston, who died Friday, April 25th. He is survived by his widow and one daughter. Mr. Rolston had been connected with the motion picture industry for many years and built the Strand theatre in New Haven in 1919.

Alfred E. Elge

Alfred E. Elge, 57, projectionist at the Park theatre in Butte, Mont., died Sunday, April 27th, after a long illness.

Charles Chic

Charles J. Chic, 50, general production manager of MGM, was found dead in his car in Beverly Hills on Saturday, April 26th. He is survived by his parents, his widow and one sister.

IN COURTS

Distributors, Supply Firms Support Pizor

Paramount exchange in Philadelphia and Quality Premium Distributors as well as several equipment supply concerns in that city, named in the bill of equity filed by Charles Segall against his exhibitor-partner, Lewen Pizor, have entered general denials that Mr. Pizor had secured personal advantages at the expense of the partnership that operated four theatres in Philadelphia.

Ulrik F. Smith, Paramount branch manager, said, "The charge that any credits were improperly given by Paramount to Mr. Pizor or to any corporation to which he was connected, is unfounded." Charles Goodwin, executive manager of Quality Premium Distributors, in a public statement, likewise said, "It would be shocking to think that we would give or Mr. Pizor would request or receive any credits which did not belong to him personally." Similar denials were made publicly by various service corporations in the city mentioned in the counter-suit by Mr. Segall against Mr. Pizor to dissolve one of their theatre corporations that operated the Ace, Tioga and Chelten theatres.

Orders Final Dividend

Federal Judge Murray Hulbert on Wednesday, April 23d, in New York, ordered payment of a first and annual dividend of .00305 per cent to general creditors of the Seattle Orpheum Co., with claims totalling $2,972,868. At the same time the court ordered the closing of the estate, after awarding a $1,000 legal fee to Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, and $425 to the Irving Trust Co. as trustee. Seattle Orpheum, as former owner of the Orpheum theatre in Seattle, Wash., filed a voluntary petition in November 1937.

Settle Song Suit

A suit for $525,000 claiming that the song "Good-bye to Love" was infringed by Twentieth Century-Fox in the film "Here's to Romance," has been settled, according to a stipulation filed in the United States district court in New York. Defendants also were San Fox Publishing Co., Herb Magidson and Con Conrad, song writers. Plaintiffs were Carl Field and Henry and Jeff Clarkson.

Meyer Becomes Plaintiff

Rene B. Meyer was permitted, on Monday, to intervene as a plaintiff in the stockholders suit brought by Samuel I. Posen against Universal Pictures and its officials. Mr. Meyer, as holder of 100 shares of common stock, sought to join Mr. Posen in pressing charges of mismanagement.

Barrymore Tax Refund

Bankruptcy Referee Ernest R. Utely has ordered $35,000 paid on John Barrymore's 1938 Federal income tax and $5,000 on his state income tax, as the result of the accumulation of $33,000 in Mr. Barrymore's funds. The referee also ordered that $25,000 be set aside from future earnings for federal income taxes. He granted the actor $700 weekly allowance from his earnings.

Educational Sale Set

Public sale of the rights to 16 mm. and sub-standard non-theatrical films of Educational Film Corp. of America, and its subsidiaries, bankrupt company, will be held before Peter B. Olney, referee on May 5th at the United States court house in New York. The material includes about 730 sound and silent subjects.

AMERICA 1941

PRESENTING MOTION PICTURES

SERVING TODAY'S CAUSE OF the UNITED STATES and the AMERICAS

"We have seen the American motion picture become the foremost in the world. We have seen it reflect our civilization throughout the world ... the aims, aspirations and ideals of a free people and of freedom ..."

—PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT
February 27, 1941

HERE presented in this "America 1941" section is expression of the response of the motion picture to today's great audience interest in the nation's problems in the face of world crisis.

In its fashion the screen is ever responsive to and reflective of its times, but never so markedly and so emphatically as when under the stresses of war problems and war emotions.

Every morning's paper, every evening's radio is pouring into audience consciousness a new intensification of national concern. From Tillie-the-toiler to the coupon clippers there is personal concern about living, security, survival.

To serve this rising national interest the motion picture is producing and presenting an array of materials in features and shorts. They are calculated to enable the showmen of the box office to engage the attention of his public, and to equip him to enlist the cooperative enthusiasms of the patriotic and socially minded groups and leaders of his community. To many this will appear as opportunity to further integrate the theatre with the community, to enable the screen to share with press and radio in the greatest topical interest and service of the day.

The devices and methods now in use in the presentation of product of this order by showmen alert to the topical opportunity—and obligation—are presented in these pages.

NATIONAL DEFENSE KEYS CAMPAIGNS AS THEATRES STRESS CIVIC TIEINS

Managers Feature Americanism Programs in Picture Tieins; Patriotic Societies Cooperate on Feature and Short Subjects

by A-MIKE VOGEL

AS national defense bulks yet larger and larger in the public consciousness, the exhibitors of America continue to do their share in advancing the countrywide movement and the cause of Americanism through community promotions tied to military, historical and patriotic pictures, both feature-length and short. Still availing themselves of all possible cooperations with the federal services, local patriotic and military organizations, theatremen vigorously wage campaigns to maintain the spotlight upon the importance of the new national program.

Currently, the unusual stage show at the New York Roxy, put on by Irving Lesser, managing director, and reported by Homer Harman, ad head, in conjunction with the First Army Corps, headquartering at Governor's Island, is a representative case in point. Under the supervision of Major General Drum and with the assistance of Lt. Col. Tom B. Woodburn, United States Army director of publicity and exploitation, the Roxy is devoting much of the stage show to a military number built around a new Army song, "Defend Your Country," written by Col. Woodburn. Highlighting the show are military manoeuvers performed by the chorus personnel of boys and girls in uniform.

Exploitation at the theatre is featured by an elaborate recruiting station in the lobby under the direction of a corps captain and squad. Army flags and other display material plus units of military equipment are also on view.

Another definite contribution to the cause was the Americanism program put on by Manager Howard Sexton at the Roxy and Fox Theatres, in LaPorte, Ind., units of the Indiana-Illinois circuit, which regularly features these exercises in all of the situations. Co-sponsors of the project, the local American Legion Post, worked with Sexton at the showings of patriotic short subjects and addresses by civic minded citizens.

The program was held on two successive days, morning showings for grade schools and afternoons for the junior high school bodies. High school band and attachments of police escorted the students to the theatres. Superintendent of schools forwarded bulletins to all teachers for guidance and, as to be expected, the newspaper extensively covered the event. Featuring the program was a presentation of colors at the theatres.

Aviation promotions made available through M-G-M's "Flight Command" were, of course, utilized extensively, and prominent were tieins aimed to attract the children. Representative of these were the model plane giveaway offered by Manager Mel Blieden at the Voge, East Chicago, Ind., and at the Dixie, Picayune, Miss., Manager C. B. Dortch topped his campaign with two contests. The first was a model plane building idea, the second essay contest on aviation for high school students. For lobby decorations, Dortch displayed a regulation flyer's log book and other aviation paraphernalia together with photographs of the local Flying Club. Extensive publicity in the downtown papers and especially in the Daily Times was had by Manager Ben Cohn of Warner's Frolic, Chicago, on a model airplane contest, the paper running stories on this for a solid week ahead, the contest judged by Maurice Roddy, commander of the Times Air Cadets and the paper's aviation editor. For this Cohn carried lobby displays of airplane parts and also featured trophies and medals awarded the winners.

At the Pace, in Gordon, Neb., Manager Herschel A. Wheeler offered a kite derby, wherein entrants were required to construct their own kites and prizes awarded to those who could keep their kites in the air for the longest period. Hardware merchant cooperated in giving the prizes, advertising the event in newspapers and with window displays.

For the showing of "Flight Command" at the State, Kalamazoo, Mich., Manager Pat Heavey, working with Warren Slee, MGM exploiteer, hooked his date to the local U.S. Navy recruiting program, wherein volunteers were guests of the naval officer in charge, to see the picture. Aviation manuals carrying theatre credits were distributed to the local colleges and at the theatre photos of local recruits were shown on a giant display board.

Also tied directly to air force recruiting was campaign for the date put on at the El Rancho, Victoria, Tex., by Manager Ken Prickett, who tagged his promotion "Aviation Week." Regulation recruiting office was set up in the lobby to stimulate enlistments at the local junior college with uniformed officers on hand to distribute pamphlets and answer questions. An aerial display of formation flying was promoted by Lige Brien for the date at Warner's Belmar, Pittsburgh, with six planes doing stunts and acrobatics above the theatre and dropping heralds. Brien also aimed at the youngsters with a model building contest co-sponsored by the Pittsburgh Press, brought to the papers' Junior Aviators Club with daily stories.

Revival dates, too, on service pictures were called upon and represented by the promotions effected by Manager H. W. Reisinger on "Sweetheart of the Navy" and "23½ Hours Leave" at Loew's Poli-Bijou, New Haven. Staff members of the local recruiting station appeared at the theatre, the program opening with a military overture by the orchestra. Army and Navy "A" boards were used for lobby decoration.

Service short subjects were also found to attract attention, as noted by Manager Robert Busch for Warner's "Flag of Humanity" at the Jeffery, Chicago. Busch secured the assistance of the various war relief units and also members of the Red Cross chapter, who plugged the picture extensively in exchange for displays at the theatre of the various articles made by the chapter for soldier relief. On March of Time's "March of the Times—USA," Peck Westmoreland at the Westex, Olney, Tex., distributed heralds carrying the line: "Did the draft get you?" These were distributed to service organizations and study guides were brought to the schools for student attention.

As to be expected, military and patriotic cooperation on various dates for "Land of Liberty" were sizeable. In Springfield, Mo., at the Gillioz, Joe Ruddick instituted a benefit ticket sale on behalf of a statewide musical convention. Enlisted were the services of the American Legion, VFW, Boy Scouts, among others. War relief on behalf of the "Bundles for Britain" drive was stimlate at the Fabian St. George, St. George, Staten Island with a benefit performance reported by Edgar Goth, Fabian zone ad head. Here newspaper attention was headed by a page of co-op ads topped with a banner line reading: "God Bless America."

To engage the attention of the younger generation in Rock Island, Ill., Manager Orville Rennie plugged the date at the Fort, by tying in with popular juvenile radio program for a series of quizzes two weeks ahead. All questions had to do with the subject matter of the picture, with added assistance obtained by the help of heads of local patriotic associations.

Known as the most cosmopolitan troop in the country, Boy Scouts in the neighborhood of the Commercial, in Chicago, Ill., were called upon by Manager Sol Gordon to participate in a flag presentation from the stage. For this the president of the local businessmen's association was on hand to make the presentation and to give an address on democracy, of interest since the Scouts on hand represented ten different nationalities.

So impressed were they by the special screening of "Land of Liberty," reports Manager Fred Forry, who arranged a showing for the date at the Colonial, Lancaster, that the local committee of the "Democracy Days" unit asked that the playdates be changed to coincide with the local celebration. The switch in dates was helpful in obtaining publicity out of the ordinary with the engagement given further prominence by a special preview for school children to stimulate a slogan writing contest sponsored by the committee.

At the State, in Raleigh, N. C., Manager Norman Hicks, working with W. G. Enloe, Wilby-Kincey city manager, arranged a screening for Governor J. Melville Broughton, members of both houses of the legislature, state and city heads. The result was a proclamation from the Governor, stressing the picture's importance and urging attendance. Local papers carried the announcement and cuts were made up by the theatremen for use in other Wilby-Kincey situations throughout the state. Since the engagement coincided with the Americanism campaign sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the organization eagerly accepted an invitation to sponsor the showing. Special luncheon was held to inaugurate the drive at which were present civic heads and representatives of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America office in New York.

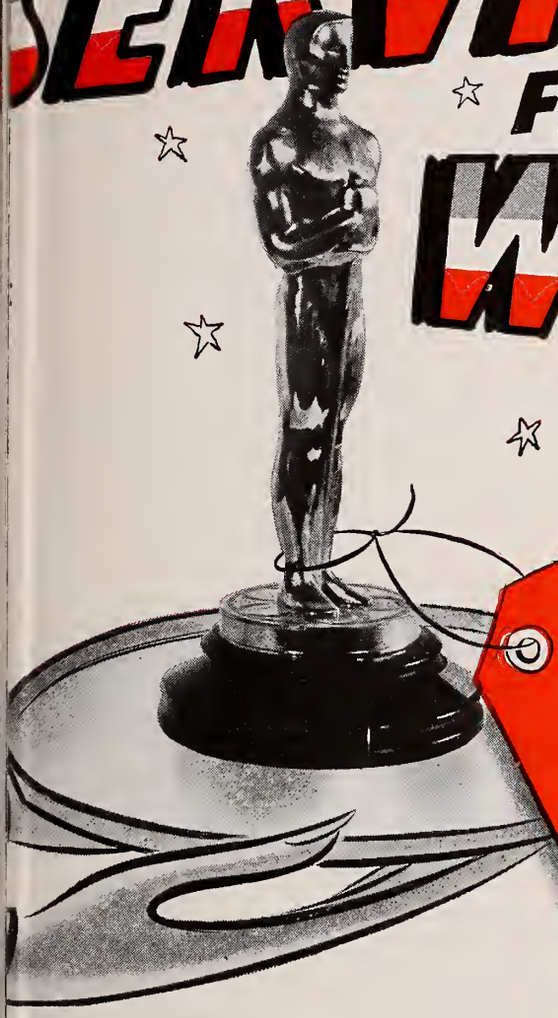
Exploitation Suggestions From Distributor Admen

Pressbook Ideas are Offered to Aid Theatremen in Putting over Patriotic Attractions

Gathered from the home office advertising departments are numerous promotional suggestions on features and shorts, reissues, current releases and those set for release shortly. Representative slants are noted here not only on the pictures for which they were conceived, but also for information of managers who may desire to adapt these ideas for other attractions booked for their theatres.

WARNERS

To tie-in with current defense activities, Warners has made available a supplementary pressbook on the reissue of "Here Comes the Navy," in which is illustrated the front of the New York Strand on the date. Marquee was decorated with giant compo "battleship" with red and green lights flashing, signal flags, searchlights. Uniformed gobs sent flag messages. In front, line of miniature battleships passed on moving belt. Blowups of stars and recording of ship's gun firing completed display.



For situations with waterfront facilities, is illustrated small sailboat with lettered sails, boat covering as wide an area as possible. Noted was the army-navy regatta staged on a Pittsburgh date, with oarsmen recruited from local service and reserve corps.

Warners patriotic shorts stress the publicity values of "The Flag of Humanity," the story of Clara Barton, who founded the American Red Cross. In addition to Red Cross chapters, endorsements from various branches of which are carried in the pressbook, other organization tieins are suggested. Lobby displays of Red Cross work are noted as are displays in drug stores and windows.

"Meet the Fleet," two-reel technicolor, has the endorsement of Admiral H. R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, a letter to that effect reproduced in the pressbook to be used in making local tieins. The premiere of the short at the Garde theatre, in

New London, Conn., had the cooperation of the local naval base which set up a navy recruiting station in the lobby and displayed various kinds of naval equipment, insignia, etc. Parade of navy men, elaborate windows, were other parts of the campaign.

The same kind of cooperation was made available on "March on, Marines," produced in conjunction with the U. S. Marine Corps and endorsed publicly by the corps commander. This is noted in the press sheet as is also a reproduction of the general order from headquarters to all marine recruiting officers to work with theatres booking the date.

Premiere of this short at Warners Hollywood, East Orange, N. J., was highlighted with a marine recruiting display in the lobby, march of marines to the theatre, official marine truck used for street bally and space on the corps' recruiting 24-sheet stands in and around the city.

On "Young America Flies," two-reels, produced with the assistance of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the campaign is pointed with strong plug letters from the chairman of the Authority, Robert H. Hinckley, and an endorsement from Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox. These hookups are useful in selling flying schools and aviation clubs on tieins, and of course any local branch of the CAA. Model plane building contest is also suggested.

"Service With the Colors," two-reel technicolor, is another Warner short that has federal endorsement, headed by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Adjutant Major General E. S. Adams. Press sheet also reproduces order from the adjutant General to commanding generals of the various corps area, requesting picture be used in connection with recruiting publicity. For this purpose is listed locations of the nine corps areas throughout the country.

RKO RADIO

"A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," a Harold Lloyd produced comedy, presents a number of Navy pressbook tieins on the comedy side. For instance, in situations near Navy bases, a "gob nickname registration" could be planted in lobby. The idea is to find the sailor with the most original nickname, and is tied to the nickname, "Coffee Cup," the gob played by George Murphy in the picture. Entrants are to chalk their names on blackboard with their real names underneath. Patron vote decides winner.

Also suggested is a navy hammock swung in the lobby for the sailor determined to be first in to see the picture. Stunt is to be started the evening before opening and used daily ahead of first show. Further sailor atmosphere is noted in the idea of a tattoo artist to perform in the lobby or nearby window. Impressed also is the effectiveness of a navy lobby with various official equipment and noted, too, is the display of the complete outfit required by the Navy for sailors.

"Parachute Battalion," shortly to be released, has to do with the newest branch of American fighting forces of the parachute corps. Story deals with three young men from different walks of life against the background of authentic training and parachute jumping. The U. S. Army Air Corps cooperated in the making of the picture filmed mostly at Ft. Benning, Ga., home of the army's parachute troop division, the 501st Parachute Battalion.

COLUMBIA

"International Forum," subtitled "Round Table of the Screen," features Dorothy Thompson, Wythe Williams, William L. Shirer and Linton Wells, in a short where these name columnists and radio commentators speak their minds about world events. Main exploitations are directed to their radio sponsors who are listed in the press sheet and the newspaper chains they write for.

UNIVERSAL

"Wings Over Honolulu," feature, has excellent Navy tiein possibilities since many of the flying scenes were made on the U. S. S. Ranger, naval aircraft carrier, where some of the commanding officers were filmed as part of the action.

The exploitation stresses aviation atmosphere with lobby and front decorations such as motor, wing section, maps, instrument panels, etc. An aeroplane propeller atop the marquee is suggested for eye-catcher to be made by house artist if regular equipment cannot be promoted. Compo board construction is advised or muslin stretched on light framework. Small motor at axis keeps propeller turning and engine roar via recording is amplified over loudspeaker.

Also for display of interest is the thought of a photographic exhibit showing plane plans, crack-ups, famous flyers and flights. Naval flying insignia may also be used for decoration and made of bright metal and silvered paper. Official insignia of aircraft squadrons to be copied from library Navy handbook is suggested for lobby, as is also a possible newspaper contest with guest tickets to those making correct identifications.

"Eyes of the Navy," two-reel MGM documentary made with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy, has to do with pilot training. Special screenings for editorial writers and columnists are suggested in advance, and showings could be held for such organizations as Air Youth of America, Junior Birdmen, American Legion, etc. Recruiting facilities of the Navy are also to be called upon, and participation of regular or reserve Naval units is also suggested.

"While America Sleeps," spy expose, may be publicized with tieins of the Legion, Boy Scouts, D. A. R., and such, who can be sold on spreading the word over the radio, in schools and to their membership. Parades of patriotic society bands and bugle corps are also suggested.

MARCH OF TIME

"Americans All" presents an accurate portrait of American people today, native born and immigrant. Subject matter shows graphically the workings of the makings of immigrants to preserve and defend their adopted land.

Other appropriate MOT units are "Uncle Sam—Non-Belligerent" which, in addition to episodes of abroad, some uncensored and exclusive, shows what America is doing to help England in her fight for life. "Arms and the Man—USA," another MOT unit, is a detailed story of the first peace time conscription of the nation's huge defense program.

REPUBLIC

Exploitation for "Rookies on Parade" suggests potato peeling contest in the lobby with theatre piling bushels of potatoes on platform and offering prizes for those doing the best job on the spuds within a 15-minute period. Military tieins include a buglers' contest on the stage for prizes. Lobby displays also include showing of arm any navy paraphernalia, machine guns, flags, banners, etc., details on establishment of a recruiting station are also suggested.

PARAMOUNT

"Power Dive" exploitation is topped with a promotion of a Piper Cub plane to be given in conjunction with dates on this picture and also Paramount's "I Wanted Wings," details of which were carried in a previous issue. Close cooperation with local airports is stressed since Piper dealers are to work close to the theatres on the contest. Airplane lobbies and similar displays at airports are noted. Pressbook also devotes considerable space to kid tieins and contests.

RADIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

• THERE'S a lot of enthusiasm out at MGM.

In three successive days MGM has sneak previewed three pictures that everyone who has seen them confidently believes will prove among the season's big hits.

First to get a public showing was the Technicolor production of "Billy the Kid," starring Robert Taylor, Irving Asher's initial production for MGM. A costly attraction and directed by a newcomer to feature pictures, David Miller, there naturally existed great anxiety over the outcome. But now they're talking about it as "Taylor's greatest" and one of the screen's most spectacular Western epics. And the preview cards back up the company's enthusiasm.

The second to get the acid test was "A Woman's Face," starring Joan Crawford. A new type of story for Crawford, the public's reaction naturally was watched with eagerness by both Victor Saville, who produced it, and George Cukor who directed it. If one can believe the enthusiasm of those at the studio, it should prove the outstanding picture of Joan's career.

On a third successive night Metro sneaked the new William Powell - Myrna Loy comedy, "Love Crazy," Pandro Berman's second effort for the company. It was taken to Long Beach and the majority of the preview cards, proudly being displayed, call it the "funniest picture ever made."

Even allowing for a producer's partiality and a company's enthusiasm, it is obvious to anyone even casually visiting MGM that the three pictures are destined to play a huge part in the summer operations of American exhibitors.

Three hit pictures previewed in three successive days is somewhat of a record for the industry as a whole, and it is more than that for a single company.

Pictures such as these are the type at which the industry should aim. They are the BETTER PICTURES which are needed and which will return grosses that will more than recompense the makers for their extra time, trouble and expense. They are the type of pictures which make possible the enormous number of extended runs that are being reported from all parts of the country.

DRAFTED TO ENTERTAIN THE NATION!

While "Ziegfeld Girl" and "Men of Boys Town" are held over a 2nd and 3rd week and Previews (see column at left) of forthcoming M-G-M hits excite the industry, here's more good news. The Technicolor "Blossoms in the Dust" (Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon) is a knockout! The Marx Bros. have turned out the funniest film of their entire career. And the new Clark Gable—Rosalind Russell "Unholy Partners" is a honey. LEO SALUTES AMERICA WITH HITS!

Our Industry Aids Defense Bonds

AMERICA, land of industry, a democracy which lives by work and business, confronted as it stands today by the gravest problems of its history, is calling to its service foremost men of skill in the great industries, men of metals, methods, processes, ideas and ideals. Motors have given a Knudsen, steel a Stettinius. ¶ It is with a reasonable pride that our industry of the motion picture and its screen may view a call upon this institution of public relations in entertainment for a man to aid in the promotion and promulgation to the millions of the citizenry of the message of participation, by dollars and investment in democracy. ¶ So it comes that Howard Dietz of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has become the motion picture's first contribution of executive personnel—that dollar-a-year roll of honor, and labour—as the member of the Treasury Department's Defense Savings Staff in Charge of Motion Picture Activities. ¶ Appropriate to this special section is this article by Mr. Dietz on the Defense Savings Bonds and messages that will be coming to the screen.

—THE EDITOR

by HOWARD DIETZ

AS is well known by now, the Treasury Department of the United States is selling preferred stock in America direct to the people via the Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps. A Defense Savings Bond sells for $18.75 and in ten years it is worth $25.00. Any time after sixty days, the bond is redeemable by turning it back to the Treasury and you get your dollars with interest. It is a perfect savings investment and actually only differs from the former so-called Baby Bond in that you can creep up to the purchase of a Defense Bond by filling an album of stamps that sell for ten cents, a quarter, a half dollar, a dollar and five dollars. Because of the stamp feature it is hoped that everyone will have some investment that intertwines his monetary interests wtih the future of our country.

There is another feature that distinguishes the Defense Bond from the former Baby Bond, and that is conveyed in the very word "Defense." It is the duty of those charged with promoting the sale to convey to the American people what it is we are defending, and how we are doing it. The large appropriations for the Army, the Navy, the Airforce, the recruiting and training program, are the front line of defense for the very integrity of our land, the maintenance of social gains and the preservation of our constitutional sovereignty, including those precious safeguards to individual liberty embodied in the Bill of Rights.

ON the merits of all these substantial American matters, there can be no disunity and the motion picture industry, with customary patriotism, has expressed its willingness to cooperate with all-out aid towards the promotion of the sale of the Defense Savings Bonds.

It is a policy of the Defense Savings Staff in Washington to discourage all pressure methods in this sale, to eliminate the use of buttons in the lapel flaunted in a neighbor's face, to pass up the campaign method of fixing quotas for districts. In other words the desire is to acquaint the American people with this investment, to interest them in the facts behind our way of life, and to rely that there will be a natural and spirited response.

In this type of effort, the screen finds a harmonious interest. Exhibitors, distributors, producer, actors, writers, cameramen, property men, electricians, and labor of all descriptions greet with proved enthusiasm the opportunity to serve their country which asks for no cash out of pocket but merely the cooperation of men and women of good-will engaged in that phenomenon of the twentieth century, the ever-improving, always interesting motion picture.

The Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, through its various sub-committees has met and considered the requests for assistance in the promotion of the Defense Bonds. Each exhibitor, who is willing to contribute some brief time on his screen, is making a gesture towards our national effort.

THE overall requests for the cooperation have been made generally. The individual requests will wait for a specific selection of film to come from the laboratories. This cooperation granted to the United States Treasury Department represents the will of each individual in the theatres or in the studios. There is no isolated group within the business that has a preferential position. This is an American enterprise for Americans, and all Americans are independents.

At present there is in production a trailer-short which, in attractive fashion, tells what a Defense Savings Bond is. Subsequently there will appear in newsreels some interesting and amusing star appearances designed to promote the bonds with legitimate film contribution. Also it is expected that the leading feature films will contain after the words "The End" a twenty foot tag containing the seal of the U. S. A. and a slogan about the Defense Savings Bonds. This is the preliminary plan. Its development will be made as a result of the theatre's experiences with it.

For, above all, the theatre is a place for relaxation and enjoyment and the Defense Savings Staff is fully aware that all cooperation must be rendered within the framework of the screen's dedication to the public.

What the Screen is doing now for Defense

A SUMMATION of what motion pictures are now and today doing for national defense on the screen was presented to the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington at their fiftieth Continental Congress at Constitution Hall by Francis S. Harmon, coordinator for the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense. This is the first official enumeration of cooperative activities now delivered in film expression to the public. In the course of his address Mr. Harmon said:

"I believe you particularly will want to know what steps the motion picture industry has been taking to aid the effort for national defense, for you have never once lost sight of patriotism as born in the Revolution and nurtured throughout our history while your abiding interest in motion pictures and your constructive aid in helping to increase the usefulness of the screen as a patriotic medium has been sincerely appreciated.

"It is significant that during the past nine months, the No. 1 film hero has been the civilian artisan at work in airplane factory, armory and navy yard. During this period one-sixth of all newsreel subjects have related to National Defense and many of these sequences have properly and effectively dramatized the skilled hands and trained eyes of master craftsmen in key industries.

"In cooperation with the U. S. Civil Service Commission, a motion picture producer made and is now distributing a one-reel film titled 'The Spirit of 1941' which portrays the activities of the government's tremendous civilian recruiting program to secure skilled workers for arsenals, armories and ship yards. This very week 10,000 coperating exhibitors, affiliated with the Theatres' Division of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, are playing a trailer sponsored by the Social Security Board and the U. S. Employment Service titled 'Calling All Workers,' which is designed to aid in the current campaign to register all unemployed employables and to place competent laborers in the posts for which they are best qualified.

"In the second place, our newsreels have reported pictorially the operation of the Selective Service Act commencing with the debates in Congress, and including the initial drawing and the steadily expanding stream of selectees who are entering the huge new camps for training. The newsreel cameramen have followed the raw recruits to induction center and permanent camp, and are now bringing to the folks back home realistic and encouraging photographic evidence as to the progress and the beneficial results of the training program.

"Meanwhile each week, the nation's theatres are exhibiting one of a series of 12 one-minute army recruiting trailers, dealing with specialized branches of the service in which more than the average qualifications are needed. Simultaneously, the producers of commercial entertainment films have found the army, the navy, the marine corps and the air force timely subjects for special coverage. Several of these shorts are in technicolor. They are valuable historical reviews of the development of various arms of the service, while yet others have portrayed interestingly life at West Point and Annapolis.

"One cooperative motion picture project deserves special mention because of its great significance in the development of the motion picture as a teaching aid in visual education. I refer to the series of 50 training films which are being made in Hollywood under the auspices of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in cooperation with the U. S. Army Signal Corps.

"The American motion picture industry as chief source of peacetime supply for a world market has been accustomed to thinking and acting in world terms. Today, when war has virtually destroyed its markets in Europe, Asia, and North Africa, our attention is focused upon the current effort for better understanding and closer cooperation between the 21 republics of the western hemisphere.

"Pan-American Day on Monday of this week saw a score or more of popular Hollywood personalities in Mexico City for a film fiesta sponsored by governmental officials of our neighbor to the south. The visit of Mr. Douglas Fairbanks to Latin America is simply one of a series of tours by good will ambassadors whose names and faces are well known to movie fans from Havana to Buenos Aires.

"This very hour, a specialist in Latin American manners, customs, and attitudes is on the way to Hollywood as technical adviser to producers who are commencing additional feature pictures and short subjects with Latin American themes, characters, or backgrounds. More adequate newsrcel coverage of Central and South America for North American cinema audiences and a more discriminating portrayal of the North American scene upon the screens of our sister republics constitute a dual objective to be attained through patiencc and persistence in the days ahead.

HITLER has conquered Czechoslovakia, Poland, Austria, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, France, Yugoslavia, Greece, Luxembourg, Hungary, Roumania, and Bulgaria.

A MESSAGE To EXHIBITORS

The theatre managers of the country are eager to promote the national welfare. This is a time-honored tradition of the "show business," and here is one more way in which you can perform a very timely service.

¶ Reliable sources estimate that our land is burdened with millions of people who are improperly nourished, but until recently no major effort was undertaken to spread information about food that Mrs. American Housewife could comprehend and apply, for the health and welfare of her family. Now a nation-wide campaign is under way, in which motion pictures will function, and, as the popular saying goes, "here's where you come in."

¶ The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and the United States Public Health Service have produced a one-reel film on nutrition entitled "Proof of the Pudding." It was filmed in TECHNICOLOR by PARAMOUNT PICTURES. That it is an entertaining and worth-while short subject is borne out by the reviews that have appeared in this and other journals and by the fact that its first public showing was held in RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL. We believe your audiences will welcome it because it has something timely and vital to say.

¶ You can book "Proof of the Pudding" by writing to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, 1 Madison Avenue, New York City. It is available without cost—no booking fee, no transportation costs, no charge for accessories (including a one sheet, a window card, and a press book). Please give three optional booking dates when requesting this film for your theater.

¶ Here's an opportunity, Mr. Exhibitor, to "do something" about the health of our nation. Your help is sought, not only by the United States Public Health Service and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, but also by many educational and social agencies interested in the nutrition and health of the people, agencies that may also directly ask you to show—

EYES ON DEFENSE!

IN a world blanketed with war propaganda the American people are today turning to channels of information they know to be accurate.

On the screen, nearly 30,000,000 Americans regularly follow The March of Time every four weeks — for they find that The March of Time's pictorial journalism gives them the clearest understanding of world events, the keenest appreciation of their nation's defense needs.

Besides — in The March of Time's editorial independence there is a dramatic impact refreshingly American.

Two Reel Films Dramatize Story Of United States

Currently in step with the theme of defense and national emergency come the American History two-reelers of the Academic Film Company for distribution by Producers Releasign Corporation. The subjects now in release are:

"Our Constitution": The dramatic events surrounding the making of the document that is the foundation of American Democracy. Washington, Franklin, Madison, Hamilton and others are portrayed.

"Our Bill of Rights": The adoption of the first 10 amendments to the Constitution known as the Bill of Rights. George Washington and Benjamin Franklin are the central figures.

"Our Declaration of Independence": The events leading to the Declaration of Independence, preceded by years of struggle and strife.

"Our Monroe Doctrine": A dramatization of the enunciation of a doctrine that has been called "the cornerstone of American foreign policy."

The remaining four of the series, "Our Louisiana Purchase," "Our Missouri Compromise," "Our Annexation of Texas" and "Our Ordinance of 1787," are now in preparation for production.

Produced for Academic Film Company by Max and Arthur Alexander, these subjects were written and directed by G. A. Durlam. Milton J. Salzburg and Harold Baumstone are the associate producers, and Charles Henkel the editor.

PRIZES FOR DISPLAYS OFFERED BY MIRROR

Cash totalling $1,500 or lobby displays best expressing the "Americans All" theme is offered by the New York Mirror to managers of neighborhood theatres in the metropolitan area covering period rom May 18 to May 30. Competition is timed to coincide with two patriotic holidays, "I Am An American Day," the 18th, and Decoration Day, May 30th. The contest closes on June 5.

"Flag Speaks" Tells History of Emblem

"The Flag Speaks" is a history of the American flag intertwined with the development of the nation. In addition, the film shows the proper method of saluting and displaying the flag.

Because of the organization's interest in the film, stress is laid on cooperation from the American Legion, it being suggested that, as far as possible, ticins be made in the name of the Legion rather than that of the theatre. All patriotic organizations are to be invited to participate, and it is also suggested that the Mayor be requested to issue a proclamation designating a special Flag Week during the showing. In connection, arrangements are to be made to display the flag from public and private buildings in the city.

"Battle of the Atlantic," described by Quentin Reynolds, famous war correspondent of Collier's Magazine, tells the story of transport of war materials from Canada to England. This one-reel subject shows London under German bombing and Canada's war drive to manufacture and transport war material.

Picture is highlighted by showing of convoys forming, protection by Canadian airplanes and the taking over of convoys by the Royal Canadian Navy and the RAF in mid-ocean. Actual battles between warships and planes are shown with direct hits by both sides clearly registered in the sequence. Also shown are barrage balloons shot down as are enemy planes before anti-aircraft fire from the battleships. Concluding scenes picture RAF in action.

"Land of Librety" Date

Americanism was the theme emphasized at the Victoria, Shamokin, Pa., when Manager Clem Reck arranged with the superintendent of schools for an essay contest on the subject "What Land of Liberty taught me about the United States." Contest open to high school students in the area offered cash prizes for the best entries, the various days of the engagement named after local high schoools. Reck tied in with the VFW and the Boy Scouts of America for a parade to the theatre on opening night, with bulgle drum corps and color guard. At the theatre the Pledge of Allegiance ceremony was held, led by an Eagle Scout and in which the entire audience participated.

TOM, DICK, AND HARRY (RKO Radio)

Comedy-Romance

Produced by Robert Sisk. Directed by Garson Kanin.

SYNOPSIS

Janie (Ginger Rogers), romantic telephone operator in a small midwest town, thinks it is as easy for a poor girl to marry a rich man as it is for her to nab a man in her own financial class. It's an idea she got from the movies.

That night when she goes to bed she conjures a vision in which three men are involved, Tom (George Murphy), Dick (Allan Marshall), and Harry (Burgess Meredith).

Tom has been her boy friend for three years, he is a hard working automobile salesman, who has been promoted to assistant salesmanager since she first met him. Dick is the son of the richest man in town, whom she has seen only at a distance driving his high powered car. Harry is a garage mechanic, whom she mistakes for Dick while he is delivering a car.

She visions a life with Tom: An amazing picture of love in a cottage, of having babies who look like Tom, of impressing the boss so Tom can win advancement and make rapid progress until, he becomes president of the firm and fires the current president. The vision continues: This time about Harry and a fantasy of love in a charming shanty. They go fishing and four little boys of varying ages whom Janie recognizes as their sons float past on rafts, they're perfect images of Harry. Later Janie and Harry are making love in a haystack while they listen to a radio. The Pilc of Dough radio program announces Harry is to win $10,000, if he'll answer his phone, but Harry is too busy making love to answer it. The vision ends when Harry announces he has lost his job and Janie faints.

The next vision she conjures is about Dick, she goes with him to Chicago in his private plane, for an evening of dinner and dancing. Upon their return they find Tom and Harry awaiting them at her home. She invites them all to come to breakfast in the morning, when she will announce her choice. Janie's vision that night offers an interesting solution to her problems. I'll marry all three, "the four of us would make an ideal couple"; her vision ends. Janie's in a spot—but she'll work it out to the satisfaction of everybody.

Comedy Romance

A Hal Roach Production. Directed by Gordon Douglas.

Ivan Ivanski (Leonid Kinskey), temperamental film director, decides that April Tremaine (Marjorie Woodworth), the star whom he has guided to success, ought to have a baby. He makes this decision while he, April and Patsy Riley (Patsy Kelly) are in Chicago enroute from Hollywood to New York. Patsy telephones an old sweetheart, Maurice (Mike) Monohan (Victor McLaglen) locomotive engineer, appealing for aid in obtaining a baby. Mike gets the infant (Day Ellen Dakin) through a casual acquaintance who doesn't tell him how the baby was acquired. The party, with the baby and Myra Pottle (Zasu Pitts), who is to do a newspaper article on the trip, boards the Broadway Limited for New York.

On the Limited, April meets a former sweetheart, a poor pediatrician, Dr. Harvey North (Dennis O'Keefe). Ivanski, to forestall a reopening of the romance, tells Harvey that the baby is really April's. Mike, who leaves the throttle of the Limited at Fort Wayne and resumes the journey as a paying passenger, sees newspaper headlines about the kidnaping of a baby. He finds that April's "baby" has a mole which tallies with the description of the kidnapped infant. He tries to put the baby off the train at a Pennsylvania station but a mysterious little man (George E. Stone) puts the baby back on the train.

Meanwhile, April and Harvey have decided to get married. When the Hollywood party learns that April's "baby" may be the kidnapped baby they are stricken with fright. If, they reason, they produce the baby safe and sound in New York they will be greeted as heroes. Believing the little man and his companions are the kidnappers, Mike subdues them and in New York turns them over to the police. Then it is discovered that the little man is the baby's father and that the kidnapped baby is safe.

LOVE CRAZY (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy

Produced by Pandro S. Berman. Directed by Jack Conway.

SYNOPSIS

The third wedding anniversary plans of Steve and Susan Ireland (William Powell and Myrna Loy) are rudely interrupted by the unscheduled visit of Susan's mother, Mrs. Cooper (Florence Bates), who falls and twists her ankle. Steve is delegated to keep her company while Susan goes to the station to meet an aunt.

On the apartment balcony below, Steve spies an old girl friend, Isobel Grayson (Gail Patrick) who invites him down for a visit. Her husband is out of town. Mrs. Cooper, unknown to Steve, has heard the invitation and tells Susan when she returns. Susan, to get even with Steve, decides to call on Isobel's husband, not being aware that he is away. She gets into the wrong apartment and is entertained by Ward Willoughby, champion archer (Jack Carson) before she realizes her mistake. Willoughby demonstrates to her his prowess with bow and arrow, and strips to the waist so that he may have more freedom of his arms.

As Susan says goodnight to Willoughby in the hall, Steve gets off the elevator. Dissatisfied with Susan's explanation of Willoughby's semi-nude state, Steve makes a scene. Susan becomes furious and decides to seek a divorce.

The day of the hearing arrives, Steve sees Susan and decides to postpone the proceedings, but his lawyer (Sidney Blackmer) informs him, in order to do this he has only two alternatives. One, he can break his leg; two, he can feign lunacy. Steve decides on the latter course.

It all starts as a joke, but circumstances begin piling up until everyone is convinced that he has lost his mind. He is committed to an asylum. Matters become complicated, finally Steve escapes from the asylum by masquerading as a woman.

After many confusing situations Steve and Susan finally kiss and make up.

THE PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

Directed by Harold S. Bucquet.

Frances Marlowe (Bonita Granville) of the Ice Follies, driving on a country road, crashes into a truck. Dr. James Kildare (Lew Ayres) with his sweetheart, Mary Lamont (Laraine Day), witness the accident. Kildare discovers the girl has a broken leg and ruptured spleen. He decides to perform an emergency operation, following which the girl is taken to the Blair Hospital where the injured leg is set. Dr. Gillespie (Lionel Barrymore) approves his action.

Later, the skater's leg is found to be paralyzed. She eventually sues Kildare and the hospital for malpractice, alleging the emergency operation has ruined her skating career. The hospital wants to settle but Kildare insists on fighting the case for his own vindication. At the trial evidence is presented that the car driven by Dr. Kildare and his fiance contained an empty whiskey bottle. Dr. Kildare runs down the mystery of the empty whiskey bottle, proving that it was thrown into his car by the driver of the truck.

The investigation leads Kildare to believe that the girl might have been paralyzed before the accident. Dr. Gillespie on the stand convinces the jury that the girl be examined for bifida. Doctors and jury agree that another operation be performed, which should cure the paralysis, with the understanding that if not cured the girl will receive damages.

Young Dr. Kildare aided by Dr. Gillespie and a staff of experts operate. The girl recovers, and rejoins the Ice Follies, Dr. Kildare stands vindicated and triumphant.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM (Columbia)

Comedy and Music

Produced by Irving Starr. Directed by Sidney Salkow.

The story is about a pair of Broadway Theatrical Booking agents. Danny Collins (Rudy Vallee) and Mike Armstrong (Richard Lane) are reviewing an act by the Broadway sensation Frances Lewis, (Rosemary Lane). Mike her manager, is madly in love with her. College students start a free for all in the night club where Frances is currently appearing. The boys together with their constant companion, Off-Beat (Allen Jenkins) are badly beaten up.

Meanwhile Frances, decides to marry a rich admirer. Mike, disconsolate, soon forgets his bitterness against Frances after forming a partnership with Danny. The booking business of the firm of Collins & Armstrong soon thrives. They are preparing a gigantic television broadcast, featuring Glen Gray and his Casa Loma Orchestra, and the singing of Joan Merrill (herself) and the Six Hits and a Miss.

Their plans go awry however, when Frances divorces her husband and turns to Mike for help in getting her back on Broadway. Mike, still in love with her, cannot understand Danny's dislike for the overly ambitious girl. Mike insists that Frances take Joan's place on the television broadcast. Frances however, does not take the broadcast seriously and Danny decides on a substitute in the person of Kitty Brown (Ann Miller). Danny hires the "Three "Stooges" (themselves) and to prove their acting ability must hold Miss Lewis in her apartment during the broadcast. Mike, learning of the plot arrives at the radio station in time to ruin the show. Mike and Danny dissolve their partnership. Later Mike invests in a top night spot and Frances is starred in the show.

Danny with the aid of Kitty and Off-Beat builds a tremendous act but can't secure a booking. A Talent Scout from Hollywood arranges an audition. Danny convinces Frances that to star in his act will mean a chance to get into pictures.

Mike again interferes but Frances informs him that a picture contract means more to her than he does. In the end everyone is happy. Danny and Mike become partners again and Hollywood contracts are secured by all.

Produced by Edwin Knopf. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair.

"Lucky" Wilson (Robert Sterling) a front man for city gangsters, eludes detectives attempting to serve a warrant, only after receiving a bullet wound in his shoulder. He drives to Connecticut before he finally collapses, in front of the Miller farm.

The Miller family consisting of Henry (Henry Travers), his wife (Fay Holden), Pauline (Marsha Hunt) and Lizzie (Virginia Weidler) open their house to him, never doubting his story that he was wounded by gangsters who were chasing him.

His sojourn at the farm until he completely recovers from the effects of the wound, brings him in constant contact with Pauline whom he learns to love. Every effort to be alone with her is stymied by Lizzie's constant interventions.

The police finally catch up with "Lucky" at the farm and Wilson is given an opportunity to confess his true character to Pauline, who when she realizes that "Lucky" is really in love with her, assures him that if he will pay his debt to society, she will wait for his return.

MEN OF THE TIMBERLAND (Universal)

Action Drama

Directed by John Rawlins.

SYNOPSIS

Dick O'Hara (Richard Arlen), forestry inspector is assigned to check illegal timber removal on the property owned by Kay Hadley (Linda Hayes).

Tim Mac Gregor (Willard Robertson) an unscrupulous lumber operator, after making a deal with a crooked forest Ranger in the district, has the Ranger killed when his false reports are discovered.

Before Dick can complete his survey, Mac Gregor hires Andy Jensen (Andy Devine) to move the timber from the property. When Miss Hadley arrives, she is won over to Mac Gregor's side and accuses Dick of interference in the timbering job.

Forest Rangers, working under Dick's supervision, complete the survey and prove Mac Gregor's criminal intentions, but only after another Ranger and Andy's close friend "Lucky" (Paul E. Burns), meet with foul play.

Andy goes over to Dick's side, and in the end Mac Gregor is exposed. Miss Hadley places Andy in full charge of the timberlands, and being in full accord with Dick she plans a more romantic partnership for both of them.

HER FIRST BEAU (Columbia)

Young Love

Directed by J. Theodore Reed.

SYNOPSIS

Penelope Wood (Jane Withers), fifteen, has two interests. One is that she hopes to become a famous writer and the other is Chuck Harris (Jackie Cooper). Chuck also has two interests. One is to perfect a home made glider and the other is to go to Tech College. His indifference to Penny is her chief source of annoyance. But Penny for the moment forgets about Chuck when her uncle, Mervyn Roberts (William Tracy), who is her senior by five years, arrives home with a friend, Roger Van Vleck (Kenneth Howell). Roger "has a way with women" and Penny falls for his line.

Chuck is resentful but covers it up by working on his glider plane. He chooses the night of the big dance to try out his plane. While he is making his preparations with the help of Elmer (Edgar Buchanan), the hired man, Penny is suffering torture at the dance. The "glamor girl" dress which she had thought the last thing in style looks ridiculous and there is much laughter at her expense, with Roger the chief offender. So when Chuck is injured flying his glider Penny rushes to his side, forgetting all about her infatuation for Roger.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE (Universal) (Reissue)

Romantic Drama

Directed by Edward H. Griffith.

SYNOPSIS

Here is a story of faithful love, brought face to face with life's cold realities. It tells of a woman who upon marriage goes on to achievement on the stage and screen, a husband who gains fame as a newspaper correspondent in every part of the world, and a child who cements their love.

It puts squarely to the woman the question, should she divorce her husband, marry another man and therefore enjoy a life which has been denied her? It takes the woman to her husband for the answer. Finding him seriously ill, promise of a successful career and new marital happiness is forgotten, as she remembers only her pledge, "In sickness or health; in riches or poverty." Margaret Sullavan is the wife, James Stewart the husband and Ray Milland the family friend.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER (Reissue) (United Artists)

A Childhood Idyll (Technicolor)

Produced by David Selznick. Directed by Norman Taurog.

SYNOPSIS

"Tom" (Tommy Kelly), whose lot is not made easier by tattling "Sid," (David Holt) is "Aunt Polly's" (May Robson) problem boy who makes the other kids whitewash the fence. "Tom" is "Amy's" (Cora Sue Collins) beau until he becomes engaged to Becky (Ann Gillis). Tom and "Huck" (Jackie Moran) in the graveyard witness the murder of which "Muff" (Walter Brennan) is suspected. Both swear the dire blood oath.

Tom, Huck and Joe Harper, (Mickey Rentschler) run away to float down the river and be pirates on the island. Tom sneaks back to revel in the anguish of Aunt Polly and Mrs. Harper (Margaret Hamilton).

In the tense courtroom scene Tom breaks his oath to befriend "Muff," and accuses Injun Joe, (Victor Jory) of the crime.

Tom and Becky, lost in the caves, find the hidden treasure. They escape Injun Joe's vengeance and return to the town safely where Tom is acclaimed a hero by the townsfolk.

POWER DIVE (Paramount)

Aviation Melodrama

Produced by William C. Thomas. Directed by James Hogan.

Brad Farrell (Richard Arlen) in an attempt to break the trans-continental speed record crashes his plane, a MacMasters Special, at the takeoff. He is visited at the hospital by Dan MacMasters (Roger Pryor), head of the aircraft corporation; Squid (Cliff Edwards), Brad's mechanic, and Johnny Coles (Louis Jean Heydt), who brings his son, Brad Coles (Billy Lee), and his wife, Betty (Helen Mack). Farrell, MacMasters and Coles are former members of an air circus. Brad is the wastrel of the three but his redeeming feature is his love for kid brother Doug (Don Castle).

Brad doesn't want the kid to be a flyer but Doug has taken a CAA flying course without telling his big brother. When Doug flies into town, Brad is enraged, but he calms down and convinces Doug that his future lies with a drafting board. Both Doug and Brad fall for Carol Blake (Jean Parker), who is trying to get MacMasters interested in her blind father's new type of plane. When Brad breaks a record flying a MacMasters, Doug becomes jealous.

He is about to leave for Randolph field when Carol's father (Thomas Ross) tells him how much his new plane means to him and to national defense. Doug takes a new interest in the plane. Next morning with Brad piloting and Doug as flight engineer the plane is tested for the Army.

BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE (RKO Radio) (Reissue)

Directed by Clyde E. Elliot.

SYNOPSIS

Suggested by the book "Bring 'Em Back Alive" by Frank Buck who acted as commentator on the picture.

Animal and jungle pictures always possess a large variety of exploitation and tie-up possibilities. The scenes are laid in the open jungle, the authenticity of the action is beyond question.

Throughout the entire production actual methods used by native trappers are recorded. The high light of the picture is a battle between a tiger and a python, which is without a precedent or parallel in wild animal photography.

SPECIAL REMARKS

Originally released in July 1932 by RKO, now being offered to exhibitors as a reissue.

Release date, May 16, 1941

THE PRISONER OF ZENDA (United Artists) (Reissue)

Melodrama

Produced by David O. Selznick. Directed by John Cromwell.

Rudolf Rassendyll (Ronald Colman), an English gentleman and retired army officer, first becomes aware of his startling resemblance to King Rudolf V (also played by Ronald Colman), a distant cousin by the bar sinister, when he enters the monarch's domain on a fishing trip and encounters the king himself.

Pleased by Rassendyll's wit, the king invites him to spend the night at his hunting lodge nearby, with Colonel Zapt (C. Aubrey Smith) and Captain Fritz von Tarlenheim (David Niven).

With his coronation set for the next day, the king is throwing one last party before the duties and cares of the throne compel him to renounce his riotous style of living.

Coronation day dawns and the king is hopelessly stupified; his drinks obviously have been drugged by agents of his brother, Black Michael (Raymond Massey) who is plotting to gain the throne for himself.

Faced with the knowledge that if Rudolf doesn't turn up for his own coronation, Black Michael will be in a splendid position to seize the throne, Fritz and Zapt persuade Rassendyll to step into the king's shoes.

A day of being king and Rassendyll is definitely in love with the beautiful Princess Flavia (Madeleine Carroll) whose betrothal to King Rudolf has been arranged by the court as a matter of state. She, puzzled by the seeming change in the king, is about to return his affection.

Then comes the bombshell. When Zapt, Fritz and Rassendyll return to the hunting lodge at Zena to retrieve the real king, they find he has been kidnapped.

It now becomes necessary to keep Rassendyll on the throne while the king is being rescued from the castle of Zenda, where he has been taken by Rupert of Hentzau (Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.), henchman of Black Michael. Rupert is in love with Antoinette de Mauban (Mary Astor), and tells her Michael plans to marry Flavia when the king is done away with.

Jealous, Antoinette goes to Rassendyll and tells him how the king may be rescued alive. On the night of the rescue, Antoinette lures Rupert to her room to get him out of the way. Black Michael surprises her in Rupert's arms and Rupert kills him. Rassandyll and his rescue party arrive for the king.

Attacked by the two guards, he kills them both, only to find Rupert of Hentzau between him and the king. They fight a savage duel. Rassendyll cuts the rope which drops the drawbridge and chases Rupert through a window into the moat. The real king is rescued.

Rassendyll meets Flavia who has been told of the deception. For a brief moment they consider living only for each other. Then Flavia remembers her duty as a princess of a royal house, and Rassendyll, with only a rose as a reminder of his love, gallops away.

MAN HUNT
(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

Associate producer, Kenneth Macgowan. Directed by Fritz Lang. Based on the novel by Geoffrey Household.

SYNOPSIS

The story opens in Bavaria, just after the Munich Pact. Capt. Alan Thorndyke (Walter Pidgeon), world-renowned big game hunter from England, in looking for new thrills, is wrongfully accused of attempting to assassinate a member of the Gestapo, Major Quive-Smith (George Sanders), who attempts to wring a confession from Capt. Thorndyke, but must be careful since England and Germany are not yet at War.

The Major attempts the Captain's murder which will appear as an accident, but Thorndyke escapes the trap and eventually arrives in London, where he learns he is a hunted man, since Germany is trying to extradite him. He finds refuge in London's Ghetto through the aid of Jerry, a waif (Joan Bennett), who befriends him, not knowing his true identity. Thorndyke escapes to a hide-out in the country where the Gestapo catches up with him. Major Smith again demands a signed confession. Thorndyke, attempting to escape, mortally wounds the Nazi, but is himself badly wounded, in the melee.

During the months that pass, while Thorndyke is recovering from the verge of death, all Europe is being overrun by the Nazi hordes.

Capt. Thorndyke's hunting days come back to him. After complete recovery, he joins the R. A. F. forces and becomes a parachute jumper, hunting human game.

THIEVES FALL OUT
(Warner Brothers)

Former Title—Thirty Days Hath September
Comedy Romance

Associate producer, Edmund Grainger. Directed by Ray Enright.

SYNOPSIS

Eddie Barnes (Eddie Albert) is a year out of college and working in a menial job in his father's mattress-spring factory in Auburn and the only one who really appreciates him is Mary Matthews (Joan Leslie). But Mary's father, Charles Matthews (Vaughn Glasser), is also in the mattress-spring business and a bitter rival of Eddie's father, Robert Barnes (Alan Hale). Then George Formsby (William T. Orr) becomes a rival for Mary.

Eddie turns to his Grandma Allen (Jane Darwell) for help. A born adventurer, she suggests that Eddie borrow $31,000 on a legacy left him by his grandfather. With the money Eddie buys Auburn's third spring-mattress company. Then Eddie learns the seller of the legacy must be married and have a sincere desire to become a father. Eddie marries Mary. Mary leaves Eddie because she believes that she has been duped.

Eddie learns his new factory has a government contract to produce truck springs. The barely solvent firm requires entirely new machinery. Chic Collins (Anthony Quinn), a gangster, buys the legacy from a broker, and stands to get rich when Eddie's mother dies. Mistaking Grandma for Eddie's mother, Collins takes her to a hideout with Eddie and Mary in pursuit. The police arrive to find Grandma holding the gangsters at bay.

THE BIG BOSS
(Columbia)

Former Title—Chain Gang

Political Racketeering

Produced by Wallace MacDonald. Directed by Charles Barton.

Frank and Bob Dugan are the young sons of Sheriff Dugan. One day their dad tries to take a convict away from a mob and is killed. Fatherless, the boys go in different directions. Frank runs away while Bob enters a legal office. . . .

Bob (John Litel) eventually enters politics and becomes a reform state senator, whose immediate objective is to crush the Maloney political machine. Boss Maloney (Otto Kruger) runs things his way in the city. His most odious racket is the buying up of large sections of poor land and having it improved by chain-gang labor at the city's expense.

Sue (Gloria Dickson), a reporter, watches Dugan's rise to power with a jaundiced eye. She suspects he will fall in with the Maloney machine despite his protests to the contrary. Maloney backs Bob for governor, although Bob assures him from the start that he's out to clean up machine rule. Bob becomes governor and starts after Maloney. Fellows (Robert Fiske), one of Maloney's henchmen, and he fall out. Maloney kills him.

Finger-prints indicate that Fellows was killed by a man named Butch McAllister, a gangster thought to have been slain years ago. Bob believes that McAllister and Maloney are one and the same. Bob confronts Maloney with the hunch and Maloney admits it's true, then tells Bob he's his brother Frank. Bob would resign, but Maloney gives himself up, is hanged. Bob marries Sue.

BAGGAGE BUSTER (RKO)

Walt Disney Cartoon (14,103)

The Goof, station master, drops a heavy trunk labelled "Magician," which reveals magic props including a high hat. He picks up the hat and out comes pigeons and rabbits with the Goof in wild pursuit. The animals jump back into the hat the Goof follows and all disappear. A palm tree lifts the Goof high in the air, collapses dropping him back into the hat. The Goof manages to replace everythnig and shuts the lid. The trunk splits in half showing a woman cut in half. The Goof puts the trunk together when out pops a skeleton with a red cloth. The skeleton disappears but the magic cloth brings forth a bull. The bull disappears only to return in the form of a kangaroo who immediately tangles with the Goof. Out of the magic cloth comes all kinds of animals.

The train arrives and the Goof frantically tries to get all the animals back in the trunk. He succeeds but the trunk crashes to the ground. Thinking his troubles are over the Goof waves good-bye, only to discover the animals all over the station. Horrified the Goof dashes after the disappearing train.

MIRACLE OF HYDRO (20th-Fox)

Magic Carpet (1107)

A good camera story of the Bonneville and Grand Coulee power and irrigation dam projects in the Northwest is provided in this subject, which goes far beyond the usual picturization of impressively huge construction projects of this kind. With the aid of Lowell Thomas' interesting narration, the subject provides an understanding of the region the dams will serve; the need for them and the uses to be made of them. Exceptionally good camera work contributes much to the subject. It is one of the Magic Carpet of Movietone series.

WINGS OF STEEL (WB)

Technicolor Special (6004)

Produced in cooperation with the Army Air Corps, this two-reel short in color tells the story of four young men who enter training in the flying corps. Two fail to make the grade while the others succeed. Included is a description of their lives from the date of arrival until they win the right to wear wings on their uniforms. The subject has a timely appeal and tieups with the Army Recruiting Service should be easily arranged.

SEA FOR YOURSELF (MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty (S-263)

The irrepressible Pete Smith has concocted a sea-going reel of danger and humor in "Sea for Yourself." The danger concerns the undersea exploits of three men, who catch the denizens of the deep by spearing them. One of the men becomes trapped in an underwater cave by a giant ray fish. The other two go to his rescue armed with spears. The humor revolves around a water skier who is first towed by a motorboat then by an automobile across the sands and into the streets. The skier winds up in a hay loft.

SENTINELS OF CARIBBEAN (20th-Fox)

Magic Carpet (1106)

Puerto Rico, with its scenic advantages presented as secondary to its present-day defense advantages for the Panama Canal, wins camera attention in this addition to the Magic Carpet of Movietone series. Although the military note is uppermost, the scenic background of the Caribbean island possession of the United States is not ignored. The combination makes for an interesting subject. Narration is by Lowell Thomas.

THE SPIDER RETURNS (Col.)

Serial—15 Episodes

When a gang of saboteurs, led by the Gargoyle, a mysterious and powerful foreign agent, threatens National Defense projects, socialite Richard Wentworth, alias the Spider (Warren Hull), returns to his war with the underworld.

Aware of the might of the forces that threaten the nation's security, Wentworth calls a meeting of the country's biggest business men, but the Gargoyle's gang disrupts it with a tear-gas bomb! Racing after the criminals, Wentworth is captured by them and taken away in an airplane. The pilot then sets the plane afire and bails out, leaving Wentworth an unconscious prisoner in the diving ship!

Fortunately, he recovers in time, grabs a parachute, and floats to safety. Disguising himself as Blinky McQuade, one-eyed underworld habitue, Wentworth joins the gang of saboteurs in an effort to learn the Gargoyle's identity. Unable to obtain this information, Blinky does find out that the gang plans to dynamite an explosive gas plant!

Donning the mask and cape of the dreaded Spider, he attempts to foil the plot, but the bomb goes off in spite of his endeavors, and the police suspect him of the crime! The wave of terrorism inspired by the foreign agent, continues on a larger scale than ever, and the Spider, now hunted by both the Gargoyle and the police, threads a dangerous course between the two.

After numerous other Spider adventures, each of them successfully circumventing one of the Gargoyle's many dastardly schemes to sabotage the nation's leading defense industries, the Gargoyle prepares to murder Wentworth's fiancee, Nita (Mary Ainslee), by imprisoning her in a gas-filled chamber!

The Spider discovers the foreign agent's seemingly impregnable hideaway and crashes into the torture room! After a furious struggle, he routs the gunmen and, in a smashing climax, unmasks the fiend as McLeod (Corbet Morris), one of the industrialists!

ABROAD AT HOME (Col.)

New York Parade (2952)

Edward Dorfman of Harvard University, produced this unusual film of the scenic wonders of New York City contrasted by European and Asiatic architecture and foreign facsimiles—all to be found in the heart of the metropolis. An authentic Japanese summer house and the Swiss Alps are located in Central Park, a Venetian Palace turns out to be St. Bartholomew's Church on Park Avenue, historic Jumel Mansion is opposite the Polo Grounds, a "Bastille" becomes the Armory of the 212th Coast Artillery, "Waterloo Bridge" is at the Grand Central Station and "Arabia" turns out to be Coney Island. Harry Hirshfield, the humorist, is the narrator.

MARIE GREENE & GANG (WB)

Melody Master (6508)

Marie Greene and her gang are working in an old-fashioned hotel, which like its clientele is dying on its feet. Marie and the bunch decide that what it needs is a little life—a bit of swing. She and a few of the boys get to work redecorating the place along the lines of a more modern hostelry. They open a night club and put on a swingy, tuneful show. It reacts like a shot in the arm and the place is a howling success. Among the song numbers heard in the one-reeler are: "Gotta Have My Rhythm," "Long, Long Ago," "Over the Waves," "Dixie," "Old Folks at Home," "Camptown Races" and "Alice in Rhumbaland."

BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC (20th-Fox)

The World Today (1701)

The difficult and dangerous task of delivering war supplies to Great Britain across the North Atlantic is dramatically pictured in this first of a new series known as "The World of Today," commentaries for which are furnished by Quentin Reynolds, Collier's war correspondent.

Impressive shots of air raid destruction in England convey the urgency and importance of deliveries of essential supplies from this side of the Atlantic. The camera then follows the loading of merchant vessels in a Canadian port, the formation of convoys and their protection, first, by Canadian air craft, then Canadian war vessels; next, at about mid-Atlantic, by British naval units, and, finally by British air craft.

Action at sea, with attacks by both submarine and enemy air craft, are pictured. Reynolds' commentary is in key with the subject.

U. S. MILITARY ACADEMY (Col.)

Washington Parade (2902)

A particularly appropriate short subject at this time of national rearming, "U. S. Military Academy" is a documentary film on the training of the West Point cadets. Much stress is laid on the technical side of cadet studies in the presentation. The lighter side is represented by scenes of the cadets doing intramural sports and a long run by a cadet back has been included from a football game with Columbia. The perfect precision of the cadet corps on parade is featured and the subject ends with a graduating class receiving their commissions from President Roosevelt. Commentary by Basil Ruysdael.

SWORD SOLDIERS (RKO)

Sportscope (14,309)

The Sword has joined the crossbow in the arsenal of obsolete military weapons, but the science of swordship, has survived in the sport of fencing. Fencing is not taught as a deadly form of combat but as legitimate competitive exercise and this issue takes one to the ramparts of the United States Military Academy at West Point for a pictorial explanation of the intricate art of fencing.

Fencing is divided into three events, according to the type of weapon used. The heavy saber, the dueling sword, and the foil, all of which are interestingly demonstrated by Warrant Officer Diamond, who has, in his nineteen years as coach and instructor, guided more than thirty thousand blades through the intricacies of single combat.

A detail of cadet officers are shown receiving instructions in the manual of the sabre. This interesting issue closes with a colorful and stirring review on the Academy parade grounds.

RAGGEDY ANN (Par.)

Special (FFO-1)

"Raggedy Ann" is a cinematic treatment of Johnny Gruelle's works which were brought to the attention of younger audiences some years ago. Here Max Fleischer in his two reel color cartoon brings to life the rag dolls of another day and delves into their private lives. In this subject Raggedy Ann and her spouse to be, Raggedy Andy, run afoul of numerous adventures while on their way to receive names after being put together in Rag Land. When Andy meets a Senorita doll, Ann's heart is broken but he realizes his mistake and they are joined for life. Mr. Fleischer and his staff have worked a colorful background into and throughout the subject with the various sewing implements giving a musical review while constructing the dolls.

Sniffles, the mouse, and a bookworm invade the toy department after the store is closed. They have lots of fun playing with the toys until a cat appears on the scene. They escape after a hard chase. It is a color cartoon. Clever effects.

● The new "One Kilowatt" High Intensity arcs really pour daylight on the screen. Projection is vastly improved because of the much higher intrinsic brilliancy of these arcs — 100 to 120% higher than Low Intensity. A comparison will convince you.

Every small theatre needs and can afford this modern high intensity projection light. Ask your dealer for a demonstration.

When people begin sticking their noses up at your theatre because at times the air isn't too sweet, it's time to do something for their noses, and for them.

You can give them "sweet" air—free from objectionable odors; temperature that is constant; freedom from drafts and excessive humidity. You turn to General Electric air conditioning. For G-E has been relieving theatre owners and managers of these very problems for years. Whatever your theatre needs—compressors, condensers, boilers, controls—you can depend upon G-E to supply your exact needs for efficient, year 'round air conditioning.

A helpful brochure that you should read

Very often a basic presentation of what good air conditioning really is, simplifies the problems that confront theatre people. G-E has prepared such a brochure—"Air Conditioning for Business." Send the coupon for your free copy. Then discuss your problems with your local contractor or consulting engineer. Start getting rid of your problems by filling out the coupon right now.

MARKET NOTES

¶ News reports concerning equipment and materials, and those who make them

Booklet on Electrical Meters

A NEW BOOKLET has been issued by the Westinghouse Electrical & Manufacturing Company, East Pittsburgh, Pa., on a. c. and d. c. ammeters and voltmeters for all applications. The ammeters described range from 5 to 125 amperes, the voltmeters from 10-140 to 450-700. Besides design characteristics, application methods are explained.

New Wall Paneling

A PREFINISHED wall paneling material has been developed by Marsh Wall Products, Inc., of Dover, Ohio, under the name Marlite Velvetex. It is a companion product to Marlite Deluxe; the latter has a high gloss finish, however, while Velvetex has a dull surface. The Deluxe has been used in a number of theatres, for standee rail fascias, lobby paneling, etc., and the Velvetex has similar applications.

The material comes in wall-size sheets and can be cut to size and applied directly to plaster, insulation board, also lathing so long as it is reasonably straight. It is made in 18 colors and patterns, and five standard sizes. The patterns include tile and a modern horizontal-line scheme.

Curtain Control Development

AN INTERESTING folder outlining the development of curtain track and control equipment by Vallen, Inc., of Akron, Ohio, has just been issued by that manufacturer. The various critical steps in the manufacture of Vallen equipment are pictured, while the types of equipment available are described.

Installations of Vallen equipment recently reported cover a variety of applications and locations. They include track and controls in theatres in Mexico and South Africa, similar equipment in theatres in Kentucky, Illinois and Utah, and two sets of track and control apparatus, one with a 101-foot curved track, at Utah University.

Manual on "Cyclex" Lamp

A POCKET-SIZE manual completely describing the design and operating characteristics of "Cyclex" alternating current projection arc equipment, has been made available to projectionists and exhibitors by the C. S. Ashcraft Manufacturing Company, Long Island City, N. Y. The manual is profusely illustrated with diagrams and photographs, and has a classified table of contents. Containing 43 numbered pages, the booklet is printed on durable coated paper.

Bulletins on Theatre Lighting

TWO NEW bulletins on theatre lighting equipment have been issued by Kliegl Brothers of New York. One (No. 44) deals with general illumination requirements, including downlighting, projection room spotlights, architectural lighting units, exit lights, and also stage sources. The other (No. 46) covers equipment for stage productions, including electrical accessories.

Plastic Finishing Sheets

A DESCRIPTIVE folder has been issued by the United States Plywood Corporation of New York, on Farlite finishing sheets for walls, table tops, and similar veneering. This material is manufactured by the Farley & Loetscher Manufacturing Company of Dubuque, Ia., which also makes Farloex, a sheet material consisting in hardboards veneered on both top and bottom with Farlite to provide an exceptionally smooth, resistant board.

IRWIN CLIPPER

Glance down a row of IRWIN CLIPPER chairs installed. The appearance of the backs is as of one solid unit. Backs fit flush against one another, completely concealing the center standards and points of fastening. The result is a much better looking installation.

UNI-TACHMENT, however, is just one of many structural superiorities which recommend the CLIPPER. And it's moderately priced. If you are looking for all the box office drawing power that good seating can contribute, without paying a premium price for it, by all means see the new IRWIN CLIPPER at the nearest display room. We believe it is by far your best bet.

VELVET-WEAVE CARPETING

There are distinctive types of weaves in carpeting, all requiring certain preparatory steps of washing, carding, spinning of wool, but each undergoing certain processes of its own. A specific pattern, however, starts with the designers.

In making patterned Velvet carpeting, the yarn is drum-dyed instead of skein-dyed (as in the case of Wiltons). The yarn is wound on a huge wheel and dyed in stripes, according to the design, by rollers beneath drum.

Preparation for weaving calls for setting of the dyed yarns in proper position to make the pattern (above, left); then the set yarns are wound on warp beam (above, right) attached to Velvet loom.

QUITE in keeping with the handsome interior of the Beechwold Theater, Columbus, Ohio is Goodyear's new Tu-Tone Rubber Rug, which provides a protective floor covering combining beauty, long wear and the utmost good taste.

Available in black, red or green, these new rubber rugs produce a two-tone effect that harmonizes with any decorative scheme.

They are made with deep-cut diagonal ribs of sturdy rubber, arranged in panels 9″ wide by 12″ long. These ribs catch and hold any mud or dirt brought in by foot traffic and provide a safe, non-skid surface on rainy days.

Goodyear Tu-Tone Rubber Rugs will not creep or crawl—they keep their place once they are laid down. Their neat appearance and wear-resisting qualities make them especially useful for lobbies, entrances, corridors, elevators or as runners over carpets.

Goodyear Tu-Tone Rubber Rugs come in rolls approximately 30′ x 54″. They can be used in less than full width for runners or they can be cut and matched to fit any space. Their overall thickness is $\frac{5}{16}$″.

For complete information about the Tu-Tone Rubber Rug write to Goodyear, Akron, Ohio—or Los Angeles, California.

Feather Foam Front

* Popliteal—according to Webster—"the back part of the leg behind the knee joint." Pressure on the Popliteal causes legs to "go to sleep" and is responsible for discomfort and nervousness.

WITH the development of Feather Foam Front a new era in theatre seat comfort is ushered in! Now legs won't go to sleep, patrons won't get restless—because Feather Foam Front takes the pressure off the Popliteal!

This has been achieved through elimination of hard steel wires and rolled or packed stuffing across the front edge of the seat. Never was a theatre chair so comfortable before!

Feather Foam Front is now available on American Bodiform, Commodore, Zephyr and Zenith chairs—at no extra cost! This great feature plus new color schemes and streamlined designs make American chairs even greater buys than ever. See them!

Television Approaches, Bringing Some Questions

JUST WHEN the commercial birth of television has appeared to have the nurses more puzzled than ever, RCA makes bold to fix an early date. Following announcement of television on a 15x20-foot screen, presenting a box-fight, a playlet and other material in a New York theatre as a demonstration especially aimed at theatre operators, Thomas F. Joyce, vice president of RCA, gave a luncheon in New York to press representatives for the purpose of describing to them the benefits of television to motion picture theatres. The details are told in the regular news columns of MOTION PICTURE HERALD; suffice it therefore to say here that Mr. Joyce emphasized the function of television as a means of providing an occasional added attraction in the form of major news events.

Discussion among the journalists following the luncheon raised many questions; some were answerable, some were not. Among the latter were:

Except for disasters, on which the newsreels do a very finished and timely job, indeed, "major" news events occurring often enough to keep the dust off the theater's receiving equipment are likely to be sports events—top-flight box-fights, certain baseball and football games, horse races, and so on. What percentage of a motion picture theatre audience would be happy, after the novelty had worn off, to have the program interrupted for a substantial period of time to look upon such things? (Imagine your Aunt Minnie when Joe Louis starts giving the other boy the old one-two!)

There are relatively few motion picture theatres in even the large cities with more than 1,800 seats, only a handful with more than 2,500. Are such capacities large enough to pay the freight at movie prices? Or will special prices have to be charged in an amount practically ruling out the pictures as program attractions on a certain day or night?

Does the assumption by televized news events of a major place on the motion picture theatre program in any way fulfill the purposes of the theatre, or does the theatre's position in affairs rest rather on the people's desire for dramatic entertainment?

Doesn't the big money in televized news events lie in the direction of large civic and other auditoriums seating from 3,000 to 15,000 people where box-fights, World Series games, etc., could be presented to audiences gathered specifically to see those events at a couple of bucks a head, yet at still a fraction of the cost, especially for out-of-towners, to see the event itself?

After predicting that General Weygand would stop the Germans last June, we wouldn't know, either.

The Military Touch

The Army is building its own theatres—$1,500,000 worth of them, according to recent reports—at the new training camps now without such facilities, but here and there exhibitors have gone into towns near camps with a similar aim to provide the boys relief from the grim realities. The Army houses will be of a temporary kind, and the pictures available follow regular theatres from one to three months; the town theatres offer something much finer in surroundings and presentation, and much later in programs—at a price, of course.

The army takes over—Mayor W. W. Mayes of Brownwood, Tex., presenting the ceremonial "key" to Maj.-Gen. Claude V. Birkhead, Commander 36th Division, at opening of Bowie theatre.

A recent case in point is Interstate's Bowie theatre in Brownwood, Tex., near which town is Camp Bowie. Brownwood is a little town, and its Lyric theatre, also operated by Interstate, naturally couldn't take care of the thousands of soldiers coming into Camp Bowie, where the 36th Division was sent. Interstate rushed the Bowie into construction. Jake Elder, who is in charge of the circuit's construction work, organized the job so masterfully that around 80 days after the approval of plans, the Brownwood Bowie, seating 862, was opened with military honors. Soldiers and civilians mobbed the little town, which has but two cops of its own; the military police took charge, however, and, says Frank Starz, Interstate publicity man, "it was the most orderly opening I ever saw." (All the same, if we remember correctly, we don't like 'em.)

Building of the Bowie had to conform to special dictates of time and patronage. Construction is of reinforced concrete columns and tie beams, with walls 8 inches of hollow tile, and 4 inches of brick. Roof is built up with wood deck. These were materials kept on hand.

Luxury items: auditorium (finished entirely in acoustic plaster) decorated in rust (wainscot) and graduated shades of green and ivory; spun aluminum lighting fixtures; American streamlined seating with coral leatherette cushions and soft-fabric backs, forced draft ventilation with washed-air cooling, among other things indicated by the accompanying pictures. Screen-Air News Theatre

Cleveland's first and only newsreel theatre, recently opened, is quite a source of local radio broadcasts, and plans on developing the idea to novel lengths. Called the Telenews, it is another unit in the group of Telenews theatres operated by Herbert Scheftal and associates, with headquarters in New York. Other houses are in Chicago and San Francisco.

The Cleveland house, which is located just a few doors from Public Square in the heart of town, and seats 488, has a large sub-level lounge, adjoining which is a radio broadcasting stage behind glass (see accompanying photo). Wires run to three stations, and a fourth is expected to be added, for news broadcasts (with incidental theatre promotion), and an International News Service receiver has been installed for late "flashes." The printer operates in the lounge for patrons to "get it hot," while the flash sheets are posted frequently on a bulletin board. According to Holden Swiger, manager, a news editor is to be engaged to prepare broadcasts.

At a convenient break in the newsreel and shorts program, shortly before a broadcast is to start, Mr. Swiger, speaking over the public address system, invites the audience to repair to the lounge for an intermission. There are, at present, three broadcasts daily, all in the evening, plus on Sunday afternoon schedule. Each broadcast lasts about 10 minutes, and as many as 200 patrons have gone to the lounge at one time to look on.

That number is likely to be alarmingly augmented when Mr. Swiger gets another idea underway. This is for a "Speak Up" program, at which anyone in the audience will be permitted to take the microphone and air his opinions on a subject of his own choosing. ("I think Mr. Lindbergh. . . ." —Zowie!)

Paragraphs—

Some theatre people think that to tell the public about the mechanics of the motion picture is to jeopardize the illusion. Wonder if it does. John H. Hersker, operator of the Hersker theatre in West Hazleton, Pa., doesn't think so. He recently arranged to have members of a local High school science class visit his projection room. Henry Krissinger, projectionist, showed them "how it's done." Wonder if those youngsters aren't more interested in motion pictures than ever!

We firmly believe that advertising should be regarded as news. Sometimes it repeats, but reminders are necessary. And on some occasions it is highly instructive. For example, the General Electric advertisement on fluroescent lamps in this issue. It offers some timely, practical suggestions, in the manner of a condensed, instructive article.

We have noted a number of candy cases and counters especially made up for certain circuits. Why? Such retailing is only a sideline with theatres. Stores buy from the stocks of regular manufacturers. It would be difficult to find a handsomer case than the one illustrated by the Columbus Show Case Company on page 37, or one better suited to theatres.—G. S.

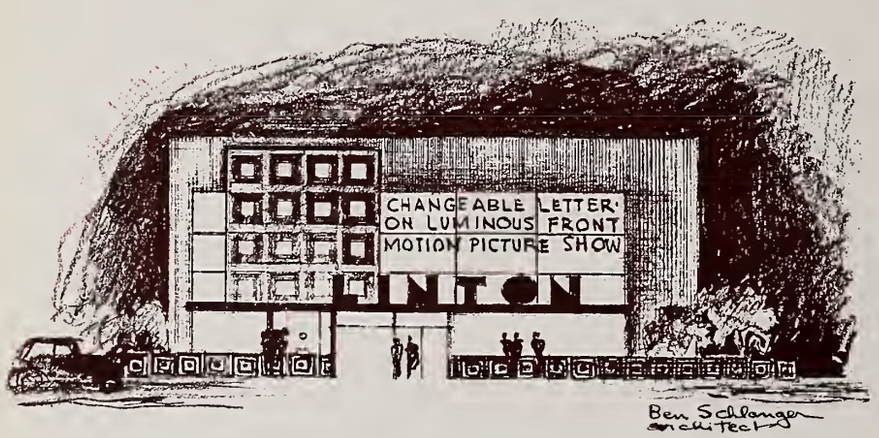
ARCHITECTURAL LIGHTING AS A MEDIUM OF PROMOTION



A GROUP OF STUDIES by Ben Schlanger

EXPLANATORY NOTES AND OTHER SKETCHES ON FOLLOWING PAGE

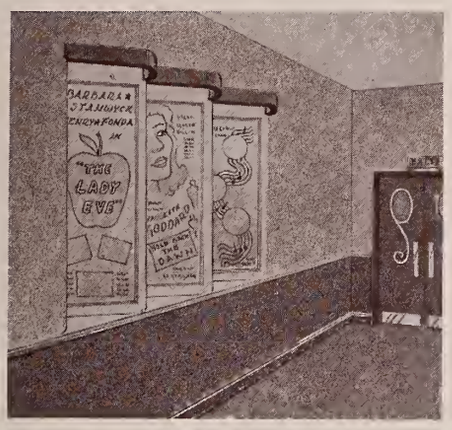
SINCE the motion picture theatre is mostly a night-time building, it is suggested in these studies that artificial light be used as the medium and influencing factor for the design of the front. The use of light is an expression of the motion picture art itself. The luminous medium becomes both an effective means of advertising and an architectural theme without sacrificing the dignity which is required for the facade of a permanent and useful structure.

Very large areas of translucent and clear glass with illumination from the inside is the motif of design in all three designs shown on this and the preceding page. An attempt is made to make the advertising of the theatre a definite part of the architecture. These facades can prove to be far more attractive and attention-arresting than the highly ornamental and poorly illuminated theatre facade.

The use of fluorescent and other recently developed systems of lighting makes the use of these luminous fronts a definite possibility. All display cases are placed behind large plate glass windows at the street level.

Such luminous areas as those indicated in these studies readily lend themselves to color, either in the light itself (which fluorescent lamps now allow us to do with much greater economy and effectiveness than previously), or by means of colored glass. A number of types of translucent architectural glass are now available in fluted and other formations, and in a variety of colors.

While light boxes behind the glass are indicated for many of such luminous areas, in some instances (such as at the left, curving section in the sketch at the top of this page) the glass might be an actual window, enclosing a foyer, perhaps with mezzanine lounge, and here illumination of the front would come from the room itself.



In these studies, which have been made with the outlying residential or suburban community especially in mind, the marquees are given very little projection, being intended to serve only as protection to entering patrons. Program advertising is made a part of the architectural scheme itself, and where this is provided for, regular attraction display panels and frames could be used. Incidentally, these attraction advertising panels could be serviced from a moving ladder attached to a track; the ladder could slide into a pocket provided for it when not in use.—B. S.

PLAN

SCHEME ONE: ANGULAR CASES

■ Advertising is not effective if it isn't read, and coming-attraction displays have the initial disadvantage of being addressed to people intent on seeing a certain show now, and to people who have just got their fill of theatrical entertainment and are bent on other interests. Their eyes must be forcefully attracted to the advertising; yet this should be done without making the advertising secondary to the means of drawing their attention. In the first of this group of display arrangements I have concentrated on outgoing patrons, placing the display cases at a slight angle facing the foyer doors. This arrangement is particularly suggested for relatively short and wide lobbies.

SCHEME TWO: FOYER NICHE

■ Ornate niches as repositories for "art objects," while a common sight in many old theatres, are becoming a thing of the past; but the use of a simple niche to create a center of interest in a lounge or foyer is always sound. Here I have designed one around a display frame, giving the display setting prominence as well as a dignity which is only too often lacking. This design, while not readily adaptable to an old theatre, as it is intended to be carried out in plaster and would involve considerable expense, is easily justifiable in a new theatre because of its combined advertising and decorative value. As shown on the detail, concealed fluorescent lamps provide illumination.

SCHEME FOUR

SCHEME THREE: RECESSED LEDGE

■ Designed to permit the use of a variety of types of displays, this frame has sufficient depth to allow models or settings to be built up on the bottom ledge. By the use of removable panels the frame may be subdivided or treated as one long display. Cut-outs might be placed between the panels if desired. It may be built into an existing theatre by furring out the walls for the length of the frame. The sign over the doors, sloped for easy legibility and illuminated by a cove at bottom suits any theatre.

SCHEME FOUR: MURAL COMBINATION

■ One way to draw patrons' attention to lobby side-wall coming-attraction displays is of course to associate them with colorful, interesting design or murals. In such treatment, however, one risks "burying" the posters. Scheme Four suggests giving the displays such an unusual relative position that the eye naturally travels to them. The frames are illuminated brilliantly, the murals only moderately by concealed sources in plant box. . . . The sign over the doors is set in a panel made of Flexglas mirrors.

PATTERNED CARPETING SHOULD BE "IN SCALE"

Carpeting

AMONG the considerations in carpet selection, that of "scale" seems to get less attention than the rest; with type of design, coloration, price and perhaps also immediate availability of yardage to consider (due to leaving floor coverings to the last minute), the matter of "scale" appears often to get lost in the shuffle.

Yet, as it is pointed out to carpeting men by their superiors and the carpet industry, the relation of pattern size to room size is one of the important factors in the success of an installation. And it is a factor easily satisfied, if one takes the pains to do so, from the hundreds of patterns in the lines of principal makers.

SIZE OF REPEAT DETERMINES SCALE

Visualize a chap about five-foot-two in a suit with large plaid checks! Or a tall, thin, long-faced fellow in a broad-striped suit and a hat having a narrow, turned-up brim! Their attire may be said (with certain allowances for the limitations of analogy) to be out-of-scale. Considerations of proportion strongly enter into most things that have to do with appearance.

In carpeting, scale is determined fundamentally by the size of the "repeat"—that is, the distance between the beginning of one figure or system of figures, and the beginning of the next one. Generally speaking, in selecting patterned carpeting, broad areas should be given a large repeat, restricted areas a small repeat.

Unless the theatre itself is small, its floor plan is likely to be cut up pretty much into relatively large and small plan divisions. Obviously, it is not practicable to vary the carpeting according to each definite division; indeed, in many cases, particularly those of theatres of especially compact plan, this would be undesirable from even a decorative point of view, since it is better to reduce as much as possible the effect of structural barriers, and carpeting can do much to create a sense of unity and "flow" from lobby or vestibule to seating.

DEALING WITH SMALLER AREAS

In quite a few theatres, however, some variation in the carpeting is more or less advised. Most often it is lounge space which calls for a floor treatment different from that of the main traffic areas. In lounges, of course, the variation may also be dictated by the difference in the general style of the lounge from that of the foyer, auditorium, etc., but it is often advised by the difference in scale alone. Here the scale factor may be easily dealt with by employing a design of entirely different character from that elsewhere.

Other areas sometimes calling for a pattern of a different scale, such as corridors on upper and lower levels and possibly the stairs leading to them, may be amenable to similar treatments; when they are not, as when the plan and interior design do not offer a "natural break" in the continuity of the floor covering, the scale problem may possibly be met by laying the same pattern in a different scale (some few patterns are stocked in more than one scale, either in the same width, or with the smaller scale in, say, three-quarters, and the larger in 36-inch width). For changing to a different pattern in these traffic areas (not lounges), stairs offer a "natural break," with the change being made either on the stairs themselves (which the width of the steps may suggest), or at the beginning of the lower or upper floor. Where upward stairs are a fairly prominent element of a main foyer scheme, the "break" is most natural at the beginning of the upper level rather than at the stairs themselves, which may suggest a scale for the main foyer somewhat smaller (a compromise) than otherwise might be selected, so that the steps are not "swallowed up" by the pattern.

The causes of out-of-scale effects in carpeting are about the same as those of inappropriate pattern: Failure to select the floor covering in good time, and "standardization." The latter applies only to sizeable circuits, which occasionally adopt a certain design for every theatre, regardless of differences in plan and style.

In some specific instances there may be special yardage-price considerations; moreover, a well-made, charmingly designed carpet is a beautiful thing in itself, wherever it may be. But when one considers the amount of money necessarily invested, the amount of time the installation lasts, and the amount of influence the floor covering has on the overall effect of the interior treatment, carpet selection is not a matter to be disposed of in a "that's good enough" manner. And scale plays a part in a successful installation comparable to that of design style and decoration.

"Ragging the Scales"—above, an interesting modern figure well proportioned for the foyer, but "dwarfing" the lounge; below, the same effect in reverse—a small-repeat pattern perfectly in scale with the lounge, but out-of-proportion and "lost" in the broad, boldly-styled standee-foyer.

John J. Sefing, in his "Ways & Means" elsewhere in this issue, makes some interesting recommendations for laying carpet in standee and aisles.

A Residential Scheme with Garden Plot and Daylight Foyer

Describing the 900-seat Beechwold theatre in outlying section of Columbus, O.

THE BEECHWOLD theatre in Columbus, Ohio, a new 900-seat house in an outlying residential section serving several fine neighborhoods and a suburban village of 1,700 population, has an interesting set-back location and front garden arrangement well suited to suburban and neighborhood situations. Architecturally, the Beechwold presents, in addition to a number of original design features in essentially a modern style, an interesting floor plan associated with spacious window-lighted foyer. The theatre is operated by Beechwold Enterprises, Inc., under general direction of Louis Wiethe, owner of a number of theatres in the Cincinnati metropolitan area, with Milton R. Yassenoff as manager.

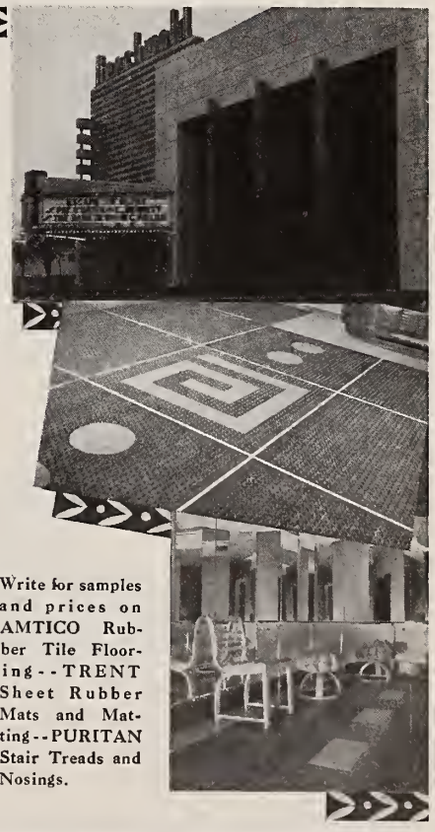
The building is of masonry construction with face brick exterior along the sides, steel roof trusses, reinforced concrete second floor slabs, and front elevation faced in terra cotta. The total investment represented is reported to be $101,000, including real estate (with 200-car parking lot adjoining) and all equipment.

¶ FRONT TREATMENT

The front sets back 40 feet from the lot line, with a railed-in garden plot to the right of the entrance approach, and the foyer looking out on the garden (see floor plan and pictures on pages 16 and 17). The facade above the marquee has a toothed-brick pylon effect projecting from a horizontally fluted burnt orange terra cotta feature surmounted by a channel-letter name sign with double lines of gold neon. Triangular in shape, the marquee has a wide band of porcelain enamel at the apex with four rows of flashing filament lamps centering on a neon letter "B" and continuing down and across the soffit to the ticket booth, while Wagner silhouette type three-line attraction boards are bordered by chaser strips. Filament lamps in a triangular formation provide general soffit lighting. The marquee is painted mauve, yellow and blue.

The ticket booth, as deep as the shallow vestibule and entered from lobby, has a base of finely corrugated herringbone design in stainless steel laminated over plywood above a 6-inch course of black structural glass. Above the plate glass windows is peach mirror glass continuous with a band of the same glass framing double doors on either side. The doors are of 2¼-inch birch construction paneled in fluted translucent glass. Display frames are of alumilited aluminum with fluorescent lighting. The vestibule flooring consists in black corrugated, perforated rubber mats with a white letter "B," and the mats are laid in recesses in concrete.

The base course around the building is of reddish brown mottled terra cotta simulating red granite. Above this to the right of the entrance, the front is finished in mottled buff terra cotta framing a set of three windows, each 8 x 20 feet, and glazed with fluted glass, separated by dark blue terra cotta pylons. Beneath each window the base course is projected to enclose a flower box.



The railed-in plot from this area is also turfed for planting of flowers. To make the railing concrete flue units were used in an ingenious manner. These are placed in a series of 16 x 16-inch concrete squares on a poured concrete base, with the whole of this railing structure finished off with a concrete cap.

¶ THE LOBBY

Walls and ceiling of the lobby are of painted plaster, with the walls in varied effects. The wall facing the entrance is painted apricot and has a recessed display in gray, green and ivory. The wall adjoining the entrance at left is grey-green and ivory to form a background for a candy and popcorn counter upholstered in leather with superimposed ivory disks. Opposite are doors to the foyer of solid walnut in natural finish mechanically treated with wax.

The ceiling is painted reddish brown around a shallow light well concealing one line of flame-colored power neon, with the well bordered by ivory stripings in graded widths to simulate stepped coffering. The entire room is capped by an ivory plaster moulding, while the wood mouldings framing the doors are also ivory.

¶ THE FOYER

The main foyer, as previously noted, looks out on the garden plot at side of entrance approach, through fluted translucent glass windows from floor to ceiling. The foyer thus is lighted by natural light during an operating period amounting to as much as 60% of total operating time during the summer, when daylight saving is in effect. This has suggested the entrance plan, which takes traffic in a J-shaped direction (see floor plan), providing a wall across rear of standee protecting the auditorium from the daylight. For economy of space, this protective wall structure provides area for lounge and toilet rooms.

Simulation of the daylight effect is obtained, to some degree, during the period of artificial lighting. The wall opposite the windows curves outward to form a projecting ceiling ending in a bracketed series of rectangular openings. The edge of this ceiling structure conceals ten 48-inch white fluorescent lamps running the entire depth of the foyer, while the fascia of the structure is open toward the windows; thus light is emitted both toward the windows, to illuminate the raised ceiling between them and the cove, and through the rectangular apertures underside down into the room.

Foyer finish is plaster. The inner wall and projecting ceiling are painted grey-green, with the brackets vermillion; the raised ceiling canary yellow. Along both outer and inner walls blonde birch furniture is arranged, and along the inner wall, just above the furniture line and about to a point 7 feet high, modernized fret-motif ornamentation is painted in white, gold, blue and vermillion. This same treatment is carried out along the end wall where the turn to the standee occurs, with a mask embellishment added. Chairs and settees are upholstered in frieze in aqua, rose, yellow and pastel blue and green. The win-

The amber ceiling spots provide low-level general illumination across the rear of the seating, so to illuminate the floor safely, the standee rail conceals neon tubing in the top, illuminating a decorative panel recessed 12 inches and painted ivory. To protect the tubing and diffuse the light, the trough in the top is covered with frosted glass.

¶ LOUNGES

The archway leading into the general lounge is flanked on either side by plaster columns, 18 inches in diameter, covered with canvas on which are painted modernistic figures in black and gold. The archway lintel, which has two lensed box lights, ends in light trough containing fluorescent lamps, at which point the general lounge ceiling begins, forming an arching curve to the farther wall. The latter has a fluted plaster wainscot painted gold and blue and capped with a 6-inch white moulding. Above this, the wall is painted dusty rose. The side walls are variously painted —the right one, blue with circular indentations in yellow (indented in the plaster); the left, burnt orange without ornamentation. Furniture here is similar to that of the foyer.

The men's rooms off the general lounge consist in a small entry and toilet room. The men's toilet room has a terrazzo floor and base in three colors, grey-green faience glazed tile wainscot, and Cedar Tennessee marble compartment partitions. Plaster walls above the wainscot are painted ivory and chocolate brown, while the ceiling is painted buff with coral squares for ornamentation.

The cosmetic room is U-shaped with the curve and inner wall finished in a continuous series of mirrors extending from a plaster wainscot to the ceiling. All other wall area, and the ceiling, are of plaster painted brownish red, while the floor is covered in reddish brown rubber tile with blue and yellow inserts.

Cosmetic tables are black structural glass attached to the walls and supported by chrome standards, while related chairs are of modern type in blonde wood with puff-ball cushions upholstered in fern leaf damask of blue and gold on revolving stool. Occasional chairs are also of blonde wood with cushions in the same fabric.

¶ AUDITORIUM

The design of the auditorium places most of the superficial treatment on the ceiling, and these consist in light sources and air outlet baffle. Otherwise, the decorative effect depends mainly upon massing of colors.

The side walls are covered in burgundy velour above a plaster fret motif in aqua and flesh-color surmounting wainscot of corrugated asbestos siding painted dusty orange. This wainscot treatment is continued into a forward panel and large fret and circle ornamentation just ahead of a panel flanking the proscenium opening. These latter panels provide purple plaster fields against which are fully attached (only seemingly hung at an angle) plaques in modernized-classic leaf motifs done on plaster in luminescent paint, which is actuated by Conti-Glo "black light" units concealed in troughs forming hoods over the forward exit doors. The stage is curtained in garnet velour with curtain operated by Clancy remote control equipment.

"Black Light" niche at auditorium entrance.

The rear wall (above standee opening), curved to follow seating line, is finished in blue velour horizontally paneled by applied wood mouldings painted ivory. The velour is furred out over acoustical material.

Dominating the ceiling treatment is the plaster plaque of fantastic shape which acts as both air baffle and light cove structure. This extends from across the rear down the center to a point 15 feet from the proscenium. The plaque, which is completely suspended, has a mean width of 20 feet, and is over 100 feet long. The ceiling proper is painted yellow in a stippled lead and oil finish, the plaque soffit is painted royal blue. Concealed along the edge of the plaque is a line of neon tubing which has been treated with black asphaltic paint to reduce light intensity for decorative running illumination.

Both running and house lighting are provided by circular drum fixtures of spun aluminum and covered with opal glass. Each contains six 15-watt lamps on one circuit, and one 60-watt lamp on another, with both under dimmer control.

The Beechwold seating plan, with three banks and two aisles, has staggered seating in the middle bank, effected by 30-inch chairs at the ends of alternate rows; all other chairs are uniformly 20 inches wide. These are set on a combination bowl floor (including slight upward forward slope) with row spacing varying from 36 inches in rear area to 32 inches at front. The chairs, an International Seat model with modern end standard design and padded backs, have cushions covered in black simulated leather, and backs in aqua mohair, while the end standards are in gold and Tuscan red.

¶ PROJECTION

The Beechwold projection room measures 14 x 20 feet with a 9-foot ceiling. The ceiling is finished in acoustic plaster, unpainted, while the hard plaster walls are painted olive green and buff. The floor is covered in jaspe roll asphalt. Lighting is by bowl fixtures set flush.

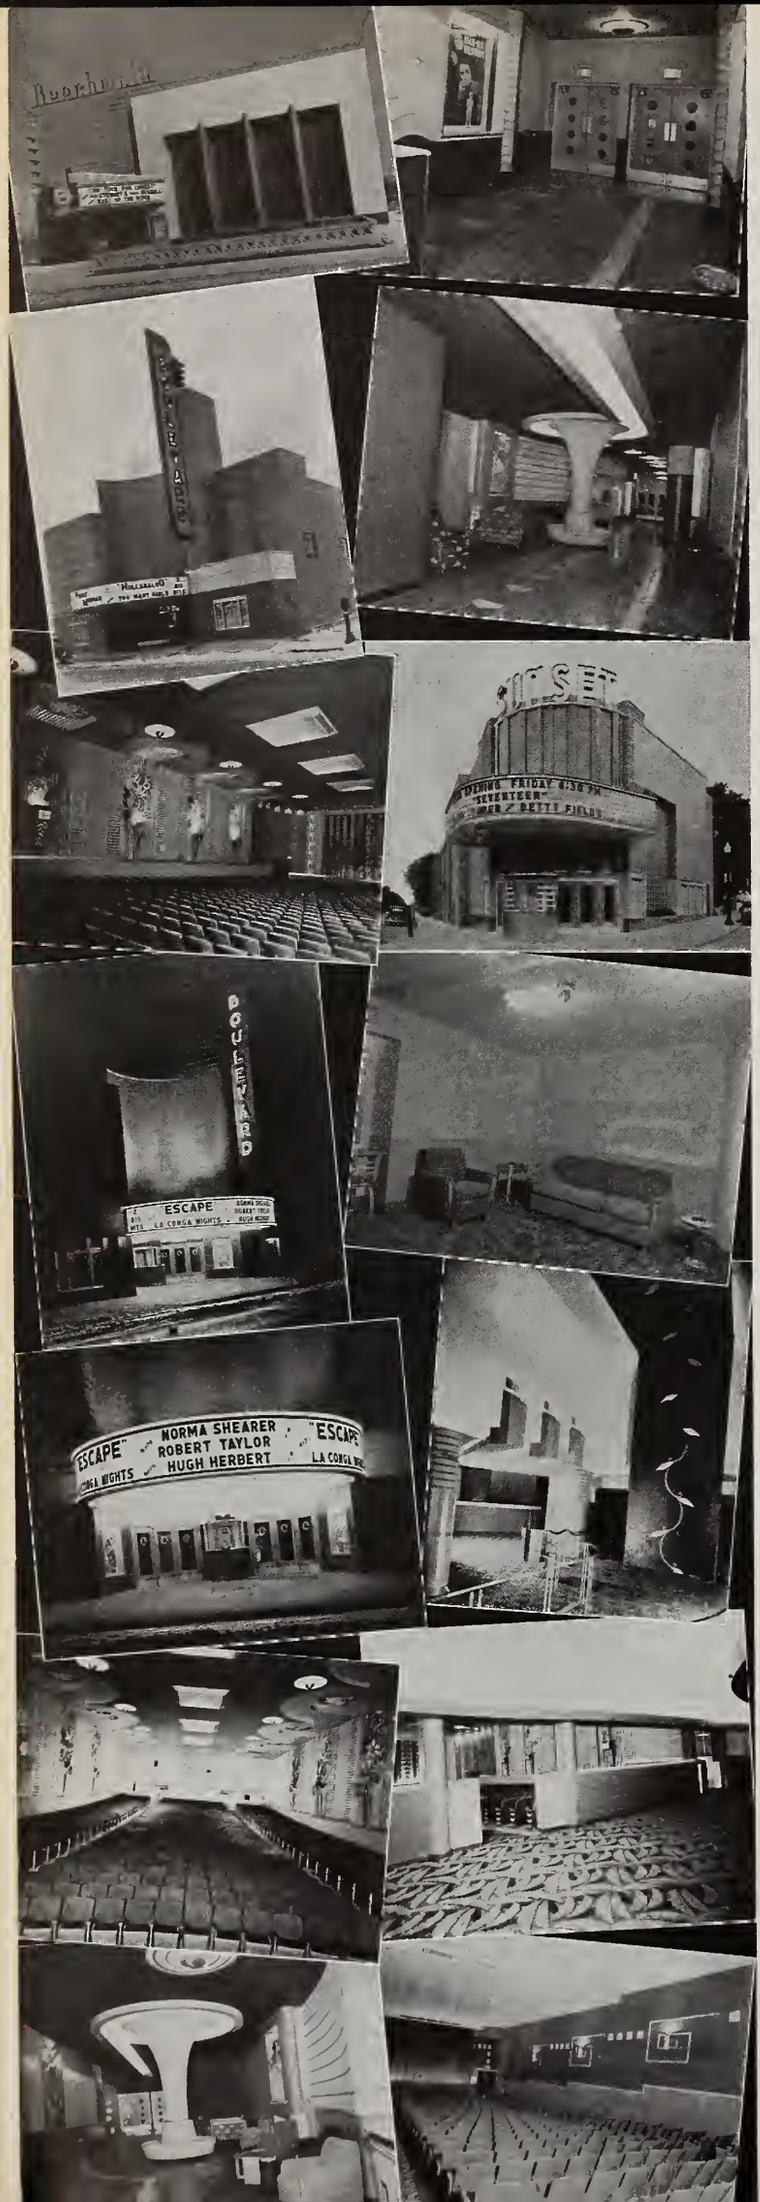
F & Y sells economy in first cost and in operating cost. All of the nice things you want in a theatre, all of the necessary excellencies in heating and air conditioning and lighting are provided in a low cost bracket at a guaranteed price.



F & Y ACCEPTS UNDIVIDED RESPONSIBILITY

To accept the undivided responsibility for producing all of the above results is no minor problem. When F & Y, a thoroughly responsible concern, accepts the undivided responsibility for producing the results outlined above, they do so with a full knowledge that their entire future success depends on the satisfaction which you, the customer, receive.

Above are the factors that have overwhelmed the theatre building exhibitors of the Mid-East section of America in the last three years, who have overwhelmed us with business. Our service makes friends out of customers. Friends then tell friends about our ability, knowledge and the advantages of the Undivided Responsibility Centralized Authority Plan. Customers come to us filled with the assurance that they may employ us with supreme confidence. Repeat business and enlarged operations are the tributes that guarantee to you that F & Y does and can do all you require for a lesser budget than any other agency or combination of agencies in theatre building and design business.

We provide the services of registered Architects, Building Engineers and Mechanical Engineers.

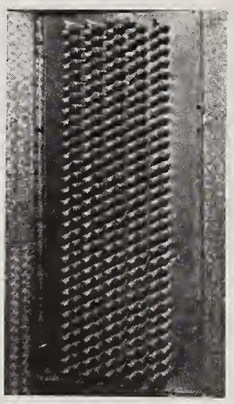
Planning Service

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors concerning theatre planning. This is strictly a service to readers for which there is no charge.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch is helpful. It is of course understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of a theatre architect. Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc., which must be procured from a licensed architect.



¶ Although Better Theatres' Service Department has leading specialists regularly available for consultation when and as an inquiry may advise this, all inquiries are answered by this department and should be addressed to it, as follows:

plug water coils, which are used also for the heating cycle with hot water supplied from a Hook boiler of only 19 sections and housed in a boiler room approximately 10 feet square. Fuel is natural gas.

The outside air intake consists in a series of 4-inch clay drain tiles set in cement, making a colorful ornament to the side of the building, looking somewhat like a series of pom pom guns. The return air shaft rises from a series of return air tunnels coming from the auditorium proper at the stage area and at the rear; a separate return air tunnel system takes cold air off the floor in front of the four foyer windows. The fresh and return air is controlled by manually operated dampers and passes through a set of filter frames equipped with Wilson Edgeseal filters and the McQuay coils into a plenum chamber, which has a Garden City double width, double inlet main fan, delivering 18,000 c.f.m. to the auditorium proper, and a Bishop and Babcock standby fan, delivering 5,000 additional c.f.m. to the grand foyer, toilet rooms and lobby space.

McQuay R. P. coils in the Beechwold.

The well water is discharged into a return well drilled for the purpose. One of the outstanding features of this well water system is the fact that the coils being of the removable plug McQuay type can be cleaned by a very simple process. The plugs at each end can be removed and the tubes flushed and brushed out by the theatre attendants without need of employing special or outside mechanics, thereby insuring a free flow of water through the entire area of the coil at all times and providing definite insurance against coil clogging. The well runs approximately 185 feet deep in shale and limestone. The pump is a Fairbanks Morse high speed centrifugal with 7½ h.p. motor heaving three stages, and this is augmented by a small Weinman booster pump in the equipment room. The entire system is capable of delivering 200 gallons per minute.

AIR-CONDITIONING & Ventilation

" . . today the theatre must assure its public breathing comfort."

Applying Unit Conditioners To Small Theatre Cooling

• Suggesting ways to use "package" plants to provide summer air-conditioning—if necessary, simply at first, with improvements added as budget permits

By CARL F. BOESTER

AFTER ALL THAT has been written and spoken about unit air conditioners, many exhibitors appear to be still much in the dark as to where, if at all, such equipment fits into the pattern of each particular theatre's air-conditioning problem.

Fred Powell of Chester, S. C., who recently described in BETTER THEATRES a system installed in one of his houses, wrote me the other day bemoaning the fact that as a result of his article he was bombarded with theatre men asking for advice. While Mr. Powell has gained a substantial amount of practical knowledge about theatre air-conditioning, he only knows it as it concerns his particular set-up; he can't possibly know all there is about air-conditioning in general and still be up on sound, projection, management, etc. Advice in such matters properly come from competent air-conditioning consulting engineers. Let one in your locality see first-hand your problem, then be governed by his advice.

And now as to the application of unit air-conditioners to theatres.

Unit air-conditioning equipment is now about as simplified as it is ever going to be, and the price is definitely as low as it will ever be. I also wish to point out that air-conditioning equipment is not nearly as complicated a piece of mechanism as sound or projection equipment, and not nearly so easy to get out of order. If you would just quit thinking there is something mysterious about air-conditioning and put forth the effort to understand it that you do on projection and other theatre matters, all would be easy. A 40-ton air-conditioner has half as many parts as there is in your projection equipment. Just visualize your film running through your projector, then imagine, for comparison, freon refrigerant flowing through your air-conditioner, doing the same as your film in the end—producing patron satisfaction.

Improve as You Can

If you are afraid of air-conditioners, don't put them in; properly understood, they can be useful pieces of equipment. For urgent economy and simplicity, you can forget about the lobby, the toilets, the projection room, the manager's office, if necessary, and just provide comfort in the auditorium proper. If you really want to please your patrons, provide one ton of cooling capacity for every fifteen seats, but never stretch it to more than eighteen. If you have a 300-seat house, two 10-ton self-contained units will do a swell job. Take the manufacturer's advice as to their location in the auditorium. If your theatre is not more than twice as long as it is wide, you won't need ducts, for with good diffusing grilles in the units themselves, air distribution is easy.

Use city water for condensing, at least for the first year or two, and when you can later afford it, add a cooling tower or saturated air condenser for lower condensing costs (unless the cost of your city water is exorbitant).

What should a good unit cost you? Well, they all cost the same at the factory, but freight and installation costs vary widely. Nowadays every light and power company employs an air-conditioning expert to give advice on which represents the best buy after getting bids on installations of unit equipment.

Always get a guarantee as to silent operation, for to get best results without ducts, put the units right into the auditorium, even if you have to give up a seat or two.

Operating Provisions

Four 10-ton units are much better than, say, two 20-ton units. If one develops trouble you can limp by on three; or if the house is half full, two can do a swell job and save on power also. Parts for smaller units are more easily obtained, for they are usually in stock.

You will have to be satisfied with simple controls—one thermostat and an off-and-on hand switch. (Some sets elaborate controls cost more than the unit does.)

Dealers in unit equipment have foolproof means of determining if their units will fit your problem. Some theatres, because of tricky arrangement or peculiar balcony or stage problems, are not good for unit applications, but most dealers know when to advise you correctly. When in doubt, see your electric company man, or pay a consultant for an hour's advice.

Duct work, fresh air inlets, controls, fresh air filters, etc., are extras that improve things, but you can always add them later.

In the meantime, why not get started with an installation of unit equipment this year? The time will never be any better for such a start.

[Carl F. Boester is well known to readers of Better Theatres, for his frequent articles on air-conditioning up to a year ago. An air-conditioning engineer, he is now director of housing research at Purdue University. With his present article he begins a group of regular contributions to these columns.]

Ice-Cooling for the Small Town Theatre

FOR the small town theatre not operating continuously, relief cooling by means of ice is a possibility. Simple, low in first cost, ice-cooling gives a ton and a quarter of refrigerating effect for one ton of ice. It has ample overload capacity for the infrequent high peaks. Maintenance costs are low.

The only hitch may be the local ice man. Will he sell marginal ice? Can he give good delivery service at low cost? If not, perhaps he will agree to a deal whereby he makes a season's requirements in winter and stores it for the theatre in summer.

An ice-cooling plant runs quietly, needs licensed operating engineer. In the next issue of Better Theatres we will describe the component parts of a properly designed ice-cooling system.—C. F. B.

Color and Movement In Attraction Displays

• Describing methods of applying the new combination silhouette-translucent changeable letters either for simple neon-effect or gradual change of panel

THE TOOLS of attraction advertising at the point of sale—the theatre front—continue to be extended. The line of progress that began with the silhouette-letter type of display, which greatly increased visibility and legibility, ultimately suggested the "typographical," or printed advertisement style of display, with the development of multiple-line, interchangeable-letter equipment embracing a greater range of letter sizes and more typographical devices (like stars, quotation marks, etc.) for combination in interesting compositions that vary according to the advertising copy indicated by the program. And to this equipment have been added photographic transparencies, with which the advertisement may actually be "illustrated"; and a silhouette-translucent letter permitting the introduction of color.

The silhouette-translucent letter (also called "duo-color") may be used like a regular silhouette letter. In basic character and mounting, it is a silhouette letter; the black edge, however, outlines a strip of translucent plastic in color, the standard color being red because red transmits more light from sources of white light than is passed by colors of equal contrast with both the black outline of the letter and the lighted panel. Under regular attraction board lighting, the red inner strokes of the letter appear as though they might be neon.

Varying color, with motion, is possible, however, as further means of arresting the attention of passersby. C. M. Cutler and H. J. Chanon of the General Electric Company's Nela Park Engineering Division, have described (in Signs of the Times) the application of silhouette-translucent letters to a scheme employing both colored fluorescent and filament lamps for the panel lighting. With red for the translucent plastic, green is suggested for the panel lighting, since green fluorescent lamps are highly efficient and green effects the desired "blackout" of the red middle sections.

The lamp box is equipped with regular white filament lamps, and green fluorescent lamps as shown in the accompanying schematic drawing. The filament lamps are on either a dimmer or flasher circuit. If they are dimmed, the change in coloration is of course gradual according to the period fixed (a five-second cycle has been found effective). With the filament lamps out, the panel is green, and all the letters appear as regular black silhouette letters against the green background, since the red plastic does not transmit an effective amount of the green light. Then as the filament lamps come on, the green color of the panel gradually fades out into white (the filament light finally "washes out" the fluorescent light completely), while the red strokes of the "duo-color" letters, transmitting the increasing filament light, become pink, then a light red, and finally the full color of the plastic. This sequence then reverses itself to complete the cycle.

Other color combinations can be used, with less efficiency, however; but where neighboring signs are many and preponderantly red neon, blue and gold form a fairly efficient alternative combination.

For equipping the lamp box, Messrs. Cutler and Chanon give the following instructions:

Correct spacing of the lamps and correct distance between the lamps and the flashed opal glass panel are important if the panel is to have uniform brightness. The spacing between the fluorescent lamps (indicated by "S" in the lamping sketch) should not exceed 1½ times the distance ("D") measured from the center of the lamps to the surface of the glass. The filament lamps should be spaced according to the same rule.

To insure the utmost effectiveness of the change of color, the filament lamps should produce about 1½ to 2 times the amount of light produced by the fluorescent lamps. This ratio is about right to effect a decided change in the color of the luminous panel and to give the luminous letter strokes the proper relative brightness.

The following table should be helpful as a guide when green or gold fluorescent lamps are used. It is assumed that the wiring panel will be made in sections on which will be mounted two fluorescent lamps and two rows of filament lamps. However, for any size sign it is desirable to keep about the same ratio between "white" and colored light.

In high-brightness districts, signs containing the green fluorescent lamps are usually most satisfactory because the light output for a given wattage is the highest obtainable.

LUMINOUS STAR PHOTOS FOR "ILLUSTRATING" MARQUEE COPY

THE LUMINOUS photographs of stars, or transparencies, recently made available by a new service organized by Wagner Sign Service, Inc., of Chicago, brings front attraction display facilities yet another step closer to those of printed advertising. Rented on a service fee basis, these colored, photographic enlargements are intended to add attention-drawing qualities and selling punch to changeable-letter attraction avertising by illustrating the copy with likenesses of principal players on the program.

Inserting picture in transparency frame.

Inserting rear glass in transparency frame.

The pictures are ordered as any accessories are obtained on bookings, and returned following use. The frames are leased, but of course are retained by the theatre throughout the life of the contract for application as needed. The frames, which are stamped from durable-guage metal having a black crinkle finish, are made in two sizes—22x25 inches overall, spanning two letter-line spaces; and 30x40 inches overall, covering three spaces. Mounting in the attraction board frames is exactly as for Wagner silhouette letters.

The photographic blowups are sized to fit firmly and quickly into slots. The transparency frames have the front opening glazed with clear glass fixed in position permanently so as to be water-tight. After the picture is inserted, another sheet of clear glass is inserted behind it, likewise fitting into slots, to hold the picture flat against the front glass. Selected from approved photographs of the leading players, the natural-colored reproductions are printed on strong, white paper of parchment thickness and quality capable of transmitting sufficient light for full visibility of the subject without blurring.

Transparency mounted in its frame on attraction panel in manner of silhouette letter. Note watershed at frame top.

A watershed is provided at the top of the transparency frames to prevent rain from running either between the transparency and the lighted panel, or over the front of the transparency. The top is channeled and surfaced with a rubber or a heavy, absorbent fabric which overlaps the frame itself to press, in a slight upward curve, against the translucent glass of the main attraction frame.

Copy Layout Counsel Planned

Marquee Services, Inc., subsidiary of the Wagner company formed to distribute the transparencies, will offer a number of other services relating to attraction advertising. Layouts for interesting "typographical" layouts of attraction advertising copy will be available to theatres, while a sketch and photograph service will be added for manufacturers of marquees, to guide them in marquee design adapted to effective attraction displays.

DOING THE SAME FOR COMING ATTRACTIONS

■ A recent application of out-front current-attraction methods to coming-attraction advertising in the lobby, providing a luminous, silhouette changeable-letter display over the entrance doors, facing patrons as they come out. Kay Theatres have thus installed Adler frames in the Circle theatre, Bronx, New York, using Adler 10-inch letters.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

Compensation Law Applications

By RUDOLPH ALLEN
Member New York Bar

THE Workmen's Compensation Law, which is in force in almost all States of the Union, was passed pursuant to a widespread belief in its value as a means of protecting workers and their dependents from want in case of injury while engaged in hazardous employments. Prior to the enactment of this Law, no person could recover for personal injuries unless he could first establish, by a preponderance of evidence, that the accident was occasioned through the negligence of the employer, without the employe in any wise contributing thereto. This requirement of law worked serious hardships upon the worker, with the net result that in many instances he was afforded no protection whatsoever in case of accident.

The principles of Workmen's Compensation had been accepted in Europe for many years prior to its enactment in the United States, as a sociological advancement in the protection of the worker. It permits his dependents, in the event of his death, to demand as a right that which he was often compelled to ask as a charity.

The difficulties presented from the many cases arising from the interpretation of this law do not involve the ordinary accidents as we know them; so, for example, a projectionist falling down the stairs in descending from the projection room and thereby sustaining a broken leg, would be entitled to compensation, and no one would even attempt to contest the validity of his claim. The same would be true in any case where normal physical injuries are sustained while in the regular course of employment.

It is when we come to the question of disease resulting from an accident that the problem takes on the difficulties which are becoming, from day to day, more pronounced. The question of whether a disease was caused by an accident, or developed without catastrophe, has troubled the Courts for a long time and is the subject of many opinions not always reconciled with everyday experience in life.

There have been some fine and fanciful discriminations. Thus, one Court has held that the entry of a germ through a slight abrasion is accidental, but the same germ absorbed through the pores is not!

In discussing the question of diseases arising from accidents, the Courts refer to this type of ailment as an occupational disease and, when they occur, compensation is usually allowed. In the recent case of Goldberg vs. 954 March Corp. (297 N. Y. Supp., p. 960) the following interesting situation presented itself to the Court:

In this case, a motion picture theatre ticket seller whose feet and legs became weak and numb and broke out in blotches and a rash, alleged this malady was due to changes in temperature resulting from turning off and on an electric heater in the ticket booth. While walking she fell on a sidewalk, and her fall was attributed to her weakness. For the injuries sustained in the fall she was awarded compensation on the theory that she was suffering from an occupational disease.

The majority court in this case, in deciding that the operator was entitled to compensation, rendered no opinion, but relied on an opinion in another case (Bishop vs. Corner & Pollock, Inc., 297 N. Y. Supp., 946) and indicated that the law as set forth in that case was applicable to this. In the Bishop case the following principles were set forth to be the law:

1. There must be a direct, casual connection between the condition under which the claimant works and the disease contracted.
2. The employment must be the proximate cause of the illness.

Thus, since the ticket seller obtained her weakened condition of the feet while working on her job, she could recover compensation even though she fell on a sidewalk many miles away from her place of employment.

This decision, far-reaching as it is, should point out a salutary lesson to every exhibitor of the importance of carrying Compensation Insurance. Many exhibitors no doubt feel that since the possibilities of ordinary accidents in their business are limited, the expense of this type of insurance would represent a waste of money, especially since most of the work done in the theatre is not of a very hazardous nature; however, in the opinion of the writer, such a policy is one of being "penny wise and pound foolish."

While Better Theatres cannot perform the service of legal counsel, inquiries from readers are invited and will be answered as fully as permissible.

SEATING the auditorium

". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

Rear view of auditorium of Oswego theatre, Oswego, N. Y., and top, cutaway view of combination coil and Marshall spring cushion construction.

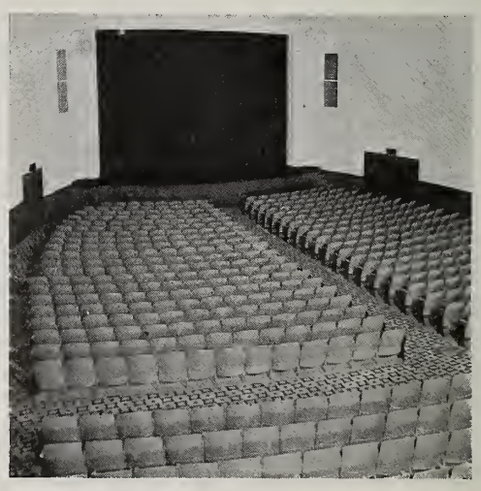
Luxury Cushion Combining a Coil and Marshall Spring

THE NEW Oswego theatre in Oswego, N. Y., the most recent addition to the Schine circuit, has auditorium seating with a two-spring cushion, the one spring being used to absorb the shock imparted to the other when the patron is seated, or changing position while seated. The chairs are by Heywood-Wakefield, and the cushion is of this manufacturer's combination coil and Marshall spring construction.

The coil springs (see accompanying photograph of the cushion, with the fabric lifted back) are at the bottom, and the Marshall spring rests upon it. A 22-gauge steel bottom board is used, with front edge turned up a ½-inch to protect the upholstery. The two-spring assembly is attached by means of a plywood bottom frame.

The lower tier of springs consists in twelve cone-shaped coils of tempered steel. The Marshall spring on top contains 68 separate coil springs in muslin sacks. The upper and lower spring assemblies are bound together with heavy twine. Over this assembly is placed the padding, which is long staple cotton and sisal fibre, and of course the fabric is stretched over this.

The Oswego theatre, designed by John Eberson, New York architect, has henna and blue tones running through the auditorium decorative scheme, which is colorfully carried out to an important degree in fabrics, and includes "black light" murals. The auditorium seating has henna in the backs, which are covered in velour; and blue in the seat cushions, which are covered in corduroy. The end standards also have these shades, with blue trim on a henna ground.



ILLUSTRATING PLAN AND DECORATIVE DEVELOPMENTS IN MODERN AUDITORIUM SEATING

Kleinhans Music Hall, Buffalo, N. Y.

Beechwold theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

RKO Trent theatre, Trenton, N. J.

■ Both the functional and decorative development of modern auditorium seating are well illustrated in the distinctive installations pictured above. Two show different approaches to the stagger plan; all indicate the contribution to decorative effect made by an assembly of today's streamlined forms. The Kleinhans Music Hall, the huge auditorium of which is seated with Ideal chairs, has the middle one of its five banks staggered with an uneven aisle line (all chairs same width). Both backs and seats in this installation are covered in Mohair (Corinth quality Chase Velmo). The detail view of the Beechwold seating shows the use of 30-inch chairs at alternate middle-bank row ends to effect a stagger plan with even aisle line. The chairs are International with mohair backs and simulated leather seats. To the plainly styled auditorium of the Trent theatre, Heywood-Wakefield chairs with new long back contribute importantly to the overall decorative effect. The chairs, which have coil spring-edge cushions with sisal-latex pads, are covered in mulberry striated (rib effect) mohair, while end standards are taupe.

TREATMENT CONTROL

LAST MONTH particular emphasis was placed on the fact that acoustical treatment may be required in some theatres even though the analysis shows that the times of reverberation already fall within desirable limits. The need for this extra absorption can almost always be traced to a faulty basic design. Physical limitations in the development of the theatre structure, or a lack of understanding of the fundamentals of good acoustical design may be the underlying cause.

Actually, there are a number of design features which make it necessary to install more acoustical material than mathematical computations would indicate as desirable.

Proportions and Cubage

Consider, for example, the theatre auditorium having a length greater than twice the width. Possibly the plot dimensions are such that only an auditorium of excessive length can be accommodated. Nevertheless, through a careful study of basic form, the designer might strive to keep the ratio of proportions nearer to desirable acoustic limits. The theatre having excessive length will invariably require more acoustical material than is desirable, unless the side walls are specifically shaped to break up undesirable reflections.

Another type of design which may require excessive material is the balcony house having a large cubic foot volume and considerable wall area within the space forward of the balcony edge. Unquestionably the cubage in this front section of the theatre could be more efficiently reduced in many new designs. The writer has observed that in some cases the distance between the upper fringe of the projected light beam and the ceiling at the front has been as great as 15 feet or more. Such heights are excessive from the acoustical standpoint, and it would appear certain, from the writer's experience, that they could be held within more desirable limits.

Side Wall Conditions

The side walls, between the edge of the balcony and the stage opening, are also very important in this type of theatre. The factors to be considered here are: Common methods of shaping which call for excessive materials; the proper shaping of these forward surfaces; and the distribution of treatment of these areas, if it is required, relative to the amounts installed in other parts of the house. These points will be discussed in the next issue of this column.

It Costs Less to Install Modern Seating

NEGLECT

DOING SO!

When even smash hits fail to click it's time to give thought to your chairs. Theatregoers know the comfort of modern seating . . . go where it is assured.

The comfort of Ideal Seating is your best insurance against such loss. No other improvement is given such patron-approval through increased patronage. And it affords a PERMANENT attraction, swells grosses every day, not just on the good pictures.

A large percentage of the fine new theatres and those which are modernizing have been buying Ideal Chairs for their expert engineering, superior construction, modern design and real comfort.

Write for literature and learn about their many exclusive features. There's an Ideal Chair to fit every budget . . . "built to excel, not just to compete."

Maximum Sales Appeal Stimulates Natural Appetite

An interview with Tracy Barham about Northio Theatres' methods

PATRONS MUST be well served," is the credo of Tracy Barham, general manager Northio Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Cincinnati, operating some eighteen theatres throughout Ohio, in Kentucky and West Virginia. Mr. Barham, an exponent of service-plus in the theatre, takes his confection vending seriously, which attitude is amply reflected in the vending methods and the class of merchandise dispensed in his concessions.

"The vending of confections and kindred products has come to be a highly important, if not practically indispensable adjunct of theatre operation, particularly in the 'B' and 'C' houses," Mr. Barham told this writer. "It is fraught with the same routine and specific merchandising problems and ethics as confront any other retail line, although, naturally, on a smaller and less complicated scale.

Theatre vending, to be successful, cannot be conducted in a shiftless, haphazard, careless or indifferent manner, he advises. "It is not just another unnecessary evil foisted on the exhibitor by popular demand, as so many exhibitors are wont to regard it. It is not something to be 'dragged in by the heels,' so to speak."

Mr. Barham does not expound any magic formulas or secret theories. Rather, he applies the principles of sound sales psychology. "Maximum appeal reduces sales resistance," he says. "Although the purchase of candy, popcorn or chewing gum seems to be more or less a natural impulse, especially among children, when entering a theatre, a person's appetite is stimulated to a certain extent by the attractiveness of the display. I think, too, that most patrons find the performance made more enjoyable by unconscious munching.

Approximately 85% of the sales in the Northio houses are made to children, Mr. Barham disclosed. Therefore he insists that the counters be of such height as to enable the youngsters to see the display and reach without effort for their selection. Experiments have proved that children like an open display, so that they can do their own choosing in a practical manner.

The limited "finances" of most children make it necessary to handle confections in the low price groups. The five-cent confection is easily the most popular, and 98% of the sales are at this price.

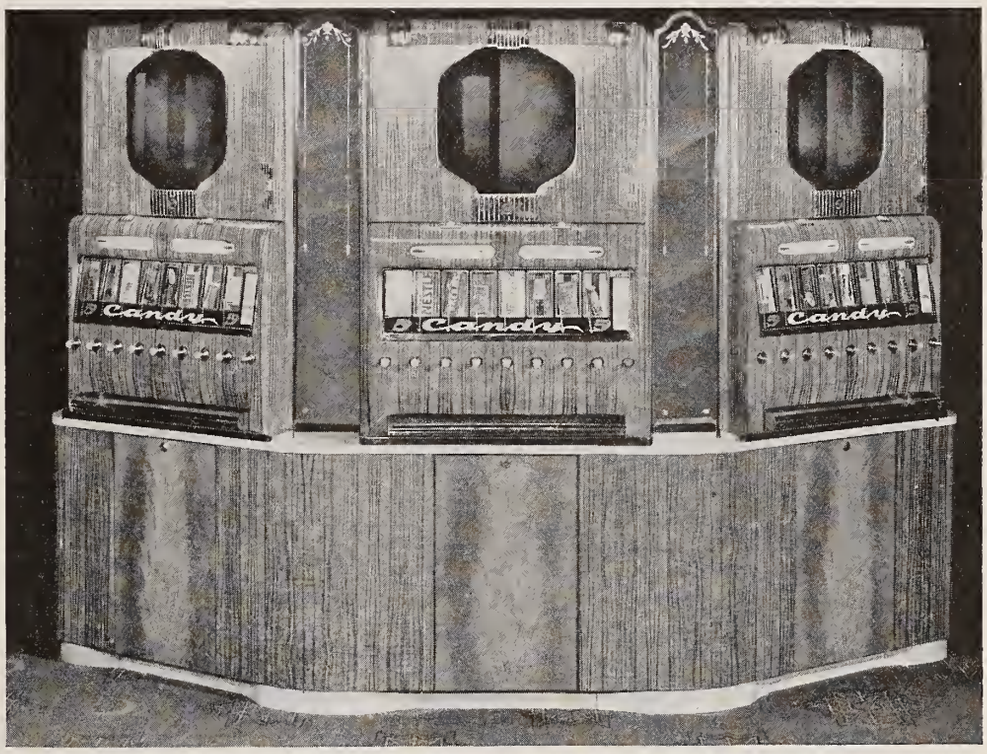
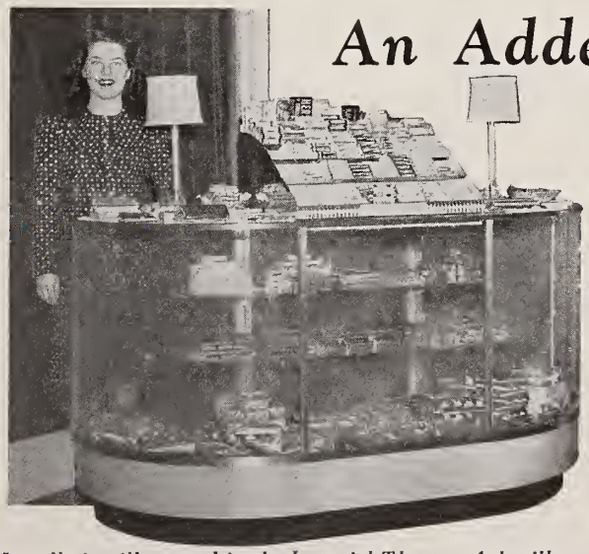
In his study as to what brands to handle, Mr. Barham finds that this can largely be determined by investigating sales in stores located near schools. This, he says, is a reliable index. However, when and if a certain confection moves slowly, he advises placing it in the most prominent position in the display and let the power of suggestion help make the sale. Naturally, the slow-moving item is replaced immediately when the stock is exhausted.

TRACY BARHAM



Since the "A," "B" and "C" theatres cater to entirely different clienteles, some brands of confections sell better at one theatre than another. In the "B" houses, attracting more of an element with less money to spend, and being attended more by children, quantity, rather than quality, seems to be the customer preference. Smaller pieces, but of a higher quality, find more ready sale in the "A" houses.

Referring to the salesgirl in charge of the concession, Mr. Barham emphasized the important part she plays in successful theatre vending. In selecting the person who will have charge of the concession, several important factors must be considered. She should be young, attractive and of pleasing personality; moreover, she should understand children, and possess the tact and patience necessary to deal with them, because when the youthful patron is undecided on the selection of purchase, or hesitates unduly, the salesgirl is the one to make suggestions or give advice, the same as is practiced in other lines of retail activity. Not only is many an additional sale made in this manner, Mr. Barham added, but the child appreciates it. Conversely, indifferent treatment discourages sales.



Popcorn, being the most profitable of all confectionery lines, is given special attention. "It must be carefully popped and properly seasoned to give it just the right taste. The popcorn machine is a potent selling aid. It must, therefore, be kept spotlessly clean and properly polished, not only from a sanitary standpoint, but because of the eye appeal which it exerts. The corn should be popped in plain view of the patrons as they enter the theatre. They like to watch the process. Moreover, the odor of freshly popped corn whets the appetite and thus creates a desire where none existed previously. Besides, the patron is thus assured that the corn is freshly popped. These angles may appear trivial, without any direct or tangible bearing on the scheme of selling."

The sales counter and popcorn machine, although never obtrusive, are invariably located where the patron must pass them when entering the theatre. Counters must be well-planned and modern, Mr. Barham believes. Proof of this attitude is found in the attractive counters just installed in the Palace and Rialto theatres, in Hamilton, Ohio, as shown in the accompanying photographs. Fronts of the counters are covered with Flexglas, new material consisting in small squares of thin mirror glass affixed to a flexible fabrics.—E. H. MAYER.

Most Practical Installation Of Carpet and Stage Drapes

Detailing methods that check wear and assure a good working job

IN THE INSTALLATION of carpeting in theatres, there are several methods that have been found from experience to be practical and money-saving to the exhibitor. Always at the entrance doors, where the carpet breadths end abutting the door saddles, a good grade of metal "nosing" protection should be installed. This metal "nosing" should also be installed at the edges of the carpet where a recess is provided for rubber mats at a drinking fountain or entrance door. In this way the tufts and seams of the carpet are protected from the heels and tips of the patrons' shoes; and the nosing also helps to cut down accidental tripping.

Care must be taken, however, in installing this metal nosing so that it does not extend beyond the normal height of the carpet tufts, or tripping of a patron will surely result. This "nosing" should be so installed that when it is fastened to the floor, the upper lip is compressed slightly into the carpet; also, that all exposed corners or edges on the nosing are slightly beveled. A good grade of metal nosing properly installed will add months to the life of the carpet, especially at the entrance doors where the wear is the hardest.

In laying the breadths of carpet, the seams should always run in the general direction of the line in which the majority of the patrons enter their seats or leave the theatre proper (see accompanying drawing). In this way the seams of the carpet breadths will last longer than if so laid that the heels and tips of shoes are constantly dug against the sides of the sewn breadths, which tends to pull them apart.

The laying of the breadths of carpet in the standee area should be from the rear wall to the standee rail, in the writer's opinion, not from side wall to side wall. There are several advantages in doing this. One is that in most cases there is less waste for matching, especially if the standee rail is on a sharp curve or radius; another, that a cross-seam can be avoided at the start of each aisle at the standee rail. There may be a little less sewing of seams required when the carpet breadths are laid out from side wall to side wall, but the advantages gained in laying the breadths from rear wall to standee rail make up the difference.

Avoid Aisle-Head Cross Seams

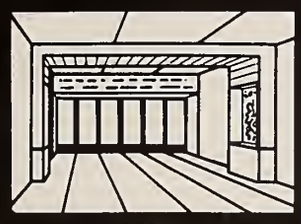
Cross-seams at the start of the aisles at the standee rail are very bad because at this point the heaviest traffic concentrates, and as the patrons start to go down the inclined aisle, they tend to dig their heels into the carpet, due to the slope of the floor. This action puts a heavy stress on the cross-seam, and in a short time after installation, it pulls apart, wears out quickly and is a constant hazard to patrons. Even with regular repairing or mending this evil will persist.

What must be kept in mind is that by laying the breadths. from rear wall to standee rail, the breadths do not always work out evenly in the distance between the aisles. The size of carpeting mostly used in theatres is the ¾-width, which is 27 inches wide. The 4/4-width is 36 inches wide. This means that the ideal width of an aisle would be a certain number of full 27-inch widths of carpet, so that it could be installed without using a fraction of a full width. However, in most cases this ideal distance is not found, the aisle widths being determined by the size and number of chairs in a row, with no regard for the carpet layout.

Standee and Cross-Overs

Whenever a fraction of a full width of carpet must be used in the standee area, in order to avoid cross-seams at the aisles, it should be laid in the area least noticeable to the patrons, especially when the matching of the design is not perfect. The laying of the carpet breadths in cross-overs should be in line with the breadths in the aisles. In this way the design will match, there will be less waste in matching, and fewer repairs than if the breadths are laid from aisle to aisle.

When picking up old and laying new carpet on the stairs, care should be taken that the wood strips are not split or rotted, also that the concrete treads are solid. When the strips or treads are in a weak condition, new strips should be rigidly installed, and strong concrete poured on the treads, otherwise the new carpet will constantly shift, tear loose and cause mishaps.



The exhibitor should not permit the carpet layer to use water to shrink the carpet in order to make the carpet breadths fit uniformly between the aisles in the standee

FOR SPRING RENOVATION WITH G-E MAZDA F LAMPS !

FRONT

AUDITORIUM

SPRING is a good time to brighten up your entire theatre, give it a fresh sparkle and a stimulating atmosphere with new lighting . . . especially with cool, efficient G-E MAZDA F (fluorescent) lamps that give more light per foot than other tubular sources practical for theatre use.

FRONT — Colored fluorescent lamps in combination with filament lamps offer a new way to get unusual effects from attraction letter panels. For maximum advertising value, make sure the front is sufficiently bright, has good contrast with competing displays, and that it has effective motion.

LOBBY—To create a distinctive atmosphere try using colored fluorescent lamps in coffers attached to the ceiling, in corrugated metal troughs below the ceiling line, or in a grid placed across the ceiling. A light that is complimentary to complexions may be obtained by using colored G-E MAZDA F lamps of equal wattage in these proportions: 6 gold, 4 pink, 3 blue, and 1 green.

FOYER—Illumination here need only be 3 to 5 footcandles and may be produced by warm and inviting colors from lamps in well-shaded wall brackets, ceiling fixtures, and from decorative floor lamps. The new "soft white" fluorescent lamp also lends itself for foyer lighting.

AUDITORIUM—Try using "black light" on fluorescent carpeting and wall decorations. Even old murals may be treated with fluorescent paints and lacquers and energized with a 100-watt or 250-watt mercury lamp. Fluorescent carpeting is now on sale in many designs and colors.

For further specific information on lighting various parts of the theatre, write General Electric Company, Dept. 166-BT-E, Nela Park, Cleveland, O.

¶ STAGE DRAPERIES

Even though the draperies for the stage masking is a small item compared to other decorations in a motion picture theatre, there are several things that the exhibitor should be aware of before the installation.

It seems that the front valance (the piece of drapery masking fixed at the top of the proscenium opening) is nearly always neglected. This valance is either too "skimpy" in relation to the stage opening and size of auditorium, or of improper design or color scheme. In some cases, the material for the valance is the same as the draperies used on the side wall decorations due to neglect in planning, or of misguided economy of installation.

The color and design of the valance should be entirely different from the rest of the auditorium. In other words, it should make the stage stand out in order to carry out the distinction from the rest of the auditorium by the architectural scheme. From experience it has been learned that the height of the valance should be at least 24 inches, and this should be determined by the light beam coming from the projectors to the screen, and the amount of masking required to hide the main draw curtain track from the first row of seats.

Main Curtain Overlap

The main draw curtain should always have the proper overlap at the center of the stage, and also when it is parted and pulled off to the sides of the proscenium. The overlap of each curtain at the center should be at least 12 inches when it is in the closed position; this distance will give a uniform, complete closing of the stage by the curtains without any ragged space showing the screen in the rear. This would be the case of a, say, 6-inch overlap, because the tie lines to the curtain track are not always perfectly even, and they also will give a little in time; also, the chain weights in the pockets at the bottom of the curtain might shift in usage and pull the edge of the curtain at an angle. The space to be allowed from the edge of the proscenium opening to the end of the track overhead should be at least 4 feet. This will allow the curtain to help mask the side of the proscenium from 18 to 24 inches, and in the other 24 inches the curtain will bunch behind.

It must be remembered that this curtain material is usually of about 50% fullness, and if the side of the curtain is, say, 14 feet wide, it will take a space of nearly 4 feet to bunch into when the curtain is opened. This allowance of 4 feet inside of the side of the stage proscenium opening will give needed space for the proper installation of the curtain control motor.

In some cases, only 24 inches are allowed for the bunching of the curtain and the installation of the curtain control motor. With this limited space, it can be readily seen that the curtain will not bunch properly and will extend into the sightlines of the audience, and also interfere with the projected light on the screen.

When the question of the cyclorama border masking between the main curtain and the screen comes up, there is frequently a difference of opinion. Some prefer the canopy, or "balloon," masking because of its cheaper installation, but the disadvantage of using this type of masking between the main draw curtain and screen is that it never hangs uniformly at the ceiling and is an easy dirt catcher. The best cyclorama border masking is one hanging straight from a pipe or wood batten which, when once adjusted, remains in place and does not catch dirt or dust, as does the "balloon" type.

The side-arm masking is the drapery installed at the sides of the screen on a line to the edge of the proscenium opening. When the screen is in quite a bit from the stage opening, these side-arms should be split in pairs for easy entrance of a person on the stage. These side-arm maskings should hang from pipe or wood batten, which in turn should hang by lines from the ceiling.

Putting in an M-G Set? Be Sure Floor is Okay!

THERE are some aspects of motor-generator set installation that are too often overlooked, and with painful results. One of these is placement of this equipment in a room having a floor not strong enough to carry the heavy load, or a room directly over the lobby, one overhanging the rear of the balcony or standee space, etc. An open space or room under the motor-generator set with only a 6-inch concrete slab between will definitely act like a sounding-board; in other words, the vibration and electrical hum of the set will be amplified.

The first thing to do is to make sure the floor is properly reinforced to carry the weight and "line" load of the particular generator to be installed. The M-G set should always be installed near the retaining walls of the theatre, with the motor side about 12 inches from the wall, and the generator or commutator side having a clear working area of at least 30 inches on all sides for removal of the commutator in case of an emergency, and for convenience and safety in maintenance.

When the generator set must be installed, due to plan and structural conditions, with a hollow space under the floor, a substantial base should be installed of concrete and cork—or better still, a patented fabricated base of iron rails and insulating material, to avoid noise.—J. J. S.

that a majority of them were willing to pledge their support to the project.

C. D. BRILES has taken over operation of the Newks in Burlington, Kans.

RAY WILSON, who owns and operates a theatre at DeWitt, Ark., has opened another house at Gillett, Ark.

ROY PEACOCK, manager of the Seattle office of the B. F. Shearer Company, Pacific Coast theatre supply dealers, has been transferred to the managership of the company's Los Angeles office, according to B. F. Shearer, president. Mr. Peacock, who has been associated with the Shearer organization for 21 years, succeeds C. FRANK HARRIS in Los Angeles. Mr. Harris has taken a six-month leave of absence to reside inland owing to the illness of Mrs. Harris. Mr. Peacock is in turn succeeded at the Seattle office by Roy Brobeck, who has been assistant manager and purchasing agent there.

L. W. WATTS has opened his newest theatre, the Haven, at Leesville, La. Mr. Watts also operates the Haven at Brookhaven, Miss.

W. M. FINLEY, owner of the Lyric at Norfork, Ark., has remodeled and redecorated his house.

HARRY GOLDFARB will erect a theatre to be known as the Bay theatre at National City, Calif. The new project will represent an investment of about $100,000.

MR. and MRS. JOHN WALTERS are remodeling their Park theatre in Huntington, W. Va., at a cost of $12,000. Architects and engineers engaged for the renovation project are F & Y Theatre Service of Columbus, Ohio.

W. P. WILSEY has sold his Avon theatre at George, Ia., to BERT KELSEY, operator of Bert's Place at Milford, Ia.

A compromise settlement of litigation over affairs of the National Theatre Syndicate, operating a theatre circuit in Northern and Central California, has been approved by the Superior Court in San Francisco. The compromise provided that title to the State theatre in Marysville, Calif., be transferred to the Syndicate, that the estate of MORGAN A. WALSH pay more than $20,000 to the credit of the stockholders, along with counsel fees of a similar amount. The litigation was launched three years ago.

C. S. DRAKE has completed the furnishing of his new house at Wichita, Kans., and plans to open it shortly.

JACK GREENBERG, Philadelphia exhibitor, will again take over the summer operation of the Avalon theatre in Avalon, N. J., on a deal with FRANK WINDELL, owner. Mr. Greenberg operates other resort theatres in Woodbine and Stone Harbor, N. J., and in Northampton, Pa.

The Fox Midwest circuit has purchased the Starr in Arkansas City, Kans. The house was formerly operated by S. M. WETMORE.

WILLIAM NASSER, manager of the Royal in San Francisco, was held up by bandits in the private office of the theatre as he was removing the weekend receipts from the safe. The bandits forced Mr. Nasser to give up $1,500 in cash.

A. PIERCE, operator of the Story theatre at Story City, Ia., has remodeled the projection room, making it fireproof. Further new installations include a new screen, sound equipment and projection apparatus.

ADAPTING LOW-INTENSITY TO 1-KILOWATT ARC: AN ANALYSIS

SINCE the introduction of the one-kilowatt arc lamp, the question has arisen: Cannot low-intensity sources be adapted to this type of carbon combination?

The proposal of William Lemke, projectionist of the Lake theatre in Antioch, Ill., is fairly typical of the suggestions that have been made, Mr. Lemke writes:

"Would it not be practical to use copper-coated suprex carbons in a low-intensity reflector lamp by inserting a suitable adapter, with two 15-ampere tubes in each rectifier? Would it also not be practical to use copper-coated suprex carbons and suitable adapters, if a condenser of proper focal length were installed? With such a set-up, it is my belief that the yellow tinge of the low-intensity light would be avoided and the effect would be very similar to the light obtained from one-kilowatt lamps."

General objections immediately suggest themselves; however, inquiry addresed to the National Carbon Company has brought the following response:

"We are inclined to believe that the set-up suggested will probably burn all right if a suitable resistance is incorporated in the circuit to give the voltage and current of the trim proper ratings. Even so, the low-intensity grid probably used requires 32 amperes and 55 arc volts for satisfactory operation, and it is questionable if the power source could be altered for satisfactory operation with suprex trim.

"Suprex carbon arcs require magnets to stabilize the arc. Likewise, burning rates are so different from those of low-intensity carbons that it might be necessary to install a completely new feeding mechanism."

This view is concurred by others intimately familiar with the practical workings of the projection arc lamp, with certain additional citations. For example, to convert a 30-ampere, 55-volt d. c. rectifier feeding a low-intensity reflector arc lamp, into a low-voltage rectifier supplying proper direct current for use with the new copper-coated suprex carbon, would necessitate practically rebuilding the rectifier to a finely engineered piece of new equipment in order to get the 40-ampere, 27.5-volt direct current really required for the one-kilowatt lamp.

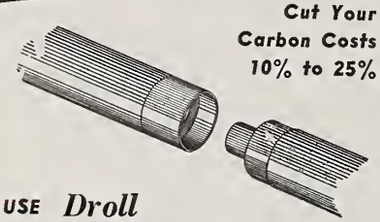
As experience shows, this type of lamp is very sensitive to current change, and if it is not left constantly at 40 amperes, the arc flame, and especially the rate of carbon feed, will be materially affected. It would be cheaper in the long run to purchase a rectifier especially designed for the particular lamp. Only by designing a proper ballast resistance in the d.c. line from the 55-volt rectifier would 100% efficiency and practicability be the result.

To convert the low-intensity reflector arc lamp into a lamp similar to the one-kilowatt, would involve major changes. First, the arc control motor and the low-intensity lamp would be affected by the change in current and voltage due to the specific requirements of the one-kilowatt arc. Then the inside of the low-intensity lamphouse would have to be changed, as the one-kilowatt arc requires a special reflector and carbon jaw holders.

At best, such a conversion would be a make-shift job and very doubtful as to final results when compared with the one-kilowatt arc having a specially manufactured lamphouse and rectifier.

An examination of screen renovation, suggested by a Spring crop of inquiries

IN THE LAST analysis, it is the screen that provides the picture—what the theatre has to sell. It is the final component of the technical system by which the art of the motion picture is created. In the light of its importance, it is one of the least expensive items in theatre equipment (the price today averages between 30c and 35c a square foot). Nevertheless, the screen is the victim of some of the most picayunish practices of theatre management.



Spring, with its renovation programs in the immediate offing, always brings inquiries about screen resurfacing. Briefly, the answer on screen resurfacing is given in these facts:

Screens are fabricated, not merely surfaced. The coating is laid in the fabric—the fabric is impregnated with the pigment and binder. There are many applications of the mixture, laid with a knife-like instrument, and each is "baked" in, so to speak, not sprayed. The result is a surface, with sound-transmitting perforations of diameters and depths scientifically adjusted to attenuation limits, that reflects about 85%, more or less, of the light from the projectors.

In resurfacing, a mixture is sprayed on a surface already deteriorated, not freshly adapted to impregnation. The only type of resurfacing mixture that can produce a surface comparable to the original (casein base) is not otherwise adapted to a screen, since it contracts rapidly while drying and causes cracks. In all others the base pigment hardens and the resurfacing coating fails to bind. The effect is only to cover up, without uniformity, a portion of the soil, which increases the light-reflection to some extent. But generally speaking, this improvement does not amount to more than 15%, so that the resurfaced screen is still far short of its original image-producing quality. And the rate of deterioration, because resurfacing is only a superficial

USE Droll PROCESSED NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY SUPREX AND *HIGH INTENSITY CARBONS

No short lengths of carbons need be thrown away. By the Droll Process, a carbon is so drilled on one end as to make a female opening; the other end is drilled for a male opening. The projectionist need only join the carbons together and clip them with a metal sleeve of pure copper.

ALL Droll PROCESS CARBONS REACH THE PROJECTION ROOM FULLY PREPARED AND READY FOR USE

When the positive carbon is about 3 or 4 inches long, you simply insert the next carbon in the milled-out part, slipping the copper sleeve over the stub. This copper sleeve matches EXACTLY the copper coating on the carbon. That's all there is to it. Replace it in the projector. It is consumed, sleeve and all, giving light of unaltered quality and intensity.

Every joint a perfect fit. No delay. No dirt. No machine to buy. No work to do.

Now used in over 600 theatres and spreading fast.

Droll Patented Process carbons are now available to users of the following carbon trims:

dirt-covering treatment, is much greater than that of a new screen.

But in addition to the light-reflection factor, there is sound attenuation to consider. An inquiry submitted on this point to a screen manufacturer of many years of experience, has brought the following response:

Keeping Bulk at Minimum

"The less the bulk and mass of a screen —that is to say, thickness and weight—the more efficient it is for sound. Provided that the fabric is absolutely opaque, so that no light is lost in the fabric itself, the less the thickness of the screen, the better it is so far as sound is concerned. It therefore follows that every ounce of paint that is added to a screen adds to sound attenuation, and if this attenuation is appreciable, it will be necessary to increase the amplification if a given level of sound volume is to be maintained.

"In addition to this, in order to prevent the loss of light by transmission through the perforation, each manufacturer endeavors to keep the number and size of the perforations as small as possible consistent with good sound transmission. In our own case, we endeavor to keep them just a trifle under the attenuation limits set by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, consequently any addition to the face of the screen by spraying process, or otherwise, will tend to reduce these perforations somewhat and thereby increase the attenuation, as well as interfere with the quality of the sound. As a matter of fact, as you have stated on several occasions, even the accumulation of a small amount of dust in these perforations will interfere to some extent with transmission of sound.

"It is of the utmost importance, if a screen is to be resurfaced, that the coating material be of the highest quality and possess the greatest possible covering power, in order that only a small amount of material be necessary to form a perfect coating.

Filling of Perforations

"Fuzziness in the perforations is usually due to dull punches and dies in the making of the screen; however, it also often is due to poorly constructed base fabrics. This fuzziness is extremely detrimental to the sound, and is particularly detrimental if the screen is to be recoated, because the spray attaches itself to those loose strands in the perforations, so that the perforations may be almost entirely stopped up even when a very thin spray coating is used. A screen with poor perforations (made with dull punches, or imperfectly spaced, or of the wrong size) is what the exhibitor is apt to get if he governs his purchase primarily by price. Keeping punches razor sharp, and high-grade fabric costs plenty; the exhibitor must pay for these things if he expects to get a screen that will transmit sound well.

"Another bad feature of resurfacing is that unless the work be done by an expert, using high-grade materials and having a spray gun with plenty of reserve compression behind it, the perforation in one area of the screen, particularly where the spraying overlaps, is likely to be closed up to a greater extent than in another area. Consequently, more light will be reflected by the area where the diameter of the perforations has been reduced more than in other areas. Under such circumstances the screen as a whole will appear cloudy and the picture will suffer accordingly.

"The effect of clogged perforations is principally noticeable on the high frequencies, and keeping the perforations clear of dust by regular use of a vacuum cleaner or blower nozzle is good practice—if followed more generally, it would materially increase the life of our screens and maintain somewhat their original attenuation rate.

"The improvement in sound after resurfacing certain screens is due to the fact that the screen is generally thoroughly cleaned before resurfacing, or because in the process of resurfacing air pressure enough was used to blow out whatever dust had accumulated."

Incidentally, it may be noted here (since this point has been raised among the inquiries), all of the sound developed by the loudspeaker system does not pass through the perforations. In fact, only a relatively small part of it does. The rest is propagated by the diaphragmmatic action of the fabric. But the small part transmitted by the perforations is enough to determine the directional effect of the sound output, influencing the auditory illusion.—F. H. R.

Cleaning the Walker Plastic Type Screen

SINCE INTRODUCTION of the plastic screen manufactured by the Walker-American Corporation under the trade term "PM" and distributed by National Theatre Supply Company, a special method of cleaning has been developed employing a liquid cleaning compound. A cellulose sponge is used to apply and remove the cleaner, one gallon of which is rated sufficient to clean one entire average screen, and a screen as large as 20 feet wide can be cleaned in about an hour.

The gallon of liquid is placed in a clean pail, and the cellulose sponge is soaked in it thoroughly. The screen should be cleaned in block areas about three to four feet square—areas as large as a man can reach conveniently without moving his body—as the cleaner must be wiped off before it dries. The cleaner is applied with the cellulose sponge, thoroughly wetting the entire block and washing the surface with the wet sponge. The sponge must then be rinsed out in the same cleaner and wrung out as dry as possible. The wrung out sponge is now used to wipe down the washed wet area. As the sponge becomes dirty, it must be rinsed out in the cleaner and wrung out again. Two or more complete wipings with a wrung-out sponge should remove all traces of dirt or dirt film from the surface.

The first block cleaned should be at the upper left hand corner. After washing, wiping and finishing this block, the ladder can then be moved and the next block alongside cleaned in the same manner. Continue the cleaning in block areas across the screen, then move down annd clean across from left to right again. Always overlap enough to make sure that no area is missed. Always finish one block before moving to the next. By cleaning the screen in blocks across, down and across again, working from left to right, the dirty cleaner has time to run down the back of the screen where it can do no harm to the cleaned area, and there is no danger of spattering cleaned areas with dirty cleaner.

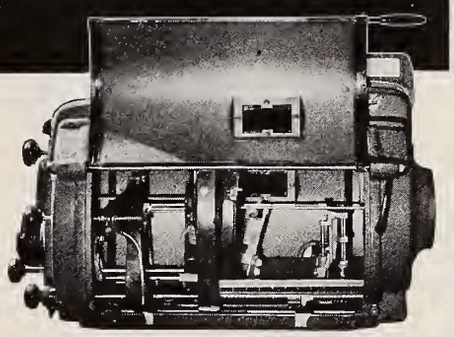
It is not necessary to touch the masking except to put a few old newspapers over the bottom mask to protect it against drips.

"The screen's hard, smoothly curved surface collects little dust," explains the manufacturer, "but the thin, almost invisible film of dirt which collects in the course of a few months should be removed before it hardens. If this film is left on too long, it will accelerate the rate of deterioration of the surface. For three years the screen should maintain its original efficiency if it is properly cleaned every four months."

New Rectifier Bulbs

THREE NEW types of Tungar bulbs have been brought out by the General Electric Company's Appliance and Merchandising Division, Bridgeport, Conn., one of which (No.99x46) is primarily designed for operation in rectifiers for direct current arc supply.

The output characteristics are slightly higher than for the Nos. 99x44 and 99x45 (see below). It is similar in application and operation to the GE No. 217283 Tungar Bulb which has been used for a number of years. The new bulb is a half-wave rectifier with a maximum rating of 20 amperes at 60 volts.



Another of the new bulbs (No. 99x44) is a full-wave tube with low pickup and arc-drop characteristics for power units supplying the exciter lamp and other applications, like radio relay supply, requiring outputs of from 12 to 25 volts d.c. at 6 amperes per tube.

The No. 99x45 is similar to the No. 99x44, but has a maximum current rating of 20 amperes, and is particularly adapted to boost-charging of 6-volt batteries. It can be used in any circuit where the full-wave d.c. output does not exceed 25 volts.

F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

Suggesting Changes in Standard Release Print

JACK PRATER of Palouse, Wash., has turned in a number of suggestions for improvement of the Standard Release Print to these columns. Coming from Prater, they come from a chap who is not only a projectionist who has diligently pursued knowledge of his craft and the processes associated with it, but who is also part owner of several theatres and in charge of projection in all of them. The opinions of you other men are invited concerning Brother Prater's suggestions for the SRP. He would change it as follows:

F. H. R.

"Make identification title and reel number as large and plain as possible. Avoid fancy or unusual style letters and numerals, as well as ornamentation. Also consider advisability of making these titles to read from the celluloid (back) side of film inverted from present position; this would allow reading title just as the film is drawn down from projector upper magazine. Projectionists should check reel numbers before every threading, and it is now necessary to turn the film around and hold it right side up to read the title.

"Make leader print density always light enough so that clear parts are not darkened. These leaders must be read with ordinary projection room lighting and frequently threaded without special pilot lights.

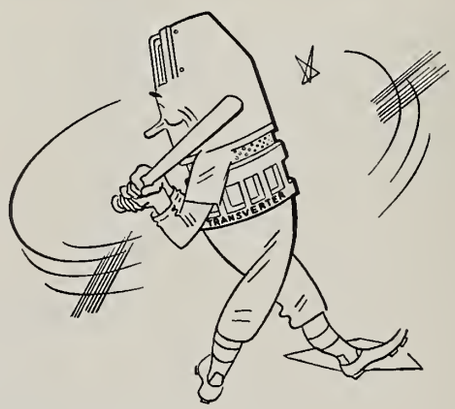
"Have clear frame lines of not more than 1/16-inch in width throughout both the threading portion and the opaque tailpiece at end of reel. Most frame lines are now ⅛-inch or more wide, making it almost impossible to frame the projector so as to prevent frame lines from showing on the screen should the leader of either incoming or outgoing reel be projected.

"Provide a curtain cue mark at least 6 feet ahead of the regular motor cue at the ends of subjects. The need of such a cue is evidenced by the repeated marking by projectionists of the last reels of subjects—features especially—ahead of the End Title or regular cue marks.

"It is also apparent from the number of markings appearing on prints that many theatres do not run the repeat casts at the end of features. Where such repeat cast titles are included, standard cue marks should be placed for making changeover at the end of the regular title as well as at the end of the repeat cast.

"Have exchanges attach two click patches at the motor cue on the end of each reel. Many of us can get along nicely with the standard cues just as they are, but there is no denying that click patches are a much more positive method of attracting the projectionist's attention—even if his eyes are taken away from the screen.

"It is very evident that most projectionists prefer them, because although we receive first-class prints, it is seldom they do not already have click patches on them. Even the first-run houses are putting them on. Some of these patches are entirely too generous in size, often extending into picture area, and sometimes even into the sound track. If we must have them, let's have the exchanges put them on in a manner which does not damage either screen image or sound.



"Should it be decided not to use click patches, then it would seem advisable to make the present cue marks more easily

Projection for Our Soldiers in Hawaii

COMES A LETTER from a soldier stationed in Hawaii. While not a projectionist, he writes, as a friend of the family, such observations as he thinks might interest me, and I pass them on, especially to you chaps who will probably be living under just these conditions before very long.

Our correspondent, Fred Bove, advises us that "the movies" are unusually welcome there since but few recreations are open to them. Because of sharks, swimming is permitted in restricted areas only. "Outside of these areas the bather is apt to find himself made into a shark sandwich—minus the bread!"

"While the boys' hopes were high upon arrival, there seems to be a dearth of grass skirts, except in store windows. Many young men are happy to sail for any island, since they envision a bit of the exotic. To date, however, the nearest they have come to realizing their dream is when looking at Hollywood pictures.

"The 'theatre' in this particular camp," our friend writes, "is outdoors and each man is expected to bring his own chair—the same consisting of most anything he can get hold of that can be made to serve the purpose. One theatre (there are two) uses Holmes projectors, equipped with Western Electric sound; the other sports DeVry projectors and RCA sound. The latter uses incandescent light source for projection, the other arc lamps. Both theatres have a 65-foot projection distance. The projection room is immediately over the projectionist's living quarters, which, incidentally, are 16 feet square and made of raw lumber."

Sergt. H. I. Walker, projectionist.

The projectionist our friend interviewed was Sergeant H. I. Walker, who attended the Navy School for Projection in 1931 and has, I believe, been handling projection equipment in the army ever since. The other projectionist is Corporal H. J. McDevitt—who, by the way, is the "proud possessor" of a Bluebook of Projection. Considering the equipment these men are supplied with and the conditions under which they work, they are doing a good job to make the "exile" of their comrades more bearable. It is far from an easy job to get a good screen image under the conditions they have to put up with. The entire camp has only two generators, with an output of 90 amperes, and this must serve the needs of a three-mile-square, thickly populated area, including the two theatres.

A "Movie" with a Moral For Too Many Theatres

IT IS INCREDIBLE but true that there is still equipment in American theatres to suggest the bit of entertainment that I present below. It is offered in a "scenario" from the hand of Lou Friedman of the National Theatre Supply Company. Mr. Friedman's motive may not be those of pure art, but the results are altogether amusing—though to the chaps struggling with antiquated equipment it may bring a sympathetic tear or two! With that introductory speech, I present Mr. Friedman's latest opus—

GENERAL ELECTRIC

The scene opens with a long shot of a modest street in a modest little Middle Western town. The time is about ten o'clock in the morning on a Saturday in May. The camera pans along the street, picking out the middle-class little homes, housewives on the porches with their hair pinned up in towels, sweeping, dusting, and shaking out rugs. There is a cheerful chirping of little birds. Children are playing, riding bicycles, pushing scooters, laughing and shouting joyously. On the housewives' faces there is happiness and content. But the moving camera continues on past this peaceful scene to another modest house on the street. Here no happy housewife is on the porch; no frolicking children; no birds. An air of impending doom hovers over this cottage. Let's get it over with quickly—it is the home of Horace Auchmutty.

The camera stops, moves closer, focuses on the second-floor bedroom window, and gradually moves in. We next cut to a medium long shot of the bedroom itself. One of the twin beds is unoccupied, but as the camera cuts to a close shot, we see on the other bed the outstretched figure of Horace Auchmutty himself, lying wide awake, staring at the ceiling. Horace, if we haven't mentioned it before, is the chief—and only—projectionist of the Idle Hour Theatre. (The "Idle" also describes many of its seats.) Horace's face is the face of a condemned man. The door opens and Mrs. Auchmutty, Horace's wife, comes in.

MRS. A.—Horace!

(Horace does not answer. He continues to stare at the ceiling.)

MRS. A. (Louder, this time)—Horace! It's time.

HORACE—Go away.

MRS. A.—Please, Horry, don't take it so hard. You know you've got to do it.

HORACE—I can't stand it any more.

MRS. A.—You wait. Things'll get better.

HORACE—When? When? It's more than I can stand.

MRS. A.—Poor Horace. I know it's terrible, but you'll have to go through with it. Now please get up. Breakfast is ready.

With a look of sympathy for her unfortunate Horace, Mrs. Auchmutty goes out. Horace finally decides to get up. He throws the bedcovers off and sits on the side of the bed for a moment, his head in his hands. Poor Horace is a very tragic figure. Finally he arises, heaving a deep sigh. He puts on his bathrobe and goes out. The camera cuts again to a staircase in the house and Horace's feet coming slowly downstairs.

The next shot is that of Horace eating at the kitchen table, while his wife is bustling around, doing her best to maintain a cheerful attitude in the face of the tragedy overshadowing her husband. Somehow or other, Horace, a healthy and vigorous young fellow, stows away a pretty fair amount of bacon and eggs, toast, jam, and coffee. He is, however, unresponsive to the conversation of his wife. His face is set in serious lines and his thoughts are far away . . . obviously occupied with the tragedy he must face.

At last Horace finishes his coffee, puts on his coat and hat, and prepares to leave. Mrs. Auchmutty comes up, throws her arms around him, and kisses him.

MRS. A.—My poor Horace. (She pats his back.) Maybe you'd like to have me go with you? I'd be glad to walk down there with you.

HORACE—No. What good would that do? I've got to go through with this myself . . . goodbye!

The camera cuts to the outside of the house to pick up Horace coming down the porch. It pulls back in front of him, focusing on his face, set in grim lines. A vision of what he must endure makes him put his hand up before his eyes to shut out the horrible picture.

Horace is now walking pretty quickly, and suddenly, up and under the scene comes the sound of a pendulum ticking furiously. The camera cuts to a shot of an actual clock with the pendulum swinging. The ticking is loud, keeping time with Horace as he plods along.

Horace turns the corner, walks down another street, then turns still another corner. He looks up suddenly, and then, because of what he sees, he stops. The ticking of the pendulum also stops. Horace shudders, straightens his shoulders, then resumes walking, but his steps are very slow. The sound of the pendulum slows up. The camera drops to Horace's dragging feet, then moves up to his staring eyes. The camera shifts ahead of Horace, panning down the street until it picks up the object at which Horace is staring. It is the marquee of the Idle Hour Theatre, where Horace works. Then the camera comes back for a close-up of Horace.

HORACE (to himself)—I've got to do it. I've got to go through with it.

Again the camera drops to Horace's feet, the dragging feet of a doomed man. The ticking of the pendulum is still heard, in time with Horace, as his feet carry him down his last mile. The camera comes back to Horace's set face, then cuts to a prison scene and a shot of a condemned man ready for the chair, with a priest in front and guards holding the unfortunate convict's arms as he falters down to that little green door. Then, back to Horace's face again. A shudder passes over it and he closes his eyes.

HORACE (to himself)—I can take it. I can take it, if I have to. I'll think of Jimmy Cagney. What was that picture? Angels With Dirty Faces. That's it. Yeah, that's it, that's the one. Rocky Sullivan, that's who he was. He wasn't scared, Rocky wasn't. He wasn't scared.

The pendulum sound is louder now, as the camera again cuts to the shabby front of the Idle Hour Theatre, now no more than 50 feet away. Back to Horace's feet comes the camera. It follows them down that last stretch to the theatre. The camera moves up a little, showing Horace going through the entrance, then focuses on Horace's back as he walks slowly through the lobby and turns to go up to the projection room. Horace grasps the stair rail, exerts all his strength to pull himself up.

HORACE (whispering hoarsely to himself)—A razor blade. Yeah, a razor blade. No splicer. Condensers cracked. Got to clean them. Rectifier bulbs won't burn right. Got to kick the rectifier to start it. Don't forget the new wire for the upper magazine door. Won't stay shut. Trouble. Trouble all the time.

Suddenly now, the camera shows Horace face to face with the partly open projection room door. Horace stops. The pendulum sound stops. Through some queer trick of lighting inside the projection room, the shadow of the projectors is a huge elongated form on the wall nearest Horace. The shadow has a queer and ominous shape. Horace stares at it. His face shows that it reminds him of something terrible. The camera cuts to the prison scene again, with a shot through the open door of that little room. There on the wall is a similar shadow, terrifying in shape. Back again to Horace comes the camera, to his frightened face, to his hands wildly waving the shadow away.

HORACE (shouting)—No! No! I can't. I can't take it any more! I can't work with that old broken-down Powers projector any longer! It's old. It's older than I am. It's falling to pieces. I can't! I can't work with it. I can't work with that old Powers! I can't, I can't. . . .

I mount the stage to suggest a good round of applause for the author. There is more than one actual projectionist in Horace's shoes. The difference is that they are showing more courage than Mr. Friedman's hero demonstrates. . . . But I wonder if Horace's way wouldn't be better!

YOUR CUSTOMERS APPRECIATE THE BEST

The name "Bausch & Lomb" on your projection lens is your guarantee of the finest precision-made optical instruments.

That's why leading theaters all over the Americas use B&L Super Cinephor Lenses. For years they have been noted for more screen brilliance and images of greater definition. Now, with the new coated projection lenses, image contrast is still further improved, and the focus sharpened by cutting down reflection and increasing light transmission.

Reducing Chatter from Tension Shoe Pressure

IT WAS GRATIFYING to receive a letter the other day from Dan Negrette, Jr., projectionist at the Sultana theatre in Williams, Ariz., offering his thanks for a suggestion that has got rid of the trouble he was having with the running of new prints. In this case, the suggestion was not printed, but mailed to Brother Negrette, and I now recall that the reason this was done was that the proposed method, which came from E. H. Rousseau of the Allen theatre in Buford, Ga., was one which should be suggested only to projectionists skilled and conscientious enough to use it safely. Writes Negrette:

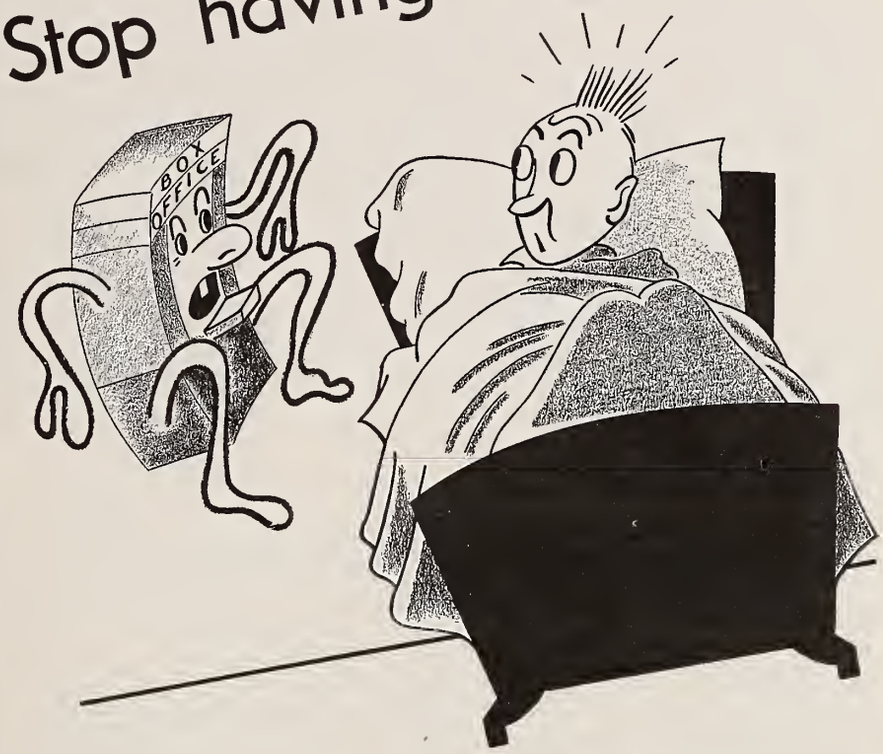
"I proceeded to experiment with Rousseau's suggestion to place very thin brass washers between the trap and aperture shaft slide, thus releasing pressure on the tension shoes, and it actually reduced to a great extent the 'chatter' we were experiencing in running new prints. However, I found it impossible to get rid of it all without sacrificing steadiness of the picture.

"The suggestion was greatly appreciated. It shows the eagerness of fellow projectionists to help each other solve problems. More power to you and your columns in BETTER THEATRES."

Assuming the projectionist to be careful, the washer method is worth a try.



What the Audience Owes the Theatre!

I STOPPED IN at the University Theatre in Cambridge, Mass., recently, bent on a visit with the manager, Stanley Sumner (only to find that for once he had taken an evening off and had departed a few seconds before my arrival). I once went into a rave over this particular theatre because of its absolute immaculateness as a whole, and in the projection room in particular. Friend Sumner and his projectionists boasted that anyone could sit on any part of their equipment and come up with not a spot of dirt or oil. Now, after all these years, and on an unannounced visit I expected to catch the entire staff napping. Not so. That same spotlessness still exists.

I sat down and saw a most interesting picture—"Flight from Destiny," which was admirably presented. But this theatre is located fairly near Harvard University and draws the students. While the picture was about the best of its kind I ever saw, it was completely ruined by mismannered patrons. In the past I have roasted theatres from practically every angle; now I have a new "bug." One of these fine days I shall sit me down and rip off a five page article on what the audience owes to the theatre, instead of what the theatre owes to the audience. [Hope you get it printed, Butch!—ED.]

Communications for F. H. Richardson will reach him if addressed to him either at BETTER THEATRES, Rockefeller Center, New York . . . or at No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

Stop having Nightmares

You're bound to have a guilty conscience and an anemic box office until you give your patrons high intensity projection. Get right with the world, see your Independent Theatre Supply Dealer about Strong Utility One-Kilowatt Arc Lamps. The Strong Electric Corp., 2501 Lagrange Street, Toledo, Ohio.

Best Automatic Slide Projectors

Extensively used in theatre projection booths, theatre lobbies, and on rooftops with outdoor screens. The 500-watt model accommodates ten standard size (3¼" x 4") or smaller slides, the 1000 and 1500 watt models handle twelve. Powered by heavy duty motors.

Come ready for use completely equipped (except lamp bulb) with an easily focused mirror (which obtains maximum efficiency from the lamp source), approved cord and control switch, and any focus objective lens from 6" up to 36".

"Best" Hand Operated Slide Projectors also come in three sizes. See them at your dealers or write direct for literature.

What's behind the Gossip?

Once a year the talk about a motion picture gets around the country so fast that the public knows an unusual film is on the way even before seeing it. Here's one that's already being discussed among the most important pictures of 1941. "Orchids to Joan Crawford in 'A Woman's Face'," writes Walter Winchell to the nation. "Sneak previews indicate it's Joan Crawford's greatest personal triumph," says Jimmie Fidler's column. Another triumph by George Cukor, director of "Philadelphia Story." Screen play by Donald Ogden Stewart and Elliot Paul. Produced by Victor Saville. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture.

"KANE"—A NOTION

THE current astonishment of the world of the screen is "Citizen Kane." The most astonishing aspect of that special manifestation is that it is astonishing. As cinema it is remarkable chiefly because pictures are so rarely remarkable. It is being hollered and whooped about by some critics, and taken mildly by others. The younger the critic the higher the excitement. Viewed objectively by an experienced viewer of the screen, there comes the question, a once famous line from a once famous play called "The Tavern" which epitomized: "What's all the shootin' fur?"

Careful examination of the analytical attentions of the many and able critics seems to discover that, while they have been looking to camera technique, into potential issues of biographical annoyance to "a certain publisher," and enjoying excitement over various kinetics of execution and concept, they have also overlooked the one basic element—this picture was made by a man who wanted to make a picture, tell a story, say something, and whether he really had something to say or not. The fact is he actually had nothing to say, but he had a most exciting time saying it. It is certainly "much ado about nothing," and about as conclusively lacking in end-effect as "Fantasia," which is another picture made by a young man under the impression that he was saying something about something, or everything. The excitement is in the telling, and not in what is told.

The final climax of both shows is so absent as to suggest Mr. Barnum's sterling legend: "This way to the Grand Egress." Remember, though, Mr. Barnum sold a lot of tickets.

The great aspect of "Citizen Kane" is that it radiates the enthusiastic interest of the young man who made it. He had to be very young to do it; otherwise the tale which beguiled him into all that creative activity would have bored him. Actually his story is the vivisection of an ego—and no actor can be on safe ground in such an adventure. It is impossible to be sure whether the ego being explored is that of the character played or of the player.

The general bepuzzlement represented has been crystallized in the preliminary display advertising of the show which seems to have only one message, "It's Terrific." Terrific what? Shortly there'll be a public box-office judgment on that.

THE picture, for the clinical audience of showmen, will represent an interesting exploration of the coverage of that speculative medium called "word of mouth." None of the advertising, and none of the official promotion, can take cognizance of the real and personal issue which has given the subject a special sort of fame, restricted mainly to New York and Los Angeles, stirred on the question of what bearing the picture might have on the life story of Mr. William Randolph Hearst, and what he might do about it. The Hearst issue is not advertising copy—so far. How much does the big national motion picture audience know about all this and the implications? Almost nothing. So we have an experiment in propaganda osmosis. If a wide public gets the notion that "it's terrific," it will be because it is. And if it is terrific it will be because of the verve, elan, pep, dynamics, ambition and ego of an actor—Mr. Orson Welles.

Please consider that no indictment of Mr. Welles. He is what he ought to be, a young fellow full of ginger. The screen owes much of its tradition to the likes of him. Mr. Welles rates as quite as reasonable and quite as intelligent as Mr. D. W. Griffith making his "Intolerance." Mr. Welles with his "Citizen Kane" is on quite as sure ground as Mr. Erich von Stroheim with his "Greed" and the still-born "Queen Kelly," a much more debated picture.

Mr. Welles, no matter what else he has done in "Citizen Kane," has given the production community of Hollywood "a turn." The consequences there will be not revolutionary, because his contribution is not revolutionary, but leavening. His discoveries are re-discoveries, but new for now. His picture will encourage the workers to consider their tools with a fresh eye—merely because he is one of the freshest ever.

ED PORTER

THE passing of Mr. Edwin S. Porter, our friend and yours, takes from us one of the most protean of personalities in all the complexly dramatic story of the evolution and rise of the screen. As recorded in last week's issue and widely in the lay press, much of Mr. Porter's fame has been currently written in his exploration of the art of narration with "The Great Train Robbery," of 1903, which many the year ago your editor elected to designate as the first "story picture," as the camera was extending its capacities beyond mere recordings of events. It so chanced that Mr. Porter was to continue in production service into the feature era and the direction of Mary Pickford for Mr. Adolph Zukor's Famous Players.

But, also, significant to every showman, is the fact that there is something, too, of able Ed Porter in every projection booth in America. He was the technician who so predominantly helped carry over projector evolution and perfection from that old Edengraph, built by the late Mr. Frank Cannock, Scot and one time mechanician for the Singer sewing machine over there, to the great machine known as the Simplex, and with influences that extended in all directions into projector design.

Probably no other man in all the annals of the art went so far from the very beginnings into a period of development, with so much capacity, rooted in a demand for perfection. He made cameras, he made pictures, he played pictures, he sold pictures, he got rich several times and never took it seriously. Also he never went broke.

Occasionally forces of hunger-driven ambition pushed at him, and he stepped aside and let them pass.

"I'll live long enough, and happily, to see them harvest their headaches," he once observed to your editor. He did. Also observed Ed: "This business of ours includes a lot of funny fellows—some of them just as lucky, and just as funny as I am."

Edwin S. Porter made his mark, lived long, prospered, and the motion picture as both art and industry is the better for what he did and gave. He made things work, just because he wanted them to work.

—Terry Ramsaye

This Week in the News

Hide and Seek

NOTWITHSTANDING the release, Tuesday, to the Hollywood press, of a letter dated April 28th, from Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Associated Motion Picture Producers, to studio heads, in Hollywood, requesting that "every step be taken to prevent releases of feature pictures prior to a preview for the Hollywood press," 22 correspondents and columnists, headed by Douglas Churchill, Hollywood correspondent for the New York Times, have reiterated their intention of continuing to cover sneak previews, when and as the time and place of such screenings can be ascertained. The correspondents five weeks ago protested the timing and other aspects of the preview system as administered by the Studio Publicity Directors Committee.

Columbia's "Washington Adventure," and Paramount's "Buy Me That Town," are the two latest incidents of sneak preview coverage by the correspondents group in tryout screenings outside Hollywood, in contravention of a custom by which the press passed by test showings of product in the editing stage.

Meanwhile studio publicity departments and members of the protesting press group continue a sort of hide-and-seek competition with studios intensifying efforts to maintain secrecy regarding the place and time of test showings, formerly announced by most of them.

Trouble on Latin Front

IN Washington, U. S. State Department circles, Wednesday, said that no action was expected to be taken on the attack on Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., U. S. "cultural ambassador" to Latin America, appearing in a recent issue of a Buenos Aires magazine, on the occasion of Mr. Fairbanks' present travelings below the Rio Grande.

No particular significance was attached to the article, it was said, any more than would be given an article in a United States publication critical of some representative of a foreign power.

It was recalled that, from time to time, the German Ambassador to Washington has filed protests with the State Department regarding articles in the American press, each time to be told that the United States Government imposes no censorship and makes no effort to control either the news or views of writers. Granting a similar freedom of speech to other countries, it was suggested, it would not be appropriate for Washington to protest the Buenos Aires article unless, of course, the matter became an issue officially.

Mr. Fairbanks was appointed by the President, it was explained in Washington because he has long been deeply interested in the improvement of cultural relations among the Americas. A number of persons of prominence in various fields have been similarly designated to make similar tours.

Although the actor conferred with Secretary of State Cordell Hull before he left for South America, it is understood his activities are entirely separate from those of officials of the State Department, but that diplomatic representatives abroad have been instructed to afford him such assistance as he may require. He is being accompanied by Edward H. Robbins, special assistant to Nelson Rockefeller, who is said to be thoroughly familiar with the language and customs of Latin America and is liason officer between Mr. Fairbanks and the embassies.

Young Mr. Fairbanks is a party-and-night-club friend of the young Franklin Roosevelt.

Banning of Universal's "Argentine Nights," last Saturday, by officials in Buenos Aires, after an opening-night public demonstration against scenes purporting to show Argentine types and customs in an unfavorable light, was condoned, Wednesday, in Washington by Representative John E. Rankin, (Dem., Miss.), who declared, "The picture does not represent the feelings of the American Congress or of the American people toward the friendly people of Argentina."

Relative, but written in another connection, appears this expression, from John Hay Whitney, Chairman-coordinator on U. S.-South American Cultural Relations, in a foreword he has written for the Latin-American section of the forthcoming issue of Motion Picture Almanac:

"Anti-American and Anti-Free forces, well supplied with funds from abroad, are working ceaselessly to create international suspicion and distrust, and to divide us so that we will be incapable of offering concerted resistance when, as seems imminent, our inescapable 'tag' dawns."

Coralling the Kids

ADDED matinee attractions aimed especially at juvenile patronage have become a source of important business at the Famous Players Canadian Broadway Theatre, in Vancouver, B. C. Under the direction of Frank H. Gow, managing director, and Eddie Zetterman, resident manager, stage games and quizzes previously put on from time to time are now found boxoffice worthy for regular weekly featuring. Details of games and quizzes found popular are reported by Zetterman in Managers' Round Table which starts on page 61.

Retake or No Seal

REFUSING to overrule a decision of Joseph I. Breen, head of the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, that no code seal would be given "The Outlaw," a Howard Hughes' production, unless changes were made to conform to PCA standards, the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America last week in New York told Russell Birdwell, publicity representative for Mr. Hughes, that the film would not be approved in its present form.

The decision of the MPPDA board was reached after a special screening of the film in New York.

A number of scenes will have to be photographed again before the picture can be resubmitted, it was reported, because the code violation charged concerned the costuming of Jane Russell who plays the feminine lead in "The Outlaw."

Exhibitor Problems

EDWARD L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, visiting New York from his home in Columbus, Miss., on Wednesday, made a 10-point blueprint of the organization's annual convention, set for Los Angeles, June 9-12, to steer through convention committee procedure and floor discussion the exhibitor problems and convention conduct of the day, as follows:

Committee on Convention Credentials and Rules, Edward M. Fair, chairman; Resolutions, Herman M. Levy; Film Buying Problems and Operating Policies, Arthur H. Lockwood; Conciliation and Arbitration, A. C. Hayman; Public Relations and Community Affairs, Mitchell Wolfson; Legislation and Taxation, Roy L. Walker; Music Tax and Copyright, J. M. Hone; National Defense Activities, Lewen Pizor; Labor Relations, Fred Wehrenberg; Radio and Non-theatrical Competition, R. R. Biechele.

The reelection of Mr. Kuykendall for an eighth presidential term appears a certainty. All other officers are slated for reelection. One office is open, that of general counsel, vacated by Frank C. Walker on his appointment as United States Postmaster General.

US Official Hits Taxes

UNEXPECTED support came Wednesday to exhibitors' complaints against contemplated Congressional "multi" taxation of theatres for war-and-defense, when Leon Henderson, Administrator of the U. S. Office of Price Administration, an agency close to the White House, declared that further taxing of the theatregoing public was a poor method of raising revenue.

Mr. Henderson has knowledge of the problems of the motion picture industry through his Governmental observations of the business while with the National Recovery (Blue Eagle) Administration, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Temporary National Economic Committee, and other Federal agencies.

Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, holding hearings on proposals for new taxation, he declared Wednesday that admission tax increases and levies on other services and goods which do not compete with the National Defense program were "deflationary, unnecessary and highly inequitable."

Meanwhile Congress was hearing from exhibitors in protest against the proposed five per cent tax on film rentals to collect $12,000,000 (see page 16).

The Canadian Government on Wednesday notified exhibitors that the new 20 per cent war tax on theatre tickets must be paid weekly, based on the previous week's gross income, that collections will start at once, and, for the first time, the Canadian Department of National Revenue will require the licensing of each theatre, licenses to cost $2.00 a year.

Theatres in Toronto hereafter must have licenses for the national, provincial and municipal governments, with fees payable to all three.

Breen, O'Connor, et al.

WHEN George J. Schaefer, RKO president, took to the air by TWA Stratoliner Tuesday night, from New York, for Hollywood, he had (1) the unanimous authorization of the RKO board of directors to proceed with negotiations for the appointment of Joseph I. Breen as administrative head of the studios; and, (2) the accepted resignations of John J. O'Connor and Fred Meyers as RKO Circuit operating head and film buyer-booker, respectively. Both join Universal Pictures.

Mr. Breen would move from the post of Administrator of the Production Code as soon as his successor has been designated. Illness of Will H. Hays, at St. Luke's Hospital, in Chicago, has delayed an appointment. Mr. Hays is scheduled to leave the hospital this weekend, probably going to Hollywood.

Announcement of the acceptances of the O'Connor and Meyers resignations was made Wednesday at the RKO home office, with no indications given as to successors. It was generally believed that the circuit would continue, at least for a while, with the present operating setup.

Clarification of the positions of Mr. O'Connor and Mr. Meyers in Universal was expected to come by the weekend with the return to New York of Nate Blumberg, J. Cheever Cowdin and other Universal officials, from Hollywood.

Theatre Television

STRENGTHENED by the Government's "go ahead" signal for commercial television, given last week-end, as reported on page 30, RCA, on Friday night, was ready to show theatre television in actual operation, for the first time to exhibitors, as potential equipment buying customers. RCA's demonstration, at the New Yorker Theatre, New York, was also by way of introducing wide-screen television to the film industry at large, through its corporate and managing executives, and to stage producers and advertising, radio and Government officials.

The first showing of RCA's theatre system, which projects a 15-by-20-foot picture, was held late in January for the Federal Communications Commission (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, February 1, 1941, pages 30-31). Following the demonstration Friday, RCA plans to market the $30,000 television projectors to theatres. RCA believes the motion picture industry should develop a program supply for theatre television, "before someone else does."

The Friday program, arranged with the view to impress exhibitors, is to include: Lowell Thomas; a round table discussion, featuring, among others W. G. Van Schmus, of the Radio City Music Hall; "The Parker Family" sketch; a televised newsreel; the Billy Soose vs. Ken Overlin prize fight from Madison Square Garden and songs by Lucy Monroe.

Among those who accepted invitations were the following:

"Fantasia" Starts

EXHIBITOR rentals for the general release of Walt Disney's "Fantasia," taken over by RKO, will be based "on an advanced road show scale," according to Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of RKO sales. Previously the picture was handled directly by Walt Disney, who installed his own Fantasound equipment in theatres for the initial opening. The film is being re-recorded for general release, minus Fantasound.

First of the RKO bookings of "Fantasia" will be the National theatre, Washington, for a run starting May 13th and at the Apollo, Indianapolis, on the same date.

First print of "The Reluctant Dragon," Disney combination of cartoon and color photography, his fourth feature cartoon, is due to arrive in New York Monday.

BLOCKS-OF-FIVE FIGHT REACHING THE STORM STAGE, WARNS ALLIED

Northwest Group Preparing to Resist Court Attack by Majors on Minnesota Law; Test Case Due in Minneapolis

Northwest Allied this week issued a warning to its members calling attention to the fact that like the William Tell overture, which has the movements "Dawn," "Storm," "Calm" and "Finale," the new Minnesota anti-consent decree law outlawing blocks-of-five sales appears now to have entered the "Storm" stage. In this the "Big Five," signers of the consent decree, whose selling under the approaching "new order" would be effected thereby, seemed in unanimous accord. Storm warnings were numerous as they joined forces in an effort to crack the constitutionality of the state law.

Minnesota will not enforce the law pending a court test distributors were advised Wednesday. The state's policy permits companies to resume selling of features, discontinued when the new law became effective. However, company attorneys said resumption of sales in Minnesota would await a formal notification from a responsible official.

Counsel for the major companies have been in frequent consultation at New York and it is understood that they will launch their first assault on the Minnesota law this week when they seek an injunction in Hennepin County Court, at Minneapolis, restraining the state from enforcing provisions of the anti-decree law pending a judicial test of its constitutionality. Minnesota attorneys will probably be hired jointly to represent the majors in Minneapolis.

Participation of the "Little Three," not committed by the decree to blocks-of-five, in attempting to overthrow the new law is yet to be determined. It is held likely, however, that United Artists, which customarily sells its picture on an individual basis, will join with the Big Five in attacking the law.

Claimed Unconstitutional

Probable basis of attacks on the Northwest Allied measure will be an argument before the federal courts that the arbitrary cancellation clause deprives distributors of property without due process of law. The statute will also be attacked on the ground that it presumes upon the regulation of interstate commerce. If there is no ruling on the anti-blocks-of-five law before September 1st, when decree sales become operative, the "Big Five" will petition Judge Henry W. Goddard at New York for suspension of the consent decree sales clause in Minnesota.

If the Minnesota law is upheld in the courts an exodus of major company exchanges from the state was foreseen. Plans to service the state's 485 theatres in 306 cities and towns from nearby points in Wisconsin and the Dakotas were under discussion by sales chiefs. Sales would be solicited by direct mail. The Minnesota theatres represent an annual income of approximately $5,000,000 to the eight leading distributors. Meanwhile sales efforts were virtually at a standstill in the Minneapolis area. Pending clarification of the law and the test of its validity sales efforts will probably be restricted to short subjects.

Allied Theater Owners of the Northwest this week decided to await developments after their victory in making the anti-block-of-five bill a state law. It had even announced that E. L. Peaslee, president, and Fred Strom, secretary, would make a statement following passage of the bill explaining its provisions to exhibitors.

During conferences on what such a statement would say, however, it was decided the matter should be dropped for the time being. The storm of opposition the bill aroused is believed to have induced Northwest Allied to conserve its forces for a fight against any attempt to wreck the law.

Observers at Minneapolis also were recalling the general Allied policy from which the bill sprang. The original plan was to introduce companion bills in the legislatures of the two Dakotas and Wisconsin. These were dropped to permit all Allied forces to be placed behind the Minnesota bill.

With the Minnesota proposal now law, and provided it is able to withstand court attacks, it is considered a certainty that Northwest Allied will put similar bills before the legislatures of neighboring states as soon as they convene. If passed they might disrupt distributor plans to operate in Minnesota on a "mail order" basis, servicing from across the border.

Tell Campaign Tactics

The Allied bulletin, summarizing the anti-decree victory also pointed out that over the Easter week-end, when the bill was pending in the Senate, every senator was contacted at his home by from one to three exhibitors, urging its passage. Governor Harold E. Stassen, in the interval before signing, received 400 telegrams urging his signature.

The message to Allied members also noted that Allied was instrumental in blocking and killing passage of a theater divorcement bill; daylight saving time bill; a bill permitting the Sunday night baseball; a bill banning ticket sales unless vacant seats are available at the moment of sale; a bill imposing a $1,000 occupational, and $1-a-reel tax on distributors; a censorship bill; a bill barring premiums, giveaways, etc.; a bill permitting parimutuel horse and dog-racing betting; a theater admission tax bill, and amendments to a proposed state sales tax bill eliminating its application to theater tickets already federally taxed.

CLOSE FIRST DEAL UNDER NEW LAW

The first sale of 1941-42 features under the new Minnesota anti-blocks-of-five law was closed by Republic Pictures Corp. of Minneapolis last week through Gilbert Nathanson, president. Andrew Severson, operator of the Empress theatre at Asakis, Minn., signed for the entire Republic output next year, with the contract subject to home office approval. The contract contains a 20 per cent cancellation clause and "is in complete agreement with the new law," Mr. Nathanson said.

The Republic home office confirmed the deal and announced that new contracts would also be drawn for the sale of the ten or a dozen pictures remaining on the company's 1940-41 schedule.

Writers Guild Threatens Strike

As the Screen Writers Guild resumed negotiations with producers for new contract, provisions were being made for preliminary steps toward taking a strike vote, as a result of the guild meeting last Thursday at which members expressed dissatisfaction with the progress of parleys.

The Guild board, following a hectic membership meeting, issued the following: "At the membership meeting of SWG last night, members expressed great dissatisfaction with progress of the Guild negotiations with producers and passed a resolution to the effect that they considered present writer demands as being extremely modest and reasonable and that further meeting of the membership of the guild be called to discuss advisability of taking a strike vote in the event demands are not reasonably met by producers."

Members during the discussion of the resolution pointed out other Guilds obtained satisfactory contracts through strike threats or strikes.

Thomson Takes AGVA Local

Ken Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, and vice-president of the Association of Actors and Artistes of America, assumed charge of the Los Angeles local of the American Guild of Variety Artists last week, with Kenneth Howard, local AGVA secretary, expected to turn in his resignation. Mr. Thomson placed Charles Durbin, SAG employe, in the AGVA office as his representative.

Meanwhile, W. R. Walsh, NLRB regional director in Hollywood, ruled last week that the Federation of Screen Cartoonists at the Disney Studio is a company-dominated union.

The local NLRB office on Tuesday filed a formal complaint and set a hearing for May 19th.

Gunther R. Lessing, attorney and vice-president of the Disney studio, denied at the hearing that the company controlled the federation and countered with a formal written statement saying the AFL Screen Cartoonists Guild, through its business agent, Herbert Sorrell, threatened to turn the Disney plant into a "dust bowl."

Eastman Directors Appoint Officers

Frank W. Lovejoy, former president and general manager of the Eastman Kodak Company was named chairman of the board by the directors at Rochester on Wednesday. He succeeds William G. Stuber who retired to the post of honorary chairman.

The director appointed Thomas J. Hargrave president of Eastman. He was succeeded in his former position as vice president and general manager by Albert F. Sulzer, former vice president and assistant general manager. Dr. Albert K. Chapman, assistant vice president, was also made assistant general manager and Milton K. Robinson was named secretary of the company. William F. Shepard succeeds him as assistant secretary.

ARBITRATION COSTING ALL SIDES AN AVERAGE OF $39.14 PER CASE

Report on First Three Months of Operation Shows Low Cost to Exhibitor; Time for Hearing Complaints Cut Down

The average cost of arbitration for the seven cases which were decided during the first three months of operation of the arbitration system established by the consent decree was $39.14, according to a survey made by the American Arbitration Association.

The average cost per case for filing fee and arbitrator was $23.50 and $15.64 for stenographic expenses, it was announced by Paul Felix Warburg, chairman of the administrative committee of the Motion Picture Arbitration System, in the first quarterly report on activities. The report was based on material gathered by J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and director of the motion picture tribunals.

First Case Cost $15.75

The total cost to the exhibitor in the Boston Case No. 1, the first to be heard, was $15.75. The exhibitor, Benjamin Gold, head of Paulston, Inc., operator of the Park in Nashua, N. H., won "some run" from the five distributors which signed the consent decree for that sum. The figure listed in the quarterly reported printed in the Arbitration Journal, to be published May 10th by the AAA is the actual cost of the arbitration and does not include any attorney's fees which the exhibitor might have paid.

It was pointed out in the AAA report, prepared from data assembled by Mr. Braden, that the average figure of $39.14 for each arbitration case was based on the first seven cases which were completed during the three months period and when more cases are heard the average may be found to be higher or lower.

Costs of arbitration to the complaining exhibitor in the seven cases decided in the first quarter were tabulated by the AAA as follows:

Case	Filing and Arbitrator's Fees	Stenographic Cost
1.....	....	$10.00	(Chicago I)
2.....	$20.00	63.75	(Chicago II)
3.....	30.00	....	(Phila. I)
4.....	22.50	26.25	(Wash. I)
5.....	20.00	5.00	(N. Orleans I)
6.....	12.00	3.75	(Boston I)
7.....	60.00	....	(Denver I)
	$164.50	$108.75

The report noted that the largest stenographic item, $63.75 was incurred in the first and only case to date carried to the three-judge appeal board set up in New York and included the additional stenographic costs required by the appeal.

Discussing costs of arbitration the quarterly report of Mr. Warburg and Mr. Braden said:

"In the first case heard in any tribunal, that heard in Boston and set forth at some length above, the total cost of the five parties—the exhibitor and four distributor defendants, amounted to $10.00 for the arbitrator's honorarium, and $7.50 for the attendance of a stenographer, plus the $10.00 filing fee paid by the exhibitor, or a total of $27.50. Under the arbitrator's award, his fee was divided among the five parties and by agreement between the exhibitor and distributors, the cost of the attendance of the stenographer was divided in half. Therefore, the total cost to the exhibitor in securing some run of pictures from all five distributors was $15.75. In addition, of course, he had to meet whatever charge his attorney made.

"In the first case in Washington, which concerned a clearance dispute and in which appeared the complaining exhibitor, two distributor defendants, and an intervenor representing three theatres in Baltimore, the hearings required five days, and the total cost amounted to $175.00; $20.00 of this represents filing fees, $50.00 for the attendance of the arbitrator on five days, and $105 for the attendance of the stenographer. The extent of the arbitrator's day in this case is worthy of special note. To accommodate the parties and counsel, the arbitrator—E. B. Prettyman, Vice-president of the Washington, D. C. Bar Association—conducted one hearing which lasted from noon until after midnight, and on other days, sat from ten in the morning until six in the evening. By the award of Mr. Prettyman and the agreement of the parties regarding stenographic expense, the costs in this case were also divided and the cost to the complaining exhibitor was $48.75."

The article in the Arbitration Journal said that at the close of the first quarter, April 30, 1941, a total of 56 cases had been filed, with the following territorial distribution:

Albany	2	Minneapolis	3
Boston	4	New Haven	1
Buffalo	4	New Orleans	3
Chicago	2	New York	10
Cincinnati	1	Oklahoma City ..	1
Cleveland	1	Philadelphia	4
Dallas	3	Pittsburgh	3
Denver	2	Portland	1

ARBITRATION CASES FILED TO DATE

The following is a summary of the arbitration cases filed to date:

Filed This Week:

Charlotte—One on Clearance
New York—One on Clearance
Salt Lake City—One on Clearance
Total in week 3

Previously Reported:

Clearance 38
Some Run 18
Withholding Prints 1
Total to May 7 60

Hearings Held This Week:

Albany Cases Nos. 1 and 2
Pittsburgh Case No. 1

Settled This Week:

New Orleans Case No. 3
Oklahoma City Case No. 1

On the type of cases it was said that 34 involved clearance under Section VIII of the decree; 13 some run, under Section VIk.

"Two cases were filed under Section X of the Decree, which will not become operative until August 31, 1941, under the provisions of Section XX of the Decree. These cases involve the refusal to license a specific run. The balance of the cases filed—seven in number—include more than one complaint, and hence involve more than one Section of the Consent Decree. Six of the seven, however, include clearance in addition to other complaints," the report pointed out.

The fact that 11 cases were settled and withdrawn during the first three months of operations was noted:

"It will be of interest to review the settled cases and learn what has been accomplished by the filing of the Demand for Arbitration which would cause the claimants to withdraw their complaints.

"Full information as to the agreements made between the exhibitors and distributors in settling and discontinuing these cases is not available, but from the information on file in the Tribunal offices, it is known that in six cases involving claims for some run of pictures, arrangements were made between the complaining exhibitor and the defending distributor for a contract acceptable to the exhibitor for pictures.

"In the other four cases, the complaint involved clearance, and by the withdrawal of the complaint, it is evident that some satisfactory arrangement must have been effected between the exhibitor and distributor regarding the readjustment of the clearance complained of. Thus, the exhibitors, by filing Demands for Arbitration, secured some favorable change in their contractual relationship with the distributors.

"During the three months' period, eighteen of the cases filed were completed by awards or settlements. Seven awards were rendered by arbitrators, one of which has been appealed. Eleven cases were settled and discontinued by consent of the parties."

999 Arbitrators

On the subject of arbitrators it was pointed out that 999 men had been selected to hear and pass on cases brought in the 31 key cities. According to the decree each of the arbitrators must have had no previous connection with the industry. The majority of the arbitrators are lawyers, it was said.

The "time-table" of arbitration as regulated by the provisions of the consent decree was described in the following way by Mr. Warburg and Mr. Braden:

"Under the arbitration rules, fifteen to seventeen days must elapse after the filing of a demand before the Clerk of the Tribunal submits to the parties a list of arbitrators from which it is expected the arbitrator will be selected to hear and determine the dispute. Seven days are allowed the parties to return the list and indicate which arbitrators are acceptable. The arbitrator is appointed following the return of the list, and he and the parties are then consulted as to their mutual selection of a date of hearing. Five days' notice of such hearing must be given under the rules. Thus, a minimum of twenty-seven days must elapse from the filing of a Demand before a hearing can be held in the case."

Procedure for cutting down the time required for hearing cases was also explained:

"After the first hearing in Washington, which consumed five days, several suggestions were made by the arbitrator and the Clerk of the Washington Tribunal, in regard to reducing the time needed for the reception of evidence in clearance cases. As a result of these suggestions a conference was arranged with the attorneys for the complaining exhibitor, intervening exhibitor and the three distributors named in the complaint, and participated in by representatives of the Association, which resulted in an agreement to prepare certain documentary proof and submit this proof in the form of stipulations at the hearing. This saved time, not only the arbitrator's and the parties', but of the several witnesses who would have been called upon to bring such documents from their offices and remain at the hearing while the data sought was obtained from them by testimony.

"As this second hearing consumed only three days, it is believed two days were saved by the stipulation method. Further experiments will be conducted from time to time, and perhaps some method may be established which will materially reduce the time needed to procure the evidence necessary in establishing the facts required in considering clearance disputes."

The first quarterly report on activities of the AAA in administering the system established in the consent decree was concluded by a paragraph on the motion picture trade press and the arbitration machinery:

"It has been most gratifying to the Administrator to note the comments in the trade press regarding the Panels of Arbitration and the conduct of the hearings, as well as to receive the personal expressions of exhibitors' and distributors' attorneys and representatives during the course of the past three months. The press has been most enthusiastic in its comment regarding hearings in the various sections of the country and the conduct of the proceedings by the Motion Picture Panel. An editorial appearing in one of the motion picture papers appears elsewhere in this issue [of the Arbitration Journal], and only the limitations of space prevent quotations from other periodicals. The Association has received most cordial cooperation from the motion picture press, and a real service has been rendered not only to the motion picture industry, but to the arbitration movement generally by the splendid reporting and editorial comment appearing in such papers."

At the end of the first quarter of operations the AAA inaugurated a course of instruction for members of the various panels of arbitrators. The first meeting was held last week in Philadelphia. Dr. Wesley A. Sturges, Yale University law professor and member of the administrative committee for the motion picture arbitration system, and Mr. Braden were the speakers. Dr. Sturges discussed legal and technical aspects of arbitration and Mr. Braden reviewed procedure at hearings already conducted and suggested practical points for improving and speeding up operations.

Cases Filed in Salt Lake City, Charlotte and New York

This week relative quiet reigned on the arbitration front wiht only three cases filed, one in Charlotte, the first for that, and the number 11 case for New York and the first in Salt Lake City. All involved clearance.

The Charlotte case was filed by H. B. Ram, operator of the Patricua theatre in Aiken, S. C. All five distributors which signed the decree were cited. Also named were the Miller, Dreamland and Rialto in Augusta, Ga. Day and date run was requested.

In the first motion picture arbitration case filed in Salt Lake City, J. H. Moran, owner and operator of the Royal theatre in Laurel, Montana, and the Park theatre in Red Lodge, Montana, named Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers as defendants in a clearance case involving the Montana area.

Mr. Moran alleged in his complaint that the defendant companies continued to furnish first run pictures to the Roman theatre in Red Lodge, Montana, even though the theatre was cutting prices below those listed as minimum in the companies' contracts with the theatre. The complaint stated that the contracts called for a 25c evening adult minimum, and that the Roman had exhibited some first run pictures with adult evening prices being cut to two for 25c and even as low as 10c per person on some films.

Clearance Asked

The complaint requested a fair and reasonable schedule of clearance be set up and the defendants be required to comply strictly with the terms of their contracts with the Roman theatre. In the event of their failure to do so, Mr. Moran asked that a clearance be established requiring all first run pictures distributed by the defendants to be available for exhibition at Laurel, Columbus, Absarokee, Fromberg and Bridger, Montana, during a period of 150 days from first run releases in the territory before they may be exhibited by the Roman theatre at cut prices.

The New York Case, No. 11, was filed for the Ramsey theatre in Ramsey, N. J. All five distributors were named in the clearance complaint. Competitive houses listed as interested parties were the Lafayette in Suffern, N. Y., and the Warner, Ridgewood. A reduction of the seven day clearance held by those theatres over the Ramsey was asked.

The hearing of the New York Case No. 2, filed by Herbert Scheftel, of the Squire theatre, Great Neck, Long Island, against all five distributors and naming the Great Neck Playhouse, was continued this week. George A. Spiegelberg is the arbitrator. A reduction in the 30-day clearance is sought. Another hearing will be held May 16th.

Two cases were settled during the week.

Oklahoma City Case Settled

In Oklahoma City the only case submitted to the local tribunal was settled and withdrawn. J. D. Guest, operator of the Ritz, Duncan, Okla., had requested "some run" from Warner Brothers. An arbitrator was appointed and the hearing scheduled but the agreement was reached before the hearing opened.

In New Orleans the third demand of Charles K. Woolner of the Modern Drive-In Theatre was withdrawn. The theatre was sold to the United Theatres, Inc., headed by M. H. Jacobs. Warner Brothers had been cited in a "some run" petition. It was reported that Mr. Woolner expected to be called into the army shortly so he sold his theatre property.

M. R. Yetter has replaced William Elliott as manager of the Philadelphia office of the AAA. Mr. Elliott has been recalled to the New York headquarters for work in connection with the Association's activities related to disputes arising in matters affecting national defense.

Arbitration of the second complaint filed with the Philadelphia board has been held up because of the extended illness of David Silver, operator the Earle Theatre, New Castle, Del. He filed a some run complaint against MGM on April 2nd. As a result, the third complaint filed April 3rd will occupy the attention of the board, a clearance complaint against the five major consenting distributors with the Warner circuit in Philadelphia as an interested party brought by Rose Hexter, operator of the Breeze theatre in Philadelphia. The local trade has been eagerly awaiting the Breeze complaint since it is the first involving the Warner circuit.

Albany district's first two arbitration cases, brought by Alex Papayanakos of the American theatre, Canton, against RKO and Warners, were resumed Wednesday, before Morton J. Hall, Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance special agent, arbitrator. Mr. Papayanakoas maintains that while Schine's Pontiac and Strand, Ogdensburg, have a 14-day clearance over his American theatre, Canton, in many cases neither theatre is dating the pictures when available, resulting in an alleged playdate by him from 60 to 90 days after film is available for his situation. The case first came before Arbitrator Hall April 29, but after a day's testimony, it was adjourned until this week. Representing Mr. Papayanakos is F. L. Wiswall, Albany attorney, while in appearance for RKO was Mort Siegel of New York. Warners were represented by Harold Berkowitz.

Hearing for Milwaukee's second arbitration case, that of Lee Macklin, Grand theatre, New London, Wis., claiming that Loew's, Inc., Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO and Warner Bros., are giving unreasonable clearance to the Rio and Appleton theatres in Appleton, has been set for May 21st. The other theatres involved in the action are the Grand and Times in Clintonville, operated by Dr. W. H. Finney and the Waupaca and Palace in Waupaca, operated by the Adler Theatre Co. Carl B. Rix, Milwaukee attorney, has been named arbitrator.

First Three-Judge Appeal

Briefs on appeal for the first case referred to the three-judge appeal board in New York City were due Tuesday and the case will be considered shortly. The action was filed in Chicago by Ben Banovitz, operator of the Ken theatre (Chicago Case No. 2). Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and RKO were named and the Schoenstadt circuit was listed as an interested party. A hearing was held March 20 before Charles P. Megan, former president of the Chicago Bar Association. The case was dismissed on the grounds that run and not clearance was involved and the exhibitor appealed. If the distributors named do not request oral argument before May 12 the appeal board will decide the case after considering the briefs.

E. D. Whitson, operator of the Vista and Hunleys in Los Angeles, has intervened in the action filed by George Bromley and Alex Moungh (Los Angeles Case No. 2). James Edwards, Jr., head of Edwards Circuit, intervened in the case of the Mission Playhouse, filed by O. W. Lewis (Los Angeles Case No. 1).

New Arbitrators

Distributors have asked that the White Way and Howard theatres be called in as interested parties in the first New Haven arbitration case brought by the Forest Theatre Corp., operator of the Forest, West Haven, in addition to the Rivoli, West Haven. Michael Cascioli, president of the complaining corporation asks that the 14 day protection now held by the Rivoli over the Forest be wiped out. Both houses have about 930 seats; the Forest was constructed last year.

The following were added this week to the panel of arbitrators for the Kansas City district: Eric E. Matchette, member of the Chamber of Commerce, 7432 Paseo; John H. Wiles, Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, 1100 W. 8th Street and Bennett W. McCluer, president of the McCluer-Wilbur Underwriting Company, Board of Trade Building.

REMEMBER RICH OF HOLLYWOOD IN TAXING FILMS, CONGRESS IS TOLD

Allied Reminds That Film Contracts Compel Owners to Absorb Direct Levies; Urges Abolition of Ticket Exemptions

Any tax imposed on film rentals should be so written that the distributor will be unable to pass it along to the exhibitor, the House Ways and Means Committee in Washington was told last Thursday, May 1, by Abraham F. Myers, presenting the views of independents, as chairman of Allied, on proposals to reduce the Federal admission tax exemption to nine cents and levy a five per cent tax on rentals, for the war-and-defense emergencies.

"Independent exhibitors are in no condition to shoulder this film rental tax," he declared, listing among the levies to which they now are subject the Federal admission tax, the state admission taxes imposed in some areas and gross revenue taxes imposed in others, the municipal, state and fire marshal license fees, and the general property and income taxes, besides others.

It is estimated that the Government would collect additional ticket taxes of $55,000,000 by reducing tax exemptions from the persent 20-cent level to nine cents; and, that $12,000,000 more should be obtained from a five per cent tax on film rentals.

Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, is to lead an industry contingent before a House Ways and Means Committee, on Wednesday to protest against "multiple" taxes, particularly attacking the proposed rental levy.

Cites Contract Clause

Mr. Myers explained that unless a protective provision is incorporated in the bill, in the event a tax is laid on rentals, the cost will fall on the exhibitor under the provision in their film rental contracts which provides that the theatre owner shall return to the distributor an amount equal to the aggregate of all taxes, present or future, which may apply to the lease, delivery, exhibition, possession or use of motion pictures.

"I can only assume that the purpose in proposing a tax of five per cent on film rentals was not to further burden the small independent exhibitors but to tap the supposedly inexhaustible resources of Hollywood," he said. "If so, the purpose will miscarry unless the proposal, when drafted, contains a provision that the tax shall be paid by the distributor and not passed on to the exhibitor.

"Whether or not such a tax should be imposed on the distributors is not for me to say. They have their own representatives to speak for them."

The independent exhibitors, he explained, are "small business men, exploited by the film trust" and "should not be confused with the producing and distributing branches of the industry, nor should they be associated in any way with the unfortunate publicity emanating from those branches regarding high salaries and extravagant living.

"Our members were born on the wrong side of the railroad track," he said; "they can't afford such luxuries."

The Allied executive, however, told the Congressional committee the exhibitors in his organization were not opposed to the proposal to reduce the exemption to nine cents. On the contrary, he said, "they go the Treasury one better and suggest that it be wholly abolished as to adult admissions.

"I am glad to say to the committee that when I polled the regional directors on those proposals, I was not greeted with the roar that customarily follows bad news regarding demands for increased taxes. The rank and file of small exhibitors recognize that the present emergency demands huge outlays and that the bill must be paid.

"A majority of the regionals," he explained, "favor the complete elimination of the exemption so that there will be a one cent tax on adult admissions of ten cents or any fraction thereof. This recommendation is based on fear that hard pressed exhibitors in highly competitive locations may be tempted to lower their ten-cent admissions in order to gain a competitive advantage."

Allied suggests that the committee take advantage of the opportunity to wipe out the exemption from admission tax provided for various types of organizations which, Mr. Myers said, "were written into the law with the best intentions but are gravely abused by the many exempted organizations and institutions that have gone into the entertainment business as a revenue producing enterprise, virtually supplanting offerings and dues."

Repeal of the exemption would not hurt the organizations, he argued, since the tax is paid by the person paying for the admission. Furthermore, if it is desired to waive the tax in the case of soldiers, either at camp theatres or at theatres generally, that can be done by a provision in the new bill.

In a service bulletin to all members, Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio ITO, called for an immediate protest to the committee against the enactment of the tax if it is passed on to the theatre owner. Mr. Wood explained that while theatre owners were just as desirous as any other business in contributing to the defense program it was unfair to expect them to accept the imposition of taxes from two sources, on what they sell and on what they buy.

"If a film tax is necessary," Mr. Wood said, "it should be imposed upon the distributor, where it rightfully belongs, and not upon the theatre owner who, from all indications, will be weighed down with an admission tax upon all admissions beginning with ten cents."

The House Committee on Finance and Taxation of the Florida legislature discarded many of so-called "nuisance" tax bills when they refused to endorse bills that had been introduced to place a ten per cent tax on all amusement tickets, a tax on soft drinks, cigarettes, a general sales tax and others.

In the Senate the bill to make the showing of motion pictures on Sunday legal, was passed by a majority. Under the present Florida "blue laws" no work, except that of necessity, is permitted on Sunday, with the exception of the printing of newspapers. The bill passed by the Senate adds the exhibition of motion pictures to this exception. It is believed that the action of the Senate on this measure will be duplicated by the House when it comes up there.

Pending film legislation in the Illinois state legislature in Springfield is given slight chance of enactment during the current session. The latest bill to be introduced is one providing for a ten per cent admission tax on all amusements.

Representative Paul Powell has introduced a bill in the House to tax admissions to theatres. The bill was referred to the Revenue Committee, headed by Representative Saltiel of Chicago.

NEW YORK THEATRES CANNOT BAN CRITICS

Under the Davidson bill signed last week by Governor Lehman it will be illegal to exclude dramatic critics from legitimate theatres. The law is designed for that purpose, but says that no one may be excluded or ejected from a theatre who has a ticket and whose actions are not abusive or tending to cause a breach of the peace. Film houses, however, are not included in the law.

Blue Law Violators Dismissed

Twenty-five Nottaway County, Virginia, people were haled into court in Blackstone on April 28th on charges of violating Sunday Blue Laws. After trial Justice J. S. Gravvatt said he could find no ordinance in the county which said whether or not such things as motion pictures, soft drinks, tobacco and iodine were "necessities." The charges were dismissed.

Among the defendants were Gearge Seay, operator of the Nottawa theatre; Blackstone College for Girls, charged with selling soft drinks; a service station and a restaurant. Two drug stores were charged with selling iodine and mercurichrome.

In Hattiesburg, Miss., H. D. Bowers, manager of the Saenger theatre, won his appeal to the circuit court from a conviction in Forrest county court on a charge of operating a motion picture theatre on Sunday. Minutes of the circuit court showed that the case was reversed, dismissed and the defendant was discharged.

The adoption of daylight saving time in Louisville, Ky., despite a state law prohibiting it without consent of the Governor was upheld last week by the Kentucky court of appeals, after briefs filed by Col. Henry Stites, attorney representing theatre interests, and C. W. Krebs, secretary of the MPTO of Kentucky, urging the change be voided, failed to have effect. The state law was declared unconstitutional.

Daylight Time Observed

Meanwhile, Frankfort, the state capital, became the second Kentucky city to adopt daylight saving time. Following the capital's adoption of the new time, the U. S. Army post at Fort Knox, and the defense "boom town" at Charleston, Ind., across the Ohio River from Louisville, also adopted the change.

More than 50 communities in the Pittsburgh district are observing daylight saving time this year, an increase of seven per cent over last year. Annually reported as a reason for box office declines during its first observance, daylight time is legalized in Aliquippa, Altoona, Ambridge, Arnold, Beaver, Beaver Falls, Braddock, Butler, Clairton, Connellsville, Corry, Duquesne, Erie, Ford City, Franklin, Homestead, Kittanning, McKeesport, New Brighton, New Kensington, Oil City, Sewickley, State College, Tarentum, Titusville, Tyrone, Warren, Washington, and Wilkinsburg, as well as Pittsburgh, and boroughs.

On May 3rd, the last possible day for executive action on more than 1,100 bills passed by the 1941 New York legislature Governor Herbert H. Lehman vetoed the measure affecting theatrical and radio employment of children under 16.

AXIS FILM OPPOSITION SPREADS TO RIOTS, CENSORING, APPEALS TO U. S.

Pennsylvania Censors Order Review of Foreign Newsreels as Private Showings Rouse Public; New Pressure Seen

Motion picture industry and outside political and public opposition to the showing, actual and attempted, of Axis films in the United States is growing apace with the line that some seem to think is drawing this country closer to the war troubles of Europe.

In the past few days, steps considered stronger than usual were taken against the exhibition of pictures the basic contents of which are Axis ideologies.

While the German and Italian film markets in this country started to disappear with the start of World War II, and the job of Axis film marketers became more difficult with each Naxi invasion in Europe, Nazi political groups or individual agents have been attempting to place occasional Axis film messages either on public or private screens.

The answer to these efforts is a growing opposition from many ranks, both within and outside the industry. As part of its all-out campaign against anything Nazi, the national Non-Sectarian League has for several years pointed up Nazi infiltrations of pictures, pamphlets and products of various nature, influencing boycotts thereof.

Now the attacks are being taken up in apparent earnest by independent exhibitors and others. In Pennsylvania, exhibitors complain of the growth of private Bund screenings of Nazi film messages. In New York, the Independent Theatre Owners' Association has pledged an absolute boycott against all Axis pictures, at the same time petitioning the State Department to stop the flow of such pictures into this country.

To Censor Private Showings

Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors has changed its regulations to require a review of all foreign newsreels before they are shown, even if the showing is at a private gathering. The censorship move came as an aftermath of the showing of newsreels during a meeting of the Kyffhaeusser Bund in Philadelphia on April 19, during which the Nazi flag was reported to have been cheered and a motion picture of the Statue of Liberty hissed. The Philadelphia newspapers, in covering the Bund gathering, put special emphasis on the fact that the newsreels were "uncensored."

It was also brought to the attention of the censor board by Detective Lieutenant Albert A. Granitz, head of radical and alien squad in Philadelphia, that a German newsreel was shown, without being censored, the Thursday previous in Moose Hall for the benefit of the German Seamen's Home. Two romantic movies with German backgrounds shown at Moose Hall had been reviewed by the Board of Censors, but the newsreel had not because the board did not require it.

Peter Kreckmann, manager of the North German Lloyd Office in Philadelphia, said his office had supplied the films which were obtained through the Nazi's UFA-Film. Mr. Kreckmann had asked the censor board whether it desired to view the newsreel before it was shown, but was told that it was not necessary in the case of privately shown newsreels. Since the episode of the Kyffhaeusser Bund showing, however, was deemed to reflect on the showing of uncensored newsreels, Mr. Kreckmann said he had been told, the Board of Censors had decided to censor them hereafter.

Seen by Policeman

Police Lieutenant Granitz conferred with Workman Driver, administrative assistant of the Board of Censors, and was informed of the change in regulations. He said he saw the romantic films, called "Three Sergeants" and "Homeland," and saw nothing that could be construed as propaganda. He brought the matter of the newsreel to the board's attention, he said, because he could not understand why any uncensored foreign films were being shown.

Lieutenant Grantiz said he did not know what was in the newsreel. Mr. Kreckmann said the film consisted of scenes in Germany and Norway, but that he did not think it included any of the famous scenes showing the invasion of Poland which the Pennsylvania board once had banned in connection with "The Ramparts We Watch" and "The World in Flames."

Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the Board of Censors, sought to minimize the situation by pointing out that while newsreels were not subject to censorship, the board has never considered foreign newsreels as such and required that they be reviewed along with all other foreign films.

Exhibitors in the area, especially upstate in Reading and Lancaster, where there is a large German population, have long been concerned over the mushrooming of "private" showings at which gatherings the foreign newsreels were not subject to review. The censor board last year gained much notoriety and was the object of much adverse criticism for its action in banning the March of Time's "The Ramparts We Watch" because of the inclusion of UFA (German) newsreels.

The Friends of Democracy, Inc., in New York, last Thursday, informed Secretary of State Cordell Hull that Nazi movie propaganda soon was to get under way in the United States, according to the New York Times. It was said that the telegram raised the question of whether the Government should permit such German films to be shown.

Chief among the pictures listed in the telegram is "Victory in the West," the official Nazi movie of the campaign in the Low Countries and France that has been used frequently to "soften up" the representatives of hesitant nations summoned to Germany for conferences with Adolf Hitler.

The message to the Secretary of State said that "Victory in the West" was to open Friday at the Ninety-sixth Street Theatre, 1703 Third Avenue, New York. At the theatre it was said the film would not be shown Friday, but was scheduled for later presentation. The Ninety-sixth Street Theatre, in Yorktown, has many German patrons.

The telegram to Mr. Hull was signed by L. M. Birkhead, national director of the Friends of Democracy. That organization was started about four years ago. It has campaigned against Father Coughlin, the Silver Shirts, Joseph McWilliams and his American Destiny party, and Earl Browder, Communist leader, now in Federal prison.

"Blitz" in San Francisco

"Victory in the West," its title changed to "Blitzkrieg in the West," was booked for the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, opening Friday. Previously Nazi films have been shown at the Princess, neighborhood house. The German film will reopen the Tivoli, a downtown house, which has been dark for two years. Picketing was threatened by anti-Nazi organizations in San Francisco.

Joseph Weinberg was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $200 in Passaic, N. J., Monday for violating local fire regulations when he exhibited the Leningrad production, "The Great Beginning," recently. Police identified Weinberg as a Jersey Communist leader and testified that he showed the film without housing the projection machine in a fireproof booth. Police Judge Michael Andrus imposed the maximum penalty under the fire ordinance and fined Seymour Pitt of New York $27 for operating the projection machine.

Near Riot on Coast

In Los Angeles, a near riot forced cancellation of a scheduled showing of "Dr. Koch," Nazi film, at a private auditorium. F. K. Farenz, described as a German organization leader, had rented the Pacific Electric Club Hall, installing his own screening equipment. As murmurs were heard from public quarters, in protest, N. B. Vivkery, manager of the club, refused the use of the hall when he learned of the type of showing contemplated.

Milwaukee police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation this week were reported checking sources of patronage and the subject matter screened at the German Kino, neighborhood house in northwest Milwaukee which exhibits all Nazi pictures forwarded from the Reich. Propaganda films are reported to have run three and four weeks at the theatre recently, longer than is customarily profitable, and authorities were said to be interested in whether the theatre was receiving subsidies from abroad or from Nazi groups in this country.

FRENCH NAZIS HIT U. S. AND FILMS

A front-page editorial in the Paris workers' newspaper, "La France au Travail," known in Vichy, France, as an outlet for pro-German propaganda, declared this week that "the war will deliver us from Americanism," according to an Associated Press dispatch arriving in New York. The editorial said Americans had been "made stupid by the cinema and vaudeville . . . taken in by Hollywood mirages . . . paralyzed by comfort . . . poisoned by false luxury . . . enslaved to materialism and devoted to the religion of the dollar."

It gave this definition: "Americanism is an acute form of Anglomania."

Morgan Joins Mills

Irving Mills, president of the Mills Music Co., has appointed Ken Morgan, newspaperman, as manager of the Hollywood office.

E. M. Loew Reopens Theatres

The E. M. Loew circuit of theatres of Boston opened all of its Drive-In theatres over the week-end. The circuit recently took over a new Drive-In in Milford.

$10,000 Advance, $30,000 in Week For 'Citizen Kane'

Orson Welles' controversial production, "Citizen Kane," on Wednesday, finished the first week of its first public exhibition in the U. S., at the Broadway Palace, New York, with a gross of $30,000 and an additional $10,000 cash-in-hand for advance reservations, according to RKO, the distributor.

The picture opened last Thursday evening, May 2nd, with all of the usual arc light and cafe society fanfare attendant the world premiere of a major production. Special interest was directed at this one because of RKO's repeated postponements of its release date, due to arguments and indecisions over potential repercussions from the subject matter.

In this connection, it was noted that neither the Hearst Daily Mirror, or that publisher's Journal-American, New York morning and evening papers, respectively, paid any attention to the picture or its opening, either publicity-wise or by regular review, and their advertising columns continued closed to "Citizen Kane" copy.

Critics Excited

The press, generally, was receptive. Bosley Crowther, in The Times, summed up press opinion with the observation that Orson Welles, in his first motion picture, created a titanic character which does everything but explain itself.

Eileen Creelman, in The Sun, found the picture "an interesting one, with a decided personality all its own." But, she added, "it is a cold picture, a puzzle rather than a drama. . . . The interest is only intellectual, not dramatic."

Although RKO has planned circulation no further than a few test showings, in New York, in Chicago, at the Woods and Palace; at the Hillstreet and El Capitan, Los Angeles; Golden Gate, San Francisco, and Keith's, Washington, the company already has in hand an advance trailer for selling subsequents.

The trailer is described as unique in both production and narration. The dialogue was written by Orson Welles, the producer-star-director-author-editor of "Kane." He does not appear in the trailer, but, from offstage microphonically introduces the other characters, closing with this: "Ladies and gentlemen, I don't know what you'll think about Mr. Kane. I can't imagine. You see, I play the part myself. Well, Kane is a hero, and a scoundrel, a no-account and a swell guy . . . a great lover, a great American citizen, and a dirty dog. That depends upon who's talking about him. . . ."

The old Palace of two-a-day vaudeville was transformed for the "Kane" exhibition into a bizarre wall of light, four stories high. The front is understood to have cost some $26,000, which, with other advertising and ballyhoo expenses, stood RKO $53,000 before the doors opened last Thursday night.

Lobby displays simulating the fluorescent effect of neon tube lettering appeared for the first time in the Palace lobby. Developed and installed by National Screen Service and its subsidiary, American Display Company, the displays consist of a three-dimensional cut-out lighted from behind through a colored translucent backing. The light, seen through the cut-outs, closely approximates the effect of neon tubing. Other "Citizen Kane" displays were used in conventional shadow boxes, entrance banners, and in outside poster frames.

Films Serve Defense, Freeman Declares

As spokesman for the organized production industry in Hollywood, Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers on Tuesday, told the Los Angeles Advertising Club that the motion pictures were solidly behind the national defense effort, and not "trying to make profits, but trying to do as all true Americans are doing." Mr. Freeman was answering "those who have criticized the defense efforts of the motion picture industry.

"They know we are a front page industry. They have and will continue to call us warmongers . . . but we will stand on our record. We are doing to the best of our ability what our Government has asked."

Major Mason Wright of the Army signal corps expressed official appreciation from the War Department for the production of service training films. (Hollywood activities for the Army are reported on page 48). Studio executives, stars, and service officials attended the first Film Day luncheon sponsored Tuesday by the L. A. Advertisers.

Distributors Draw English Allowance

Twelve million, nine hundred thousand dollars, the total set for the year ending October 31st, was permitted to be withdrawn this week from England by the eight major American motion picture companies. Unless the regulations are relaxed by England as a result of the U. S. credit now available to Great Britain from the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease appropriation, the American film companies will not be allowed to take any more money out of England for six months.

According to the terms of the monetary agreement 37½ percent of the $12,900,000 could be transferred during the first quarter, which began November 1, 1940, and an additional 37½ percent during the second quarter, ended May 1, 1941, with the final 25 percent withdrawn from Great Britain on May 1st, if it had been earned by that date. The American companies have all met the "if earned" condition, it was reported this week in New York.

The withdrawal limit for the current year from Australia has been raised from $2,100,000 to $2,300,000. During the first year of the war the majors were allowed to take $3,200,000 out of Australia.

Typical of the extent to which the majors' activities in Europe have been curtailed on account of the war was the disclosure at Twentieth Century-Fox this week that 27 of Fox's 47 branches in 10 European countries have been closed since the Fall of 1939. The company still maintains 20 branches in Europe, but in most cases no revenue can be withdrawn from those offices.

Altec Buys Lansing

Expansion of Altec Service is revealed by L. W. Conrow, president, with the formation of Altec Lansing Corporation, and the acquisition of Lansing Manufacturing Co., of Los Angeles. The new company will manufacture Lansing loud speaker systems for theatres, and distribute public address equipments. Heading the new Altec Lansing Corporation is G. L. Carrington, vice president and general manager of Altec.

Schenck Resumes At Coast Studio

Joseph M. Schenck returned to his desk on Monday at the Twentieth Century-Fox Studio at Movietone City, Cal.

Before leaving New York, Friday night, by plane, the following statement was issued by the corporation at the home office:

"The published reports that Mr. Joseph M. Schenck has entirely severed his connection with Twentieth Century-Fox are in error. Mr. Schenck has tendered his resignation to the board of directors as a director of the company and as chairman of the board. His resignation was accepted by the board at its meeting (Thursday, May 2nd). Mr. Edwin P. Kilroe, who has been associated with the company for many years (as chief copyright counsel), was elected a director to succeed Mr. Schenck. No action was taken by the board with regard to a successor to Mr. Schenck as chairman of the board.

"When Mr. Schenck returns to Hollywood, he will resume his production activities for the company."

On arriving in Hollywood Sunday, press wire services quoted Mr. Schenck as saying the company would make 44 features for 1941-42 at a cost of $22,000,000.

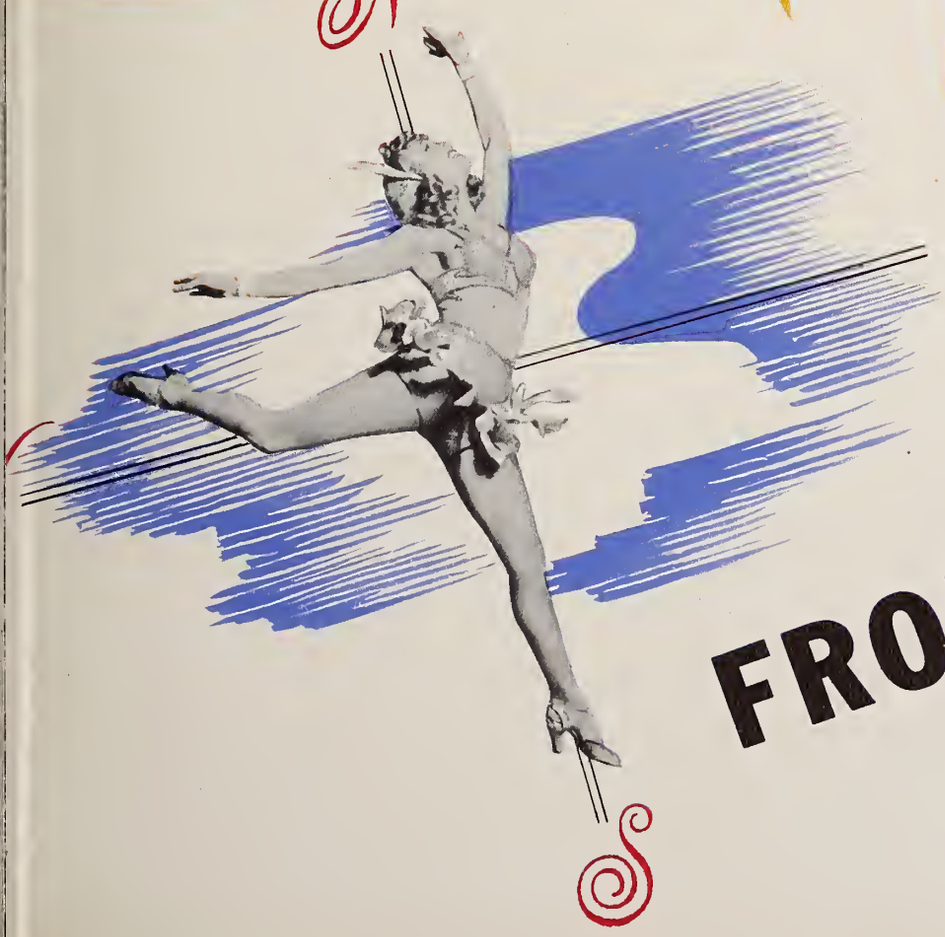
Republic Pushes New Season Production

Republic will speed up production during June and July in order to build up a backlog of 10 or 12 pictures with which to launch the 1941-42 season on August 1st, Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board reported at Hollywood on Tuesday. All production on this year's product will be out of the way by July 1st, he said.

At quarterly production conferences on Tuesday Mr. Yates assigned the first new season pictures to Republic producers. Albert J. Cohen will handle the first high budget film of the year, "Memphis Belle," and "Pardon My Stripes," "The Devil Pays Off," and "Navy Blue Eyes." Robert North will produce "Hurricane Smith" and "There Goes My Wife"; Armand Schaefer, "The Big Bonanza," starring John Wayne, "Mercy Island," an untitled Weaver Bros. and Elviry film, and an untitled Lulu Belle and Scotty; George Sherman, "Oregon Trail," first Don Barry western.

Gene Autry, Republic western star, will also face an intensive schedule. Of three pictures remaining on his schedule for this year "Down Mexico Way," a special, has been postponed and "Under Fiesta Stars" will be started immediately to be followed by "Old Faithful."

Heads Salt Lake Exchange



A. L. Campbell will succeed W. C. Sterzer as office manager and booker at Columbia Pictures' Salt Lake City exchange. Mr. Campbell has been accessory manager of the exchange's advertising department for three years.

Weiner to Boston

Abe Weiner left Pittsburgh April 12th for his new position as United Artists exchange manager in Boston, after two and a half years as sales manager in the Pittsburgh territory.

U.S. AGREES TELEVISION IS READY, SETS COMMERCIALIZATION JULY 1

FCC Gives "Go Ahead" Order for Second Time in Year; 15 Hours a Week Set as Minimum for Authorization

Television goes commercial July 1st.

For the second time in little more than a year, the Federal Communications Commission on May 2nd announced that it had flashed the "go-ahead" signal to the television industry. The limited commercialization order in 1940 was in effect but a few weeks before being revoked, some months before it would have gone into operation last September 1st.

Licensed television stations which may begin commercial operation July 1st, if the necessary equipment has been installed, and FCC approval obtained include the following:

NEW YORK
National Broadcasting Company.
Columbia Broadcasting System.
Allen B. DuMont Laboratories (Paramount affiliate).
Metropolitan Television (Bloomingdale's).
Station WOR.

CHICAGO
Balaban & Katz.
Zenith Radio Corporation.

PHILADELPHIA
Philco Television and Radio Corporation.
National Broadcasting Company.
WCAU, CBS affiliate.

WASHINGTON
National Broadcasting Company.
Allen B. DuMont Laboratories.

LOS ANGELES
Television Production (Paramount).
Don Lee Broadcasting System.
Hughes Tool Company (Howard Hughes).

SAN FRANCISCO
Don Lee Broadcasting System.
Hughes Tool Company.

CINCINNATI
Crosley Corporation.

Television stations also have been authorized for Albany, Schenectady, Kansas City, Boston and other key cities.

A minimum fifteen hours a week program service will be sufficient to give a television station commercial status under the new orders of the FCC, instead of the 30 hours which had been proposed.

To avoid the "freezing" of the industry, it was stipulated that the standards on which it is to operate shall be given six months of practical test, at the conclusion of which changes may be considered, with reference particularly to color television, in which the stations are encouraged to experiment.

"Whereas a year ago the commission found the television industry divided, recent developments demonstrate the industry is entirely in agreement that television broadcasting is ready for standardization," it was declared by the commission in announcing its action. "Accordingly, the commission has adopted, in substance, the standards as proposed by the National Television System Committee at the March 20 hearing, as well as the rules and regulations submitted at that time."

Those standards, it was observed, "represent, with but few exceptions, the undivided engineering opinion of the industry". They will satisfy the requirement for advancing television to a high level of efficiency within presently known developments, it was asserted.

"This 'go-ahead' signal fulfills the Commission's promise of last year that as soon as the industry's engineers were prepared to approve any single system the commission would consider full commercialization," it was stated. "The showing made at the March hearing supported the commission's previous action in declining the set standards when the industry was sharply divided and any time to have done so would have frozen the state of the art to the then unsatisfactory level of performance. The approved standards alleviate the problem of different receivers being required to 'key' into varying competing transmission systems. The standards take cognizance of recent outstanding improvements in synchronizing signals which contribute materially to a more reliable operation."

The new standards fix the frequencies at 525 lines and 30 frames, giving better definition than the 441-line standard proposed last year, it was said.

Frequency modulation is required for the accompanying sound.

All channels will be available for commercial service. This concession was made on a plea that the seven lower channels in the television band are not sufficient for adequate development of service, and the 11 upper channels were also made available.

Not more than three television stations may be under the same control according to the rules of the Commission.

Mr. Fly indicated that so far as the Commission had been informed there was no "bottleneck" in the television and radio industry which would hinder commercialization on July 1st. It was said that the defense activities had not seriously handicapped the radio industry thus far. A number of experimental television stations have been operating and these could begin commercial operations without requiring additional equipment from manufacturers.

In New York, NBC's television station, W2XBS, has been operating regularly on a reduced schedule. It was said that the company probably would be able to increase its schedule to the required 15 hour minimum for commercial operations. A year ago NBC was broadcasting about 12 hours a week of television programs. The DuMont and CBS stations also could begin operations by July 1.

Crosley Also Ready

The Crosley Corporation, operating stations WLW, WSAI and international short wave station WLWO, in Cincinnati, is prepared to inaugurate television at any time, declared James D. Shouse, vice-president in charge of broadcasting, when informed late last week that the FCC had authorized commercialization of television, beginning July 1. The company months ago installed a transmitter under an experimental permit on the 48th floor of the Carew Tower in downtown Cincinnati, and this has been constantly kept up to date in line with improvements as developed.

In New York this week David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, speaking at a stockholders meeting said:

"The company is engaged in reviewing the whole subject of television in light of the new order just issued by the commission. Important new factors which now must be considered are the increasing demands upon our facilities and technical experts made by the requirements of national defense, and the matter of priorities, which may affect the establishment of the new services."

Mr. Sarnoff also said, "I doubt whether there will be any commercial television this year." He added that RCA had not lost interest in television but that the FCC monopoly report and the national defense needs had altered the situation which existed last year when the company was the chief proponent of immediate commercializaiton for television.

The Philco Television and Radio Corporation has not yet formed definite plans for television, according to William H. Grimditch, vice-president.

Allen B. DuMont, preisdent of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate, said that as long as radio receivers could be manufactured in quantity there should be no difficulty in obtaining the necessary materials and men to manufacture television sets.

On Thursday of last week NBC held a demonstration of color television. O. B. Hanson, vice-president and chief engineer, said color television was not ready for commercial operations. Observers were able to compare reception on color and on black and white receivers. It was said that NBC had the greatest number of hours of color television broadcasts to its credit. Last week the figure was 20. CBS has done most of its color work by wire transmission from one studio to another and not over the air. Completion of the Chrysler Building transmitter will enable that company to transmit its color tests over the air.

TELEVISION "TIME-TABLE"

Activities of the Federal Communications Commission on the subject of commercial television are summarized as follows:

May 22, 1939 FCC dashes "quick" television hopes; refuses standardization.

November 15, 1939 Television subcommittee of the FCC recommends limited commercialization.

February 29, 1940 FCC approves limited commercialization to begin on September 1, 1940.

March 23, 1940 Limited commercialization order rescinded following opening of RCA's merchandising campaign.

April 8, 1940 Television hearings and cancellation of limited commercial order upheld.

May 27, 1940 FCC bars commercial television and rules that industry must wait until agreement is reached on standards.

January 27, 1941 'Progress report' of the National Television Systems Committee presented to FCC and definite standards recommended.

March 20-21-24, 1941 FCC hearings on NTSC standards, with many groups urging commercialization.

May 2, 1941 Full commercialization order announced by FCC with sponsored operations to begin July 1, 1941.

U.S. ACTS TO 'BUST' CONTROL OF THE AIR; NETWORKS CALL FCC A 'MENACE'

Drastic New Regulations Hit Networks' Ownership of Stations, Require One Year Contracts; NBC, CBS Perturbed

The United States Government, last weekend, moving most unexpectedly, set out to break the control of large broadcasters in radio, in a sweeping order curbing network operation. Just three weeks ago it ordered newspaper publishers to cease radio expansions pending a hearing on press and radio operation.

On Saturday, also, commercial television was approved as of July 1st (see page 30).

Calling the attention of Congress and the public to the broad problems raised by the concentration of power in the hands of a single group as exemplified by the Radio Corporation of America, "which straddles the fields of communications, radio-equipment manufacture, and entertainment," the Federal Communications Commission this week issued its report on chain broadcasting, with eight new regulations "designed to preserve without loss the contributions of network broadcasting to the public and to the affiliated stations, while insuring that licensees will exercise their responsibilities under the law."

Of the eight new regulations, two apply to ownership, one denying to any network organization more than one station within a given area and the other prohibiting a chain from operating more than one network. This would require the National Broadcasting Company to dispose of the Red or Blue network.

The remaining six regulations prohibit affiliation contracts restraining a station from carrying programs offered by any network or restricting a network to one station in an area; bar contracts running longer than one year or binding stations from scheduling such programs as they may consider in the public interest; banning option clauses requiring a station to cancel other programs simply because the chain offers a program for the optioned hour; provide that the station shall have the final decision as to what programs shall or shall not be broadcast; and eliminating from affiliation contracts any provision depriving a station of the right to set its own rates and to compete freely with networks for advertising revenues.

Networks Protest

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, and Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Company, both immediately attacked the rules promulgated by the FCC in its report on network radio operations. James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, refused to make any statement answering the critics but said on Monday that the monopoly report had been turned over to the Department of Justice.

At the Department of Justice it was said the FCC report and material would be studied, but no indication was given whether that branch of the Government was planning to engage in any campaign against the networks.

There were definite indications that President Roosevelt would be asked to take a hand in the controversy. It was pointed out that only a month ago he appointed Mark Ethridge of Louisville to make a study of the whole field of broadcasting and make recommendations as to how radio could be kept free of monopoly, indicating, it was said, in Washington, that Mr. Roosevelt was anxious to avoid wrecking the industry and desirous of finding a way of dealing with the problem without upsetting the present structure. It was reported that Mr. Ethridge would confer this week with President Roosevelt on the radio situation.

"Promulgation of the Federal Communications Commission's network regulations constitutes usurpation of power which has no justification in law and menaces the freedom of the American system of broadcasting," Mr. Miller said as he announced that a special meeting of the NAB executive committee had been called to consider what action might be taken to oppose the FCC rules.

NBC Foresees "Chaos"

Mr. Trammell, speaking for NBC, which would be most seriously affected by the order, being required to sell one of its networks, said, "Choas, not further competition would result from the blow aimed at the American system of broadcasting, if the FCC rules go into effect". He asserted that the action appeared to "penalize" those who had pioneered in radio network operations and developed "superior services". It was also pointed out that NBC might be forced to sacrifice such outstanding programs as "The Town Meeting of the Air", the Toscanini symphony concerts, the "National Farm and Home Hour", the "NBC Music Appreciation Hour", the Metropolitan Opera and other programs.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, told stockholders of the company Tuesday, "The policy to be adopted and the action to be taken with respect to these new conditions can be determined only after a detailed study has been made of the reports and orders just issued by the Commission."

Samuel R. Rosenbaum, president of the Independent Radio Network Affiliates, said Monday in Philadelphia, "Separation of the Blue network from NBC seems a drastic punishment of its affiliated stations for the service they have rendered the public. The prohibitions placed on the dealings between affiliates and networks look at first glance like a death blow to the Red network and the Columbia Broadcasting System as well."

The commission split on the question of the report on network broadcasting, Chairman Fly and Commissioners Paul A. Walker, George Henry Payne, Frederick I. Thompson and Ray C. Wakefield concurring and Commissioners Norman S. Case and T. A. M. Craven dissenting

The removal of the restraints listed in the regulations, the commission asserted, should result in "an increased number of networks, and, consequently, a larger supply of available network programs and a wider latitude for all stations in obtaining network programs" and a gain in quality as well as quantity as a result of increased competition among networks.

Stations utilizing approximately 97 per cent of the total night-time broadcasting power are affiliated with the three major networks and all but two of the clear-channel stations are affiliated with NBC or CBS, which also have 18 of the most powerful and most desirable stations, the report stated.

"The United States has rejected Government ownership of broadcasting stations, believing that the power inherent in control over broadcasting is too great and too dangerous to the maintenance of free institutions to permit its exercise by one body, even though elected by or responsible to the whole people", it declared. "But in avoiding the concentration of power over radio broadcasting in the hands of Government, we must not fall into an even more dangerous pitfall: the concentration of that power in the hands of self-perpetuating management groups."

Cites "Big Three"

The commission at various points contrasted Mutual with NBC and CBS in respect to size, structure and mode of operation, but explained that in so doing it did not mean to approve Mutual practices or set them up as ideals or models.

"On the contrary", the report commented, "we find a tendency in Mutual to follow the paths toward restrictive practices blazed by CBS and NBC."

Operation of Red and Blue networks by NBC, it was held, gives that company a decided advantage over its competitors. The two networks do not compete with each other, and the Blue has had the effect of acting as a buffer to protect the more powerful Red against competition. For this reason, it is proposed to enjoin any chain from operating more than one network.

Under the so-called "exclusivity clause", it was pointed out, a station affiliated with one network may not carry the program of any other net, a situation which will be remedied by the new regulations.

The same is true with respect to "territorial exclusivity", and the commission held "it is as much against the public interest for a network affiliate to enter into a contractual arrangement which prevents another station from carrying a network program as it would be for it to drown out that program by electrical interference".

The one-year term to which it is proposed to limit contracts, it was contended, will strengthen competition by permitting for annual readjustments on the basis of comparative showings of networks and stations.

The commission particularly stressed the disadvantages of the optional time clause and the restrictions on the right of stations to reject network programs.

"It is the station, not the network, which is licensed to serve the public interest", it pointed out. "The licensee has the duty of determining what programs shall be broadcast over his station's facilities, and cannot lawfully delegate this duty or transfer the control of his station directly to the network or indirectly to an advertising agency."

The commission pointed out that there exist

WARNER THEATRES BUY IN ZONES

To meet the decentralization of buying ordained in the consent decree selling pattern Warner Theatres will shift purchasing duties to the circuit's zone managers. All films will be bought in the field, with the guidance of the home office. To meet personnel needs in the field under the new policy Ed Hinchy has been assigned to Philadelphia and Nat Fellman to Cleveland as buyers and bookers.

FCC RULES SHOCK RADIO

only two alternatives to competition as a means for protecting the public interest in broadcasting—Government ownership and detailed regulation of the kind applicable to railroads and telephone companies. Neither of these is acceptable to the FCC, which held that "competition, given a fair test, will best protect the public interest."

The new regulations are effective immediately, except that with respect to existing contracts and arrangements, the effective date is deferred for 90 days, and the regulation concerning network ownership of stations may be further extended from time to time with respect to any station to permit the orderly disposition of the properties.

"We have been at pains to limit our regulations to the proven requirements of the situation, and especially to ensuring the maintenance of a competitive market. Radio broadcasting is a competitive industry, the report concluded. "The Congress has so declared it in the Communications Act of 1934, and has required the fullest measure of competition possible within physical limitations. If the industry cannot go forward on a competitive basis, if the substantial restraints upon competition which we seek to eliminate are indispensable to the industry, then we must frankly concede that broadcasting is not properly a competitive industry. If this be the case, we recommend that the Congress should amend the Communications Act to authorize and direct regulations appropriate to a noncompetitive industry with adequate safeguards to protect listeners, advertisers, and consumers. We believe, however, the competition, given a fair test, will best protect the public interest. That is the Ameircan system."

Minority Report Disagrees

In their minority comment, Commissioners Case and Craven charged the majority had exceeded its authority in promulgating regulations to control indirectly the business arrangements of licensees.

The dissenting commissioners held that vigorous competition had been proven to exist among networks and independent stations "and thus no finding of illegal monopoly can be made by this commission, even if it can be assumed that this commission had the legal authority to make such determination."

They held that the commission, through its licensing powers, has ample authority to deal with any abuses which may exist and that the record did not support the majority's decision to impose new regulations.

Commissioners Case and Craven, however, did agree that the best interests of the people might not be served by having one organization control two or more networks.

"There is the strong presumption that four competing national networks independently operated might afford opportunity for improved service, although there is nothing in this record to establish that stations affiliated with the company operating two networks have not rendered a good public service", they said. "It is, therefore, recommended that informal discussions begin forthwith between the commission and representatives of the company operating two networks with a view of obtaining a voluntary segregation."

Taking up the question of artists bureaus, which the majority report ignored, the dissenting opinion held that the FCC has no jurisdiction in that field but should notify the companies that it would request an inquiry by either the Federal Trade Commission or the Department of Justice, or both, in the event the chains do not divest themselves of those activities within a reasonable time.

As a final point, the two commissioners asserted there was no reason why the terms of licenses should not immediately be extended to the full statutory limit of three years. Such action, it was contended, "would create an atmosphere of greater stability in the industry and would in no way detract from the commission's power to proceed by revocation against licensees who contravene the standard of public interest."

"We fear that the proposals of the majority will result inevitably in impaired efficiency of the existing broadcast organization of the country", the minority report asserted.

The minority also predicted that the decision of the majority was likely to result in "anarchy" rather than "free competition."

Fight Expected at Convention

A dispute over the Federal Communications Commission's report on chain broadcasting between affiliates of the National Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company on the one hand and members of the Mutual system on the other is expected to develop next Tuesday at the opening of the annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters meeting at the New Jefferson Hotel, St. Louis, radio observers predicted this week.

Mutual generally has favored the positions taken by the FCC on network operations. Mr. Miller, president of the NAB, was informed that Mutual "resented" his statement attacking the FCC report and Mutual announced that the subject was a "controversial one affecting competitive conditions between the older networks and Mutual." For this reason, it was said, Mutual believes that the NAB should take no position on the matter because its members are split on the issue.

Speakers scheduled for the NAB convention include James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, Vice-president Henry A. Wallace, Major General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., director of the War Department's bureau of public relations; Commander H. R. Thurber, of the Navy Department and Lowell Mellett, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt.

On Wednesday, May 14th, the NAB convention will be thrown open to the public with discussion on television, FM, facsimile and short wave broadcasting, led by experts in those fields.

RKO Signs for NBC Short Wave Programs

RKO has signed a contract with NBC for two 15-minute programs weekly for a year over shortwave to Latin America. For some months a plan for an all-industry program for Latin America was discussed but no action was taken.

The first RKO short wave show, under the new contract, was broadcast Tuesday evening. The Tuesday program will be devoted to dramatizations from current and forthcoming RKO films and the Thursday show will be on the lives of RKO stars. Frank Ortega will write and produce the programs under the direction of Michael J. Hoffay, foreign publicity manager for RKO.

Billings of the NBC-Blue network were estimated this week to be about 10 per cent higher for the first four months of 1941 than in the same period of 1940. Mutual, as NBC and CBS, has also discontinued issuing monthly gross billings statements.

Pathe Signs Union Contract

Pathe Laboratory on Tuesday signed a two-year contract with Local 702, film laboratory technicians' union, covering employes of the plant at Bound Brook, N. J.

"Land of Liberty" Opens in New York

In the New York metropolitan area Loew and RKO theatres opened this week "Land of Liberty," industry-sponsored picture. Between May 5th and 21st the film will play at 78 of the circuits' houses.

Mayor LaGuardia last Saturday issued a statement which said in part: "The film is a stirring story of the onward march of democracy and progress in this country. We can all profit by witnessing this story. We are the fortunate heirs to a great heritage which is very much at stake these days."

Other features of the advance campaign included a full page of pictures in the New York Herald Tribune and a picture layout in the New York Times.

School Exploitation Set

James Marshall, president of the Board of Education of the City of New York said, "May I express the hope that some arrangements will be made so that as many as possible, teachers and children, throughout the country may see this picture."

Oscar A. Doob, Loew theatre advertising and publicity director, sent a letter to the principal of each high school and elementary school in the area announcing a contest for essays on "What Democracy Means to Me." A medal will be given to the winner in each school and special awards will be given to the schools of the borough winners.

RKO neighborhood theatres arranged the time of their matinee presentations of "Land of Liberty" on Tuesday and Wednesday so that the showings were held after school hours. This was done so that teachers and students could attend the theatre to see the film in a group.

"Land of Liberty" has not only has a good boxoffice response throughout the country but has proved one of the greatest builders of goodwill for the industry, according to Mark Larkin and Gordon S. White who have completed three months of field work for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in connection with the picture.

Mr. Larkin covered New England, New York, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania and Mr. White visited the South and Southwest. In all areas the MPPDA field representatives worked with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which is distributing the picture for the industry. Profits have been assigned to war relief.

Edwards Showing "Thumbs Up"

Herbert T. Edwards, producer of the British War Relief Society picture, "Thumbs Up," has sent a print to the London office of the Society by Transatlantic Clipper, for special showings in England. A special 400-foot trailer has been prepared. Sixty prints are now playing day and date in Chicago theatres during the present British War Relief Society fund-raising campaign. Circuits playing this subject include Balaban and Katz, S. and S., and Allied.

Atlantic, Columbia Settle

Action of the Atlantic Film Productions, Ltd., against Columbia Pictures, Inc., for $13,000 damages was settled Tuesday before it reached trial in New York Supreme Court. Atlantic sought to recover the sum allegedly owed by Columbia from distribution proceeds of "Thunder in the City," Edward G. Robinson film produced in England by Atlantic.

ENGINEERS CONSIDER NEW SOUND, STUDY INDUSTRY'S ROLE IN DEFENSE

Visual Education in Connection with Army Training Discussed at Rochester Meeting; New Film Equipment Demonstrated

A demonstration of and consideration of new sound systems, discussion of the role of the motion picture in defense, technical problems in television and the latest engineering advances affecting films were features of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' 49th semi-annual convention this week in Rochester, N. Y.

The four-day meeting opened Monday with registration and a general session at the Sagamore Hotel. The convention was called to order Monday morning by William C. Kunzmann of Cleveland, for many years convention vice-president. He introduced Emery Huse of Hollywood, the Society's president, who assumed active direction of the convention. The opening day was marked by an informal get-together luncheon, addressed by Mayor S. B. Dicker of Rochester; Dr. F. R. Watson, president of the Acoustical Society of America; and Dr. Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music.

Aviation Training Discussed

Discussions during the first day were directed by technical experts in the fields of visual education, air-conditioning, lenses, projection illumination, and motion picture camera equipment design. New problems in the field of aviation training raised by the National Defense Program and by marked progress in civilian aviation, are being attacked successfully by the use of motion pictures in instruction classes, it was reported at the convention Monday. Arch A. Mercy, of the Office of Government Reports, and E. M. Ellingson, of the Civil Aeronautics Board, pointed out that the aviation field presented a new frontier for motion picture production.

A parallel discussion of the use of motion pictures in education was presented by R. A. Kissac, of the University of Minnesota, who described in detail the visual education program developed by the University for its students. One of the program's most interesting services is in the presentation of a weekly newsreel and short subject program for students and faculty, it was said.

J. H. Vickers, of National Film Carriers, Inc., Philadelphia, outlined the delivery procedure followed at each of the thirty-two film-distributing centers in the country.

The afternoon of the first day of the meeting was devoted to the problems of illumination with speakers from the National Carbon Company, Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, Agfa Ansco Company and other organizations.

Frank L. Jones, of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., told the engineers of years of research on the formation of silica films on the surface of a lens increasing the effective transparency of the glass, and thus increasing the efficiency of the lens materially. He said chemical processes for forming the film artificially had been developed and would be put to use in the optical industry.

William C. Miller, optical engineer connected with the Vard Mechanical Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., spoke on the same subject, pointing out that efforts to improve lens efficiency by the application of a surface coating (first discovered accidentally) have been going on since 1892. He said that dust, and even fingerprints, can be removed from lens coatings put on under modern processes. The microscopically thin films cannot be scratched by anything less hard than a metal point, he said.

Other subjects discussed included "Characteristics of intermittent carbon arcs," by H. G. MacPherson, R. B. Dull and F. T. Bowditch, of the National Carbon Co., Cleveland; talks on design of film sprockets by W. G. Hill and C. L. Schaeffer, of Agfa Ansco Corp., of Binghamton, N. Y., and J. S. Chandler, of Eastman Kodak Co.

At the evening session Monday engineers from the Walt Disney Studios, and the Warner Bros.-First National Studios in Hollywood, and from the RCA Manufacturing Company's plants at Indianapolis and Camden, N. J., presented a series of five technical papers on multiple-speaker sound systems.

N. A. Hawkins and W. Garity, of the Walt Disney Studios, went into detail in describing the new RCA Fantasound, which was developed after years of research by Disney and RCA engineers, and is now being used in a number of theatres throughout the country in the presentation of "Fantasia."

N. Levison and L. T. Goldsmith, of the Warner Bros.-First National Studios, told the engineers about a somewhat similar sound system which has been developed by their studios, in collaboration with RCA engineers, and is now installed experimentally in theatres in Hollywood and New York City. Known as "Vitasound," it utilizes a special control track placed on the film.

H. I. Reiskind, of RCA's Indianapolis laboratories, lectured on the principles involved in multi-speaker systems.

New Sprocket Theory

The discussion was concluded Monday night with a paper by J. O. Baker and R. O. Drew, RCA engineers, on the origin and avoidance of a distortion introduced into all sound film during recording by the presence of the sprocket holes in the film. The engineers declared it has been demonstrated that the distortion could be reduced substantially by the elimination of one of the customary two sets of sprocket holes on either side of the film.

On Tuesday a general business session was held.

Dr. C. E. K. Mees, Eastman Kodak Company, gave the chief address Tuesday morning, discussing studies of silver grain in photographic images under the new electron microscope.

Other technical papers presented before the society Tuesday included: "New High-Fidelity Headphones," by L. J. Anderson, of the RCA Manufacturing Company; "New Gadgets for the Film Laboratory," by B. Robinson and M. Leshing, of 20th Century-Fox Film Studios, Hollywood; and "Performance of the Visual Mechanism in the Viewing of Motion Pictures," by Brian O'Brien, of the Institute of Applied Optics, University of Rochester.

Tuesday afternoon was given over to sightseeing and the 49th semi-annual banquet and dance was held that evening at the Starlight room of the Sagamore hotel.

On Wednesday a joint meeting was held with the American Acoustical Society.

Dr. Harvey Fletcher, under whose direction the new sound system was developed, addressed the joint meeting as did several of his associates, including E. C. Wente, R. Biddulph, L. A. Elmer, A. B. Anderson, J. C. Steinberg, W. B. Snow, and A. R. Soffel.

New motion pictures showing the solar prominence, or eruptions of flame on the surface of the sun, were shown to the convention by Dr. R. R. McMath, of the McMath-Hulbert Observatory of the University of Michigan. The films are used for instruction in astronomy at the University and were photographed in a device known as the spectrohelokinematograph, invented by Dr. McMath.

Recent progress in the art of three-dimensional photography was described to the engineers by J. A. Norling, of Loucks & Norling, New York. He pointed out that continuing research was producing refinements in the art that might soon be reflected in greater use of the medium.

Describe Television Images

W. M. Baldwin, Jr., of Bell Telephone Laboratories, discussed television pictures. Mr. Baldwin explained in detail the experiments conducted to compare the resolution, or sharpness, of television images with motion picture images.

E. S. Seeley, of Altec Service Corp., New York City, told the engineers about a new reverberation meter designed to determine the acoustic response of a theatre by direct readings, rather than by time-consuming indirect methods heretofore employed.

Other technical papers presented during the session included the following: "Projection Room Equipment Requirements," by J. J. Sefing of the National Theatre & Supply Company; "The Projection Room—Its Location and Its Contents," by J. R. Prater, of the Congress Theatre, Palouse, Wash.; "A Suggested Clarification of Carbon Arc Terminology as Applied to the Motion Picture Industry," by H. G. MacPherson, National Carbon Company; "Improved Methods of Controlling Carbon Arc Position," D. J. Zaffarano, W. W. Lozier and D. B. Joy, National Carbon Company; "A New 13.6-mm. High Intensity Projector Carbon," W. W. Lozier and D. B. Joy; "Notes on the Mechanism of Disk Recording and Playback," O. Kornei, Brush Development Company.

The convention adjourned after the session Thursday afternoon.

The annual autumn meeting will be held in New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania and next year the spring convention will be held in Hollywood, the board of directors voted.

At the board meeting in July plans for a special form of membership for students planning to specialize in motion picture engineering upon their graduation will be considered.

SMPE MEETS WITH ACOUSTIC SOCIETY

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers, assembled this week in Rochester for the semi-annual convention, held a joint session on Wednesday with the members of the Acoustical Society of America which also was in convention in Rochester.

The morning session was held in the Eastman theatre and the afternoon at the Sagamore Hotel. In the evening the two groups, along with students of the Eastman School of Music and the Rochester Musical Society, assembled in the Eastman theatre for a demonstration of the stereophonic sound system developed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Major Barbara

(United Artists-Pascal)

Satire and Substance from G. B. Shaw

For his second film from the files of George Bernard Shaw Gabriel Pascal has utilized, with collaboration by the playwright, a work of 1905 performed on the stage, new and in revival, under many circumstances and conditions, doubtless including the period of World War I as well as peaceful interludes before and since. In that the film as prepared and presented has much to do with a munitions manufacturer and his cannon works, winding up with the observation that although munitions cause wars they constitute also the sole means of banishing war, this longevity of the stage version would seem to bear upon the fitness of the film for the purposes of today's showmen. The degree of that fitness is, for many reasons, a thing for experience and test to determine, by no means a thing to forecast.

Apart from its utterances regarding munitions, war and related matters, as apart also from its utterances on a great many other subjects, the film is a story about a girl and a man who fall in love. He, a professor steeped in the religions of the ages, joins the Salvation Army because she is a major in it, abandons it when she abandons it, enters the munitions business because her father is czar of the industry and finds her, at picture's end, as ready to marry him as at any time theretofore. It is to this love story, carried along as more or less secondary material in the current of comment from the Shaw pen uttered by his characters, that the rank and file of the screen public may or may not devote first attention. It is not in itself much different from many that have given long service, but the adornments are.

Conveyed to the audience via the dialogue in which his characters engage are Shaw's opinions—and in most cases two or more of them, giving support to both sides of each issue—on a variety of topics. Jotted down in the dark of the theatre as the picture ran its course, a list of the matters dealt with by Shaw's speakers includes religion, government, the practice of law, war, finance, liquor, education, art, journalism, politics and love. A specimen of the manner in which the playwright gets his saying done might be the line in which the munitions magnate, defending whiskey as a boon to civilization, points out that "it enables Parliament to do at 11 o'clock at night what no sane man would think of doing at 11 o'clock in the morning." Opposed to which are some lines by a Salvation Army miss indicting whiskey as chief cause of the poverty and misery which she works to overcome. The script bristles with pronouncements as forthright as this and more so, brilliantly phrased, challenging any and all comers but, nevertheless, interesting the listener at all times.

The two subjects disposed of most positively by the playwright are religion and war. Religion is represented in the film by the Salvation Army, in which the heroine, daughter of a munitions maker and despising his wealth and calling, is an officer and prime mover during the early part of the film. When her commanding officer accepts donations from the munitions maker and a distiller, over her protest, she quits the organization, action and dialogue combining to convey the impression that the Salvation Army is, if not a racket, an institution willing to sell out to the forces it professes to combat. This handling of the matter is one for showmen to inspect before exhibition.

In his treatment of the munitions industry the playwright begins by presenting the cannon manufacturer as a character frankly devoid of the common virtues, outspoken in criticism of civilization and everything in it, including himself, continuing through steady stages of change to depict him as an all-wise benefactor keeping civilization extant by sheer force. Toward the end the picture tours a munitions works, the owner pointing out the blessings which he says are by-products of his cannon-making, the railroad rails, the company community, happy workers, flowers nurtured by nitrates, his argument to this effect bringing all hands into congenial agreement and the threshold of what promises to be happiness. (There is no specific mention of the current war).

As a job of producing, directing and acting, the film is of the best. Wendy Hiller's portrayal of the girl who turns from the Salvation Army to munitions is something for the customers to talk about for long and tell their friends. Rex Harrison as the young man in love with her, Robert Morley as the munitions king and Robert Newton as a Limehouse character turn in striking performances. There are many fine bits and no weak spots in the casting.

Viewed simply from the standpoint of proficiency in picture-making, the film ranks high among its contemporaries. Viewed as a document for exhibition to a specific audience, it is a film for the showman who's to do the exhibiting to examine at first hand. Viewed as propaganda, and it may be viewed as many kinds of the same, it is a document in favour of armaments and the use of armaments in the interests of peace.

Previewed at the Four Star theatre, Los Angeles, to a press audience which, perhaps with some additions from studio ranks, manifested deep interest and, in some spots, admiration expressed in applause. There appears to be no question that an audience as film-wise as this one will find the picture well worth while. Whether it will fare as well when submitted to the public at large was a question the professionals were asking each other in the foyer afterward.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

A Woman's Face

(M-G-M)

Horror Film DeLuxe

This is perhaps the most magnificent horror film ever produced, a triumph of production and direction, but a horror film for all that and subject therefore to the limitations of its kind. The title pertains to the face of the principal character, a woman, which is disfigured to such an extent that she has concealed it from view for most of her life, the while its influence upon her mind and character has resulted in a life of crime. The technical excellence of the production intensifies the effect of the close-ups of this face. The film is morbid, introspective, and contains no comedy relief. It has, in correspondingly great measure, the power to fascinate the type of person who extracts satisfaction from a viewing of the physically and spiritually distorted.

The psychological effect of the mutilation upon the woman afflicted, and through her upon her associates, is the point dealt with for plot purposes. She is, at start of the picture, a successful blackmailer. She meets a maniacal wastrel, who, through ignoring her affliction and thus winning her love, forms a partnership with her for criminal purposes. A doctor whose wife she is blackmailing performs an operation which removes her scars and she takes a new name, hiring out to her partner's uncle as governess of a child whom she has agreed to murder so that her partner will inherit an estate. How she reacts to the attentions paid her, after her facial blemish has been removed, ultimately killing her partner and falling in love with the doctor, makes up a sombre and often depressing story. The tale is told by means of flashbacks as witnesses in a murder trial testify.

Joan Crawford plays the heroine scarred in body and soul, Conrad Veidt the maniacal partner and Melvyn Douglas the surgeon. A large number of supporting players contribute excellently contrasted portrayals.

Production by Victor Saville is opulent and yet seemingly authentic to the smallest detail in its presentation of settings and customs of Sweden, the story taking place in Stockholm and the country north of that city. George Cukor's direction emphasizes the dark side throughout, attaining some telling effects and holding suspense steadily until the ending.

It is hardly a picture to recommend to the very young, due to the sombreness of the subject matter and, on the psychological side, the probability that persons under high school age would not know what it is all about.

Previewed at the Four Star theatre, Los Angeles, to a press audience which gave the film rapt attention—there is nothing in it to provoke laughter and no highlights to induce applause—and seemed agreed that a first rate technical job had been done with the subject matter.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Producer, Victor Saville. Director, George Cukor. Play by Francis De Croisset. Photographed by Robert Planck. Edited by Frank Sullivan. Release date, not set. Running time, when seen in Los Angeles, 105 minutes. Adult audience classification.

Affectionately Yours

(Warner Brothers)

Matrimony vs. The Press

For his final contribution to the Warner folio of product Mark Hellinger offers comedy familiar in theme since "The Front Page" pioneered it, but festooned, in the Hellinger version, with situations and gag sequences which, ranging from the subtle to the slapstick, attain the effect of freshness for the whole. Also on the side of merit and accountable for much that is accomplished in the way of entertainment is speed of narration and enactment that keeps the observer's mind off of such matters as world affairs, his personal troubles and the familiarity of the theme.

On the plus side for showmen exploiting the film are the names of Merle Oberon, Rita Hayworth and Ralph Bellamy, who are the principals grouped about the oncoming Dennis Morgan in a casting that gives the young man the sort of breaks that make stars. An asset, too, is the name of Lloyd Bacon, identified with an impressive array of successes, whose direction extracts a maximum of humour from the material supplied him.

The story, synopsized in detail on page 97 of the Product Digest, opens in Lisbon and moves to New York, centering around the efforts of a newspaper reporter to win back a wife who has divorced him because his work keeps him away from home and the conflicting efforts of his editor, aided by a girl reporter, to keep him on payroll by keeping him unmarried. Incidents appended to that state of affairs provide the amusement the film relies upon for success.

Previewed at the Studio City Theatre, Los Angeles, to a midweek audience lightly sprinkled with press people. There were many laughs increasing in frequency and volume as the picture neared its end, and no restiveness. —W. R. W.

Her First Beau

Romance at 15

Co-starred with Jackie Cooper in this Columbia picture, Jane Withers makes the transition from childhood to adolescence with a skill and in a manner to satisfy the most exacting. It is a circumstance for exhibitors to note that the young lady makes the same transition in the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "A Very Young Lady," likewise in a manner to satisfy the most exacting, reviewed in this space in the April 26th edition. Release date of the Columbia picture is May 8, the film for Miss Withers' home studio being dated for June 13. Both films attend adequately to the important matter of elevating the star from moppet to miss.

Columbia's contribution to the young star's advancement is a B.B. Kahane production directed by Theodore Reed and it surrounds her with a wealth of talent, mostly young, balanced by capable adult players. The scene is a typical American small town and the time is now, most pointedly now in its use of the slang phrases of today's young. What happens, however, is what has always happened when a girl in her teens first fancies herself in love, Miss Withers depicting the emotions of first love, the disappointments, exaltations and thrills, with the artistry of the actress born.

Standouts in support are William Tracy, as a college youth, Edith Fellows as the home town girl enamoured of him, Kenneth Howell as a young collegian who has not only been to Europe but also plays the accordian, and Josephine Hutchinson as the love-stricken girl's mother.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to a midweek audience which did not win any money in the Prosperity Club exercises which immediately preceded the screening, the film pleased everybody on the premises to the extent of making the gathering laugh in unison, cry perhaps just a little, and exit chattering as only satisfied customers do.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Producer, B. B. Kahane. Director, Theodore Reed. Photographed by George Meehan. Edited by Charles Nelson. P. C. A. Certificate No. 7222. Release date, May 8, 1941. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 77 minutes. General audience classification.

Roy Rogers Roundup

The riding, hard-shooting, fast team of Roy Rogers and George "Gabby" Hayes is again working collectively and effectively to render a good western account for the credit side of the pair's over-hill-over-dale activity. Besides the saddle and holster chores, Roy contributes two tuneful and pleasant vocalizations and "Gabby" serves up his quaint, picturesque brand of humor. Two additional songs are delivered by Sally Payne in the role of a bar entertainer and one of the numbers, "Yo Should 'A Seen Pete," is the hit tune of the film. In addition to these principals, further acting personnel includes Elyse Knox, publicized as one of those model goddesses of the John Powers' Olympus, whose assignment as the nebulous heroine angle smothers her in a welter of floor length costuming; Zeffie Tilbury as a spunky septuagenarian, Addison Richards, Harry Woods and Jay Novello, the last three being to the forefront on the menace line. Joseph Kane, in the position of associate producer-director, has allowed the initial reels to lag in action but once the preliminary business of setting the scene and story have been itemized, the pace works up with some fancy horse and gun play, particularly in a pair of sequences depicting stagecoach holdups. Oddly enough, for such a brand of extroverted entertainment, fisticuffs are absent. The photography, as is the case with all of this company's western product, is particularly good.

Roy on his arrival at the lawless town site of Tombstone is mistaken for two-gun character, "Shotgun Cassidy," who is being imported as a stooge sheriff to the district by the neighborhood's crooked mayor and his business agent for breaking the spirit of "Granny Carson" and grabbing her property for non-payment of taxes. The old lady is owner of a rich mine but has been unable to ship her wares successfully due to a series of stagecoach robberies. At first Roy plays ball with the crooks in order to study the dirty underhand work but he soon changes sides when the real "Shotgun Cassidy" shows up to claim his peace officer position. With the aid of the U. S. Government and a group of local high spirited citizens, Roy proceeds to corral the pressure boys, thus opening the stagecoach route for "Granny's" ore and the romantic acceptance of him by the old lady's granddaughter.

Seen at a private showing in the company's projection room in New York, where a gathering of trade reviewers and lady appraisers from educational and social uplift organizations took the film in mute and professionally accustomed stride.—Joseph F. Coughlin

I'll Wait For You

(MGM)

Farm Reforms Gangster

Utilizing materials and situations found effective in past uses, the basic idea going back as far as "Turn to the Right," Producer Edwin Knopf and Director Robert B. Sinclair have bundled into this moderately cast comedy drama a screen-worthy item in the medium bracket for the family trade. It is competently acted and its point—that a criminal from the city is likely to be redeemed through contact with life on a farm, including an attractive farmer's daughter—has been a favorite for years.

The story (see Product Digest, page 122) opens in New York, where gangster control of restaurants via laundry check-up is depicted, and moves to the Connecticut country side, where a gangster hiding out meets a girl and is redeemed. It is filmed in such fashion as to place the burden of entertainment upon the shoulders of Robert Sterling, a young man being groomed for stardom by MGM, and Marsha Hunt, playing the girl in the case, both of whom do well.

Virginia Weidler, Fay Holden, Paul Kelly and Henry Travers supply the quality of support to be expected of their long experience.

Previewed in studio projection room to a press audience which seemed to warm up to the offering in its latter stretches and proceeded, at close, to compare notes as to the origin of the situations and plot twists used.—W. R. W.

Federal Fugitives

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Espionage Melodrama

Concurrent with the Government's national defense plans director William Beaudine brings to the audience another of the many films of espionage and sabotage activities in this country by foreign powers. Starring Neil Hamilton and Doris Day the film revelation is an interesting expose of the work and methods of the spies in the United States.

The story concerns a Secret Service officer as portrayed by Mr. Hamilton, who, with the cooperation of an aircraft plant executive, negotiates with the foreign agents for the acquisition of newly designed airplane plans. His adventures in trapping the representatives of foreign governments and his romance with a female member of the spy ring who is innocently involved brings to the audience an intresting story.

Supporting Mr. Hamilton and Miss Day, as the ring member who later aids the government agent, are Victor Varconi as the leader of the ring who dies in an attempt to escape, Lyle Latell, as assistant to the Secret Service agent, and Charles Wilson as the crooked politician aiding the spies.

Law of the Wolf

(Arthur Ziehm)

Canine Melodrama

Reminiscent of the days when Rin Tin Tin was a box-office attraction Arthur Ziehm in presenting "Law of the Wolf" with Rin Tin Tin, Jr., billed as the grandson of the famous dog, gives canine fanciers and juveniles a somewhat similar although more limited story.

Directed by Raymond K. Johnson the plot and theme of the picture have been built around the adventures of the dog, while romance, action, comedy and other elements which make for enjoyable outdoor melodramas are lacking. A cast, with the exception of Dennis Moore comprised for the most part of unknowns, labor through the scenes in trying to purvey to the audience a rather weak story. Overacted melodramatic scenes and trite and insufficient dialogue further hamper the production.

The story concerns a dog whose master is jailed for a crime he did not commit. The dog, "Rinty," is left in charge and it is here that he displays his canine intelligence in rescuing a child in a drifting canoe, saving the life of a boy about to drown, and leading police away from his master who has since broken jail to prove his innocence with the aid of the dog.

Supporting Dennis Moore as the innocent convict and master of the dog, are Luana Walters as the girl, James Aubrey as the law officer, and Martin Spellman and Bobby Gordon as the children whose lives are saved by the dog.

King of the Zombies

(Monogram)

Shudder Comedy

Highlighted and made amusing by the comedy of dusky Mantan Moreland, this Lindsley Parsons production, predicated on the legend that the dead are resurrected and made slaves in certain tropical regions rates better than the producer's average in point of entertainment. Although the story is treated seriously save to the extent that the comedian dominates it, it is as a comedy rather than as a thriller that it succeeds.

Setting for the tale is an island near Puerto Rico on which American army flyers land in an emergency to be given hospitality of a sort that keeps them up nights by a doctor who turns out to ba a master of Zombies, a hypnotist, and an agent for a foreign government willing to kill to obtain U. S. military information.

He is killed by an American whom he has made a Zombie after killing him, who leads the other Zombies against him and then returns to life.

Dick Purcell, Joan Woodbury, John Archer and the others play the story straight, but Moreland is given free rein, an arrangement profitable on both sides. Direction by Jean Yarbrough lacks nothing save acceleration, which would have helped.

Shadows on the Stairs

(Warner-First National)

Murder Mystery

Originally titled "Murder on the Second Floor," director D. Ross Lederman here has unwound an interesting tale of murder and presented it in a novel fashion. Based on a play by Frank Vosper the cast of the film story are seen as members of an English boarding house who are used by an author for the characters in a mystery story he is writing. This, of course, is not revealed until the end.

In search of new plots and characters "Hugh Bromilow" (Bruce Lester) takes a room in a boarding house run by "Stella Armitage" (Frieda Inescort). A romance develops between the young author and the landlady's daughter but murder interferes with the smooth progress of the romance and it is revealed that there is a plot underway to overthrow the British government. All members of the household are under suspicion until "Bromilow" and the police solve the case.

Though the audience is left wondering at some of the minor points in the story and the surprise ending further complicates the situation momentarily, nevertheless the film treatment allows the audience to match its collective wits against those of Scotland Yard and the young author-detective.

Reviewed at the Brooklyn Strand theatre late Monday afternoon where only a handful of people watched with interest the developments of this picture and accompanying feature, "Federal Fugitives," also reviewed in adjoining columns.—GEORGE SPIRES.

This Man Is Dangerous

(John Argyle-Pathe Pictures)

Crook Melodrama

There would not seem to be any evidence of a world market bid in this modest crook thriller. It traces a familiar pattern, boasts no outstanding personalities, aims obviously at the established if unexacting public who call for crooks and crime without overmuch regard for ultra-refinement in the handling thereof.

Based on David Hume's novel "They Called Him Death" it presents the pretty picture of a private enquiry agent and his police detective father, working on the same case—the disappearance of a peer's daughter and attendant ransom racketing. A doctor, kidnapped and impersonated by a crooked foreigner, a sinister Harley Street "phoney," a thug with a pseudo American accent, torture, poison gas and murder all find their way into the pattern. The boy of course gets his man and his girl—and ceases ultimately to get his father's goat.

Huntington's direction is of the elementary variety but the thrill thirsty patron will not worry about that. James Mason is the boy wonder and Margaret Vyner the girl.

March of Time—Vol. 7, No. 10

This latest issue of March of Time reflects the headlines of the daily newspapers as they concern Britain's effort to keep open the sea lanes over which war material and vital food stuffs must safely and quickly be carried to England. Canada's participtation and this country's ever increasing aid are depicted as as the United States' "protectorate" over Greenland. There does not seem to be much in the subject that has not already been covered in recent newsreels. There are, however, scenes aboard a British tanker in convoy from Canada to England filmed by March of Time cameramen, which have a good deal of dramatic impact. Other aspects of the subject include sequences showing the U. S. Navy and ex-Colonel Lindbergh speaking against U. S. participation in the war. Running time, 18 minutes.

The most magnificent entertainment ever to come to the screen . . . crowded with stars and spectacle, action and ecstasy, beauty, laughter, tears, thrills . . . in gorgeous Technicolor!

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

SOME RATHER STARTLING disclosures are commencing to seep through from Mexico City about the "inside" handling by minor officials, of Hollywood stars and press at the Mexican Government's recent Cinema Fiesta, to which they had invited Hollywood and U. S. officials, as part of the new "good-will" buildup between the Latin countries and our's.

Some Mexican police knocked around reporters and press cameramen, and used the special police cars for their own special pleasure. The Association of Mexican Picture Producers, which spent a large sum to treat the guests from Hollywood at a large public gathering, caused the ousting of some police officials when they reported to Police Chief General Miguel Z. Martinez that the policemen, assigned to protect the crowds, charged $3 per person, or any part thereof, for admission to the event.

One ardent fan, a young married woman, attempted suicide by poison when disappointed at not being able to even get near a Hollywood star for at least one autograph.

Mauricio de la Serna, operating the swanky Teatro Alemeda, a big first run in the Mexican Capital, set up a feast of champagne and food for the Hollywood stars to follow their personal appearances on the stage of his theatre. When the players finished entertaining overflowing audiences and moved to Senor Serna's big supper room, they found that the cops assigned to watch things had helped themselves to the repast, but completely.

Sticking close to the track of "over-there" reports, Advertising Age comes through with this London letter, to a person in the U. S., unnamed:

DEAR AUNTIE:

One of my last few pleasures left is to pore over American magazines whenever we can get hold of them, reading them from cover to cover, but what we linger over almost longer than anything is the large colored ads of luscious chocolate layer cakes, ice puddings, and "Spam" and eggs and corn on the cob. . . . Eggs! I've almost forgotten what they look like. On the cinema today in an American film we saw a conjurer nonchalantly breaking eggs into a bowler hat. We could hardly bear to look, it was so painful to see the waste! . . .

MGM says the "allure" of its new Ziegfeld Girl" has penetrated the iron bars of Michigan State Prison, explaining it had received a letter from an inmate who said he had been "completely captivated" by the beauty of the Ziegfeld Girls whose photos he had seen in a movie fan magazine. "Such beauty," he wrote, "inspires me to follow a career of art."

PETE HARRISON HAS A NURSING AID

Our colleague and contemporary exponent of motion picture trade publishing, P. S. (Pete) Harrison, has a sideline: Furnishing nursing aids for busy mothers.

Gadgeteer Harrison has invented (U. S. Patent No. 2183332) and is marketing from his publishing headquarters at Rockefeller Center, New York, a little item which he calls "Nursette—the Handy Nurse." It fits snugly around the baby's milk bottle and fastens on to crib or carriage, a sort of flexible arm, which, Pete says, "frees mothers from the tedium of holding bottle in position."

Lacquered in either pale pink or baby blue, Mr. Harrison guarantees that, with his Nursette, there'll be "No More Broken Bottles . . . No More Bottle Holding . . . No More Bottle Throwing." Wanna Bet?

Band Leader Raymond Scott arrived at a temporary solution of the ASCAP-BMI imbroglio, weeks ago, making at the same time a signal contribution to musical art. He has been experimenting with silent music—more correctly called an "aural illusion." The members of the band go through all of the motions of performance, puffing out their cheeks and distending their neck arteries. Scott, after leading them through their vociferous silence, takes a bow and then announces the next number, which may or may not be audible. Many composers throughout the ages have striven to write silent music. What once would have been an artistic triumph, has today become almost a necessity. Neither BMI nor ASCAP can claim that Raymond Scott's silence infringes any copyright or is plagiarized from any previously-written silence. Also, its much better on the ears.

The morning mail held a new type of fan letter this week for John Hesse, manager of the Roger Sherman Theatre, in New Haven, as follows:

"Dear Sir: This is to express my appreciation of the kindness your entire staff extended to me on Wednesday night of this week. Your assistant, Mr. Hughes, Mr. DeLise and numerous other handsome ushers whom I cannot name, gave me as much attention as Mrs. Roosevelt would get from King George of England. Thanks again. I'll be in to faint another time as soon as possible. Very truly yours . . . "

CANADA'S soldiery will soon be marching to "canned-music," film recorded martial airs, played by sound tracks.

Brass bands, the military variety, employed to inspire the heavily-shod feet of marching troops are scarce in Canada, in proportion to the number of training units who have need of music on parade. Many bands have left for overseas duty with regiments on active service in the British Isles.

The need for martial music for marching purposes, recognized by military heads, unearthed many specimens of disc-recorded march tunes. These it was found, were designed primarily for concert purposes, the time of which was not strictly in accord with the specifications of the monotonous "left-right, left-right."

Original idea was to mount the turntables on trucks with speaker units. The idea was good, but not practical over rough terrain of route marches. Some other medium then, had to be found, and technicians at Associated Screen News in Montreal are satisfied with progress made thus far, in equipping military units with sound trucks, employing film-recorded sound.

The motion picture's large contributions of manpower to the United States Army in these days of war preparations, or whatever, warrants interest in that fountain pen merchandising campaign to furnish first-class fountain pens to the soldier boys who may forget the girls they left behind them. The sales drive to equip the lonesome soldiers with writing stick recalls the classic advice of Luke McCluke: "Do right, and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman."

Reminiscing a bit, the other afternoon, Walter Scanlon, oldtime Brooklyn recording balladeer, who does the "Songs of Ireland" show on New York radio station WOR, remembered how he made recordings for the late Thomas Alva Edison's recording company for 30 years, during which the great discoverer in science also discovered many a song hit which is still heard today. It was Edison who turned up "I'll Take You Back Kathleen," a song that is still quite popular. Thomas Edison requested that "I'll Take You Back Kathleen" be played at his funeral.

Opening of Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane" at the RKO Palace last Thursday and the subsequent two-a-day policy has caused unhappiness among the out-of-work acrobats, emcees, and vaudeville folk who spend their disengaged time "resting" in front of the once famous Broadway home of the headline vaudeville acts. Police, RKO, or someone has shooed them from under the Palace marquee. The showfolk now are strung in forlorn knots along the curb in front of the Newsreel Theatre and at the 46th and 47th Street corners of Broadway. Overheard: "I tell ya, we can't wait for him in fronta the Palace, they'll give us the bum's rush."

MORE GRIST FOR THE MILL

Adding almost daily to the already huge store of material purchased for use in this forthcoming season, first to fall within the Consent Decree's selling terms, Hollywood bought another eight properties during the last 10 days.

Paramount and Warners, already well in the vanguard so far as story buys are concerned, accounted for three and two apiece, respectively. The former studio acquired film rights to "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat," best selling novel by Isabel S. Rorick on the subject of a young married couple. Fred Kohlmar will be the associate producer. Paramount also bought "Channel Port," an original by Leonard Lee, which is a spy story set against the background of the English channel invasion ports, and "The Silver Queen," by Forrest Halsey and William Allen Johnston, to be produced by Harry Sherman and star Ellen Drew.

As a starring vehicle for Edward G. Robinson, Warners acquired "A Night Before Christmas," stage play by Laura and S. J. Perelman. It also bought "Manhattan Fury," original dealing with taxi drivers, written by Daniel Fuchs.

"Sis, Boom, Bah!" a revue written by its college student cast members, was bought by Monogram and will be presented as a stage attraction before filming. Republic bought a Roger Williams original, "Strange Bedfellows," and Producers Releasing purchased "The Warden's Daughter," original by Martin Mooney, scheduled for a July 6th starting date.

Ridin' the Trail

Now before cameras on the Columbia studio ranch is "Texas," large scale western of the cattle drives to Abilene in the 1860's, which George Marshall is directing and which, while not yet designated, will probably be a leading candidate for extended time and preferred playdates on that studio's 1941-42 schedule.

A free lance director because he feels it provides "more freedom to pick the subjects I like," Mr. Marshall is next slated to go down Gower Street to RKO, where he will handle "Valley of the Sun," from the Clarence Buddington Kelland tale.

Directing westerns is not a novelty so far as Marshall is concerned. "Destry Rides Again" and "When the Daltons Rode" are his products, as was, among many another, "Committee On Credentials," made 23 years ago with Harry Carey. From then to now, they've all borne the Marshall hallmark, reflecting the director's belief that the hard ridin' and shootin' subjects have been life savers for the industry. As illustration, he cites the late Carl Laemmle's remark that it was Universal's westerns and serials which made the "big" pictures possible.

It was some 25 years ago that Marshall first went to work for "Uncle Carl," after having landed in Hollywood with a background ranging from attendance at the University of Chicago to a brief career as a semi-pro baseball pitcher. This last eased the way, for Universal City had a baseball team, on which, incidentally, Frank Lloyd played first base. The pitcher soon enough demonstrated his ability both off and on the mound, and moved up from his first job in the industry, that of portraying the Indians who were forever biting the Hollywood dust.

Those early chores may have influenced Marshall in regarding the western subject as highly as he does, but limit him it did not. Returning to the film fold after serving in World War I, he made Ruth Roland serials for Pathe, then went over to Fox and in 1925 became supervising director for all short subjects units at the studio. Since, his long list of directorial credits includes such non-western material as "Love Under Fire," "The Goldwyn Follies," "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," "The Ghost Breakers" and "Pot O' Gold."

But, for Marshall, there remains nothing like a good western. They've slumped in the past, as in 1914, before Bill Hart rode to the rescue, and again in the early 1920's, but only to return stronger than ever.

Today, there's great improvement in western story content. Not only plot, but situation and characterization have more plausibility than ever before. Yet the appeal to the audience remains basically the same because it's primarily visual. And westerns are in the saddle again!

PARAMOUNT, PATHE, UNIVERSAL, RCA, EASTMAN PROFITS REPORTED

First Quarter Reports Indicate Profit Rise in Distribution, Theatres, Equipment, Radio; Defense Work Aids Upswing

Paramount Pictures, Inc., this week estimated earnings for the quarter ended April 5, 1941, at $2,475,000 after deducting interest and all charges, including provision for Federal income tax computed at 30 per cent. This amount includes $650,000 from Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned, non-consolidated subsidiaries. Earnings for the corresponding quarter in 1940 were $1,606,000 including $716,000 from Paramount's interest in subsidiaries.

Last week the annual Paramount financial report showed earnings of $6,304,064 for the fiscal year ended January 4, 1941 (see MOTION PICTFURE HERALD, May 3rd, page 35). A profit of $1,231,000 on the undistributed earnings of partly owned subsidiaries increased the Paramount net last year to $7,633,130 an increase of more than 100 per cent over 1939 when the company reported a net of $2,737,533.

Dividends Increase

Outstanding as of April 5, 1941, were 127,489 shares of cumulative, convertible $100 par value 6 per cent First Preferred stock and 531,700 shares of cumulative, convertible $10 par value 6 per cent Second Preferred stock. After deducting $270,988 of dividends accrued for the quarter on these preferred shares, the remaining profit of $2,204,012 for the quarter represented 89 cents per share on the 2,466,620 shares of Common Stock outstanding on April 5, 1941. This compares with 53 cents per share for the quarter ended March 30, 1940.

During the quarter Paramount acquired 6,700 shares of its First Preferred stock at a discount of approximately $8,400. Also 770 shares of Second Preferred stock were converted, during the quarter, into 693 shares of Common stock.

Kodak Sales Show 24 Per Cent Rise

Sales totalling $30,936,409 during the first 12 weeks of 1941 by Eastman Kodak Company registered an increase of 24 per cent over the company's gross for the same period last year, Thomas J. Hargrave, vice-president, declared at the annual meeting in Jersey City this week. A defense order backlog of $36,000,000 is responsible for a large proportion of the increase. Capital expenditure for the year will be $18,430,000 as compared with $16,730,000 last year Mr. Hargrave predicted.

The depreciation reserve will supply $8,500,000 of the increase, with about $4,850,000 drawn from 1940 earnings in excess of dividends and $5,080,000 from cash surplus.

Pathe Film Corp. Lists Quarter Net

Pathe Film Corp. in report for the quarter ended March 31, 1941, shows a net profit of $28,633 after charges and federal income taxes. It is equal after preferred dividend requirements, to three cents a share on 577,051 shares of common stock. This compares with $29,633 or three cents a common share in March quarter of 1940.

The report states that du Pont Film Manufacturing Corp. (the common stock of which Pathe Film Corp. owns 35 per cent) had a net profit of $439,258 for first quarter of 1941, as compared with $452,939 in corresponding period of 1940. The portion of these earnings which accrued to Pathe Film Corp.'s 35 per cent common stock interest amounted to $153,740 in 1941 as compared with $158,528 in 1940. Of these earnings, $118,740 were undistributed in 1941 and $123,528 in 1940, which undistributed amounts are not reflected in the income account of the company.

1,000 EXPECTED AT MPTOA CONVENTION

Attendance of more than 1000 theatre owners at the MPTOA national convention and Pacific Coast Conference ITO meeting at Los Angeles on June 9th to 11th was predicted by Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president who arrived in Los Angeles on Wednesday to complete arrangements for the meeting at the Ambassador Hotel. He said 560 reservations had already been received from the Pacific area alone.

Mr. Kuykendall repeated his recent statement that he was not a candidate for office, but made no comment on his action if the meeting drafted him for another term as president of the MPTOA. He has held the post for seven years. No alternate candidate has been named as yet. Mr. Kuykendall will appoint convention committees during his stay on the Coast.

Estimate Universal Half-Year Profits

Wall Street sources estimate the earnings of Universal Pictures for the first half of the current fiscal year ended April 30th, at approximately $1,700,000 before allowance for taxes and charges. Last year, on the same basis, Universal reported a net of $1,381,000. The estimate calculated the second quarter Universal profit at almost $1,000,000, before provision for taxes. Universal reported a profit of $703,795 for the first quarter.

RCA Gross Income Rises 21 Per Cent

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, reported a first quarter profit of $2,734,572 at the annual stockholders' meeting on Tuesday. After preferred dividends, it equals 14 cents a share on common stock compared with an 11 cent per share dividend, or profit of $2,313,893 last year. Consolidated gross income for the quarter was $34,303,324, an increase of 21 per cent. The profit increased 18 per cent during the period.

Defense orders received by RCA amounted to approximately $36,500,000 up to the end of the quarter, Mr. Sarnoff told the stockholders. He said the products on order range from confidential communication and electronic devices for the Army and Navy to motion picture equipment for installation in draft cantonments, and aboard new naval vessels. The company plants at Camden, Harrison and Indianapolis are concentrating on defense work, he said, and hinted that other activities may have to be curtailed during the war emergency. As many as 100 sub-contractors in 16 states are handling RCA work.

The company, Mr. Sarnoff said, is currently studying television in the light of the recent FCC order approving commercial operation (see story on page 30). Mr. Sarnoff also reported that RCA is examining the FCC order requiring its subsidiary, National Broadcasting Company to drop its blue network (see story on page 31).

Only One F. P. Canadian Bond Issue Outstanding

Famous Players Canadian Corp. at Toronto on May 1st reported that with a notice of redemption on June 1st for outstanding 1941 series A bonds worth $350,000 the company will have only one issue of bonds outstanding. The 1942 issue will be redeemed at $101 for each $100 par value plus accrued interest.

After the issue has been redeemed, Famous Players will have outstanding only one issue, the 4½ per cent bonds which are scheduled to mature in 1951, amounting to $5,192,000. It is further stated that mortgages on theatre properties having more than one year to run have been reduced to $296,614 from $451,000 during the past 12 months.

Heywood-Wakefield Seating Profit Up

The Heywood-Wakefield Company, manufacturer of theatre chairs and other seating equipment reported a net profit for the first quarter of 1941 at $60,368. The figure equals a 43 cent dividend on each share of Series B preferred stock. Arrears on the issue total $2.50. The net for the first quarter in 1940 was $4,880. Richard N. Greenwood, president told stockholders that sales were 9 per cent above last year and said that current orders were 15 per cent ahead of the end of the first quarter of 1940.

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., this week announced a dividend on preferred stock of 96¼ cents per share payable June 2nd. A similar payment, the first dividend since 1932 was made at the end of the first quarter on March 1st. Both dividends were current. Arrears on the preferred shares, dating from 1932, amount to $33.68¾.

The board of directors of Roxy Theatre, Inc., at its meeting on May 1st declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents per share on the outstanding Preferred stock of the Corporation, payable on May 31, 1941, to stockholders of record at the close of business on May 17th, 1941.

The RKO board of directors on May 1st elected Hugh Robertson executive manager of Rockefeller Center, Inc., to the board succeeding John Parson, resigned. Kenneth B. Umbreit was named assistant secretary to the corporation. Mr. Umbreit is a member of the home office legal staff. The board ratified distribution contracts with Samuel Goldwyn but took no action on a reported $9,500,000 refinancing for Keith Albee Orpheum Corp. It was said plans for the loan did not require RKO directors' ratification.

U.S. HEARS COMPLAINTS OF CIRCUIT EXPANSION

Arnold Reported Studying New Theatre Acquisitions by Five Companies Signing Decree

Continuing expansion of theatre circuits affiliated with the "Big Five" consent decree signatories has brought exhibitor complaints to the Department of Justice from many sections of the country, Washington sources indicated this week. It is reported that the Government is weighing action to curb the alleged extension of theatre holdings by the consenting distributors.

Under the provisions of the consent decree, distributors must report acquisition of new theatre holdings to the Government, but the latter will not restrain such expansion unless it results in specific injuries to competing theatres. No word was forthcoming from the Department of Justice on whether it would seek a judicial curb on the theatre activities as a supplement to the New York decree, or would seek legislative action. The anti-trust division headed by Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, was known to be studying the question of theatre operation, however.

The Government has registered no specific complaints with the Big Five against their entry further into the field of exhibition. Government officials are said to feel, however, that the regulation of theatre holdings is one of the weak spots of the New York decree.

A hint on possible lines of Government action against the recent Minnesota anti-decree law was contained in a semi-official observation in Washington this week that the bill, sponsored by Northwest Allied, which requires that distributors offer an entire season's product, is unconstitutional. It was held the law restricted interstate commerce and through the arbitrary 20 per cent cancellation clause deprived distributors of property without due process of law.

Crescent Answers Nashville Queries

Crescent Amusement Company, four of its officers and stockholders and seven associated defendant theatre companies in the Government anti-trust suit at Nashville filed answers on April 30th to federal interrogatories seeking definition of corporate holdings. The case is scheduled for trial on July 7th.

Outstanding Crescent stock was listed at 10,000 one class shares, each with one vote, of an aggregate par value of $1,000,000 dollars. It is currently quoted at 160 bid and 170 asked on the Nashville market. The company said it owned financial interest in four of the seven other companies filing answers and in other corporations which are not defendants, but in no case owns more than 50 per cent of the capital stock. Tony Sudekum, president of Crescent, listed his holdings at 1,857 shares, and loans without interest to Rockwood Amusement, Inc., a co-defendant.

Answers were also filed by Mrs. Nettie Sudekum; R. E. Baulch, Secretary of Crescent; Kermit C. Stengel, president of Rockwood Amusements (Baulch and Stengel are sons-in-law of Mr. Sudekum), and by the following companies, representing theatre ownership in Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama: Cumberland Amusement Company, Cherokee Amusements, Inc., Kentucky Amusement Co., Inc., Lyric Amustment Co., Inc., Nu-Strand Corporation, Rockwood Amusements, Inc., and Strand Enterprises, Inc.

Allen A. Doby, special assistant to the Attorney General has assumed charge of the trial preparations. George H. Armistead and William Waller, defense counsel, will file two more answers to interrogatories before the reply deadline on May 26th, they said this week.

Pickwick Defense Gets Delay for Responses

Seven distributor defendants named in the $5,452,575 anti-trust suit filed in U. S. District Court at New Haven by the Pickwick Theatre Greenwich, Conn. have received an extension until May 19th of the time in which they must reply to the suit. Federal judge Carroll C. Hincks granted the postponement of pleas. Loews, Inc., RKO, Vitagraph, Paramount, Universal, Columbia, and United Artists were represented by Charles M. Lyman in filing replies. Skouras theatres and Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc. also defendants have not entered pleas. The plaintiffs, Perfect Theatres, Inc., Fairfield Holding Corp., and Greenfield, Inc. owners of the Pickwick are represented by Cummings and Lockwood, of New Haven.

Quiz Executives Before Hillside Trust Trial

Pretrial examination of officers of the eight major companies named as defendants in the $900,000 anti-trust suit of the Hillside Amusement Company was authorized in an order signed by Judge Samuel Mandlebaum on Wednesday. The Hillside company, operator of the Mayfair theatre at Hillside, N. J., charges the denfendants with conspiracy to restrict product despite. It was the first anti-trust suit instituted after signing of the consent decree.

Theatre Granted Picket Injunction

In a lengthy opinion handed down by President Judge Will Leach of the Lackawanna County Court, R. A. Lesaius, owner of Bulls Head Theatre in Scranton, Pa., was granted an injunction restraining Local 329, IATSE and MPO from "picketing, violence, disorder or interference" with the plaintiff's business until October 1, 1941, date on which the contract between Mr. Lesaius and Local 997, United Theatrical Alliance, CIO, expires.

Once before Judge Leach ruled in a dispute involving the rival theatrical unions when he granted an injunction restraining the CIO union from picketing the Comerford Theatres in Scranton on the grounds the AFL union had a valid contract with the Comerford organization. The judge ruled the present case is clearly a case of a dispute between rival unions and not a labor dispute existing between employer and employe.

Answering the AFL local's contention that the CIO dissolved Local 997 which had the contract with Mr. Lesaius, Judge Leach opined "evidence was taken to show that an 'administrator' was appointed by the CIO to dissolve the union. There is nothing to show the plaintiff (Lesaius) is not entitled to the peaceful performance of his contract."

Cuban Exhibitors Plan Convention

by RAMON PEON
in Havana

Arrangements are being completed in Havana for the first annual exhibitors' convention which will be held the end of this month. The plan has received the enthusiastic support of the National Union of Exhibitors. Antonio Villazon, editor of The Exhibitor, Cuban trade paper, is in charge of the program. Headquarters of the convention will be at the Sevilla Biltmore hotel.

Production is set to start this month on the first film involving both Cuban and American interests and capital. The picture. tentatively titled "Flower of Cuba" is from a screen play by Angel Lazaro, Spanish author, and will be directed by Max Nosek, on leave from Columbia pictures. Production will be at the Peliculas Cubanas Studios in Havana. N. L. Prieto of Zenith Films and Ludwig Iandy are now in New York to make arrangements for laboratory and technical facilities.

Cuban technicians have formed a union "for the defense of their mutual interests." They have been joined by 20th Century-Fox technicians now filming exteriors in Technicolor for "Caribbean Cruise."

The America theatre, new first run in Havana, opened April 29th with an audience of social and civic notables attending. Warner's "All This and Heaven Too" was selected for the opening feature.

MUTUAL DEFERS ASCAP PACT UNTIL NAB REPORTS

NAB Will Examine Network, Per Program Licenses at St. Louis Meeting Next Week

Peace in the radio music war appeared at hand between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the broadcasters with MBS being first to break the four-month-old stalemate. The Mutual Broadcasting System's board of directors this week approved a blanket network contract with the Society and submitted the proposal to 175 member stations for ratification. At midweek votes were still coming in from the broadcasters, with opinion about evenly divided on whether the network should make peace with the songwriters.

ASCAP music will return to the Mutual network immediately, under the terms of the agreement approved by the Mutual directors, if a majority of the member stations ratify the pact. Although a number of the largest Mutual affiliates announced they would approve the contract opposition developed from the strong Mutual chains operated in New England by John Shephard, III, and in Ohio by Hulbert Taft, Jr. Various independent stations also voted against the Mutual pact leading most observers to concede that ratification would be postponed until after the National Association of Broadcasters Convention at St. Louis on May 12th.

"Interference" Scored

Neville Miller, president of the NAB, last weekend wired Mutual members not to ratify the ASCAP pact until they had attended the St. Louis meeting. Fred Weber, general manager of Mutual and Gene Buck, ASCAP head, scored "NAB interference," but there were numerous indications, particularly from smaller affiliates, that even though they favored the peace plan they would delay their vote until they had heard debate at St. Louis. A majority of 88 stations must approve the pact.

Endorsing the peace plan and urging an immediate resumption of ASCAP music were such key stations as WOR, New York; WGN, Chicago; the Don Lee network in California; and WGR, Buffalo, WCAE, Pittsburgh, and WFBR, Baltimore. They, and other stations, were expected to approve the network pact and also conclude individual agreements with ASCAP for both per program and blanket licensing of local programs.

Terms of the network licensing agreement set a 3 per cent royalty on all network programs for four years; thereafter a 3½ per cent royalty until the expiration of the contract on January 1, 1950. Stations will pay 3 per cent of payments for broadcasting facilities (less discounts and agency commissions) for four years and thereafter 3½ per cent until 1950. Monthly sustaining fees will equal the highest rate paid for an hour's time on the local outlet. Payments are not to exceed one and a half times the station's 1940 sustaining fee and small stations grossing less than $50,000 a year will pay a nominal $1 a year network fee.

ASCAP officials estimate that the new network formula, which is also the basis of proposals to the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting Company will bring $4,200,000 a year to Society members. Sustaining fees will account for approximately $600,000 of the amount. In previous years ASCAP collections from radio have averaged in the neighborhood of four million dollars.

Per program arrangements are offered to Mutual stations under the agreement, and may be for shorter periods than the blanket contract. Stations would be required however to account for all compositions used on musical programs.

Payment under the per program formula provides for 10 per cent of net receipts from musical programs; 3 per cent from programs with theme song or incidental music; and 1½ per cent for music used in connection with football games. No fee is required from other sports events. On sustaining programs the fee is one per cent of the station rate for sponsored programs. Sustaining programs under religious, patriotic or civic auspices are exempted.

An option provision permits ASCAP to change the per program basis to a blanket deal if payments are less than 2 per cent of net receipts during any year. Stations may change to a blanket basis if per program payments are in excess of 5 per cent of the annual net.

NAB Promises "Factual Analysis"

Mr. Miller's wire to the Mutual members said a "factual analysis" of the terms of the proposed settlement with ASCAP would be presented at the St. Louis meeting next week. There was no indication of the stand which the NAB would take, but it was recalled in New York that the Association vigorously objected to the networks undertaking separate negotiations with ASCAP.

The split between Mutual officials and a considerable portion of the radio industry appeared to grow wide Wednesday after an indecisive meeting in New York of the NAB executive committee attended by NBC CBS and NBS. They were unable to reach unanimity on the ASCAP situation it was indicated, and will so report to the NAB at St. Louis.

Negotiations with NBC and CBS meanwhile were reported continuing this week and spokesmen for ASCAP expressed hope that they would reach the signing stage next week at the conclusion of the St. Louis meeting. ASCAP is reported preparing new song issues for the return to radio.

Niles Trammell, executive vice-president of the National Broadcasting Co., Inc., at the meeting of Radio Corporation of America stockholders on Tuesday informed them that "negotiations with a committee representing the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers were under way in a sincere effort to reach a satisfactory and fair arrangement." NBC arrangements with BMI will be continued, however, he added.

Supreme Court Weighs ASCAP Suit

Arguments before the United States Supreme Court over the validity of Florida's music regulation statute were concluded last Wednesday. The court is expected to deliver a decision in about four weeks. It also has under advisement arguments testing the validity of Nebraska's similar anti-ASCAP legislation.

At the hearings on the Florida law the state's counsel Lucien H. Boggs told the court that the music society was seeking to use the courts to continue "monopolistic practices in violation of the common law" and contrary to the Sherman anti-trust act and the recent federal consent decree with ASCAP. Chief Justice Hughes restricted arguments to the question of constitutionality of the Florida law which permits public performance of copyright music whenever the purchase price has been paid.

Army Producers Discuss Plans

Officers commissioned in the Signal Corps Reserve from the motion picture industry attended a meeting at Twentieth Century-Fox Studio Monday, May 5th, to complete preliminary plans for the organization of the Signal Corps GHQ Motion Picture Unit, to which a number of Reserve Officers from the industry have recently been assigned.

The officers were the guests of Lieutenant Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck, and were addressed by Colonel Nathan Levinson of the Signal Corps Reserve.

The meeting was in the nature of a reception for Lieutenant Colonel Richard T. Schlosberg of the Signal Corps and Lieutenant Colonel Herbert T. Perrin of the War Department General Staff, both of whom are in Hollywood in connection with the Academy Research Council's training film production program.

Among the motion picture Reserve Officers attending the dinner, in addition to Colonel Levinson and Colonel Zanuck, were Major S. J. Briskin, Major John Aalberg, Captain Gordon S. Mitchell, Captain Robert Lord, Captain Leonard Hammon, Captain Herbert L. Bergstein, 1st Lieutenant Lloyd T. Goldsmith, 1st Lieutenant J. E. Grainger, 1st Lieutenant Winton Hoch, 2nd Lieutenant Jules Buck, 2nd Lieutenant Edwin D. Levinson, 2nd Lieutenant M. M. Sperling, and 2nd Lieutenant Jack M. Warner.

Major Charles S. Stodter and Captain Robert H. Bungay, regular Army Signal Corps Officers on duty with the Research Council, also attended.

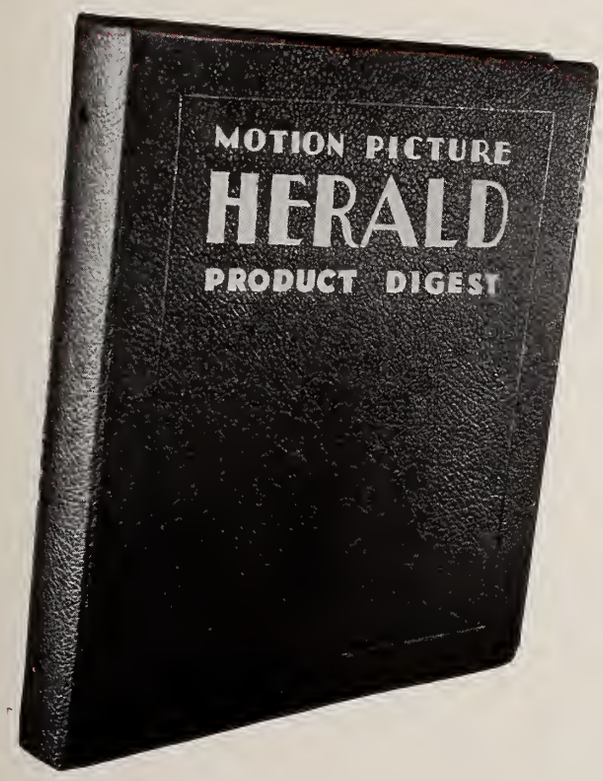
Army Film Production Started

A few days previous Mr. Zanuck as chairman of the Research Council announced the start of production of four additional Army Signal Corps training films to be produced by the Research Council.

A training film on instruction of the individual infantry soldier will be made at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, using military equipment to be sent to the studio from Fort Ord, Cal.

David Miller will direct, assisted by Film Editor Al Akst and Director of Photography Paul Vogel. Jack Chertok will supervise, and Lieut. Colonel Gordon P. Savage, Infantry U.S.A., has been assigned by the War Department to assist as military technical adviser.

A training film on the 240mm Howitzer, showing the proper technique of operating and firing this field artillery gun, will be made at Paramount Studio. B. F. McEveety will direct this picture, assisted by Unit Manager Harry Caplan; Director of Photography Archie Stout; Film Editor Ellsworth Hoagland; and Sound Technician George Dutton. The location sequences for this picture will be made at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, with the production crew now on location. A field artillery technical adviser will be furnished from the staff at Fort Bragg to assist in the production of this film.



A picture on the 60mm Mortar is being made by Republic using mortars sent to Hollywood from Fort Ord. The director on this picture will be William Morgan, assisted by unit manager Rudy Abel, with a technical crew to be assigned within the next few days.

Twentieth Century-Fox is making a film on the basic principles of skiing at Sun Valley under the direction of Otto Lang assisted by Unit Manager Duke Goux; Director of Photography James Van Trees; and Film Editor Watson Webb. 1st Lieut. John B. Woodward, Infantry, U.S.A., has been assigned by the War Department as technical adviser on this film.

Army Called to Reveille By 'Juke-Box' Bugles

Exhibitor-Soldier Reports on Streamlined Showmanship

by PRIVATE JACK C. CLELAND

(As a Civilian, Director of Advertising and Publicity for 11 Glendale Theatres, Glendale, Cal., formerly with Fox West Coast Theatres and for the past five years a member of Motion Picture Herald's Managers' Round Table)

UNCLE Sam's 1941 Army has been streamlined for showmanship.

As the horse has been replaced by the zephyr automobile, so has the "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company B." The customary reveille and retreat calls, ordinarily beat out in cadence by a bleary-eyed bugler, formerly a member of a local swing band—are now offered via electrical transcription, like in "jute-boxes."

All the Army does is change a needle, and out blows a hearty "Rah-ta-ta-ta," at six each morning, and again at night. Even the good old Star Spangled Banner now is cymbaled out of a tin can record.

It's all a part of the streamlined 1941 Army program at Camp Callan in California Coast Artillery Replacement Center and in the scores of other new-army camps throughout the country, where the axioms and means of entertainment and showmanship have found their way into a new and exciting phase of American life.

Entertainment Has Priority

Entertainment and showmanship have already found an important place at the top of Uncle Sam's list of required "musts" in the recently released training program arranged for the nation's first peacetime conscription. Here at Camp Callan, located 125 miles from Los Angeles and 13 miles from San Diego, atop Torrey Pines mesa on a picturesque site overlooking the Pacific Ocean, there are 6,000 men undergoing a 13 weeks' preliminary training program.

Of these men, many are from the Hollywood studios, employed as studio technicians, carpenters, painters, receptionists, film extras, publicity men, and cartoon animators. Others come from all walks of life—newspaper editors, cub reporters, chefs, chauffers, retail store managers, window trimmers, factory workers, garagemen, WPA workers, and "the idle rich"—all of whom have been placed in the same "soup bowl" during a most critical time in our nation's history.

And for these men there must be entertainment! Realizing this fact in all seriousness, Camp Callan—as well as the hundreds of other camps throughout the country—has opened a War Department Theatre on the post, seating 2,000.

Here major film productions are nightly screened on a single feature basis. There is no elaborate marquee outside, just a one-sheet announcing "tonight's attraction" and the "coming attraction." The "foyer" is modernized to the extent that fluorescent lighting is used for illumination.

Seats are wooden benches, thank you, each seating twenty men. There is no elaborate stage decoration, either, as in the civilian life theatre—just the essential screen, sans the curtain.

Admission is but 20c, with non-selectees and enlisted men visiting the theatre being required to pay the San Diego "minimum" of 35c for admission. This is a protection to the civilian theatre man, and shows Uncle Sam's willingness to cooperate with private enterprise.

An interesting note is that "checks" must be retained by "patrons" in the event of a fire or "special duty" when the show must be stopped for activities more urgent to the nation's defense. In this case, the show is repeated either the next night or at a later hour.

Theatre manager is the theatre officer, who now is planning a gala event for the forthcoming showing of Universal's "Buck Privates," starring Abbott and Costello. Exploitation "gags" for the film will include the singing of "hit tunes" from the film on extended marches to and from camp by selectees in advance of the post screening. (The boys of the 55th Battalion having already learned "The Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy From Company B.")

Selectees, too, are in hopes that Paramount will afford them an opportunity to pre-screen "Caught in the Draft," scheduled for a world-premiere screening the first week in May at Camp Ord, near Monterery, another Selectee camp.

In addition to the War Department Theatre, each Battalion (1,000 men) has its own recreation hall, serving as a lecture hall during the day and as a stage for amateur shows during the evening.

Each evening, men of the Battalion arrange, write, direct, and enact their own "stageshows." Music, skits, dances, and novelties comprise the programs, most of which are impromptu.

Franklin Day, an MGM front officer worker, has arranged a number of the shows in cooperation with Jack Steffenson, special events announcer for a number of coast radio stations. Both are selectee privates.

Mr. Day is a brilliant satirist, offering numerous imitations of Hollywood personalities, including that of Fletcher Christian being reprimanded by Captain Bligh of the Good Ship Bounty for forcibly taking from him his ship. The skit, of course, is from Metro's script of the memorable "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Actual scripts from the studios and radio broadcast stations are used, with all shows taking on a professional air. Sound effects are improvised, with musical background provided for by fellow-recruits possessing their own instruments.

Stock Company Formed

James Daggett of Indianapolis and Martin Burton of New York plan to open a new stock company in B. F. Keith's theatre in Indianapolis, May 5th, for performances through the spring and summer. Mr. Burton formerly was a player and staff member of Warners, Paramount and MGM. Keith's theatre has been dark since the WPA Federal theatre project was terminated.

Theatre Reduces Admission

The Palomar theatre in Seattle, Wash., owned and operated by John Danz, has reduced the price of admission. Matinees are now 21 cents until 5 p.m., instead of 30 cents as heretofore. Evening prices have been dropped from 50 to 40 cents. The same policy of double features plus five acts of vaudeville and a number of short film subjects still prevails.

Film Workers Continue Trek to the Army

Film workers in every field of motion pictures continue to march into the Army, Navy, Marines and other defense services. William W. Sullivan, manager for Twentieth Century-Fox in the Panama Canal Zone, has been ordered to report for active naval duty, as a public relations officer. Bert Kulick, treasurer and New York franchise holder of Producers Releasing has been ordered to the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J. He is a lieutenant. Captain James Roosevelt, motion picture producer, eldest son of the President has returned to duty as a captain in the Marine Corps at San Francisco. He is now on official duty in foreign countries.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has been sworn in as a lieutenant, junior grade in the Naval Reserve.

Roxy's Son in Camp

Arthur L. Rothafel, son of the late S. L. Rothafel, has arrived at Dodd Field, Texas, to begin a year's training. He was active in radio and motion picture script writing.

Ed Lewitz, treasurer of the Fox theatre in St. Louis, has reported at Jefferson Barracks in that city for military training. Hayden D. Hickok, film critic for the Syracuse, N. Y., Herald-Journal, has also reported for training. Dick Dowdell, of the Warner poster department, Cleveland, and son of Lester Dowdell, head booker at United Artists in that city has joined the Army. Albert O. Fenyvessy, owner and operator of the Arnett theatre, Rochester, N. Y., is the first theatre manager of that city to be called for Army service. Lieutenant J. Roth, son of I. Roth, operator of the Penn Avenue theatre in Pittsburgh, is now stationed at Camp Lee, Virginia. Ralph Miller, assistant manager of the Garden theatre in Portsmouth has been called for Army duty. James A. Fisher, manager of the American theatre in East Liverpool, O., has reported for Army Service. Charles Dixon, of the Warner theatres, of Chicago, is now stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex.

John L. Mulhall, Warner Theatres suburban district manager in Philadelphia, has been called to the Army with the rank of Captain, at Fort Bragg, N. C. William Maloney, contact man for Warner Brothers in Pittsburgh has entered for training. Louis J. (Bud) Alleman, 2nd, of S. Barret McCormick's publicity department at the home office of RKO, is in Troop C, 101st Cavalry, at Camp Devens, Mass.

Milton Golden, assistant manager of Warners' Squirrel Hill theatre in Pittsburgh, has received his appointment as a cadet pilot in the Army.

Robert Johnson, son of Adolph Johnson, operator of the Strand theatre in Hamden, Conn., has enlisted in the air service. John Babbitt has joined the United States Motion Picture Service, resigning from the RKO branch office in Albany to become assistant to John Martell.

Bruce Young of the Ritz theatre in Russellville, Ark., has been given a leave of absence for a year of Army training. Benjamin Seigel, assistant to George Miller at the Whalley, was feted by 50 friends in New Haven, Conn., before leaving with the National Guard. Jack A. Smith, son of Edward Smith, manager of the Paramount theatre in Springfield, Mass., has joined the Army Air Corps. Morris Parfray, manager of the Vogue theatre in Chicago, is now at Fort Bragg, N. C.

FUTURE OF NATHANSON IN FAMOUS PLAYERS NO. 1 PROBLEM IN CANADA

Postponement of Board Meeting Rouses Speculation on New Moves; Steel Priorities Bar New Theatre Construction

by PAT DONOVAN
in Montreal

Undisturbed for years, during which its 300 theatres held control over the buying and selling of motion pictures from the U. S., and elsewhere, potential changes in management or ownership of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., today is the big item of conversation and speculation in the Dominion, for they might well alter the entire bargaining picture of Canada's exhibition structure composed of a total of 1,186 houses.

Famous Players Canadian circuit's employment contract with N. L. Nathanson, as head, and J. J. Fitzgibbon, director of theatre operations, expire on July 1st. What their positions will be in the Canadian picture after that date is the big trade item.

Lets Option Lapse

In Montreal, late Monday, it became known that Famous Players Canadian had advised the Montreal Stock Exchange that Mr. Nathanson did not exercise his option to purchase 11,000 shares of the company's capital stock. The option expired April 30th after having been extended twice.

Failure to exercise the option aroused considerable interest here in view of the uncertainty over a renewal of Nathanson's contract.

Repeated adjournment of the Famous Players Canadian annual meeting has particularly left Dominion exhibitors in the air over what agreements will be reached between the Canadian circuit corporation and Paramount Pictures. Last week the meeting was convened and thrice adjourned without announcements. May 17th is the date set for what is expected to be the final caucus, at which negotiations between FPC and Paramount for the latter's interest in FPC is expected to be completed. Montreal film circles, familiar with the ways of the Foreign Exchange Control Board, doubt, however, that the Board would provide U. S. dollars for an outright purchase at present.

Oscar R. Hanson, president of the Hanson Theatres Corp., of Toronto, operating 24 houses in Ontario, resigned last week at the expiration of his five-year contract with the parent Roy-Tor Corp., now said to be controlled by N. L. Nathanson. The Hanson units probably will form the nucleus for an eastern Odeon chain headed by Paul Nathanson, who has organized fifteen theatres in British Columbia and others in the midwest for Odeon. Mr. Hanson will continue as head of Empire-Universal-Films, Sovereign Film Distributors, Sterling Films, Ltd., and Associated Theatres, Ltd., of Toronto. The last named is expected to expand as a booking company to buy for Odeon and independent houses.

N. A. Taylor, head of Twentieth Century theatres, independent group, has become vice-preisdent of the Odeon parent company which is headed by Paul Nathanson, it is reliably reported. N. L. Nathanson is reputedly behind the Universal, Sovereign, Sterling and Associated Theatres empire and a rumored backer of 20th Century, which has expanded widely in Ontario this year.

PULITZER COMMITTEE AWARDS 1941 PRIZES

Robert Sherwood's play, "There Shall Be No Night," which ran for six months on Broadway during 1940, on Monday was voted the $1,000 Pulitzer Prize for the best American play of the year. The committee made no awards for a novel.

The trustees of Columbia University School of Journalism also made the following awards, for the period April 1, 1940, to April, 1941: Best biography, "Jonathan Edwards," by Ola Elizabeth Winslow; outstanding history, "The Atlantic Migration," by by Marcus Lee Hansen; poetry, "Sunderland Capture," Leonard Bacon; most meritorious public service by a newspaper, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; editorials, Reuben Maury, New York Daily News; reporting, Westbrook Pegler, New York World-Telegram, for his articles on scandals in the ranks of organized labor; cartoon work, Jacob Burck, Chicago Times. The New York Times was given a special citation for its foreign news.

The main Canadian film industry attraction now holding the spotlight in Toronto, which Dominion exhibitors are eyeing with interest, is described as follows.

Paramount Publix Corporation, predecessor to Paramount Pictures, acquired about 94 per cent of the outstanding common shares of Famous Players in 1930 through an exchange of stock on the basis of four shares of Paramount Publix for each five shares of Famous Players. Since then Paramount was reorganized in 1935 following a period of bankruptcy, and holders of the old company's common shares received one-quarter share of the new common for each old share plus a warrant entitling the holder to subscribe up to August 30, 1935, to a unit consisting of one-quarter common share and one-fifth of a share of second preferred for $2.

Along with the management contract already mentioned there was granted by Famous Players five options, dating from April 15, 1936, whereby certain executives and directors could buy a total of 50,000 common shares over a five-year period. This was later amended to make the total 55,000 shares in five blocks of 11,000 shares each. To date a total of 33,000 shares has been taken up under these options at $13 a share for the first block, $13.65 a share for the second and $15 a share for the third. The fourth block was not taken up, having matured April 30th, with the final block due July 15th.

20% Tax in Canada Starts June 1st

Canada's 20 per cent tax on admissions will go into effect June 1st, it is reported in film circles at Toronto, although the Government has not disclosed the starting date.

It is officially stated that the levy will apply to juvenile tickets, but not to pass holders who do not contribute to theatre revenue. Small theatres in Toronto's East End have increased the children's matinee price from five to 10 cents, apparently anticipating the tax. It is expected that the levy will be passed to the public generally. Another $7,000,000 is expected to be raised by the new 20 per cent levy.

In Ottawa, Canadian Finance Minister Ilsley has received a telegram from the Quebec Allied Theatres, an association which represents every theatre in the province, asking for a hearing on the provisions of the new Dominion budget affecting theatre operations.

Quebec theatre owners contend that in their province the new 20 per cent Dominion tax on admissions is a "tax on a tax," since theatre tickets are supplied by the Government for tax record purposes, and this is expected to throw out the calculations on which the present provincial amusement tax is based.

Steel Restrictions Hit New Theatre Building

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

Definite stipulations for steel and concrete in the construction of new theatres in Nova Scotia under the provincial theatre regulations are barriers to establishment of more new picture houses in the province. Steel is scarce and high in cost. War needs have prior right. Although business in Nova Scotian theatres all through the province is probably the best in picture exhibiting history, theatre construction is limited to one project, because of the steel stipulation, chiefly, plus the high labor costs, and advanced prices of all materials.

The Sunday night picture shows at the Capitol in Halifax, N. S., instituted last winter for soldiers, sailors, airforcemen and merchant seamen, with each allowed one adult civilian guest, male or female, have been discontinued for the summer. The programs had been available for a voluntary collection at the door, and had not started until after the close of local church services.

A. A. Fielding, of East Riverside, N. B., has opened an office in St. John, N. B., to direct his theatre operations. Until recently, he was general manager of the Spencer theatres. He starts as a picture exhibitor on his own account with the Capitols at Digby and Bridgewater, coastal towns in Nova Scotia, with indications of several more being added this year. The Strand, Truro, N. S., continues in the Spencer lineup, and it is understood Mr. Fielding, for 28 years with Spencer and for 16 years general manager, has sold his stock holding in the company.

In gratitude for his work in helping the New Glasgow, N. S., branch of the Canadian Legion, raise money for their war work, the Legion summoned N. W. Mason, veteran picture exhibitor, to the front of the stage of his Academy for presentation of a gold-headed and engraved walking stick. Mr. Mason, proprietor and manager of the Roseland and Academy for 40 years, donated his theatre and his services as actor, producer and director for a revival of The Old Homestead. He has been playing the leading role, that of Uncle Josiah, in the old rural epic for 43 years, first with professionals on the road and in recent years with amateurs. All the receipts of the three performances were for the Legion, in the most recent production.

There will be no competing this year for Moncton, N. B., theatres from traveling carnivals which presented formidable opposition to picture theatres of Moncton for many years. The city council passed unanimously a motion to grant no carnival license this year, on the ground the carnivals have become "a nuisance."

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Askey Again

Britain's pint sized No. 1 radio comedian, "Big Hearted" Arthur Askey, again adopts female garb in his new comedy at Shepherd's Bush, "Ay Thang Yow," which Marcel Varnel is directing for release by General Film Distributors. In the film Askey repeats the formula used by him in "Charley's Aunt," dresses as a woman, poses as a butler's wife, seeks to persuade a wealthy widow to invest money in a show run by himself and his buddy, Richard "Stinker" Murdoch. Murdoch has been temporarily released from the R.A.F., in which he is an intelligence officer, to play in the film.

Also in the cast are the American comedy team, Forsythe, Seaman and Farrell, who, after a successful passage on the London vaudeville stage, have now built themselves into radio favourites.

Likewise supporting Askey are Kathleen Harrison, Jewish raconteur Issy Bonn, Felix Aylmer and Cockney artist Wally Patch.

Leading woman in the film is Roberta Huby, who earned metropolitan fame over here recently by singing "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" in the Vic Oliver show "Black Velvet."

"Call Me Lucky" has been selected by producer John Corfield as title for the film he will make with Vic Oliver and Sarah Churchill, daughter of Britain's Prime Minister, and which is based on Monica Ewer's novel "Ring O' Roses." Shooting is due to start on April 28, with John Paddy Carstairs directing and Tony Nelson Keys as unit manager.

Donat Role Set

The threat of invasion in the time of William Pitt will be the dominating theme in a forthcoming Twentieth Century picture to be produced here by Francis Harley. Robert Donat is to play the role of "Pitt, The Younger," which will be the title of the film. Shooting starts May 31 at Shepherd's Bush studios.

Carol Reed, to whose credit are "Stars Look Down," "Night Train to Munich" and "Kipps," will direct Robert Donat for the first time.

The picture, which is to be made on spectacular lines, will be ready for showing, it is hoped, by early Autumn. It tells mainly of the life of Britain's youngest Premier at a time when the country was under threat of invasion from an earlier dictator, Napoleon Bonaparte.

This will be one of the films in the production programme of 20th Century-Fox, on which it is intended to spend at least half a million pounds.

Another radio favourite in wartime Britain, American commentator Gerry Willmot, has been persuaded into a British film. Willmot, who comperes numerous vaudeville and band programmes and is heard in various Canadian news programmes of the B.B.C., went to Denham recently and, without previous warning, played in "49th Parallel," which Michael Powell is directing as an Ortus production with Ministry of Information collaboration.

"You Can't Escape For Ever" is said to be the title of the third film to be produced at Teddington by Max Milder, chief of Warner Bros. in this country. It is a comedy drama, set in Paris before, during and after the German occupation of that city.

Work is now concluded at Teddington on "Atlantic Ferry," production sequences ending with a storm passage, directed by Walter Forde and in which stars Michael Redgrave and Valerie Hobson played. These represented the crash of the steamship "Brittania," when Griffith Jones as David MacIver and Milton Rosmer as the shipowner, Burns, set out to warn the vessel that the Egremont lifebuoy is adrift and to lead her into the safety of port.

"Penn" Completed

At the Denham Studios interiors have now been completed on "Penn of Pennsylvania" and, with but a few exteriors to be shot, the film should be completed by the time this reaches the mail.

Following the Penn picture, George Parrish's company, British National, who are responsible for the film, will take a production holiday, going back to work on May 21 at the Rock Studios, Elstree, on "The Common Touch." This John Baxter film is due to have many vaudeville and radio acts in its cast.

Lucan & McShane, of "Old Mother Riley" fame, are appearing in vaudeville, so that a few weeks are likely to elapse before they can start work on another of their comedies. Meanwhile John Baxter is considering the pros and cons of setting Old Mother Riley against either a farm, or a barge on one of Britain's canals.

The Rock Studios, however, will not be vacant as meanwhile independent producer F. W. Baker will set Director Maclean-Rogers to work on a subject, name of which is as yet undisclosed.

"This Man Is Dangerous" was directed by Lawrence Huntington and is a thriller based on David Hume's novel "They Called Him Death".

"Ships With Wings" has started work at Ealing with Sergei Nolbandov directing. This epic of the Fleet Air Arm includes in the cast John Clements, Leslie Banks, John Baxter, Gerald Chapman and Moreland Graham.

The story of the film concerns a pilot who, dismissed for breach of discipline, runs a one man air line on a Greek island and gets back on his feet during the war.

ATP May Join United Artists

London film circles reported on Tuesday that Associated Talking Pictures, Ltd., would join United Artists as a producer under a distribution deal arranged between George Archibald, UA managing director for Great Britain, and officers of ATP. Mr. Archibald is en route to United States reportedly to discuss terms of the deal with Maurice Silverstone, chief of United Artists' operations.

Associated Talking Pictures produces at the Ealing studios near London. Stephen L. Courtauld is chairman of the board and R. P. Baker is managing director. Gordon W. G. Rayner is secretary. Michael Balcon has directed many of the ATP productions.

Edward Small, United Artists producer, recently acquired "Sailors Three," produced at Ealing by Balcon, for American distribution through UA. Title was changed to "Three Cockeyed Sailors." The United Artists' home office reported it had no confirmation of a distribution deal with ATP, but admitted the company was considering various English deals.

National Decency Legion Classifies Sixteen Films

Of the 16 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were found unobjectionable for general patronage, eight were classified as unobjectionable for adults, and two were found to be objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Drums of the Desert," "The Haunted House," "Ole Swimmin' Hole," "Pals of the Pecos," "The People vs. Dr. Kildare" and "Ridin' the Cherokee Trail." Class A-2. Unobjectionable for Adults: "Affectionately Yours," "Citizen Kane," "Dead Man's Shoes," "The Great American Broadcast," "Invisible Ghost," "Roar of the Press," "Rookies on Parade" and "Strange Alibi.' Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Ape" and "Under Age."

Dissolution Papers Filed

Papers of dissolution have been filed with the Secretary of State in Albany, N. Y., by Control Amusements, Inc., and Halcyon Amusements, Inc., originally filed by Harry Bloom, 205 East 42nd Street, New York. Dissolution has also been announced by Ninth Avenue Amusement Co., Inc., and Tenth Avenue Amusement Co., Inc., of Brooklyn, N. Y., originally filed by Pinto to Marcantonio of New York City.

Altec Signs Ten More

Ten additional theatres have been added to the 72 Minnesota Amusement Company's houses in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas now serviced by Altec. A renewal contract was negotiated by C. W. Perrine and R. Schmid for Minnesota, and R. Hilton for Altec.

Reinhardt Joins KMBC

Eileen Reinhardt, formerly with the Topeka (Kan.) State Journal. has joined the staff of station KMBC in Kansas City, Mo.

MEXICO REGULATING ALL OUTSIDE PRODUCT, INCLUDING HOLLYWOOD'S

Congress Studies Measure to Force Showing of Domestic Product, Ban Block Booking, Advance Deals on Pictures

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Measures that are intended to regulate the exhibition and distribution of foreign pictures, the great majority of which are American, for Hollywood now dominates the Mexican market 98 per cent, and to protect the national film industry, have been presented to congress for incorporation into a federal law by Congressman Luis Ordorica Cerda. Congress is expected to pass the bill soon.

Provisions include the following: Exhibitors throughout Mexico must screen for three consecutive days each month, including one Sunday, the biggest day for theatres in this country, Mexican made pictures; all films exhibited during this period must be of at least five reels each and no long foreign picture can be screened during these three days; all contracts between distributors and exhibitors must allow the exhibitors the right to choose the three days each month and during this time these contracts shall be suspended, without any obligation to the exhibitors.

Block Booking Prohibited

Also prohibited are block booking, contracting films in advance of their production, contracting pictures without giving the exhibitors the opportunity of knowing at least their plots, refusal of distributors to permit exhibitors to have pictures or to directly or indirectly infringe the prohibitions of these measures and the imposing of fines or other penalties by distributors against exhibitors. When films are supplied on a percentage basis, distributors are obligated to defray part of the costs of advertising and exploiting the pictures.

These regulations do not apply to shorts of four or less reels. The ministry of national economy will have charge of enforcing and supervising these regulations; theatres, cinemas and the offices of producers and distributors can only be inspected when such examination is ordered by the ministry but under no circumstance can there be automatic periodical inspections, and the soliciting, offering, promising or accepting of invitations or passes to cinemas by officials or employees of the ministry or anybody else connected with the enforcement and supervision is strictly forbidden and those who violate this rule will be punished according to the code.

Distributors are mostly responsible for the high costs of cinemagoing here, it was found by the congressional committee, which Congressman Luis Velasco heads, that is investigating alleged profiteering by the exhibitors. The distributors, the committee asserted, are charging prices that are out of all proportion to values and conditions. There was an anti-foreign hint in the committee's findings: they declared that aliens practically control film distribution in Mexico and that most of their profits go abroad.

The committee urged congress to pass a law to regulate prices of theatre admissions. This action is expected to be taken by Congress soon.

President Manuel Avila Camacho's law which gives the ministry of the interior exclusive jurisdiction over picture supervision and censorship has just become effective and is proving popular with the industry. It obliges the ministry to approve all films that do not harm the technical, moral and economic interests of Mexico, the principles of social justice as prescribed by the Mexican laws, nor those of decency and good taste, and those that do not tend to disturb public order. The ministry is required to render a decision on each picture within three days after it has been presented and those who disagree with the rulings may protest in writing to the ministry which must order a new inspection, free of cost, as a check up and promptly advise those interested in the result. Once a picture has been approved it can be shown anywhere in Mexico without additional examination or payment of fees.

Two Theatres Opened

Exhibition facilities here have been increased with the reopening after a long period of remodeling along modern lines of two of the oldest theatres, the Olimpia and the Bucareli. These theatres closed last year and underwent renovations at a cost of several million pesos. Reopening of these theatres now gives this city 65 cinemas in operation.

The Olimpia, managed by Edmund B. Noonan, the only American theatre operator here and brother of Sally O'Neil, and built in 1920 by William E. Jennings,, wealthy Los Angeles who prospered in Mexican copper mining, is now a de luxe theatre seating 2,800. It is keeping to its first run policy.

The Bucareli, long a subsequent run theatre, was acquired last year by the Emilio Azcarraga Co. which conducts the select Cine Alameda, one of the leading local first run theatres, and local radio stations XEW and XEQ. The Bucareli, claims the management, shares with the Hawaii Theatre, Los Angeles, the distinction of being the only theatres in America to have the "black light" illumination service. The debut picture of the Bucareli surprised the industry. It was "Gone With the Wind" (MGM) which scored an outstanding hit when exhibited recently at the Alameda, grossing in the six weeks run there $84,000 and $12,150 in the three weeks that it ran at the Cine Iris here, simultaneously with the Alameda exhibition. The surprise for the industry about "GWTW" at the Bucareli was the announcement when this film was first shown here that it would not be exhibited anywhere in this city until a year after its presentation at the Alameda and Iris.

Prices for "GWTW" at the Bucareli are the same as they were at the Alameda and Iris—65 cts. week day and 75 cts. Sundays and holidays.

A special tax of one to two cents, depending upon the price, on all theatre tickets throughout Mexico was put into effect during the week of April 19 to raise $14,250 for the national fund that is being collected to establish a hospital here for incurables. This tax was added to the price of the tickets.

Sra. Soledad Avila Camacho, wife of the President, is the chairwoman of the committee in charge of the fund drive to aid the hospital.

A rather heavy toll of theatres was taken by the earthquakes of April 15 and 16. Six theatres were totally destroyed in the regions the quakes shook the hardest, Colima, Jalisco and Michoacan states. Among 90 per cent of the buildings that were destroyed in Colima City, capital of Colima state, were two theatres. The other four were in other cities and towns of the temblor zone.

Theatres in Mexico, D. F., suffered no important damage. Even one that is under construction while badly shaken was not seriously damaged. The earthquake was much earlier than the afternoon openings of the theatres, so there were no casualties among patrons or attaches. All the razed theatres are to be rebuilt in the general reconstruction program the federal government is backing and which is already underway, by orders of President Comacho.

Production Resumes

After a let down that varied from a complete standstill to just marking time, Mexican film production has resumed and gives promise of soon attaining par. General business improvement and greater confidence, thanks to what the government of President Manuel Avila Camacho has already accomplished, are the principal factors in this production pickup. Many of the producers have either obtained a considerable amount of money outright or gotten good credit. Labor difficulties that were a bugbear and which had become so bad that picture making was completely stopped for several weeks last summer and again early this year, have been largely ironed out, and, for the present, at least, the bosses and the help are on very good terms.

The resumption of production has revived one of the pioneer studios here, that of Jorge Stahl which had not operated in nearly two years. The Stahl plant has been taken over for an indefinite period by Vicente Oroná, the producer and director, who has started making a series of full length features there, the first of which is to be ready about June 1 or shortly thereafter.

A test case regarding the complete authority of the new federal film censorship and supervising department is being made by Manuel de G. Osio, distributor of the religious picture, "El Divino Rostro o La Corona de Espinas" ("The Divine Rostrum of The Crown of Thorns"). This film was approved by the department, but some municipal authorities forebade its exhibition.

Sr. Osio obtained from a local court a temporary injunction against this and was permitted to show the picture.

ARGENTINE TARIFF REDUCTION SOUGHT

Efforts are being made by Mexican producers to arrange reciprocal and reduced customs tariffs on Mexican and Argentine films. The Mexican producers contend it is unfair that the Argentine duty on Mexican films should be $170 each while that of Mexico on Argentine productions is only $22.50. Jorge Velez, young Mexican actor who is soon to make a goodwill tour of the Argentine, has been named to discuss the question while he is in that country.

15th COUNTRY LOST BY HOLLYWOOD TO NAZIS

Conquest of Greece Adds 175 Theatres to Hitler Circuit; Radio and Press Controlled

The screens of some 11,184 theatres in 15 countries in Europe with a combined approximate population of 125,732,835 have been all but cutoff from Hollywood product by Nazi domination, since Hitler and his armies "blitzkrieged" across the Continent and into the Balkan countries and occupied Athens in recent weeks.

The occupation of the 15 countries—Austria, Belgium,. Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Danzig, Denmark, France, Greece, Holland, Hungary, Luxembourg, Norway, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia—was followed quickly by the subjugation of "foreign" and domestic media of public expression: radio, films and the press. And it was followed, too, just as quickly, by stern impositions of Nazi propaganda on the air, the screen, and the printed page.

The Axis sphere also is directly responsible for the virtually complete abolition of Hollywood motion pictures in Germany and Italy, once U. S. film customers to the extent of some 3,000 theatres in Italy and an unknown number in Germany. Italy became a lost market for Hollywood two years ago; Germany started the descendancy of U. S. product with the ascendancy of Hitler.

The Axis partnership was responsible, too, for substantial losses in Japan. Hollywood lost out to Russia and international politics years ago.

In those other countries where, under ordinary conditions Hollywood could count on markets for its films, the war has all but stopped U. S. film commerce, because of shipping conditions; in others, monetary restrictions make for burdensome marketing.

Moving at first from exercising perfunctory control over the screens of dominated countries, the Nazis, in many cases, have extended their influence to effect a complete ban on Hollywood films, such as in Hungary, last week. And in France, earlier in April, the Nazis actually took physical possession of the French branches of American distributors, stationing police within the offices.

The 15 countries whose screen, press and radio have come under Nazi influence, to the exclusion of all other outside sources, since Hitler occupied Czechoslovakia, include the following (theatre totals are from last available U. S. Commerce Department reports; populations are from the N. Y. World Almanac):

Austria, 779 theatres; population, 7,009,014.

Belgium, 1,000 theatres; population, 8,386,553. Sixty per cent of film imports were American, 40 per cent French.

Bulgaria, 144 theatres; population, 6,549,664. Forty-one per cent of film imports were American, 34 per cent German, and 12 per cent French.

Czechoslovakia, 1,305 theatres; population, 9,807,000.

Danzig, 24 theatres; population 415,000.

Denmark, 346 theatres; population, 3,805,000.

France, 4,650 theatres; population, 42,014,594.

WAR HAMPERS FILM SHIPPING

Shipments of all materials, including films, from England to India have fallen off almost to zero, and even shipments from the United States have been considerably hampered by war conditions, Carlos Moore, general manager for United Artists in India, said last week in New York.

He explained the Indian Government had been much less inclined to impose monetary restrictions since the passage of the U. S. lease-lend bill. Mr. Moore said business in India was holding up well despite the war. He pointed out that a number of film prints had been lost in the sinking of cargo ships by the Axis powers, necessitating a certain amount of shifting in bookings.

One of the effects of the war in the larger Indian cities, Mr. Moore said, was the blackouts, which has affected theatre attendance evenings.

Greece, 175 theatres; population, 7,196,900. Fifty-seven per cent of film imports were American, 22.7 per cent were French, and ten per cent German.

Holland, 335 theatres; population, 8,728,569.

Hungary, 524 theatres; population, 13,507,993.

Luxemburg, 30 theatres; population 301,000. Forty per cent of film imports were American, 30 per cent German, and 28 per cent French.

Norway, 270 theatres; population, 2,937,000. Sixty-two per cent of film imports were American, 12 per cent, German and the remainder Swedish and French.

Poland, 834 theatres; population, 34,775,698.

Rumania, 372 theatres; population, 14,098,850.

Yugoslavia, 396 theatres, population, 16,200,000. Sixty-six per cent of film imports were American, 15 per cent German, 13 per cent French and 2.5 per cent British.

Guatemala, Peru Unaffected by War

The war in Europe has had little or no effect on the motion picture business in Guatemala and Peru according to reports from American vice-consuls in those countries to the United States Department of Commerce. Guatemala was never a large market for European films, so that difficulty in obtaining German and other European motion pictures has made little difference, while Peru exhibits for the most part English dialogue films and some Spanish productions.

It is estimated that nearly 350 feature films are required annually to supply the Guatemalan market in normal times. Under present conditions, when the general purchasing power of the public has suffered from the drop in world prices of coffee, the country's leading source of income, not more than 325 features will be brought in during the year.

It is also estimated that 70 per cent of the films shown during 1940 were American, 13 per cent Argentine, 10 per cent Mexican, five per cent French and two per cent of other origin. There is no domestic film industry in Guatemala, and so far as is known, no plans are under way for the development of such an industry, either with or without German assistance.

No changes were made in the taxation of the motion picture industry in 1940. Operators of motion picture theatres pay the regular business-profits tax, and the "Beneficencia Publica" tax of 15 per cent on gross theatre receipts. Motion picture distributors pay the regular business-profits tax on their share of the business. Customs duties on films going into Guatemala amount to 1 quetzal per gross kilogram; and in addition, shipments of films must pay the four per cent ad valorem consular invoice fee and other miscellaneous import charges.

No important changes have taken place in the number of theatres in Guatemala during 1940. There are 38 theatres or halls where motion pictures are shown either regularly or on an occasional basis. Of these, 21 are theatres, showing motion pictures on a daily or semi-weekly basis, and having an estimated total seating capacity of 15,000; 12 are halls, with an unknown seating capacity and with portable sound equipment for showing motion pictures from time to time; while the other cases do not even have seats for spectators, who frequently bring their own chairs or boxes to sit on. The theatres are seldom filled more than twice a week and during 1940 capacity audiences have been rare. Due to the declining attendance there has been little new equipment installed.

During the motion picture fiscal year ending July 31, 1940, the number of feature films released in the Peruvian market, according to distributors amounted to 430; of this number 318 were English dialogue productions; 12 Spanish dialogue films distributed by American companies; and some 100 other consisting principally of French, Argentine and Mexican films. During the same fiscal year approximately 239 short subjects and 189 news reels were released.

A total of 21 films were produced locally during the first eleven months of 1940, including one feature and 20 newsreels. "Los Conflictos de Cordero" produced by Amauta Films was the title of the feature films.

There are approximately 220 theatres in Peru, with a seating capacity estimated at 119,000. This number includes small theatres in mining camps and plantations. During the year several theatres in the Lima-Callao district were rebuilt because of the structural damage resulting from the earthquake of May 24th, 1940.

The native audience of Peru is attracted by good musical comedies, thrillers and melodramas featuring well-known stars. Serials are very popular in the neighborhood houses and provinces.

Turkey Shows 180 U. S. Motion Pictures in Year

According to a report by the United States Department of Commerce from Washington, D. C., of the 256 features exhibited in Turkey during 1940, 180 were from the United States, 50 were French, seven Italian, five German, four Egyptian, four Turkish, three English, two Russian and one Spanish.

The early part of the war had little effect on the Turkish film market, according to the departments' report, but subsequent to the entrance of Italy into the conflict and the defeat of France, supplies were cut off to a large extent. However, it was estimated sufficient films were on hand to last through the greater part of the 1940-41 season. Partial mobilization has served to cut theatre receipts to a certain extent as compared to 1939. With more severe censorship restrictions last year, 15 films were banned and many were subject to severe cutting. There are only about 155 theatres in Turkey.

OBITUARIES

B. E. Fay, Providence Exhibitor, Dies

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning for Bernard E. Fay, 58, an exhibitor in Providence, R. I., who died in his sleep Saturday, May 3rd, after a brief illness. Solemn high mass was said at the Church of the Assumption. He is survived by his widow, Henrietta M. Keenan Fay, his brother, Edward M. Fay, also a Providence exhibitor, and three sisters.

Bernard Fay, originally a professional musician, had been associated with his brother in the theatre business since 1920. At the time of his death he was assistant treasurer of the C. & F. Theatre Co. Formerly he managed the Rialto and Majestic theatres in Providence.

IN COURTS

C.B.S. Retrial Ordered

The appellate Division of the New York supreme court has ordered a new trial of the $250,000 libel suit brought against the Columbia Broadcasting System, Edwin C. Hill and the American Tobacco Co., by Moses Polakoff, reversing a previous dismissal. Mr. Polakoff had claimed he was libeled by Mr. Hill in a WABC broadcast August 12, 1937, in comment on the trial of Lucky Luciano, for whom Mr. Polakoff was attorney.

Fairbanks Tests Inheritance

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and five other heirs to the $2,627,937 estate of the late Douglas Fairbanks have asked the court to allow Lady Ashley, the actor's widow, only $1,000 a month instead of the present $3,000. The objection said $3,000 was in excess of her needs.

Countess Sues Warners

A $250,000 damage suit has been filed in Brooklyn Federal court by Countess Bronislava du Brissac, lecturer, against Warner Brothers and the Normandie Amusement Corp., owner of the Normandie theatre. She alleges she was injured by a portrayal in "'Till We Meet Again."

Westchester Judge Joins Casanave, N.S.S. Actions

Actions of National Screen Service, Herman Robbins, Toby Gruen et al. against Charles L. Casanave at New York, and Mr. Casanave's counter action at White Plains were consolidated on Tuesday by an order signed by Supreme Court Justice Mortimer B. Patterson at White Plains stating that the cases involved similar issues and should be tried jointly. National Screen Service earlier won approval of two preliminary moitons at New York and Mr. Casanave had one motion granted in White Plains.

Justice Cohalan ordered Mr. Casanave to appear for examination before trial on Thursday and at the same time denied his motion for an examination of Mr. Robbins, Mr. Gruen and Elliott Pearlman, National Screen Service assistant treasurer. The court, however, said that it would permit the Casanave motion at a later date. A motion by Mr. Casanave for a bill of 190 items was consented to for 154 items and the court sustained all objections to the remaining 36. In White Plains, where Mr. Casanave's counter suit is pending, Justice Patterson denied a defense motion to dismiss the complaint.

Seitz Theatre Ruling

The court of appeals in a 12-page opinion written by Judge A. W. Overmyer, filed in common pleas court in Sandusky, Ohio, April 28th, upheld Judge E. H. Savord's ruling in favor of the Seitz Theatre Co. in its action against the General Theatre Co. for $162,100 plus interest.

Jolson Sued by Brother

Harry Jolson, brother of Al Jolson, on Monday brought suit in the New York supreme court for $25,000 which he claimed was due him under an agreement made by the brothers in 1934. Harry said that Al agreed to pay him $150 weekly for the exclusive use of the name Jolson in the theatrical world. Since 1937, however, Harry claimed, he has not been paid.

Suit Intervention Granted

Justice Carroll G. Walter of the New York supreme court has granted permission to Rene B. Meyer, holder of 100 shares of Universal Pictures common stock, to intervene as a plaintiff in the directors' suit of Samuel I. Posen against Universal and others.

Sues for Commissions

A suit for $20,000 has been filed in the New York supreme court by Emil Neugebauer against Nate J. Blumberg and Lawrence Waterman, Mr. Blumberg's secretary. Mr. Neugebauer claims that he discovered Gloria Jean, and that in October, 1938, he made a deal to turn her over to Universal for a commission.

"Doe" Suit Brought

U.A. Sued on Song

A suit for $5,000 damages for alleged unauthorized use of a song has been filed against United Artists in the New York supreme court by Serge Adelheim as assignee of A. Beresovsky, Russian composer. The song, "Be Still My Love, Be Still," was allegedly played in the film "We Live Again."

Marks Fined on Tax

Louis and Meyer Marks were fined $1,000 each by Judge Charles Woodward in the Federal court in Chicago in an income tax case relating to Marks sale of the Marbro, Granada and Broadway Strand theatres.

Variety Chiefs All Set for Next Week's Meeting

With the national convention of the Variety Clubs of America at Atlantic City from May 15th to 17th less than a week away, officers and convention committeemen predict the event will bring more showmen together at one time than ever before. Registrations, and the number of clubs sending mass delegations are reported to have already exceeded all previous Variety attendance figures.

Films will be heavily represented at the convention with exhibitors comprising by far the largest portion of the attendance. Hollywood, and the home offices of major distributors in New York will be represented by sizeable delegations however. The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America have cooperated with Walter Wanger and Paul Short, Variety committeemen, in arranging for the attendance of film stars at the Atlantic City meeting. Mr. Wanger and Clifford Lewis will lead the delegation, which includes representatives of every major studio, to Atlantic City.

Stars To Attend

Among the film names listed on the convention roster to date are: Myrna Loy and her husband Arthur Hornblow, Joan Crawford, James Cagney, Hedy Lamarr, Walter Wanger and wife, Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Charles Boyer, Claudette Colbert, Jon Hall, Frances Langford, Phil Reagan, Bob Burns, Errol Flynn, Simon Simone, Jeanette McDonald, Charles Laughton, Ronald Colman, Jane Withers, Anna Neagle, Herbert Wilcox and Jean Hersholt.

Home office participation in the Variety convention will include the world premiere of RKO's "Sunny" starring Anna Neagle and Ray Bolger at Atlantic City on May 16th, an MGM "Ziegfield Girl" float in the Variety boardwalk parade and a cocktail party for Variety members sponsored by United Artists on May 17th. RKO will also sponsor a broadcast by the Kate Smith radio hour from the Warner theatre in Atlantic City on May 16th. Radio networks will cover the annual banquet and presentation of the Humanitarian Award on May 17th and the boardwalk parade on the same afternoon.

Largest tent registration to date is reported from Atlanta

Variety Clubs in the Field

Opening of the new community health center erected by the Oklahoma City Variety Club will herald a city wide drive for health betterment L. C. Griffith, chief barker, reported this week. The $45,000 center for the county tuberculosis and health associations, clinics, and welfare agencies is expected to be ready by May 10th. Tent 22 raised the entire cost of the new Oklahoma health center.

Dr. Leon Levy, chief barker of the Philadelphia Variety unit reported that contributions of $26,000 to date for the club's charities will insure that it tops its pledges by a substantial margin by year's end. Dr. Levy along with Isaac D. Levy, Frank L. Columbia

BLONDIE GOES LATIN: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Best "Blondie" picture to date. Enjoyed by all. We let all blondes in free that night. Little did we realize there were so many blondes. Did not do business anticipated.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FACE BEHIND THE MASK, THE: Peter Lorre, Evelyn Keyes—Played on late show to a grand crowd. Very pleasing picture for an occasion like this. Played March 15.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

GIRLS UNDER 21: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly, Bruce Cabot—A so-so programmer that was played on a twin bill. The cast does a fair job with their story material and patrons seemed to enjoy it.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GIRLS UNDER 21: Paul Kelly, Rochelle Hudson—This pelased and the box office said O.K., which is not very often with Columbia pictures, especially those in the A and B brackets. Running time, 64 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

GREAT PLANE ROBBERY, THE: Jack Holt, Vicki Lester— Why, oh, why, do they continue to hang on to Jack Holt? Didn't do express expenses and never do on Jack Holt. Played March 1.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA, THE: Cary Grant, Martha Scott, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carlson —Well acted and the few who came enjoyed the feature. Billed as an A feature but not worth a nickle more than a cheap western as far as the box office is concerned. The public will not go for this type and that's that. Running time, 117 minutes. Played April 21-22.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

LADY IN QUESTION, THE: Brian Aherne, Rita Hayworth—Double billed and pleased. Imagine Columbia setting this in as an A feature and had to be double billed to attract enough people to pay film rentals. Let us say that Brian Aherne's acting is superb and many stayed to see the feature twice and when an audience will stop and praise a star on their way out he must be good. Running time, 81 minutes. Played April 23-24.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

NOBODY'S CHILDREN: Edith Fellows, Billy Lane —A good little tear jerker that pleased the ladies on "ladies night." Billy Lee and Edith Fellows do a very good job with their acting chores and the women came out with tears in their eyes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas—Played with "Victory," which in my mind was O.K., for it gave change from comedy to drama. Had good business second day with opening day a little better than my usual Thursdays. Picture should do well anywhere. Running time, 98 minutes. Played April 24-25.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood and transient patronage.

First National

EAST OF THE RIVER: John Garfield, Brenda Marshall, Marjorie Rambeau—John Garfield too stiff in this one but will do all right where Garfield is a favorite. Garfield all washed up here. Business poor. Played April 1.—John C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

KNOCKOUT: Arthur Kennedy, Olympe Bradna—No star power and no business. They just won't come in and look at it. Would look at the lithos and walk on but those who came in stayed. If you never play it, you have missed nothing. Running time, 73 minutes. Played April 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, Alan Hale —Excellent from all standpoints. Play it up in the schools. Should do extra business. With us business was above average. Played April 3-4.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Andy Devine—Right up our alley and pleased both patrons and the box office. Cagney sure is dynamite, and Sheridan is easy on the eyes. Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 17-18.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Good picture and good business. Good show for a small town. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT COMMAND: Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon—Excellent picture and well done by Taylor, Miss Hussey, Walter Pidgeon and cast. Business the best in month with exception of "Kitty Foyle." Patrons liked this film very much. Comment fine. Running time, 113 minutes. Played April 27-28.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood and transient.

FLORIAN: Robert Young, Helen Gilbert—This is a very good feature for a small town audience. It has most everything that is entertaining. I played this late but my audience enjoyed it very much, especially the trained horses and the dancing. I can recommend this one to suit a rural audience. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 26.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

NEW MOON: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald—Well acted and liked by the few who came out to see it. Loss heavy with this. Not a small town picture. Metro lost on this and the Casino went plenty red on the ledger. Running time, 104 minutes. Played April 16-17.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

RAGE IN HEAVEN: Robert Montgomery, Ingrid Bergman, George Sanders—Some liked it and some didn't. A little too arty for small town. Is similar to "Night Must Fall." Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRIKE UP THE BAND: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra—Very, very good. Box office receipts poor but not the fault of the picture. Another feature that MGM sold on percentage and lost the expense of a checker. How can any exhibitor make money when such features don't go in a small town? Running time, 120 minutes. Played April 9-10.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

Monogram

YUKON FLIGHT: James Newill, Louise Stanley—Beware. Did poor business even on "Bargain Day." Not as good as former "Renfrew" pictures.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Paramount

CHEROKEE STRIP: Richard Dix, Florence Rice—This pleased and drew one of the largest crowds for many months. So pleased with this that we have placed "The Round-Up" featuring R. Dix on our best dates. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 28-29. —George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

CHRISTMAS IN JULY: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell —Double billed with "Girls Under 21" and did good business. Credit must go for the latter for the drawing power, although "Christmas in July" pleased. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.— George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

CHRISTMAS IN JULY: Dick Powell, Ellen Drew—Above average programme picture. Did nicely on a double bill. Should be suitable for any situation.— Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LAS VEGAS NIGHTS: Tommy Dorsey nd His Orchestra, Phil Regan, Bert Wheeler, Constance Moore, Lilian Cornell, Virginia Dale—Fair picture, fair business. Not a big show but an entertaining one if your customers are not hard to please. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STAGECOACH WAR: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—The regular "Cassidy" picture that didn't do much business for us. Played Apirl 5.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

VICTORY: Fredric March, Betty Field, Sir Cedric Hardwicke—Played with "This Thing Called Love," which in my mind was O.K. for it gave change from comedy to drama. Had good business second day with opening day a little better than my usual Thursdays. Played April 24-25.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood and transient patronage.

Republic

BARNYARD FOLLIES: Mary Lee, Rufe Davis, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer—A swell little down-on-the-farm picture. Nice musical numbers, lots of comedy and good direction keep the picture moving along at a rapid pace. This is swell small town film fare!— Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Lloyd Nolan, Doris Davenport—Just a fair newspaper picture that got by without any adverse criticism. My patrons did not laud it but I did not hear any severe complaints.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BOWERY BOY: Dennis O'Keefe, Jimmy Lydon, Louise Campbell — A good little programmer that seemed to provide our patrons with fair entertainment. Again Republic gives us an entertaining film but nothing outstanding.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

MELODY RANCH: Gene Autry, Jimmy Durante, Ann Miller, George "Gabby" Hayes, Mary Lee—Audience disappointed. Picture not up to par.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

UNDER TEXAS SKIES: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Bob Steele, Rufe Davis)—This series of westerns seems to satisfy the western lovers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CONVOY: Clive Brook, John Clements, Judy Campbell—Played on Sunday midnight in the interest of our war drive to gratifying business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, James Craig—Second run, Malden, but business was exceptionally good. Used heralds, extra newspaper space with large mats in local papers. Advertised Ginger Rogers as "Kitty Foyle," the role that won her the Motion Picture Academy Award for year's best performance. Can't miss. Running time, 108 minutes. Played April 17-18.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood and transient patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE OUT WEST: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—Fair comedy. Running time, 76 minutes. Played April 25-26.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SAINT IN PALM SPRINGS: George Sanders, Wendy Barrie—Very warm days; business slow. Played with "Kit Carson" and is a fair picture. Played April 20-21.—George O. Wiggen, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood and transient patronage.

WAGON TRAIN: Tim Holt, Ray Whitley—This is the first of the Tim Holt's pictures we have played, and it is a fairly good western. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 25-26.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHAD HANNA: Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Linda Darnell—A very good color picture except the title. Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 27-29.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SLEEPERS WEST: Lloyd Nolan, Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes—Just another picture which pleased but did not draw any extra business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played April 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari—Very warm days; business slow. Played with "Saint in Palm Springs." Rather disappointed in "Kit Carson" drawing power, as usually pictures of that type go over well in this section. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 20-21.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood and transient patronage.

SAPS AT SEA: Laurel and Hardy—Another Laurel and Hardy hit which we bought late but still enjoyed nice box office returns.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BOYS FROM SYRACUSE, THE: Rosemary Lane, Allan Jones, Joe Penner, Martha Raye—Played this one on cash night and they all liked it very much. Just the right kind of show to make the people forget their troubles in these trying times. Good recording and photography good. Joe and Martha have quite a time as well as Allan Jones and Rosemary Lane as they being twin slaves and masters. Some nice songs and music as well as lots of comedy and laughs. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 9.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

DEVIL'S PIPELINE, THE: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Nothing to brag about in this picture. Just a fair programmer that sneaked by. Not much comment from the patrons.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

I CAN'T GIVE YOU ANYTHING BUT LOVE, BABY: Broderick Crawford, Peggy Moran, Johnny Downs—Not bad for a small show; was really surprised with it. Although I did fair business with it, it was not bad for the price. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 5-6.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

LEGION OF LOST FLYERS: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—I booked this with "Riders of Pasco Basin". They made an excellent combination. Liked by everybody. Running time, 63 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN, A: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Stack, Hugh Herbert, Stuart Erwin—Played in the middle of the week to just ordinary grosses. No reaction from the audience or comments. Accepted as fair entertainment for the masses and worth about half the film rental charge. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 16-17.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

MEET THE CHUMP: Hugh Herbert, Anne Nagel—Just a silly bunch of mush with about one laugh in every 15 attempts. Better shelve it. Played April 15. Burris and Henley Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

ONE NIGHT IN THE TROPICS: Abbott and Costello, Allan Jones, Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings—This is a swell little picture. Abbott and Costello were really great! The musical numbers weren't very much; the comedy is the redeeming feature of this picture. Plenty happening all the time to keep one thoroughly entertained.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

SPRING PARADE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Cummings—These Durbin pictures ain't made for small town audiences. Very good picture but didn't do much over film rental. Played March 6-7.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE VIGILANTES: Franchot Tone, Warren William, Broderick Crawford, Andy Devine, Mischa Auer—Very good western with lots of comedy, action and thrills. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 27-29.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Virginia Weidler, Ann Gillis—Played late but did a good business. Very pleasing heart tugging picture. Played March 3.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

WHEN THE DALTONS RODE: Randolph Scott, Kay Francis—Action-excitement-romance, every ingredient that could possibly be contained in one picture were put into this one. Deserves your best playdate. Played March 13-14.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

CALLING ALL HUSBANDS: Ernest Truex, Lucile Fairbanks—Played with "Lady in Question" and must say "Calling All Husbands" had the house in an uproar. Double billed with another good feature, this should pack almost any house. It's what the ladies want and will go for in a big way. Cheaply produced and well acted. Played rather late and this hurt the box office some. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 23-24.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. Neighborhood patronage.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Bellamy—Slow to start, but ends up a swell picture but nothing real big. Somehow Warners have missed for us all year. We can't seem to make them pay off at the box office. Played April 13-14.—Burris and Henley Smith, Imperial Theatre, Pocahontas, Ark. Rural patronage.

KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page—Swell picture with lots of heart appeal but failed to draw here, although brought some few in that were unaccustomed to attending. Played February 27.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

LADY WITH RED HAIR, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Claude Rains—Pleased only the women patrons which wasn't too many. Business poor. Played March 18.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CUCKOO CAVALIERS: Three Stooges—Leave it up to Columbia and the Three Stooges to deliver the best in slapstick every time. Funny. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

FARMER TOM THUMB: Fables—Rather cute.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FRESH AS A FRESHMAN: All-Star Comedies—This is a very outstanding comedy. Many enjoyed it more than the feature and stayed to see it twice. On leaving the theatre told us we had two fine features.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HIS EX MARKS THE SPOT: Buster Keaton—Funny. Slapstick. Pleases our customers. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

NEW YORK PARADE: No. 1—Good filler.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCHOOLBOY DREAMS: Phantasies Cartoons—Just fair. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 4—Very good. Well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

MENDELSSOHN'S WEDDING MARCH: MGM Miniatures—Very good colored single reel. Music much enjoyed by my patrons. Running time, eight minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

QUIZ BIZ: Pete Smith Specialties—A good, entertaining reel with some comedy. The kids enjoyed it. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

CONSTABLE, THE: Gabby Color Cartoons—Fair. Running time, eight minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

DIVING DEMONS: Sportlights — Good Sportlight. Very interesting. Same as usual. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SACRED GANGES: Fascinating Journeys—Here is a decidedly different color scenic. Instead of trying to take in a whole country or city, this concentrates on a half mile stretch of the Ganges River. It turned out to be very well received. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SNEAK, SNOOP AND SNITCH IN TRIPLE TROUBLE: Animated Antics—Good enough black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKAGE: Stone Age Cartoons—Usual Stone Age cartoon. Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

TWINKLETOES GETS THE BIRD: Animated Antics—Will do. Fair cartoon fare.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE IN INDIA, A: Fascinating Journeys—Just so-so. Don't think so much of these cruise reels. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

WEDDING BELTS: Stone Age Cartoons — Very amusing. Something different. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ARMS AND THE MEN—U. S. A.: March of Time, No. 4, Vol. 7—The pick of the short subjects. Entertaining and educational. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC: The World Today—Timely and interesting war subject, showing convoys. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

BULLETS AND BALLADS: Two Reel Musicals—Very good musical short. Should please. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

RECRUITING DAZE: Color Cartoons — Funny. These Lantz cartoons get better by the cartoon.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BEDTIME FOR SNIFFLES: Merrie Melodies—Very funny. Good animation. Excellent color. The best. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

FREDDIE MARTIN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good musical reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOOFY GROCERIES: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JUST A CUTE KID: Broadway Brevities—Very mediocre.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MEET THE FLEET: Technicolor Specials—Another excellent patriotic featurette from Vitaphone. It still amazes me how much they can get into a short time. You can't go wrong on any of this series. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

PONY EXPRESS DAYS: Broadway Brevities—A very fine featurette.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PORKY'S BEAR FACTS: Looney Tunes — Fine. Vitaphone is our best bet for good cartoon fare. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S BEAR FACTS: Looney Tunes—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S HIRED HAND: Looney Tunes—Excellent. "Porky" at his best. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SHOP, LOOK AND LISTEN: Merrie Melodies—Excellent.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SHOP TALK: Bob Hope Re-issues—Not as good as Columbia two reelers but will do. But not on your best day. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SNIFFLES BELLS THE CAT: Merrie Melodies—Unusually good. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SOUR PUSS: Looney Tunes—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

WACKY WILDLIFE: Merrie Melodies—Here is a cute and novel cartoon that is certain to please. Keep it up, Vitaphone; we like them. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

WILD BOAR HUNT: Hollywood Novelties—Entertaining subject showing Howard Hill, bow and arrow expert, hunting a wild boar. Men will like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WILD BOAR HUNT: Hollywood Novelties—Very exciting. Be sure to play this.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Serials

Republic

ADVENTURES OF RED RYDER: Don "Red" Barry—A letdown from Republic. Nothing like 'Fu Manchu" serial. Most of the kids went for this but not the adults.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

LONE RANGER SERIAL: "I've had enough. No more for me.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEW AND PRODIGAL CONTRIBUTORS

One new contributor sends reports to the What the Picture Did for Me Department and another exhibitor, whose reports have been missing for some months, resumes. The new member is:

JERRY L. THAYER, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H.

The prodigal, who has resumed after a lapse of some time, is:

GEORGE KHATTAR, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, N. S.

Read the reports from these and other exhibitors in the adjoining columns.

New Comerford Theatre

According to an announcement by J. J. O'Leary, general manager of the Comerford Theatres, the circuit has acquired property for construction on the north side of Lebanon, Pa., in the heart of the business district. Plans call for a theatre of approximately 1,000 seats equipped with the latest in sound, air conditioning and other modern conveniences. Construction is expected to start immediately and opening is set for this fall.

Projectionists Hear Lecture

Over 300 members of the I. A. Local No. 143 in St. Louis, and other locals in that territory attended a lecture on the Simplex E-7 Mechanism given by John Krulish of the International Projector Corp., on April 29th. The general purpose of this and other meetings which are being held by the various I. A. Locals is to enable the projectionists to become more familiar with the new E-7 mechanism when installed.

Group Pledges Aid To Film Industry

The Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays resolved to cooperate with exhibitors "to instill interest in better pictures and to give widespread publicity to all patriotic motion pictures" in action taken at their annual meeting on April 24th at the Columbia Club, Indianapolis. Irvin E. Deer, representative for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, told the group about the steps that go into the making of motion pictures and congratulated the Indorsers for promoting the best in motion pictures.

Mr. Deer said: "The MPPDA is a group which assists the industry in the process of self-regulation. The industry is making a mighty effort to avoid the need for government control and censorship in America."

Mrs. W. Robert Fleming of Fort Wayne was elected president. Other officers named are: Mrs. B. J. Roberts of Fort Wayne, first vice-president; Mrs. J. M. Thistlewaite of Sheridan, second vice-president; Mrs. E. L. Burnett of Indianapolis, third vice-president; Mrs. J. E. P. Holland of Bloomington, fourth vice-president; Mrs. J. F. Hauck of Fort Wayne, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. S. Teitel of Indianapolis, auditor; Mrs. Ferd Lucas of Greencastle, recording secretary, and Mrs. Paul New of Greenfield, treasurer.

Aylesworth Named to Defense Radio Post

Merlin H. Aylesworth, head of the National Broadcasting Company from its inception in 1926 to 1935 and in 1936 and 1937 head of RKO, was appointed this week by Nelson A. Rockefeller, Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics, to the post of chief of the radio section of the Communications Division of that group.

The former director of radio activities for the committee, Don Francisco, was made head of the Communications Division following the resignation of James W. Young several weeks ago.

Mr. Aylesworth, it was reported in New York, has accepted the $1-a-year post for a period of about 90 days. During this time he plans to organize radio relations between the United States and Latin America.

Since his resignation from the position of publisher of the New York World-Telegram on January 1, 1940 Mr. Aylesworth has had his own legal office in New York.

Health Film Booked

The 200 prints of the Department of Health's new newsreel type trailer for the child health week program, which got under way May 5th, in New York, have been completely booked in independent and circuit theatres throughout the state. Nearly all independent exhibitors have contracted to carry the trailer, according to T. C. Stowell, Health Department publicity counsel and director of the film, which was produced in the state's single system sound studio in Albany.

New Shores Theatre Opens

The New Shores theatre, operated by Joseph Thomas, Jr., and R. Roy Shook in St. Clair Shores, Mich., has officially opened to the public following an informal pre-opening on Thursday, May 1st.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Looking At It From This Corner

THE recent "spade's a spade" speaking-up on this page was a bit effective in the reaction hoped for. Not too many, but more than a few of the long-silent members have since been reporting. From what the boys write, they have no intention of ducking their Round Table duties. It's just run-of-the-mill neglect, they say, in promising to do better.

Before tuning in to another station, let it again be said that the Round Table is as strong as the members want it to be. That strength is to be measured only by the number of men who contribute to this department in maintaining it as the industry's accepted clearing house for proven boxoffice ideas.

DIFFERENCE between conventional management and skilled showmanship often is a matter of enthusiasm. It's the spark that ignites those boxoffice promotions, that makes a man glow when he turns out something that hits the customers between the eyes.

The newspaper display from Keith's Boston Memorial on the ad page in this issue might bear that out. Put together by Jack Granara and Carlo Vannicola, it's a seller, for sure. Jack writes: "We are quite enthusiastic about the idea."

THE most loyal following is often to be had among children. In terms of theatre grosses "and profitable" may be added where showmen are smart enough to give due attentions to this fertile source of patronage. Frank Gow and Eddie Zetterman bow to that in noting results at the Famous Players Canadian Broadway, in Vancouver. Games and quiz contests are a regular and important part of the kid matinees. The added units are regularly included because the youngsters want it so. They pack the house in proof of it.

A COMPLETE editorial on the value of shorts is the comment by Manager Van Roberts in a report to Interstate's Besa Short, on his run of M-G-M's "More About Nostradamus" at the Tyler, in Tyler, Texas. Wrote Roberts: "It was of feature importance to our patrons and created more actual interest than the feature itself."

To be added is, realizing what he had, Van started his campaign well ahead, and plugged the short to a fare-thee-well with screenings, lobby displays, newspaper breaks, and trailers. Another editorial could be written about that.

"Regarding my efforts in the Quigley Awards Competition, I find that the efforts put forth help greatly in training the boys under me. When this theatre receives recognition, they feel they have had something to do with it and consequently are quite proud.

"In other words, although I like the personal recognition that goes along with the Quigley Awards, I believe the real value is in the ambition they tend to create. We're going to try very hard to get this theatre up there where they really pay off."—From a letter by Francis Gillon, manager, Tri-States LeClaire Theatre, Moline, Ill.

EXCELLENT showmanship is displayed by the Charles E. McCarthy ad staff, on behalf of 20th Century Fox's "Blood and Sand," in the elaborate brochure mailed to exhibitors and titled "The Biography of a Great Poster." Here is described the development of the idea from the time that Art Director Louis Shanfield flew to Mexico City to commission famed Carlos Ruano Llopis to do six original paintings, reproduced in the brochure, until the posters were completed.

That 63 separate press runs were necessary to reproduce the richness of the paintings in the posters should be a tip-off to theatremen seeking for unusual promotional avenues to publicize the picture.

JUST before his date on "I Married Adventure" at Schine's Hippodrome, Gloversville, Manager Lou Hart discovered that Osa Johnson had designed a woman's glove called "Congo", manufactured by a local glove factory. The discovery came through a "strange coincidence," reports Hart, who promptly stretched the "coincidence" into a half-column news story, written by himself, plus cut, plus credits, prominently planted in the local press.

Round Table In Pictures

Screwballery highlighted Louie Charninsky's advance campaign on "Road Show" at the Rialto, in Dallas, with clown and usher distributing balloons and popcorn. Same pair worked audience during breaks, cutting up generally, and selling their wares.

Promoting car from local dealer, Manager Bill Roberts at the Fox California, in San Diego, for "Devil and Miss Jones" dressed a girl in devil's outfit, another in bathing suit, and had them tour main streets riding atop back seat. Appropriate tie-in card was featured.

Top front decoration for "Kane" at the N. Y. Palace, a 70-foot effect sign with various size Neon figures of Welles graduating from six to 25 feet high. Animation is furnished by rising of arms up to copy line, "It's Terrific."

Tying into the auction sequence in the picture, Maurice Crew hooked his date on "Zanzibar" at the Strand, Waterloo, to local college bid for Dorothy Lamour. Comp check signed by the students was mailed to the star and broke local dailies.

To introduce the new "Captain Battle" strip as an added attractor for his date on "Nice Girl" at the RKO Keith, in Flushing, Manager John Heinz availed himself of the personal services of the well-known eight-foot Dave Ballard, to impersonate Battle at a children's party in the theatre.

Woodin Sells Ads On 'Hopkins' Date

Reported by Larry Woodin as the outstander in his campaign for "Sis Hopkins" at the Arcadia, in Wellsboro, Pa., was a special edition of the local daily with whom Woodin made arrangements for a mass space buy somewhat less than the regular rate. The theatremen personally then resold the space to local merchants at regular space charges with a guarantee that the special edition would be sent to every R. D. mailbox out-of-town in addition to the local circulation. All ads carried some mention of the picture, copy tied into the theatre and date. As an added inducement for readers, contest was included wherein those submitting full list of misspelled words in advertisements received guest tickets. Publicity spread the word widely over an extensive area, profit on the newspaper venture paying for all exploitation on the picture which covered other effective angles.

Among these was a "Sis Hopkins" matinee, free admission going to girls wearing hair ribbons and chewing gum admitted at children's prices. Each night of the showing the front was brilliantly lighted, with a "Sis Hopkins" concert given by the local band. Other music was supplied by popular organist in window of prominent music store playing hit tunes from the picture, loud speaker carrying the tunes to the crowds out front.

Lobby display featured "Sis Hopkins" cutouts shown against bales of hay and a street ballyhoo took the form of a hay cart, riders in costume carrying placards spelling out the title. For the girls, another attractor was a contest to find the local beauty whose measurements most closely approximated those of Judy Canova, star of the picture. Winner was given term pass and also acted as hostess at the premiere.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Elaborate Campaign Opens Griffith New Tulsa Theatre

For the opening of the Griffith Circuit's new Tulsa, in Tulsa, Oklahoma, an elaborate campaign reported by Lew Chatham, City Manager, was preceded with a dinner and entertainment at the Hotel Tulsa with C. B. Akers, Division Manager, acting as toastmaster. Among the speakers were L. C. Griffith, the Mayor of Tulsa, and other notables. Local papers, of course, played up the opening with lead stories and extensive photo coverage.

As a souvenir for the opening, a de luxe program distinctively bound, was distributed widely, the 40 pages containing material of interest regarding the circuit operation, story on the Griffiths' beginnings and other data. Outside ads were numerous.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gates' "Dictator" Impersonator

Chaplin impersonator was used in advance of "The Great Dictator" by Arnold Gates at Loew's Park, in Cleveland. Appropriately back bannered, ballyhoo covered main streets and wherever crowds gathered, distributing cards with picture copy.

FPC-Men Build Kid Business With Regular Contests, Quizzes

Matinee grosses steadily building, and maintained, because of close attention to juvenile trade is the answer at the Famous Players Canadian New Broadway, in Vancouver, B. C., where Frank H. Gow, managing director and Eddie Zetterman, resident manager, have been putting on a series of contests and quizzes to attract the youngsters. Successfully projected for over a year to audience applause, the events are now a part of the regular matinees. Most of the ideas are oldies, twisted around to suit locally, reports Zetterman, who jots down a few of the stunts proving most popular, and for which the youngsters compete for small cash prizes.

In case of quizzes, total cash awards are determined ahead, with enough questions asked to use up the amount. When contests are put on, for each contest the first prize is 50 cents, second, 25 cents, for both boys and girls, balance of contestants getting 10 or 15 cents depending on how many are chosen. Contestants are selected by lucky numbers. Events, and how they are put on, are here detailed:

BALLOON BREAKING. Each contestant given balloon of equal size and at signal starts blowing. For smaller children, M. C. does the initial blowing. Entrants stop when balloons reach a certain size, then at second signal, continue until balloons break, with prizes awarded accordingly. SHOE LACING: Entrants receive pairs of new laces and at signal remove old laces from shoes and replace with new, and tie up same correctly.

BAG BREAKING: Six paper bags placed in front of each contestant, at signal required to blow up bags, one at a time. Prizes to those blowing up all six first. DONUT EATING: Bags containing one donut given to each contestant. At signal, bags are opened, donut removed and eaten, then bags blown up. Same idea can be tagged to bananas, oranges, apples, etc.

WEINER EATING: Here double-link weiners are used, a link to each contestant, to be eaten until stop signal is sounded when those with the least amount of "doggie" are declared winners. This is made tougher by making kids keep hands behind backs. POP DRINKING: From case of pop, promoted, each youngster's given bottle with straw. Start drinking at signal and stop at signal. Winner is one with least amount of pop in bottle.

AUCTION: Called the best of the contests by Zetterman, who finds this can be used week-after-week, if so desired, at Christmas, Easter, or other seasonal holiday. Each week, the youngsters are instructed on what form the "auction" will take the following week. For instance, if a house is to be built, theatre agrees to bid for various building materials brought by the audience. Different sums are then offered for such materials as a brick, bit of putty, lath, bathtub-stopper, etc., and etc. Eddie also tells about a miscellaneous auction, where the money was distributed for such things, as bottle top, rabbit's foot, bottle opener, street car transfer, nail, tooth brush, button, needle, etc.

QUIZZES: These include a number of child-appeals, such as Funny Paper, Mother Goose, Song, Girls and Boys Names and Nicknames, Trees, Fishes, Flowers, Fowl, and etc. To those interested in more detailed information, Zetterman has kindly offered to supply further data.

Lobby Chance Wheel Aids "Lucky Devils"

For a lobby gag on "Lucky Devils" at the Grove, in Chicago, Manager John Maloney promoted a chance wheel, which was planted in booth erected for the occasion. Background was covered with stills and 11 by 14's, while card overall read: "Can you beat the Lucky Devils? You can if the wheel stops on number seven." Guest tickets went to those scoring.

Since Andy Devine's hobby throughout the picture is whittling, Maloney contacted manual training class at local high school for display of student made articles in the lobby ahead of run. Credit card was conspicuously planted.

Fashion Show Featured by Robertson for "Miss Jones"

Under the direction of J. K. Robertson, 11 local shops, two florists, and two beauty salons recently sponsored a "Fashion Parade" presented at the Cathaum Theatre, State College, Pa., between showings of the picture, "The Devil and Miss Jones."

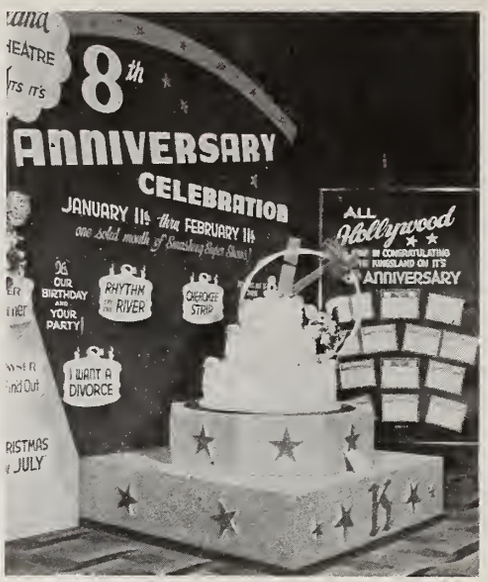
Clothes-conscious men and women had their heyday as the 30 models, who displayed the newest in Spring and Summer apparel for men and women, walked from the stage down a ramp and up the center aisle of the theatre. Cooperating merchants plugged the show storewide and in their ads, with prominent playdate mention.

Military Hookups Aid 'Wings' Date

Air tieins commanding hearty newspaper and crowd attentions helped much in bringing attention to the three-theatre premiere of "I Wanted Wings" in Miami, the picture shown simultaneously at Paramount Enterprises' Beach, Paramount and Sheridan theatres following an intensive campaign.

Early publicity was had on the fact that Veronica Lake attended high school locally and following was a series of features written by Bob Fredericks, critic of the Miami Herald, who was sent to New York on a tiein with Eastern Airlines to see the picture in advance. Eastern further tied in by providing a 1200-horse power airplane engine for display in the Paramount lobby, the line also furnishing a display of model planes showing the history of air development featured at the Beach. Army practice bombs were also displayed in all situations.

Screenings were had both for the army and navy, 12 U. S. Army Air Corps officers flying over from the Army Airport in Tampa and greeted by the Mayor, who with the visitors, attended a luncheon in their honor. Another screening was also put on for the Naval force at the local base. Members of the National Editorial Association conventioning in Miami at the time were also invited.



Recruiting drive in cooperation with the Army Air Corps was staged in the lobbies of all three houses for Flying Cadet Week proclaimed by Governor Holland. Proclamation was blown up and displayed in theatre lobbies. The romance angle was not neglected since fashion breaks of Veronica Lake were planted in the local dailies and 40 by 60s of the star with copy stressing the local angle shown at the theatres.

"Fantasia" Card Sent to Disney

Joe Ehrlich, press agent for Walt Disney's "Fantasia" in Boston, spotted a giant postcard in the lobby of the Majestic Theatre there during the last week of the show's run. Measuring 40x80 inches, card read "We, the undersigned, wish to congratulate you for your production of "Fantasia." Card was addressed to Disney in Hollywood and patrons were urged to sign the message. Over 1,000 persons signed before the film ended its 14 weeks stay.

REID'S ANNIVERSARY LOBBY

"Strawberry Blonde" Model Hired by Callow for Date

So that Philadelphians would be sure to know about the opening of "Strawberry Blonde" at the Fox Theatre, Warner ad man Ev Callow secured the services of a professional model, outfitted her in a reproduction of the dress worn by Rita Hayworth and took her to all activities where she could contact large crowds. Photos were taken of the girl's tour and used for publicity purposes. At local sportsmen's show, wrestling matches, ice hockey, night clubs, etc., the girl distributed small cards carrying picture copy.

Advance screening was held for motion picture editors and critics, which brought editorial and feature stories. One of the city's leading restaurants created a booklet featuring the tunes from the picture which were played by organist during dinner hours two weeks ahead, and leading hotel devoted front cover of its house magazine to the date. Through tieup effected with Public Service, which has a 15-minute program every day over KYW, and a half hour on Friday, announcements were given daily in exchange for 20 passes to be given away on the Friday night show. Callow's "Blonde" was on hand at the station to present the ducats. In addition to girl on the tour of her city visited several radio stations and was interviewed by announcers. Through cooperation of the Arthur Murray dance studios a special "Strawberry Blonde" waltz was arranged and contest held week ahead of playdates during which picture was prominently mentioned.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Citizen Kane" Radio Tieup

Immediately after receiving booking dates for "Citizen Kane" at the RKO Albee, in Providence, Manager George French and Publicist Bill Morton effected tieup with stations WEAN, WPRO and WJAR which was entirely costless. As a news flash each announcer would say: "Station Blank has just received word from a reliable Hollywood news source that the widely discussed RKO Radio picture made by Orson Welles and titled 'Citizen Kane' regardless of its controversial nature is to be released and will be shown locally in the near future."

Ace Drive Marks Theatre Birthday

For the month-long celebration of the theatre's eighth anniversary, Manager Wm. E. Reid, of Fanchon & Marco's Kingsland, a St. Louis neighborhood situation, planned well in advance opening with elaborate decorations of the front. This included pennants from roof to canopy, light streamers of 25-watt colored lamps promoted from the local electric company and canopy hangers. Strung in the lobby were Japanese lanterns and 110-volt lights, colored cellophane streamers, flowers atop boxoffice and birthday cake snipes on all display frames.

All of the above directed attention to the main lobby flash, a three-tiered cake decorated with real icing by local baker. For further emphasis, Reid planted a giant setpiece behind upon which was lettered the anniversary attractions against cake backgrounds. Baskets of fresh flowers were also promoted and two display boards carried wires and letters of congratulations from Hollywood stars. (See cut, next column.)

Sound trailers with pulling copy were used ahead and during the month plus snipes after playdate strips on all feature trailers. Four-unit and eight-unit shows on different days of the month were offered as extra attractions as was a "search-for-talent" contest on the stage for neighborhood amateurs.

Publicity ahead and current was front-paged in all the community papers, Reid also promoting a full-page co-op, shared in by leading neighborhood stores. This was pointed up with a misspelled-word contest, guest tickets given for the best lists gathered from the various advertising. In addition to the newspaper page, the theatreman was able to promote extra copies for distribution by each of the participating merchants. Other advertising via heralds was obtained by the Round Tabler at low cost by selling back-page for enough to pay for almost all printing and distribution.

Murdock Plants Contest For "This Thing Called Love"

"This Thing Called Love" received special attention from Joe Murdock, manager of Warners' Stanley Theatre, Camden, N. J., with a young man and girl with fur and top hat in motorcycle touring the city plugging the picture. A contest, with passes for good guessers, was conducted by the "Camden Courier-Post," whereby a still was run with Rosalind Russell asking: "Don't you think I've got good taste—in lipstick?" Readers were invited to suggest Melvyn Douglas' answer.

All South Jersey couples being married during the week of the film showing were invited as guests of the management upon presentation of their marriage certificates. Guest tickets were offered with a radio contest with tri-weekly announcements on WIP and WIBG, listeners asked to define the picture title for passes. A record tie-up was made with music stores on love songs, eight displays in stores with four special drug-store displays. A "Cupid Zombie" and an "Alarm Clock Sundae" brought attention to the film at the five-and-dimes.

Redmond Reports School 'Sneak Day'

"Sneak Day" or "Picnic Day," wherein the senior high school classes celebrate Spring by taking a day off for class festivities, is again being capitalized upon by Manager T. J. Kempkes and Jimmy Redmond, publicist, at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., in inviting students within 100-mile radius to put on the doings in Fairbury. Project worked with the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce features letters of invitation sent out by the theatre to superintendents of the various schools and the senior class presidents. The Chamber followed through a few days later with mailings of city directory booklets highlighting what the city has to offer in the way of recreation.

In addition to the local facilities, the theatremen offered to reserve one of the city's parks for the exclusive use of the students and as an extra inducement, special theatre parties at the Bonham were offered to the groups at a reduced rate of admission.

Redmond writes that entire expense to the theatre is half the cost of postage, the Chamber paying for the letters and other incidental expenses. Results are already apparent with a number of parties booked.

Laufer Stages Novel Campaign For "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob"

Phil Laufer of the Loew's Criterion in New York made use of several novel angles of exploitation in his campaign on "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," the highlight being a special matinee premiere theatre party day after opening attended by Doodles Weaver of "Meet the People," who does a comedy stretching act in the film. Other features included a street stunt wherein a girl and a gob were hauled along Broadway in a Chinese rickshaw, appropriately placarded, drawn by a man dressed in a top hat and tails; the distribution of 8x14 cards crediting the theatre and attraction and playdate in sixty mid-town hotels. A man stationed in the lobby of the theatre dressed in a gob's uniform tied all forms of sailor's knots and a fifty-piece naval cadet fife, drum and bugle corps supplied music at the opening night.

Gillon Features "Laugh Week" On Three-Comedy Bookings

With "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," "Buck Privates" and "Honeymoon for Three" booked consecutively to play the LeClaire Theatre, in Moline, Ill., in one week, Round Tabler Francis Gillon combined their comedy theme and built his campaign around a "Laugh Week." Special trailer was made carrying the idea "if you don't like to laugh, then you won't enjoy a single program at this theatre next week." Lobby setpiece also incorporated the three programs with accent on the laugh theme.

All newspaper ads carried laughing heads and appropriate copy. Blotters were distributed on "Andy Hardy" and through Station WHBF's man-on-the-street broadcast Saturday afternoons, announcer held a laughing contest and asked questions regarding how folks felt about the all-comedy program.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Effective lobby stunt was constructed by Bob Busch at the Jeffery, in Chicago, for "Buck Privates," consisting of cutout cardboard drums and wheels to simulate a cannon. Inner tubes were painted silver and mouth of the cannon carrying picture title was illuminated by a light inside that was worked by a flasher button.

"Invisible Woman" date at the Garvey, Garvey, Cal., was highlighted by lobby stunt when Manager James Graff planted the usual dummy legs, etc., on chair. Novelty was brought in through concealed small speaker under chair cushion and wires running off side to manager's office nearby. Small peephole permitted girl with earphone to pick up patron conversation, amplifier carrying her gag answers to folks in lobby. An amusing line of chatter was worked out in advance and Graff reports the stunt creating much excitement.

For "Arizona" at the Circle, in Toronto, H. M. Yudin constructed a replica covered wagon for his lobby with title letters across canvas sides. Animation was supplied through wheels which were constantly in slow motion and carried picture plugs. For giveaway, small cards to which a match and nail were attached were distributed, copy reading "Do you know that this cigarette lighter and clothes hanger were modern in the days of," etc.

A beauty revue to select "Miss Jackson" and her two maids to represent the city at the annual Cotton Carnival in Memphis was held on the stage of the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., through the efforts of J. R. MacEachron. Sponsored by local Exchange Club and coöperating merchants, revue was advertised well in advance throughout stores and in papers, all of which carried prominent mention of the theatre and dates.

Securing an old fashioned pit piano, which he painted gold, Arthur Strand at the Colonial in Brooklyn, ahead of "Tin Pan Alley," planted it in the lobby together with authentic sheet music of yesteryear. At breaks, the theatremen sat at the piano and played hit tunes from the picture.

For his horror thriller, "The Devil Bat" at the Loew Poli Bijou, in New Haven, H. Reisinger dressed his street ballyman in bat uniform with back copy selling the attraction. On "Kitty Foyle", newsboys wore chest copy reading: "You've read 'Kitty Foyle' in the Mirror, now see it at", etc etc.

A curiosity stunt was promoted by Lee Kline, manager of Warners' Orpheum Theatre, Philadelphia, for "The Lady With Red Hair." A small envelope bearing a message reading: "A Lady With Red Hair Is Coming Into Your Life," along with playdates, were given out by the cashier to men. If three men appeared at the box-office, the message was given to only one of the men to arouse the curiosity of the others. When a couple appeared at the box-office, male received the message.

Seen much together these days are Round Tabler Sonny Shepherd, air-minded head man of Wometco's Lincoln, in Miami Beach, and his much-traveled Monocoupe in which he just completed a coast-to-coast hop on behalf of Florida aviation. Adding daily hours to his log book, the licensed-pilot Sonny, is a familiar sight in the Florida skies.

Ahead of "Santa Fe Trail" at the Commercial in Chicago, Sol Gordon promoted use of a replica of a prairie schooner which was used for lobby display. Instead of planting the usual scene stills, Gordon secured time tables from the Santa Fe Railroad back as far as 1875, which brought much comment. Newspaper contest consisted of a series of scene stills from Errol Flynn pictures, guest tickets going to those supplying correct titles.

Promoting Western Union for blanks ahead of the picture's opening at the Auditorium, in Richwood, W. Va., Louis E. Munch imprinted his picture message and had these distributed at theatre and through branches ahead of opening.

With a manufacturer of paper plates located right in his home town, Ed Harrison at the State, in Waterville, Maine, promoted a number of these and imprinted them with copy: "Don't bother to wash the dishes; don't waste a minute. Use this paper plate tomorrow so that after dinner you can rush down to see "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob." For "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," Harrison promoted a window in which he used two scowling heads of Lombard and Montgomery and mounted them on compo boards as prize fighters in a miniature ring.

In exchange for a 40 by 60 lobby display of comic strip sections drawing attention to the fact that they were running in local paper, Jim McDonough at the Grand, in Galt, Ontario, got a half-inch banner line under the "Lil Abner" cartoon three days in advance of his opening of the picture.

Main attractor for the "Mickey Mouse Easter Party" at the Schine Athena, Athens, Ohio, put over by Manager Francis Nolan, was a tiein for national defense and especially for the collection of aluminum utensils. Admission to children was free to those bringing two old aluminum utensils, some 200 pounds being redeemed by the Schiner and turned over to a local junk dealer at regular prices.

As to be expected, much publicity was gathered as a result, with announcements made in and other places where it would do the most good.

Promoting use of Ediphone for his lobby, Francis Gillon at the LeClaire, Moline, Ill., planted explanatory card above reading: "We'd like to tell you 'The Philadelphia Story,' but it's too daring to write down or read aloud. So listen to the Ediphone and get the real lowdown." The doorman instructed patrons in the use of the machine, who would listen to a wax recording calling attention to the comedy angles, etc.

Featuring pressbook contest, "Kal" Kalberer at Switow's Indiana, in Washington, Ind., tied up paper which ran photos showing various girl friends of Mickey Rooney's that appeared with him in previous pictures, guest tickets to "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" were awarded as prize, in addition to cash. Special three-column co-op ad was promoted from local dairy. For "Kitty Foyle," Kalberer ran a series of teaser ads ahead of opening, consisting of small boxes with cut of Ginger Rogers and "Kitty Foyle says" advice following.

Map drawing contest aimed at kids in all leading grade schools was arranged for "Virginia" by David Dallas at the Uptown, in Parsons, Kan. Theatreman personally visited the schools and received permission to make announcements to students. Huge electric map three by five feet was secured from one of the schools and dotted with colorful electric lights and the bulbs on the state of Virginia flashed on and off. By checking through directory, girls with the name Virginia were sent special invitations and a Carolyn Lee impersonation contest was presented on stage in connection with weekly kiddie club.

Marty Aninsman, manager of Warners' Leader Theatre, Philadelphia, used a ringside seat ticket to play up his engagement of "A Night at Earl Carroll's." And on the opposite side of his cards was a Carroll beauty to sell any doubters that this was excellent entertainment.

Contacting local distributing agency, which has uniformed men deliver heralds, Allan Easson at the Oakwood, in Toronto, printed up two fold booklets which were handed out ahead of "Thief of Bagdad." Front carried red legal seal in which in bold black type was the word "stop" followed by "and see," etc. Inside carried scene stills, cast and playdates.

Stage Show Tieins Plugged by Curtis

Among theatres playing stage shows, the Schine RKO Strand, in Syracuse, continues to attract with the vigorous campaigns put on by Gene Curtis as illustrated by his promotions on "Screwballs of 1941." Curtis covered a lot of territory with a screwball candid camera contest tied in with leading photographic store which plugged the hookup in advertising and also displays. Local camera clubs were notified and contest was helped along by principals and chorus girls in the unit appearing in costume at the store to act as models for the entrants, the pictures submitted used for window displays for the balance of the week.

Music store, local distributors of the drums used by Jack Powell in the show, arranged for a personal appearance of the star at the store. Here, full window of the drums was displayed as was a chair to which a card was attached reading: "This chair reserved for Jack Powell." Store plugged the tiein in ads, windows, radio, etc. The theatre promoted fife and drum corps to escort Powell to the store where he distributed miniature autographed drum sticks to the youngsters.

Screwball stunts were centered around such devices as distortion mirrors in the lobby with copy "If you think you are crazy," etc. On the streets, Curtis had ushers dressed in Napoleon costume doing crazy stunts such as sitting on a ladder and fishing in an empty pail. Taking advantage of the Saturday noon time crowd, the Schiner had girls in the show practice on the marquee, good for a traffic stopper and newspaper breaks.

College Students Aimed At

General exploitation for the personal appearance of Al Donahue and his orchestra, saw Curtis effecting a tieup with leading music store which included window displays, distribution of autographed photos of the band leader. Large ads were planted in local dailies and in high school paper. Cooperating store also featured an "Al Donahue Day," purchasing a certain number of tickets for the show. Personal invitations were sent to presidents of the fraternity and sorority houses to create added interest at the university.

Radio coverage included plugs over WOLF and WSYR, the former featuring a backstage interview with Donahue, broadcast paid for by music store. Orchestra leader at Syracuse Hotel paid tribute to his friend, Donahue, on two broadcasts and a half-hour of the maestro's recordings were featured on another program.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Prytz Promotes Baker

Local baker was promoted by Roy Prytz at the Granada, Duluth, to make up a dozen giant "Arizona" pies which were wrapped in cellophane and delivered by special messenger so that they were received by president of each club just as its members sat down to lunch. Each pie accompanied a card bearing greetings from Phoebe Titus. During the run, entire staff was dressed in cowboy costume and postcards mailed from Arizona were sent to a special mailing list.

FASHION SHOWS MARK CAMPAIGNS FOR SPRING

Theatremen Obtain Cooperation of Merchants for Elaborate Stage Style Presentations

Introduction of new styles shown as part of theatre programs continue to remain a showmanship-reliable for the spring, a current example of ingenious presentation being the fashion show put on by Pat Patchen at the Mesa, in Grand Junction, Colo. Shown twice daily on the stage, exhibit was broken up into six scenes showing morning wear, house dresses, play clothes, informal dresses, suits and coats and formal dresses, supplied by nine cooperating women's and department stores. Over 20 local girls served as models. In addition to the style show a number of entertainments by talented amateurs were included.

The most effective publicity arranged by Patchen was a 14-page tabloid section of the local daily on behalf of the style exhibit, page one given over to cuts and program of the show. Rest of the section was taken up with ads of the participating stores, feature stories on coming styles and double truck layout of the new fashions, posed by well known picture stars.

Monster Egg Hunt Featured

To emphasize his campaign on "Pot o' Gold," the Round Tabler tied into the Easter celebration with an egg hunt for cash prizes. Sixteen stores were tied in to fill windows with eggs, the prizes going to those coming nearest to estimating total number. For this purpose, Pat put out special entry blanks with the rulings, names of stores and space next to each for the entrant's guesses.

The fashion angle also was made much of by Ernie Moule at the Famous Players Canadian Capitol, in Brantford, Ontario, inviting leading style stores to show the new models in his foyer. In addition to the apparel, Moule provided space for refrigerator merchant, jeweler and others to introduce their seasonal models. Ernie also made tieins with local automobile dealers for full-page ads on "Kitty Foyle" and "Philadelphia Story," each of the dealers paying for a page co-op. In exchange, the Round Tabler showed some of the new models in his spacious foyer.

LIMERICK CONTEST TIED TO "FEELING"

Tied into the Radio City Music Hall premiere of Ernst Lubitsch's "That Uncertain Feeling" with the New York Journal American is a limerick contest arranged between the paper and United Artists. Readers are asked to fill in last line of a four-line limerick run daily for cash prices of seven hundred dollars, fifty dollars being given daily to stimulate interest.

Contest runs two weeks, one ahead and during first week of the date.

Spring was introduced by "Kal" Kalberer at Switow's Indiana, Washington, Ind., by tying in with the city schools on the annual spelling bee, hooking into the publicity by offering term passes to the first, second and third winners. As usual, the Switow city manager successfully guided his annual Easter party and free show put on in cooperation with the Rotary Club, each child receiving a sack of candy with extra prizes going to boys and girls who found the prize eggs in the sacks of candy. Another season idea executed by the Round Tabler was worked on "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," Kalberer securing the names and addresses of all Smiths in the city and county from local voters' register. Postcards were mailed to each Smith suggesting that bringing three other Smiths with them to the show would mean a free admission.

Flowers Promoted for Women

For "Scattergood Baines" at the Roxy, in Kennewick, Wash., Howard R. McGhee made up an ingenious foyer display showing an old time hardware store window in keeping with the background of the picture. Proving to be an excellent crowd-stopper, the exhibit showed examples of merchandise popular at the time of the story. As a special treat, McGhee promoted corsages which were presented to women patrons, local paper running reader on the stunt.

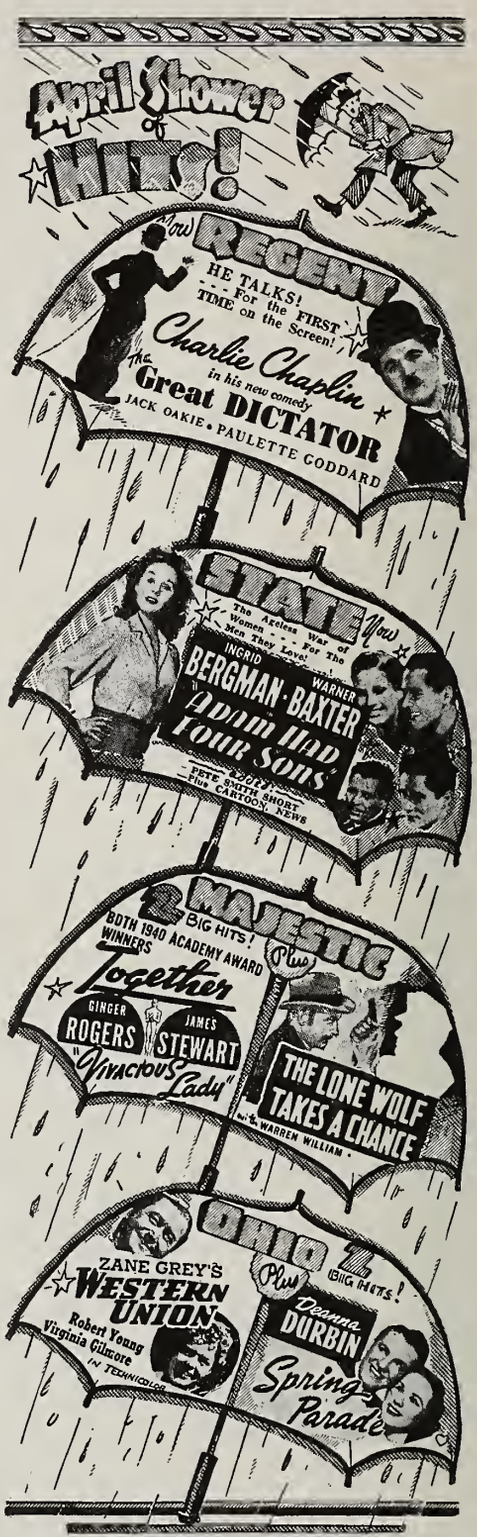
To introduce the new season at the Jefferson, Goshen, Ind., Indiana-Illinois City Manager Roy Helson brought in a giant mechanical elephant which was bannered and sent around town, cost being paid by a number of participating merchants, in exchange for banner. Helson played up his annual Kiddie Easter Party the Saturday before, with wide distribution of chocolate eggs and special prizes of Easter bunnies. Here, too, flowers were used to attract with roses given to the first 100 women attending the Easter matinee. "Buck Privates" was plugged with cough-drop giveaway in imprinted envelopes with copy: "You'll be hoarse from laughing," etc.

Books Show for Kid Attention

To attract the youngsters to the annual Easter week matinee, Manager Joe Feulner at the Des Plaines, in Des Plaines, Ill., built up the show by booking in four top cartoons as an added incentive. To make sure that this would get around properly, Feulner had a story planted on front page of his local daily, added an elaborate trailer week ahead, took extra newspaper advertising and posted his lobby with the big news. Results, he reports, were eminently satisfactory with the youngsters on hand in large numbers.

For a six-week period ahead of Easter, Round Tabler George Laby, at the Victory, in Holyoke, Mass., put out his own four-page tabloid, cost of printing and distributin being met by merchants' ads on page ??. To stimulate reader interest the theatreman featured a "Guess Who's Who Among the Stars" contest, merchandise prizes going to those properly identifying some 12 photos of both male and female stars. Each week different star cuts were used.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS



(Above) Using the stars "in person" to sell the holdover at Keith's Memorial, Boston, was the idea of Jack Granara and Carlo Vannicola in selecting action shots from "Mr. and Mrs. Smith", plus tiein balloon copy to convey the mood of the entertainment. Size: 100 lines on 4 col.

(Left) On the assumption that the metropolitan public was sufficiently acquainted with the star, the story and publicity having to do with "Citizen Kane", the RKO Radio ad forces used only the "It's Terrific" line for descriptive copy for the advance series on the New York opening.

THE CHART

Productions are listed alphabetically under distributors. Parenthesis after title denotes audience classification: (A) Adult, (G) General.

Numbers following titles are production numbers.

Release dates are furnished as soon as available (advance dates are tentative and subject to change).

Running time is subject to change.

Managers' Round Table exploitation references may be found in the Product Digest Section, which is published every other week alternately with the release chart.

For complete listing of 1940-41 Short Subjects see Product Digest, pages 124-125.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

are listed in alphabetical order with the other productions of each distributor, and may be identified at a glance by reason of being in italic type.

PRESS and PRODUCT

REVIEWS, reviewing and reviewers have become, just now, Hollywood's most conspicuous problem. A kettle of controversy with the resident representatives of the lay, or newspaper and fan magazine, press, long a-simmering, boils.

The problems and issues concerned are under discussion here because they so sharply impact upon all of the concerns of picture merchandising, for both distributor, his customer, the exhibitor, and the exhibitor's customers, the box-office public.

It all comes to a head at this time as a consequence of the approaching of merchandising changes demanded by, implied by and influenced by the Consent Decree. This does not make the issues new, but it sharpens them into a situation requiring decision, the formulation of a procedure and program.

Forthwith it must be said, regardless of the many, many considerations that may enter into it all, that now is the time for Production to take a new and more competent official cognizance of the requirements of the trade press and its readers, who are the customers of Distribution, the retailers of the product.

The trade press and its reviewing of motion pictures is an integral, internal function of the business.

The trade press review exists to inform the retailer about the goods he is going to have to sell.

Every thinkable device has been tried to perform that function, and nothing has attained the effectiveness of the trade press. The devices began with a leaflet issued by the American Biograph and Mutoscope Company as early as 1905, and they have included an endless array of press-sheets, press-books, house organs, direct mail literature, form letters, and gadgetry in mailing-pieces from perfume to paper dolls and cocoanuts. Some of those items and documents have looked cute on the executive desks of Broadway and Times Square and Radio City, but they do not seem to have sold any film, informed any exhibitors.

EXHIBITORS, inevitably, and through the long years of the evolutions of the trade press, have come to look to its pages for a unified, convenient, direct and swift cataloguing and evaluation of the product.

If any exhibitor should maintain a library and staff to accumulate, sort and analyze the flood of direct mail, the press-books, the bulletins, and the clippings of a fan press, he might find out almost as much as he can get from the trade press. Also it would be weeks late, of questionable responsibility, and very costly. For several hundred thousand dollars a year an exhibitor could do for himself something approximating the product and industry report job that he gets from Motion Picture Herald for $5 a year, just for example.

Now that Hollywood is a-fretting about its relations with reviewers, it will be appropriate for it to set up entirely separate and distinct reviewing facilities for the trade press and the lay press.

The reasons for this are, or should be, obvious.

The trade press audience, the exhibitor, needs to know all that he can get about the product as early as it can be had. It pertains to his plans, decisions, budgets, policies, and his retail selling.

The lay press audience begins to have its larger proper interest when the product becomes available for inspection on the retailer's screen.

The two functions are as far apart as buying time and play-date.

Priority of access to the product belongs to the trade press because of the necessity for, the demand for, prior attention. That is a function of service to Production, to Distribution, to Exhibition.

Conspicuously, the Producer and the Distributor are risking offense to and embarrassment of the Exhibitor when, by untimely release of the product to the public press, the patrons of the box office hear about it, receive pre-judgment of it, before he does. The exhibitor is not flattered, not pleased, when his customers bring him tidings of pictures first, make comments that he is not equipped to answer.

The exhibitor wants to know. He wants to know first. And he wants to find it in the trade papers where he looks for the news of his business and its wares.

The manufacturer and the jobber who do not tell the retailer before they tell the public are building neither values nor goodwill.

Why, one may ponder, is it necessary in this late year of 1941 to be saying these obvious things on this page today?

WHY, as the spokesman for Hollywood's lay critics, is Mr. Douglas Churchill raising so much of a furore because the producers have been trying to hold previews for the press more and more closely to release date?

The fact is that Mr. Churchill, top-line correspondent of the daily press, by reason of both his reportorial capacity and his position with the New York Times, is not personally so much much concerned as many of his contemporaries. He does do some magazine press articles, but primarily he is a reporter of Hollywood news rather than a critic. The New York Times has the laudable policy of reviewing pictures as they come to Broadway and the Times audience.

What Mr. Churchill is currently doing is to represent, in his genially argumentative way, the local clan, clique and cult of Hollywood-correspondency, which has grown up as an institution which, having long enjoyed privileges, now views them as inherent, self-evident and inalienable rights.

That view is, one may discover, somewhat inaccurate.

The lay press has about the same rights inside the production walls of Hollywood, and pertaining to the product, as it has in any other factory.

Not in Detroit, Wilmington, Bethlehem, Gary, Bridgeport, or even Santa Monica, do great industries and industrial

Canadian Upset

THE mystery in Canada as to the plans of N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Circuit was dispelled Wednesday noon in Toronto when he announced his resignation at the oft-postponed annual meeting of the company and revealed to the directors that he would head General Theatres Corporation of Canada, a new Canadian chain with 75 theatres, in competition to Famous Players. The directors, including Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures president, Austin Keough, Paramount's general counsel, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, elected J. J. Fitzgibbons, former FP managing director, to succeed Mr. Nathanson.

Other new FPC officers are: R. W. Bolstad, vice-president, N. G. Barrow, secretary and seven new directors, including Messrs. Balaban, Griffis and Keough, and N. S. Robertson of Toronto, Wendell Farris of Vancouver, and Angus MacCunn and Lawrence G. Gerring, Famous Players' executives. Morris Stein will become general manager of FPC theatre operations, moving from the post of Ontario district manager. Other directors will be named later.

Leaving Famous Players with Mr. Nathanson were Thomas J. Bragg, for many years secretary-treasurer, and Clarence Robson, division manager of theatres, who has been with Mr. Nathanson for 21 years. Headquarters of General Theatres will be in Toronto, at the Royal Bank Building, one floor above the offices of FPC, in quarters now occupied by Mr. Nathanson's Regal Films, Canadian MGM distribution outlet, which will move to the Film Exchange building.

Breen Signs

FROM Production Code Administrator of the motion picture industry to production chief at RKO Radio Studios was the step consummated Tuesday, in Hollywood, by Joseph I. Breen. George J. Schaefer, RKO Radio president, announced that Mr. Breen had signed a long term contract.

Specifically, Mr. Breen's title at RKO will be General Manager in Charge of the Studio. The company statement said he would be elected a vice president at the next meeting of the board, adding: "Mr. Breen will take over his new duties shortly." It is generally understood that Mr. Breen will remain Code Administrator until a successor is named.

Entertaining an Army

THE first official move to clarify the problem of supplying adequate "live" entertainment from Broadway, Hollywood and "the stocks," as a morale aid for enlisted army and navy men, was announced in Washington on Monday as the War and Navy departments jointly designated the Citizens' Committee for the Army and Navy, Inc., of New York, as the official national organization to "receive, coordinate, and supervise offers by the citizens of the nation of entertainment and such other services and materials as the Army and Navy may care to accept for use in Army camps and naval reservations at the discretion of commanding officers." Heretofore, films have held a virtual monopoly in the entertainment plans of both Army and Navy.

The action followed eight months of official silence on the question of a coordinated entertainment program for draft and regular Army camps and Navy stations, during which Actors Equity, radio interests, chorus and musicians' unions, the press, and numerous producers, citizens' committees and booking agents have clamored for a chance to run shows for the soldiers in the nation's camps.

organizations throw wide the gates to the press and accept a tossing about from the reporters.

No paper dares a sneak preview of a new model of motor car, for instance. Remember about Mr. Henry Ford and his Model "A", the car which was to the millions the biggest motor news in the world? Mr. Ford sat on that picture and there was no woofing about it either.

To be sure, the motion picture industry, by its practises down the years, has invited the problem of today and its issues with the representatives of the lay press in Hollywood.

Once upon a time no publicity was released in Hollywood, no picture previewed there. The film in the can and all that pertained to it came to New York for distribution. But Hollywood producers and players alike started getting their names in the local papers, and so there came a day when in the eyes of Hollywood their papers meant more than all the rest of the world.

Also beginning in 1914, and growing swiftly, newspapers discovered Hollywood as a source of news and feature entertainment, in print, derived from the same personalities sold at the box office. The fan magazines came along as a branch of that development—the exploitation and merchandising on the printed pages of persons and faces that could be had like shells on the beach.

The motion picture, ever hungry for attention, was the while considerably more impressed by quantity than quality or consequence.

Now the press of the world has about three hundred representatives out there to sift the sands for glamour, sensation, scandal, beauty—anything to print to make the page entertaining.

It is now some four or five years since Hollywood and the production centers took over so large a share as they now hold of responsibility for the industry and its public relations. There is no need today to detail the development of the expeditionary previews and kindred manifestations, called promotion. We took care of that subject in a recent expression entitled "The Petted Press".

The motion picture industry is no petting party.

Ultimately its publicity policies, and its previews along with them, will have to align with the interests of the whole business, in behalf of the merchandise.

The time for the overhauling in that department is now, along with the realignments of distribution and sales policies.

The lay press has a place in Hollywood, a proper and valuable function to perform, while serving its readers. That place does not include any authority, or implied authority, over the handling of the product.

The product belongs to the factory until the customer buys it and takes it home.

Hess Rushes Newsreels

THE "best news story of the War," so described by New York news desks, the arrival in Scotland of Rudolf Hess, number three in the Nazi hierarchy, caught newsreels short and left them scrambling to compile library clips. By Wednesday, five days after the German leader parachuted to enemy soil, no pictures, still or motion had been released in London by the British Ministry of Information and only one newsreel company had reached screens in the U.S. with special "background" attention.

To meet public demand for film coverage of the story newsreel editors ransacked libraries for clips showing the man who rose to power as Adolf Hitler's closest companion. Paramount claimed to be first on the screens with a special insert covering Hess's life. They showed him at the time of his marriage and with Hitler and Nazi leaders both before and during the war. Other companies prepared Hess clippings for insertion on their weekend issues.

Newsreel offices in New York reported they were waiting for word from their British representatives as to when pictures of the German leader would be on the way to the United States by Clipper. None would predict when films might arrive.

(The Associated Press reported from Berlin, Wednesday, that newsreel shots showing Rudolf Hess at the Messerschmitt plant at Augsburg announcing awards of the new Nazi "Pioneer of Labor" decoration were clipped Wednesday from the films showing in Berlin movie houses.)

Blocks-of-5 Dilemma

THE legal division of the State of Minnesota still is undetermined on the status of the anti-blocks-of-five-selling bill signed lately by the Governor, the state's Attorney General holding, thus far, that the legality of the law is attested to by the Governor's signature and the approval of the legislature. Enforcement, his assistants noted this week, is not his function; it is that of various county attorneys, who had not, up to midweek, done anything about it.

However, these attorneys, from reports, need not act for enforcement, for the exchanges of all the majors have halted state sales of film, servicing from Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

Expected shortly is an application of six of the majors for an injunction to restrain enforcement pending a test of constitutionality. Universal and Columbia this week were to decide whether to join this move.

Clarence Holton, attorney for Northwest Allied, strongest supporter of the law, and in whose council chambers it virtually originated, challenged the report Tuesday that state officials would "wink" at its enforcement. He asserted: "The Attorney General is ready to act on any complaint made."

More Decentralizing

COLUMBIA Pictures will be the sixth film company to hold a sales convention to discuss 1941-42 product and selling policies. The company, Wednesday announced its gathering this year would take an unusual turn: would, in fact, be two national sales conventions—one a national executive meeting, the other a sales convention to be attended by the entire sales personnel.

Chicago will be the site of the first meeting, on June 7th and 8th. Home office executives and sales heads, division and branch managers, will attend. The place and dates for the second, embracive, meeting will be determined at the first.

A. Montague, general sales manager, explained the executive sales meeting "will be the means whereby Columbia's decentralized sales policy will be extended to an even greater degree than in the past."

Sales conventions have been held thus far by Universal, Producers Releasing Corporation, Republic, Monogram, and United Artists.

Meanwhile other companies were making other plans for proceeding under the new selling order. (See page 49.)

Wheeler at it Again

SENATOR Burton K. Wheeler, in Washington, unlimbered his slings again this week for another try at the motion picture industry in general and the newsreels in particular. The Montana isolationist and chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee which weighs all radio and motion picture legislation, announced that he would seek a Federal law to require newsreels and broadcasters to give equal time and facilities to both sides of controversial questions.

Introduction of a bill to require newsreels to "treat controversies impartially" has been under consideration by the Senator ever since January when he charged the newsreels were issuing war propaganda, and attacked March of Time for unfairly cutting interviews on isolation given by himself and Verne Marshall, of the America First group. At that time Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, replying for the organized industry, cited statistics to show that only 2.4 per cent of the short subjects and 5 per cent of features made in 1940 had any relation direct or indirect to European politics or the war and that 16 per cent of the newsreels were devoted to national defense.

This week the Senator followed a reiteration at Salt Lake City of his charges against the newsreels by declaring that the Federal Communications Act should be explicit in the requirement that both sides in a controversy get equal radio time. Similar requirements should be imposed on newsreels, he asserted.

Showmen's Engravings

"HOME-MADE" engravings said to compare favorably with the best of newspaper cuts, are used by Pat Patchen, Westmoreland Theatres city manager, in Boulder, Colo., who describes his experiences with these "chalk plates" in this week's Managers' Round Table, which starts on page 61.

For houses with limited facilities in this direction, the low plate cost and ease of execution by the manager himself are stressed by the theatre executive.

NO RENTALS LEVY, BUT NO EXEMPTION ON TICKET TAXES IN WAR-TAX SETUP

Committee Reported Ready to Accept No Exemption Proposal as Alternative to Rentals Tax; Kuykendall, Myers Testify

Authoritative industry sources revealed Wednesday afternoon that Congressional leaders who seek new war-and-defense income have practically accepted a proposal to eliminate exemption on tickets of all prices as an alternative to the proposal to tax film rentals five per cent, to collect $12,000,000.

Originally, besides the five per cent rental proposal, it was intended to reduce the ticket tax exemption from the existing 20 cents to nine cents, to raise $55,000,000. However, in the face of strong opposition to the rental levy—which exhibitors claim would be double taxation because their contracts with distributors provide that they are liable to any rental levies, it is agreed that a no-exemption arrangement on tickets would be acceptable.

By removing all exemptions, it was pointed out the Government stands to collect some $8,000,000, which, with the $55,000,000 originally expected from taxes in the 20 to 10 cent bracket would give the Government a total of $63,000,000, with no opposition from the inudstry, against the $55,000,000 from a nine cent exemption and the $12,000,000 expected from rentals, for a total of $67,000,000, but only if the exhibitor opposition to the rental levy was beaten down.

Exhibitors Oppose Tax

The exhibitors of the country are a unit in their opposition to the proposed tax on film rentals, members of the House Ways and Means Committee were told last week.

Concurring in the tax program first laid before the committee by Allied's Abram F. Myers when he testified May 1, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and P. J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners, declared on May 9th that the Treasury would benefit from total deletion of the admission tax exemption and, by extending that tax to competing amusements, would derive a much greater revenue than could be expected from the rental levy.

Mr. Myers had declared that exhibitors could not bear passage of the rentals tax to them by the distributors; and that any rentals tax, if imposed, should be so written as to prevent distributors from "passing the buck." Whether or not such a tax should be imposed upon the distributors, is not for me to say. They have their own representatives to speak for them," he added.

Mr. Kuykendall told the committee that the exhibitors would have to absorb a part of the proposed new admission tax, even though it is supposed to be passed on to the public, particularly in localities where state admission taxes are imposed.

"Please understand that the motion picture industry is quite willing to carry its full share of taxes, and is eager to do more than its share on national defense," he explained. "However, the industry is struggling with a serious problem caused by the unavoidable loss of a large part of its revenue and sales in the foreign market."

That loss, he went on, cannot be offset by the producer cheapening the quality of his product to cut production costs, because domestic grosses will drop.

"No theatre can operate successfully without a good show," he pointed out, "and that means maintaining the quality in the pictures that are turned out by the American studios, without the added revenue each such picture can produce in the foreign market.

"Now, on top of these difficulties and problems, which we believe we can carry and solve if given a chance to do so, it is proposed to levy a five per cent tax on film rentals. It is estimated that $12,000,000 will be collected each year from this source. While this may be a very small item in the tax bill, it looks big to the already heavily taxed motion picture industry, and we believe it is not justified. We are told the Treasury Department, which knows how much taxes we already pay, does not recommend it. They suggest a more than 50 per cent increase in the special taxes on movies, which we are not opposing and we expect to pay, but we think this added item is a little too much to ask us to carry."

Mr. Kuykendall contended it would be absolutely impossible to protect the exhibitor from the impact of the rental tax, under the terms of the standard contract, and, he warned, it might be the difference between many theatres remaining open and closing.

On the other hand, he said, by removing the admission tax exemption entirely, the Government will get a considerable revenue from admissions of less than 10 cents, and by removing the exemption from tax now enjoyed by competing amusements, such as bingo games, pool and billiard rooms, etc., much more than the amount to be raised by the rental tax could be collected.

He told the committee, however, children's tickets of not exceeding 10 cents should not be taxed, and urged also that a provision be incorporated in the bill providing for the collection of tax on the price at which a ticket is sold, explaining that this would reduce the heavy tax on cut-rate tickets to high-school students, CCC boys and enlisted men which some of the theatres provide. Under the present regulations, he pointed out, if such persons are given a 40-cent ticket for 20 cents they are required to pay tax on the higher amount.

Taxes and the draft will cut theatre revenues this year by $100,000,000, Mr. Wood said.

Box Office Loss Computed

The Ohio theatre representative explained that the exhibitors will have to absorb approximately $75,000,000 in defense taxes and will lose the patronage of the 1,000,000 men who are to be in training camps by the end of this year. Figuring only one show a week at a 25-cent admission, he said, this will mean a box office loss of $26,000,000; in reality, it may be much larger. A further effect may be felt by exhibitors in the vicinity of camps at which the Government will operate theatres, he said.

"While we are reluctant to make any recommendations that seek to place a tax upon the other fellow," he told the committee, "we suggest that the committee consider a similar tax upon the many rival forms of amusement with which the motion picture industry is beset and which are free of practically all state and Federal admissions taxes."

Mr. Kuykendall's statement, anent taxes present and contemplated, read:

"The present tax on theatre admissions, referred to by the TNEC (Monograph No. 20) as 'a very high sales tax and one which bears heavily on the amusement costs of the people,' will produce about $74,000,000 this year from motion pictures. It is now proposed to increase the amount collected from this special tax on the movies by an estimated $55,000,000 additional per year, by levying the present tax of 1c on each 10c or fraction thereof on all admissions of between 9c and 21c, which are now exempt. This will increase the special taxes on movies more than 50 per cent (from $74,000,000 to $129,000,000), though the general increase in Federal taxes called for amounts to only 39 per cent (from 9 billion to 12½ billion dollars)."

Compares Bingo Receipts

Bingo games in churches in Cincinnati are licensed by the police department, Mr. Wood explained, and the records show that 2,713 licenses were issued in 1940, with gross receipts of $2,381,573, which would have meant a revenue of $238,000 if admission taxes had been collected. On this basis, Mr. Wood estimated that throughout Ohio not less than $15,000,000 is so spent in the course of a year, and for the country as a whole runs into a "tremendous sum."

He pointed out also that no estimate can be made as to how the general tax program will affect theatre attendance, "but this is bound to be a tremendous factor as the general tax burden upon the average person is going to be staggering."

"It will be difficult enough for theatre owners to shoulder the burden of an admissions tax starting from the first penny and especially so if the present inequalities in Section 1701 of the Internal Revenue Code are permitted to remain," he declared. "But even if this section is amended as suggested, it is palpably unfair to burden the motion picture theatre owner with a tax upon what he buys—film—as well as upon what he sells—admissions.

"It will be found that the amount of money

MISSOURI HEARINGS ON ANTI-DUALS BILL

Public hearings were started in Jefferson City, Mo., this week on a bill pending in the state legislature limiting length of theatre performances to two and a half hours. Representatives of 25 organizations affiliated with the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis, which had the bill introduced, spoke in favor of it. Hearings were conducted by a Senate committee, which favored the amendments to the measure providing that it only be applied to St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, the large cities in the state.

It was pointed out rural areas had no problem of keeping length of performances down to what the council says is "proper time for health reasons."

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTOA in St. Louis, reported the majority of the members at a meeting last week voted approval of the measure which would limit length of performances to two and a half hours, but provides for continuation of the show after a 15-minute intermission.

TAX EXEMPTION TO ZERO

that a five per cent film tax will produce can more than be procured through a broadening of the base of the admissions tax and the abolishment of the specific exemptions now contained in Section 1701 of the Internal Revenue Code."

Exhibitors unable to appear before the committee are flooding their representatives in Congress with protests against the rental tax proposal, it was disclosed at the Capitol.

A typical protest was that sent by telegraph to Representative Homer D. Angell (Rep., Ore.) by Albert J. Finke of the Hamrick Evergreen Theatres, Portland, following a meeting of the Oregon exhibitors' organization at which the tax was unanimously opposed.

Mr. Fink told Congressman Angell that the tax, which he estimated would cost Oregon exhibitors $125,000 a year, would be a "staggering blow to the theatre industry" and a burden which the exhibitors will not be able to carry.

"Distributors will pass it on to exhibitors," he explained. "The exhibitor has no way of passing it on to the public with result that burden will be upon exhibitor, and will be, in fact a discriminatory sales tax that will change many theatres into losing propositions and force some theatres to close."

Assail Delaware Sunday Showings

The restrictive forces which originally imposed "blue laws" upon Delaware are again in arms, with the state's "local option" bill permitting showings of films on Sundays, only a little more than a month old. In Laurel, and at New Castle, there are now movements against Sunday movies. The council of the latter town has passed an ordinance prohibiting the Earle Theatre from opening Sundays, until a referendum is held next Friday. The theatre's opening last Sunday was protested by the Methodist Church. At Laurel, the council had this week given first and second readings to two ordinances forbidding amusements on Sunday, and also leaving the decision whether to hold a referendum, for a special meeting Wednesday night.

The two ordinances were to be given final reading next month, if the Wednesday night meeting decides against a referendum.

Specifically, one of the Laurel ordinances bans films, dances, horse races, auctions, and theatrical presentations; the other bars Sunday operation of coin operated music machines and pin ball games.

The Laurel church groups have pledged themselves not only to press for these ordinances, but also to boycott theatres operating Sundays.

In Harrington, same state, various similar groups are assailing Sunday film showings.

Ask Sunday Shows in Pennsylvania for Army Men

The Pennsylvania Assembly and Senate are considering identical bills to allow showings of films on Sunday after 2 P. M., in any municipality within a radius of ten miles of any Army camp. The bills are amendments to the present Sunday referendum law, and regarded as counter measures to recent referenda in Harrisburg and other places where Sunday films have been barred.

The Harrisburg situation is pointed, because there are three Army posts nearby; and there has been constant agitation to provide Sunday recreation, via films, for the men from the posts.

Theatre owners of Pittsburgh and that area are watching progress of a measure being considered by the council of nearby Munhall, imposing a monthly tax of one per cent per seat on all film theatres.

The legislative committee of the New Jersey Allied unit has been watching 29 different measures affecting the film industry, and proposed in the current session of the state legislature. Some of the more prominent of these are the Ferster Bill, a wages and hours measure; Assembly Bill 97, placing a time limit on appealing injunction decrees in strikes, from the Court of Chancery to the Court of Errors and Appeals; Assembly Bill 396, revising the Billboard License Act; and Assembly Bill 43, providing for the appointment by the Governor of a Board of Mediation, of five members, to arbitrate strikes and differences between employers and employees. The latter has passed, and has been signed by the Governor.

The St. Louis Board of Aldermen, without a dissenting vote, this week killed the proposal for daylight saving time. They reported public opinion was against the new time. Theatre men, also, were against it. Fred Wehrenberg, head of the local MPTO, testified at a hearing that a poll of patrons disclosed they, also, were opposed.

Theatre owners of Michigan last week were alarmed at the progress of a proposal in their state legislature by Representative Dora Stockman, for a ten per cent tax on theatre and other admissions, additional to the Federal levy. The revenue would be used for state vocational and defense work schools; and so is being strongly supported. The tax would be on gross admissions, would exempt, however, charity shows, fairs, concerts, and theatres operated by a community.

Wisconsin Still Mulling Daylight Saving Time

Though exhibitors, opposing daylight saving time in Wisconsin, have up to now blocked attempts to pass a law for it, in their legislature, the subject has risen again, in a joint resolution by Senator Milton Murray, for a state referendum in November, 1942.

Meanwhile, in the same legislature, the Brown and McParland bills, carrying taxation on films, are this week still in Senate and Assembly committees, with observers predicting they will remain there. The session is expected to end in two weeks.

In New York City, signature of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia was awaited, on the bill limiting display advertising for the city's theatres, to a point not more than eight inches beyond the street wall, and not above the bottom of the second floor window sill.

The Detroit Common Council is considering a petition by the Cooperative Theatres circuit for permission to retain marquees over five houses on Woodward Avenue, after an ordinance barring them takes effect June 1st. The Council may make exceptions on marquees; but all overhanging signs must come down.

The Fox Theatre has already won permission to retain its marquee.

The national Senate, Washington, has received a bill from Senator William H. Smathers, Democrat, of New Jersey, to make theatres and other public places in the District of Columbia liable to penalties for refusing admission on reasons of race, color, or creed.

The industrial affairs committee of the Illinois House is opposing the Hunter wages and hours bill, in that legislature. The bill has the support of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and would extend the 30 cents per hour minimum wage and 40 hour per week law to many interstate commerce workers.

In California, the State Assembly has thus for not enacted measures harmful to the film industry. However, one bill affects it, a bill to ban billboards within 1,000 feet of a state highway. This measure is being pushed by clubwomen.

Walter Vincent Heads Actors Fund

Walter Vincent, at the annual meeting of members of the Actors Fund of America at the National theatre in New York on Friday, May 9th, was elected president of the group. Mr. Vincent, who has been vice-president of the Fund since 1930 and a life member since 1914, is head of the Wilmer & Vincent Circuit and chairman of the board of Republic Pictures Corporation.

This was the first election held in 37 years and was necessitated by the death last December of Daniel Frohman, who since 1904 had been president of the organization. The Fund, whose purpose is to aid needy actors, has only six presidents since its organization in June, 1882. They were Lester Wallack, Louis Aldrich, A. M. Palmer, Al Hayman, Harry Meiner and Mr. Frohman. Of the 248 actors and managers who founded the fund under Edwin Booth on the stage of Wallack's theatre 59 years ago Mr. Frohman was the last survivor.

Others elected were: First vice-president, Harry G. Sommers; second vice-president, Katharine Cornell; treasurer, Sam A. Scribner; secretary, Robert Campbell. Lee Baker, George Christie, Sam Forrest, Marcus Heiman, Frank E. Henderson and Antoinette Perry were elected trustees for three years, and Lee Shubert for one year.

The treasurer's report for the fiscal year ended April 30th disclosed that the Fund received $166,409 and paid out $142,136, leaving a surplus of $22,273. Last year the Fund finished its 58th year with a deficit of $11,257.

Film Carriers Meet In New York

Talks by Charles C. Pettijohn, counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and by Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, featured the eighth annual convention of the National Film Carriers, Inc., which opened at the Park Central Hotel, New York City, Tuesday, and closed Wednesday with election of officers the final business.

Items during the convention were the joint meeting of the executive committee and the board of managers, the president's and treasurer's reports, the report of the executive committee; a talk by Harry Campbell, of the Bureau of Explosives; talks by Oscar Neufeld, on film inspection, shipping, and television; by Tom Gilboy, on fire prevention; by William J. Clark, on Interstate Commerce Commission safety regulations; by M. L. Daily, on ICC accounting; by E. A. Harding, on rates and tariffs; by John Vickers, on rates, tariffs, and uniform bills of lading.

The Pettijohn and Kuykendall talks were delivered at a special luncheon Tuesday. President James P. Clark presided at this, and during the sessions. Other officers active during the convention were Mr. Gilboy, vice-president, and Clint Weyer, secretary.

Non-Theatricals Increase

A decided increase in non-theatrical showings of motion pictures has been reported in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., with churches, civic organizations and schools booking educational, religious or commercial shows. Many of the programs are announced in the news items of the local papers.

WIRED THEATRE TELEVISION MAKES DEBUT, FACES and POSES PROBLEMS

Fifteen Hundred Showmen See and Wonder about New Art or Maybe a New Device for Theatre Competition

by TERRY RAMSAYE

Television for the theatre, transmitted by wire and not by broadcast, has had its demonstration to the amusement trade and the public, with large technical success, in extraordinary circumstances—in the face of a world at war and in the face of special conditions, political and economic within our America.

The event was the show presented by the Radio Corporation of America, in behalf of the RCA Manufacturing Company, at the New Yorker Theatre in New York's Fifty-fourth street, to standing room only, last Friday night.

The program presented commentators, a studio stage kit, film recordings from Pathe News, in sound and scene, and the transmission of an event in a state of happening, that being the Billy Soos-Ken Overlin fight at Madison Square Garden. Thus was run the whole gamut of categories of sources now available.

The address of the show was entirely, ostensibly, at selling television to the fifteen hundred showmen, exhibitors and film buyers, as a component of the screen theatre offerings of the immediate tomorrow. It was indicated in accompanying released copy that the cost per installation might be about $30,000. There was, for obvious reasons, no indication of what operating costs might be, what program costs might prove to be. All that is to be explored.

A lot was said intended to assure the prospective customer that there would be program material available. It was in fact a suggestion of a lot of sporting events, and an assumption that the motion picture theatre audience would be interested because sport fans of various sorts were.

No defined plans of merchandising or program of development and exploitation have been made public, if in fact formulated.

Scrambled Press Attention

In view of the potential history making nature of the event it enjoyed an amazingly scrambled press attention. It was a top of column first rank news story to the New York Times, a somewhat lesser news story to the Herald Tribune, and decidedly casual attention after that. Whimsically, most of the New York assignment desks sent sports-writers under the impression it was a prize fight story. The results from the sports-writers examination of the maze of technology and problems of showmanship were about equivalent to what you would expect of a bullfighter's account of a flower show.

Exhibitor opinion was highly mixed, and on the average tending to a most conservative "we will see later" attitude.

If television, theatre television, proves to be an art and not just a medium, it may then be observed that it was the first art to be born in the doghouse. Even so, it is promising, provocative and of perhaps both important and invasive significance to the motion picture theatre and hence to the whole institution of the screen.

RCA has brought its theatre television premiere to the world of showmanship at a juncture when it is under fire on Federal charges of monopoly, with orders to sell off a network, under fire from internal strife and rivalries of endless complexities between radio and related interests, and facing the restrictions of priorities of the OPM in production.

No more difficult period for the introduction of a new industry, or the application of a radically new invention requiring the creation of a new industry could be conceived. In consequence it may be indicated perhaps that the considerations have in them a deal more than just business, today.

Politically the show at the New Yorker points up a situation which for today and now is perhaps as interesting and as complex as the technological situation itself. RCA by this presentation appears to be pressing theatre television—and theatre television at this stage is wired television, not broadcasting.

While broadcasting is under the complete control of the Government through the Federal Communication Commission, theatre television is, so far, and can be entirely an intra-state activity, and therefore, it would appear, if one accepts precedent, not a national concern, free, for the while, from the controls of inter-state commerce.

The New York showing may have been anything from a trial balloon to a depth charge. This range of possibilities is rendered the more interesting in view of the situation at mid-week, when there seemed to be an endeavor at the White House to sort out a tangle of expressions between that executive center and the office of the FCC with respect to radio broadcasting.

Also of bearing on some of the more delicate and esoteric aspects of the situation was an expression of wariness in behalf of the

Exhibitors View Television Costs and Product and Theatre Problems

Individual and circuit theatre operators who saw RCA's large screen television demonstrated in New York last Friday evening appeared to show a keen interest in the potentialities, but saw the costs of equipment and operation and the problems of product supply precluding any widespread adoption for awhile. A typical cross-section of exhibition opinion brought forth these observations:

E. C. Grainger, president of the Shea circuit, believes that theatre television of important events can find a place on theatre programs but, at present, doubts that television can be the main feature, adding, "Cost limits its suitability now to the larger situations only."

George P. Skouras, head of Skouras Theatres, was more enthusiastic: "My opinion is that television has reached the stage of being box-office entertainment. The expense of the program is of no importance, if the product supply is available. Possible Government control, through the FCC, need not be alarming unless theatre television is used for something other than entertainment."

Harry K. Hecht, of the Lincoln Theatre, Passaic, N. J., saw in large screen broadcasts "a tremendous improvement. . . . I take it for granted that wave lengths will be regulated to protect commercial users. I do not approve of Government control of theatre television. The present cost may be prohibitive. If this is overcome, I believe the new entertainment medium will be a 'shot in the arm' for the theatre business."

Leon Rosenblatt, of Rosenblatt & Welt Theatres, New York, said: "Theatre television can be used for current events. As for entertainment, it is a new art. . . . New stars must be developed. The cost of equipment and wire charges are prohibitive for most theatres at this time."

Abram F. Myers, board chairman of Allied States Association, observed: "There is no occasion for panic. Many factors, including the dearth of suitable subjects, argue against its quick, widespread adoption. It must have equipment . . . at prices for all types of theatres. It's sound all over again but not so sudden or revolutionary."

J. R. Springer, of the Springer circuit, New York, said: "Theatre television is at least three to five years away on the basis of present development and . . . program material. Overhead would be enormous and the admission charge would have to be practically the same as for the actual event. I doubt whether the public would pay. . . . Program material is far inferior to that now offered in theatres . . . important events would attract only a limited audience. I believe it will have a place . . . comparable to the newsreel now."

TELEVISION FOR THEATRES

exhibitor voiced in a letter by Max A. Cohen, president of the Allied Theatres of New York to the members of his organization. Mr. Cohen suggested that in view of Governmental attentions to radio and television, exhibition must consider the possibility that an adoption of theatre television might be opening the door to federal regulation of exhibition.

The show at the New Yorker presented but one RCA personality from technological or administrative departments. David Sarnoff, who occasionally has appeared among the personages of television broadcast demonstration, was in the theatre but not on the screen.

An incidental and presumably not significant aspect was that the preponderance of the show and a majority of the personalities presented pertained to the institution of Madison Square Garden, where Stanton Griffis of Paramount Pictures Corporation is chairman of the board, and is also an important figure in the Paramount-Dumont television projects. The Dumont enterprise is the while understood to be concentrating its attention on television broadcasting, not wired screen theatre television projects. A possibility of a certain community of interest with respect to the political and regulative aspects of the new industry and potential art was indicated.

Program Emphasizes Sports

The program at the New Yorker opened with a contribution from the Radio City studios of the National Broadcasting Company. Lowell Thomas, looking very competently himself under the intense lights presented a review of the current news, this time elaborated by television's special capacity, with a display of maps.

Next appeared a round table of personalities, interesting as a set-up, including appearances of and expressions from such figures as W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City—or Rockefeller Center—Music Hall; Bill Klem, chief of staff of National League umpires, John F. Casey, trustee of the Theatrical Protective Union No. 1, approving from the point of view of labor and more jobs; Frank Leahy, director of athletics of Notre Dame University; and Gene Sarazen, professional golfer. As might have been expected they all seemed to be for television. A great opportunity was overlooked for some one to have differed.

The sports figures all seemed to see television as an extension of their audiences. No one spoke for the motion picture, into the theatre of which television would appear to be planning an expedition looking for an audience.

Mr. Van Schmus, after remarking on the drawing power of sporting events, observed: "Call it whatever name you like, anything that will enable a theatre to show things as they happen, and so takes advantage of the suspense interest certainly should find a place in the theatre field."

The program included excerpts from Pathe News, and reports on some of processes of newsreel making. Pathe News has been supplying special films for television transmission from the earliest days of RCA attention to the subject a dozen years ago.

The Soos-Overlin fight from the Garden came over with considerable realism, marred, however, by a decided distortion of the figures, presumably because of the camera angle, an awkward approach, optically necessary, it would appear, because even television cameras may not, at this stage of the art, get in the way of the paid customers in the ringside seats. The effect was to make the fighters look topheavy on abnormally spindling long legs. The transmission of studio material, however, proved this not an inherent defect of the processes or mechanisms. Once adjusted to the convention of abnormality of depiction, the spectator had a pleasant sensation of seeing the fight at first hand, and rather better than he might have seen it from many of the seats in the Garden. It was a tribute to the job that rather soon the fight fans of the audience forgot about television, and how they were getting it, to be absorbed in the business of modified murder in the ring. The fight, just incidentally was another one of those, with an eventuation favorable to further showmanship under the same names and titles. Maybe it was luck that the fight went the full distance and just happened to fill the program time.

The studio dramatic sketch, including Taylor Holmes, Violet Heming and others, was brought over most satisfactorily, with a quality comparing favorably with moderate motion picture standards—about as good a picture, say, as was commonly seen in 1914 as photographed under California sun on orthochromatic stock and printed for release with a shade more caustic soda in the bath than required. Worse pictures, photographically, play the screen today without comment.

It sums up to the fact that large screen television, good enough for the customers, has been attained.

Who is going to do what about it when, and under what auspices where, will be the subject matter of news to come, when and as. Meanwhile there are war, taxes, priorities and a Government eye on media.

The installation requirements and operating characteristics of the RCA Television system for theatres will be described by George Schutz, editor, and the equipment itself pictured in the May 31 issue of Better Theatres.

New Cartoon Series

As a distinct departure in the cartoon field, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has scheduled a series of short cartoons in color in which a bear will investigate the humorous aspects of life in the armed forces of the country.

Drive-In Reopens

Pittsburgh's only Drive-In theatre, operated by Norbert Stern, has reopened for its second season with new individual speakers installed. Melvin Mervis, formerly with Warner Brothers Theatres, is manager of the theatre.

Minneapolis Publishers Realign Newspapers

A combination of newspapers in Minneapolis, Minn., will materially affect the amount of readers theatres will be able to obtain through the motion picture and drama pages.

The Minneapolis Star-Journal is combined with the Tribune newspapers. The Star-Journal takes over publication of the Morning Tribune in the printing plant of the Star-Journal. The Times-Tribune, an afternoon paper, continues publication in its own plant, while the Sunday Tribune combines with the Sunday Star-Journal and will be published under the name of the Sunday Star-Journal and Tribune.

The Sunday Tribune some time ago began the publication of a weekly rotogravure film story page, a policy started by the Sunday Star-Journal. Both papers also carried two and three page theatre sections, and both had other pictorial spots for motion picture art. John Cowles, president of the Star-Journal, continues as president of the new combined company. The companies pointed out the deal is not a merger, but a realignment so that all the city's newspapers are published by one company.

War Activity Aids Industry in India

Harold Dudoff, Universal manager in India, reported recently that theatre business in that country had been very good in the past months due to the troop movements to and through coastal Indian cities. Mr. Dudoff also brought word that new restrictions were expected to be imposed on the American film trade in India in the near future. There has been no official indication yet whether the regulation will be in the form of increased restrictions on film imports or the partial blocking of remittances.

Mr. Dudoff, following a visit to the home office in New York, left a short time ago for the coast and from there will return to India.

Last year the Indian Government ordered a 25 per cent curtailment of the average annual American motion picture imports in an effort to ease its foreign exchange difficulties. Recent Government overtures indicated the restriction on film imports had not provided the Government with a full solution of its problem, and that new restrictive measures were to be expected. No monetary restrictions are imposed on the distributors there at present.

Cooper Switches Personnel

Ralph Ayer, formerly manager of the Ute theatre in Colorado Springs, Colo., has been made city manager of the J. H. Cooper Enterprises in Lincoln, Neb., succeeding R. W. Huffman, who has been transferred to Greeley, Colo., to be city manager of the Sterling and Park theatres for Cooper. Kurth Nelson, of the Sterling, Greeley, Colo., has been moved to the Midwest theatre in Oklahoma City, where he will be house manager.

Harlow Succeeds Corwin

Hugh Harlow, formerly assistant to Alfred Corwin in the Twentieth Century-Fox foreign department, has been promoted to position of assistant to Leslie Whelan, head of foreign publicity, following Mr. Corwin's departure to join the Army.

ARBITRATION CASES ON THE DOCKET IN SIX CITIES, HIT A NEW HIGH

New Cases Filed Increase Total Number to 62; Seven Territories Still Without Complaints; License Clause Planned

More arbitration hearings were scheduled for this week than at any time since the motion picture system was inaugurated on February 1, 1941, with exhibitors pleading their cases before arbitrators in Albany, Boston, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, New York and Philadelphia.

During the week new cases were filed in New York and Memphis. The New York complaint, the 12th filed in that district, as all the others, involved clearance. The first action concerned "some run" and was the first submitted to the local arbitration tribunal.

At the end of the first week of the second quarter of arbitration in the motion picture industry administered by the American Arbitration Association no complaints had been filed in the Atlanta, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Omaha, San Francisco and Seattle territories. Twelve states are included in the "complaint free" districts.

Distributor home office lawyers this week considered a new optional arbitration clause to be included in the license agreement. Under the plan disputes arising out of the contract would be referred to the arbitration tribunals set up as a result of provisions of the consent decree. The clause would be entirely optional and the exhibitor could sign it or not as he wished. For some time license agreements have had an optional arbitration clause but because of the complex arbitration system proposed the method has not been popular and the arbitration clause is not regularly put into practice.

Hearings in Six Cities

Arbitration hearings were scheduled this week on nine cases in six key cities. Three complaints were to be heard in New York, two in Albany and one each in Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Milwaukee and Boston.

In Albany clearance complaints raised by Alex Papayanakos of the American Theatre, Canton, N. Y.

Albany cases Nos. 1 and 2 were continued this week with RKO and Warner Brothers Pictures, the two defendants offering rebuttal testimony.

The hearings before Morton J. Hall, arbitrator, opened April 29th and were continued on Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

In attendance last week as spectators were Willard McKay, Schine Circuit counsel, George Lynch, chief film buyer, Gloversville, and M. A. Silver, Warner Theatres zone manager, and Max Friedman, zone booker, Albany.

Milwaukee's first arbitration case, involving a clearance dispute between Evansville Theatre, Inc., operator of the Rex at Evansville, Wis., and Paramount, continued this week on Tuesday and Thursday before Thomas B. Whelan, arbitrator. On Tuesday two witnesses, Mark Morgan, head of the Evansville company, and Frank C. Clark, Paramount branch manager, finished their testimony. Two new witnesses, Ward Nordquist, manager of the Rex, and John Lenahan, booking manager for Paramount, were heard.

Hearing in the case was continued by Mr. Whelan to May 15th, Thursday, and at the same time the Milwaukee case No. 2, brought by Lee Macklin, operator of the Grand at New London, against all five distributors which signed the decree. It was claimed that unreasonable clearance was being given to the Rio and Appleton theatres in Appleton, the the case has been postponed from May 21st to June 11th. Several of the attorneys in the Evansville action are also serving in the Macklin case.

Judge Stanley Matthews, of the Court of Appeals, has been named arbitrator of the first case filed with the AAA office in Cincinnati, by Willis H. Vance, operating the Ohio, Eden theatres there, and the State, at nearby Newport, Ky., against Paramount, Loew's, 20th Century-Fox and Warners, based on clearance and "some runs." Interested parties are the Hippodrome and Strand theatres, at Newport. Judge Matthews had set May 14th as the date for the hearing in the association's quarters in the Chamber of Commerce building. It has since been postponed to May 28th.

Briefs on the Pittsburgh case No. 1, filed by Herman Lorence of the 18th Street theatre, Eire, Pa., against Paramount, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO, must be submitted to A. V. Murray, arbitrator, by May 17th. RKO made a settlement with Mr. Lorence and was withdrawn from the case. The dispute involves "some runs" and was filed March 17th.

At the hearing last week before Mr. Murray, who is secretary-treasurer of the Scaife Company, the defendants asserted they had offered product to Mr. Lorence, but he said the offers were made only after the arbitration hearing had been set.

Requests for a better run were dropped because questions of that kind can not be arbitrated until September 1st and a dispute on forcing of shorts was settled by agreement.

The hearing was attended by S. S. Perry, assistant to J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and director of the motion picture tribunals; Irving Cohen, Paramount; Felix A. Jenkins, Twentieth Century-Fox; Ira Cohn, 20th-Fox exchange manager; David Kimelman, Paramount branch manager; Robert Caskey; Harry Seed, Warner exchange manager; J. M. Wechsler; John Hammon, Lyric theatre, Eire; Boyd Newland, Polly theatre.

William Livingstone, AAA local board manager, has mailed out lists of arbitrators for the second Pittsburgh case, filed by David Green, Beacon, Pittsburgh, and the third, filed by Frank and Concetta Biordi.

Arbitration of the second Philadelphia complaint in the area, a some run complaint against MGM brought by David Silver, owner of the Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., was heard on Thursday. The complaint was filed April 2 and Loew's Parkway theatre, Wilmington, Del., was named as an interested party, and sought MGM product on the same terms as asked by the other majors. Prof. Rupert G. Schaeffer, Jr., of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, served as arbitrator.

Two New Cases Filed

In New York case No. 12 was filed by the Paustan Amusement Enterprises, operator of the West End theatre, Newark. The five distributors which signed the consent decree were named in the complaint. The Ritz and Broadway, both in Newark, were cited as interested parties. A reduction of the 14-day clearance enjoyed by those houses to seven days was requested.

In Memphis the first case was filed by V. D. Guest of the Camden theatre, Camden, Ark. It was a "some run" complaint against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

R. J. Budd, owner of the Theatorium, Lykens, Pa., on Wednesday of last week filed as an intervening party with the Philadelphia arbitration board in the clearance complaint of Bryant Wiest, operator of the Hollywood Theatre, Elizabethville, Pa. (Philadelphia Case No. 4). Mr. Budd complained that he had been advertising his attractions in Elizabethville for the past 20 years and has always had clearance over the Hollywood when the house was operated by other owners. MGM was named in the clearance dispute.

The clearance complaint of Rose Hexter, operator of the Breeze theatre, Philadelphia scheduled to be heard on Friday (Philadelphia Case No. 3), was postponed because the parties involved had indicated that they had made earlier arrangements to be in Atlantic City for the Variety Club convention. Calvin H. Rankin, of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, was selected as arbitrator. No substitute day for the hearing was set.

Hearing of the Detroit case No. 2 brought by Julius L. and Milton London against Paramount, RKO, Warners and 20th-Fox has been postponed until May 24th.

The Gayety theatre, Minneapolis, former burlesque house devoted to double features and part-time vaudeville, has been closed for the Summer pending settlement of the arbitration proceedings before the Minneapolis arbitration board. David Gillman, operator of the theatre, filed two arbitration complaints, one against 20th-Fox, which was withdrawn, and one against Paramount, which is still pending. "Some run" was requested.

Next week Wesley A. Sturges, Yale law professor and member of the administrative committee of the motion picture arbitration system, and J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and director of the motion picture arbitration tribunals, are scheduled to continue their tour of local offices.

Koerner Heads RKO Theatres

Charles W. Koerner, who until recently was west coast division manager for RKO, has been appointed general manager in charge of RKO theatre operations succeeding John J. O'Connor who is supposed to be joining Universal, it was announced this week by George Schaefer, president of the company. Direct from Schine Circuit headquarters, at Gloversville, N. Y., came rumblings, Wednesday that there might be conversations with Mr. O'Connor with a view to his joining that company.

Mr. Koerner, left Hollywood Tuesday, for New York where he will make his future headquarters.

Thirty years in show business, Mr. Koerner became affiliated with RKO ten years ago as division manager of the company's southern territory, New Orleans, Birmingham and Memphis. He was then transferred to the home office in New York where, in a similar capacity, he handled operations of theatres in the Northern New York territory, including Rochester, Syracuse, Albany, Schenectady and Troy. Later he was sent to Boston as division manager of the entire New England territory. Following this he was assigned to the west coast to take charge of theatres in that area.

It is generally reported that Max Fellerman, RKO home office circuit executive, will be promoted to succeed Fred Meyers as chief buyer and booker for RKO theatres. Mr. Meyers resigned with Mr. O'Connor.

Paramount Changes In Oklahoma

Numerous changes have been effected recently in the personnel of the Paramount exchange in Oklahoma City, Okla. The changes are as follows:

C. L. Dees, branch manager, has been transferred to the Dallas, Tex., office. C. H. "Buck" Weaver, formerly Dallas branch sales manager succeeds Mr. Dees as manager of the Oklahoma City branch. Tom McKean, salesman in the Oklahoma territory has been promoted to short subjects sales representative for District No. 3. Howard Nicholson, formerly salesman for Paramount in the western Oklahoma territory has been shifted to the northeastern section of the state. Claude York, formerly salesman for the Oklahoma City Monogram exchange, has been appointed salesman for Paramount traveling in western Oklahoma. Sam Brunk, for many years booking manager of the Oklahoma City exchange is now traveling the southern Oklahoma district as a salesman for Paramount. Andy Sisk, who joined the Oklahoma City staff last February as assistant booker has been promoted to booking manager and Ed Chumley, head shipper, has been promoted to assistant booker. Paul Rice has been promoted from assistant to head shipper, and Eugene Jacobs, formerly of the Griffith Amusement Company, has become assistant shipper.

Company Acquires Theatre

The St. Cloud Amusement Corporation of New Jersey has acquired a long term lease for the Highbridge theatre in Highbridge, N. J., through Berk and Krumgold, theatre realtors of New York. The theatre was acquired from George W. Leonard and is the 17th of the chain.

"Thumbs Up" In England

Bombs dislocate but do not disrupt British theatre operation George Archibald, joint managing director for United Artists in Britain, reported on his arrival in New York this week for a month's visit. United Artists' gross English business for the first quarter of 1941 exceeded by 25 per cent the record for any corresponding quarter, he said, adding that theatre attendance remained good outside of the most heavily bombed locations.

Two extra hours of daylight saving, designed to speed war production, have also proved a boon to theatres, he reported, postponing the arrival of German night raiders over London until 10:30 or 11:00 P.M.

Patronage during matinee and morning shows by night workers also remains good, he said.

British film production has dropped 50 per cent since the start of the war, accounting for the increase in American business. The number of theatres out of commission because of the war is still between 450 and 500 out of a total of 5,000, according to Mr. Archibald.

Film rentals have been reduced only in areas where there has been extensive evacuation, he said. The British Government pays theatre owners 2½ per cent of assessed damage for bombed houses and they are to be reimbursed fully after the war. He foresaw no change in quota standards unless the 'blitz' halts all English production.

Sees All Aluminum Held for Defense

All aluminum, including scrap, will be banned from non-defense uses "sometime in 1942," according to W. L. Batt, deputy director of the production division of the Office of Production Management. Testifying this week before the Senate committee investigating national defense, Mr. Batt said that increased airplane production would require all of the aluminum available from any source. Some manufacturers of motion picture equipment employing aluminum to a substantial degree in its construction, are already using the scrap metal, which, for some products—changeable display letters, for example—has been found to be at least as good as the fresh metal. If conditions cited by Mr. Batt continue, however, substitutes for aluminum will have to be adopted next year in all classes of non-defense products.

"Forgotten Village" Postponed

According to an announcement by Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn, distributors of the John Steinbeck-Herb Kline Mexican film, "The Forgotten Village," the opening has been postponed until the early part of the fall. The decision was said to have been taken because the Steinbeck book of the same name, which Viking Press is rushing for publication, will not be ready before the middle of June. The film will be shown on a roadshow basis.

Mrs. N. A. Brady Passes

Mrs. Nellie A. Brady, mother of Leo Brady, of Quigley Publications, died Tuesday night at her home in Chicago. Surviving are four sons and two daughters. The funeral was held from the home on Friday.

'Decency' Held Vital Factor

"Decency in motion pictures is just as important as the artistic, the beautiful and the cultural." So observed William G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall Theatre at Rockefeller Center, New York, at the annual luncheon, Tuesday, of the Motion Picture Department of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

Mr. Van Schmus, a guest, commended the work of the Legion of Decency and of Joseph I. Breen, as Administrator of the industry's Production Code, in Hollywood.

Some 70 members of the Federation's film committee attended. Mrs. James F. Looram, committee chairman, presided.

Father John J. McClafferty, executive secretary of the Legion, urged the reviewers to "consider your work a contribution to Defense—spiritual and national. Efforts directed to the cause of decency and morality in motion pictures are addressed to the preservation and protection of morality and, necessarily, then, contribute to the strength of American Democracy," said the Legion's executive.

Richard Reid, editor of the Catholic News, said the Legion had the renewed pledge of support of the Catholic press.

Father Gerard Donnelly, S.J., speaking in the absence of Father Francis X. Talbot, S.J., Moderator of the Federation's film department, commended the department's efforts in motion picture observations.

Archbishop John T. McNicholas, O.P., S.T., chairman of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, in Cincinnati, wired the committee:

"The task of your Department is becoming increasingly difficult but with the fixed standards that guide you and with your spirit to serve the general public by constantly striving to keep recreational entertainment wholesome it is not surprising that your efforts are very successful."

Charges Loss of Film Deal

Charging their insistence upon observance of the run provision in the basic agreement with New York's legitimate theatres caused a deal for the film rights to his play, to collapse, Milton Lazarus on Tuesday filed suit for $25,500 damages against the Dramatists Guild and the Authors League of America. He is a member of both organizations. Suit is in the New York Supreme Court. Mr. Lazarus' play is "Every Man for Himself." He alleges it was bought by Columbia. The run provision in the authors-dramatists' music agreement requires a play to run at least three weeks in New York City before film rights may be sold.

Joins P. R. C. Sales Staff

William Carmichael has been appointed to the Washington sales staff of Producers Releasing Corporation by George Gill, District of Columbia franchise holder. Mr. Carmichael was formerly a district manager for United Artists.

Joice Promoted

Paramount reorganizing its publicity and advertising departments in the Cleveland territory has made J. Maxwell Joice district advertising manager of Cleveland and Detroit and has shifted Norman Sprowl to cover Cincinnati and Indianapolis, which Mr. Joice formerly handled.

TNEC LISTS TWO FILM COMPANIES "WITHOUT VISIBLE CONTROL CENTER"

Report on Distribution of Ownership Lists Warners as "Family Control"; Loew's, Paramount: "No Dominant Interest"

Three motion picture companies, Loew's, Inc., Paramount and Warner Brothers are included in the 200 largest non-financial corporations studied in the Temporary National Economic Committee's Monograph No. 29, furthering its investigation of the concentration of economic power, but only one of them, Warner Brothers, could be included, on the basis of available data, in the study's conclusion that the 200 corporations exhibited, as a whole, a trend toward concentration of either control or ownership. Eastman Kodak Company, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, largest in the list, and the Radio Corporation of America also were listed, along with Loew's and Paramount, among the 60 corporations of the 200 which were "without a visible center of ownership control."

Other Possibilities Seen

The report, however, by no means accepts this conclusion. Early in the 144-page summary of conclusions drawn from 1,386 pages of statistics and charts, it is pointed out:

"This does not mean . . . that an actual center of control was lacking, but only indicates that a study of the 20 largest record holdings failed to disclose such a center. In many of these corporations (the 60 without visible center of control) the chief officers, though owning but little stock, may well have been in a position of control, relying largely on the power of the proxy machinery. In others investment bankers or trust companies (as the trustees for large blocks of stock) may have exercised considerable influence, even though their own beneficial holdings were small or nonexistent." A footnote adds: "There were also a number of cases, classified among corporations without a visible center of ownership control, in which such control may actually have existed although it was not detected in classifying the 200 corporations for the purposes of this study."

In this connection, ownership or control by banks or other financial institutions is not examined minutely because the purposes of the study was to analyze only ownership and control by individuals in non-financial corporations. In many instances where large blocks of stock were credited to banks or investment companies as nominees the legal and beneficial owners of such stock were not revealed. This factor is considerably higher for the three motion picture companies than the general average for companies included in the study.

Special attention was paid to the film industry in the TNEC Monograph No. 13. (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 1.)

Control by Families

The monograph supplies statistical background, bales of it, for a sort of official and erudite edition of "America's Sixty Families," written in more popular style for the best seller lists several years ago. Its first findings are that three family groups—the duPonts, the Mellons, and the Rockefellers—have shareholdings valued at nearly $1,400,000,000 which directly or indirectly give control over 15 of the 200 largest nonfinancial corporations with aggregate assets of over $8,000,000,000—or more than 11 per cent of the total assets of these companies. Thirteen family groups, including these three, with holdings worth $2,700,000,000, own over 8 per cent of the stock of the 200 corporations. It is further pointed out that trust funds, estates and family holding companies are common devices used for maintaining and perpetuating family control.

Motion picture interests in which these family groups participate do not appear as such in this study because it confines itself to the 200 corporations selected as largest on the basis of assets. However, connections through the many banks and investment companies which are listed as large stockholders in the three film companies included, are not analyzed. A small clue appears in the considerable block of Loew's, Inc., stock listed under the Chase National Bank as nominee, and the reference, in a special chapter devoted to the Rockefeller interests, to the family's apparent control of Chase National. Other Rockefeller participation in motion picture finances, directly and through Chase National, does not appear because only the three film companies were included in the scope of the report. Also, duPont Film Company, a wholly owned subsidiary of the duPont interests, does not appear directly in the study.

The monograph, prepared by the Securities and Exchange Commission on assignment from the TNEC and intended for the use of the latter group in preparing its final report to Congress, says its purpose was based on the need for a complete study of corporate ownership shown in President Roosevelt's message to Congress on April 20, 1938, in which he said:

"The danger of this centralization (of corporate assets and income) is not reduced or eliminated, as is sometimes urged, by a wide public distribution of their securities. The mere number of security holders gives little clue to the size of their individual holdings or to their actual ability to have a voice in the management."

The report claims to support the President's assertion that the mere number of security holders obscures the more important fact of concentration of stock ownership in the hands of relatively few persons. "It also provides important clues," the conclusion says, "toward an answer to the second assertion that most security holders have little voice in the management."

Conclusions Summarized

Other conclusions of the report include:

In the case of about 40 per cent of the 200 largest corporations one family, or a small group of families, exercise either absolute control, by virtue of ownership of a majority of the voting securities, or working control through ownership of a substantial minority of the voting stock. Warner Brothers is included in the latter group.

About 60 of the corporations, or an additional 30 per cent are controlled by one or more other corporations. Thus, a small group of dominant security holders is not in evidence in only 30 per cent of the 200 corporations, with the limitations cited above. The American Telephone and Telegraph Corporation is outstanding in this class which includes also Loew's, Paramount, Eastman Kodak and RCA.

The indicated and recorded financial stake of officers and directors in their own corporations is relatively small. Officers and directors own six per cent of the common stock and slightly over two per cent of the preferred stock of the 200 corporations and these figures are heavily weighted by the inclusion of two companies—Ford Motor Company, the stock of which is held entirely by three members of the Ford family who are the only officers; and Hearst Consolidated Publications, all stock of which is owned by the president, William Randolph Hearst.

TWO FILM COMPANIES "WITHOUT VISIBLE

The 20 largest shareholdings in each of the 200 corporations account, on the average, for nearly one-third of the total value of all outstanding stock. In the average corporation the majority of the voting power is concentrated in the hands of not much over one per cent of the stockholders.

The ownership of the stock of all American corporations is highly concentrated. For example, 10,000 persons (0.008 per cent of the population) own one-fourth, and 75,000 persons (0.06 per cent of the population) own fully one-half, of all corporate stock held by individuals in this country.

Foreign investors have a considerable stake in the stock of the 200 largest non-financial corporations, stockholders residing outside the United States being estimated to own over six per cent of the common stock and nearly four per cent of the preferred stock of the companies studied. Majority control resides outside the country in only one of the companies, the Shell Union Oil Corporation, but their holdings also are very substantial in Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation and American Metals, Ltd. Over 64 per cent of Shell was held by the Royal Dutch group; 23 per cent of Allied Chemical was owned indirectly by Solvay et Cie of Brussels, 24 per cent of American Metals was owned by Selection Trust, Ltd., a British corporation.

Although it was not listed among the 200 corporations, the foreign holdings of General Aniline & Film Corporation (formerly the American I. G. Chemical Corporation) were included in the summary because the company appeared as of March 31, 1938, as a substantial stockholder in Eastman Kodak (10,000 shares), E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (6,500 shares), Standard Oil of N. J. (289,225 shares), Standard Oil of Ind. (10,000 shares) and Aluminum Co. of America (18,050 shares).

The 200 corporations used in the study were selected on the basis of total assets on December 31, 1937. Motion picture companies and those with affiliated interests with their size ranks were:

Size Rank	Company	Assets
104	Eastman Kodak Company.....	$179,387,000
108	Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.....	177,545,000
129	Loew's, Inc.	142,544,000
148	Paramount Pictures, Inc.....	120,219,000
167	Radio Corporation of America....	89,373,000

In the classification of the list according to industry, Warners, Loew's and Paramount were included in the "Service" classification and were the only companies in that group. Eastman Kodak and RCA were listed under manufacturing groups. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, with assets of $3,859,293,000, had Size Rank 1. The list included the predominant factors in almost all the major manufacturing industries of the country; electric, gas, and water utilities; railroads, and retail distribution and merchandising.

Companies in the list, at the end of 1937, had assets of nearly $70,000,000,000 or about 25 per cent of the assets of all corporations and about 45 per cent of those of all nonfinancial corporations. They paid in 1937, about $2,200,000,000 in dividends, or about 40 per cent of dividends paid by all corporations and somewhat less than 45 per cent of those of all nonfinancial corporations. They had about 6,000,000 shareholdings, or about one-third of the shareholdings in all American corporations and about two-fifths of those in all nonfinancial corporations.

For the 200 corporations the report shows the size distribution of book shareholdings, analyzes the holdings of officers and directors and of foreign stockholders, and studies the 20 largest book shareholdings, first for broad groups of companies and then for individual corporations. The size distribution of book shareholdings, holdings of officers and directors, and the dividends paid to foreigners for Warners, Loew's, Paramount, Eastman Kodak and RCA, and the 20 largest book shareholdings for the first four companies named are shown in the accompanying tables.

Analysis of the 20 largest shareholdings listed for the motion picture companies shows that while the percentage of total outstanding stock held by the 20 largest shareholders is smaller for these companies than for the average across the whole list, the percentage of unidentified holdings of banks and brokers is from 20 to 30 per cent higher.

From Academy Award Winner Ginger Rogers now comes "Tom, Dick and Harry," a riotous romanticomedy heralded in Hollywood as the show most likely to give "Kitty Foyle" a battle for top box-office honors. With Ginger are George Murphy, Alan Marshal and Burgess Meredith. Directed for RKO Radio by Garson Kanin. Produced by Robert Sisk. Story and Screen Play

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The columns of the New York Times carried a heart-tug, the other morning, in the form of a two-column, display advertisement, from "An Orphan," "To His Unknown Father and Mother," inquiring: "Did you place through the Most Reverend Monsignor (then Father) Edwards of the Church of Immaculate Conception, New York City, on September 15, 1879, an infant son supposedly one year old? If either of you wish to get in touch with your son now, kindly write to Box Z 2506, Times Annex."

The orphan was abandoned some 62 years ago. "Now that retarding influences may be ended," his advertisement continued, "your son is anxious to know you. He does not need assistance of any kind and agrees to keep any replies confidential."

"A picture of a man taking a bath can be shown on the screen," says the Bristol, New Hampshire, Daily Enterprise, "but a picture of him taking the bath cannot be shown in the newspapers." They're wrong on both counts.

Broadcasters, fighting ASCAP and ASCAP music on the air are complaining that ASCAP has been getting pretty rough in throwing its darts, citing a new pamphet circulated by ASCAP, quoting a newspaper as having made this observation: ". . . Not until the composers got together and formed a society for bringing action—much as the Litchfield farmers got together a century ago and formed a society for the pursuit of horse thieves—did the radio barons concede grudgingly that they ought to pay for the music they broadcast.

Will President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, Hitler, Mussolini and Mr. Churchill, the Japs and the Russians, Greeks and Turks, please take notice of the following notice sent out by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in New York:

> "Anyone interested in learning when World War II will end can find the answer in a forthcoming M-G-M short subject, 'Still More About Nostradamus', a sequel to the current short, 'More About Nostradamus'.
> "Carey Wilson, Hollywood impresario of the 16th century prognostigator, has deciphered Nostradamus' version of the date and the exact locale of the decisive and final battle. According to Wilson, this battle will see a nation now neutral (not the United States) playing an important part, also the battle will be fought between land forces on one side and combined land and naval forces on the other. . . . "

The broadcasters' anti-ASCAP music publishing house of Broadcast Music, Inc., is making arrangements to distribute bundles of music to Britain. In the British bundles one will find such titles as "Let's Dream This One Out," "Goodbye Now," "It All Comes Back to Me Now," "There'll Be Some Changes Made," "Where's the Captain's Hat," "Talkin' to the Wind," "Do I Worry," "Cheer Up."

The manager of a California theatre, who asks that his name not be mentioned, for obvious reasons, takes pen in hand to criticize some of the material distributors put in their feature press books for use by exhibitors in "planting" publicity stories in their local newspapers.

"Can you, in your wildest imagination," he asks, "visualize a dramatic editor going into ecstacies upon receiving such press book copy as that given to theatre managers to help sell a picture to the public via newspapers? He cites the pressbook piece about "So Ends Our Night," in which Fredric March is described as having a habit of exclaiming, "Oh, piffle!' in lieu of stronger words, whenever a scene does not go to his, or the director's, satisfaction.

"One day," the pressbook story for editors continued, "on the set of the David L. Loew-Albert Lewin production, 'So Ends Our Night,' which will open at the ..... Theatre on ....., he made the usual remark and nobody except one member of the cast paid any attention to it. This man, a heavy, bald-headed character on his first day's work, approached March, bowed and said: 'Yes?'

"March looked surprised, and bowed in return. A little later, after a different scene, March exclaimed, 'Oh, piffle!' and the man came to him again. 'Yes, Mr. March,' he said. 'You wish something? My name is John Piffle.'

"Everyone on the stage roared for five minutes—even Piffle, a former German stage star, when the joke had been explained to him."

A new commercial advertising film is intended to "glamourize" the man who pastes the paper on the wall. Which prompts Advertising Age to observe that he'll have a hard time equalling established public interest in the famous one-armed paper hanger.

Without winking an eye, Paramount home office publicity announces to the American press that Dave Fleischer, director, needing intelligent faces for a quintet of male butterflies which perform a ballet dance in "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," had Dan Gordon, Ted Pierce, Harvey Sparber, Cal Howard and Fleischer, himself, pose as butterflies for the Max Fleischer Miami-made production, to "fly hither and yon" all over the screen.

Two days later came this announcement to the press, from the same place, about the same Dave Fleischer and the same "Mr. Bugs":

> "Artists at the Fleischer Studio in Miami today were provided with an outlet for pent-up emotions. Dave Fleischer, production head of the studio, employed four negroes to make vases for the artists to break.
> "Frequent temperamental blow-ups among the 700 artists drawing 'Mr. Bug Goes to Town' . . . motivated the action. . . . "

Competition among the "Big Five" consent decree signers to get to market first with their new season's short subjects, is assuming mighty serious proportions. The decree forbids the "forcing" of short subjects with features. As a result, special individual showmanship attention is being paid by these short subject purveyors to those little one and two reel items which "balance the diet" of filmfare for public consumer.

And Paramount says it is going to watch that diet very carefully in its new short subject promotions, giving the public "ice cream" desserts after the big feature meal, rather than a second helping of succotash. To prove it, they sent around to the trade press this week a big box of ice cream, to remind that an ice cream dessert is better to top off a meal than another dish of carrots and peas (the ice cream by courtesy of Sealtest, promoted by Paramount's Manny Reiner.—Advt.)

Any Hollywood motion picture producer who is in the market for something really screwy in plots should take a look at H. Allen Smith's new book, "Low Man on a Totem Pole," to be published on May 16th by Doubleday, Doran, New York. Smith, called the Screwball's Boswell, records, in jetsam journalism, his adventures with the great and near great, from the Washington newspaper correspondent who really believed that Herbert Hoover had bladders on his feet to the unsung samaritan who fed chili con carne to a nickel-in-the-slot music box.

Believe it or not, an announcement comes to the press stating that Packard Motors has completed cooperations with Paramount in filming scenes in the Packard assembly plant for the new Paramount picture, "Reaching for the Sun," which, says Packard, is based on "a story of man against machines, an indictment of the motor magnates for their alleged exploitation of the workers."

VARIETY CLUBS IN FUN, FROLIC AND FILM FORUM AT SEASIDE MEETING

Ambassadors, Senators and Just Plain Fun Lovers to Be Guests of Honor at Atlantic City; Record Attendance Seen

Showmen from all sections of the country convened at Atlantic City on Wednesday and Thursday for the opening of the seventh annual national convention of the Variety Clubs of America. The session is to last through Saturday with an elaborate program of entertainment, business meetings, and a forum on entertainment industry problems. John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, national chief barker of the Variety clubs is chairman of the convention.

Two cabinet members, Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, half a dozen senators, several governors and a long list of top industry figures were on the list of distinguished guests scheduled to attend or address the meeting of theatre men, circuit operators, exchange executives and other showmen who constitute the Variety membership.

Lord Halifax accepted the invitation of the Variety Club in a telegram to Mr. Harris and indicated he probably would attend the Humanitarian Award dinner on Saturday evening at the Hotel Traymore. Postmaster General Frank Walker and Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, will lead the official Washington delegation. Senators Tom Connally, Clyde Herring, Elbert Thomas, Guy Gillette, Albert D. Chandler, James J. Davis, and George Radcliffe have also accepted invitations, as has John Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI.

Hoffman Is Toastmaster

Carter Barron, of Washington, chairman of the Variety committee on distinguished guests, announced that former governor Harold Hoffman of New Jersey would be toastmaster at the Humanitarian banquet on Saturday. Governor Herbert O'Connor of Maryland will also attend the convention. Others on the list of guests for the banquet include Fulton Oursler, editor of Liberty Magazine General William McGraw of Texas, and from the industry Spyros, Charles and George Skouras, Bob Wilby of Atlanta, Howard Dietz of MGM and Kate Smith, Ray Bolger, Ted Collins and Herbert Wilcox.

Walter Wanger, head of the West Coast guests committee, will lead from Hollywood a delegation of executives and players that will include Errol Flynn, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Charles Laughton, Patricia Morrison, John Payne, Simone Simon, Phil Regan, Ann Shirley, and Lew Ayres. The film players will participate in festivities at a Friday night party for Variety members to be known as the Pan-American Night of Nights.

The Variety circus, a feature of all national Variety conventions, will take place Saturday afternoon in the Atlantic City Convention Hall immediately following a boardwalk parade of the delegates and guests. The affair, consisting of top acts from Variety charity circuses sponsored by tents throughout the country, will be given in Atlantic City for the benefit of the National Variety Charity Fund. A special performance will be held for the benefit of Atlantic City children, and the inmates of local orphanages and hospitals.

FROHMAN ITEMS ON EXHIBITION

Representing more than fifty years of the late Daniel Frohman's close association with the legitimate theatre, a memorial exhibition of the theatrical collections willed to the Museum of the City of New York has been opened at the Museum and will be exhibited to the public during the summer.

Among the items to be shown are theatre souvenir programs, cartoons, caricatures, one of the first photographs ever taken of the stage, drawings, including a poster by John Barrymore made in 1901 for Mr. Frohman's production of "If I Were King," and many other items.

Convention headquarters will be established on the 11th floor of the Hotel Traymore and Mr. Harris announced that delegates would be listed in an information file for convenience in contacting each other. They will be required to display both badges and credentials for admission to Variety events.

Special cars and train sections bearing Variety members to the convention were assembled at Philadelphia on Thursday morning into one train for arrival at Atlantic City at 10 A. M., Thursday. A reception committee of local Variety members and Mayor Thomas D. Taggart welcomed the guests with bands, bunting and one hundred of the resort's costumed bathing beauties. The city decorated streets and boardwalk for the occasion.

Local delegations, in some instances amounting to 75 or 80 members, are competing for an attendance trophy. Top contenders include Atlanta, Boston, Dallas, and Philadelphia. However, the winner was not to be announced until all registrations had been tabulated. Efforts to win the attendance prize were described in a bubbling press release from the national committee:

"Dallas took up the challenge and made it plain that Atlanta would have no easy time trying to top Dallas and thereupon announced a group of over fifty to make the trip to the convention.

"Atlanta countered back with a loud guffaw and immediately added another dozen to their roster along with a poke or two of fun at Dallas' puny efforts to beat a go-getting tent like Atlanta."

Stellar events on the social program included fishing and sailing parties, the boardwalk parade, circus, Pan American Night of Nights, boxing show, United Artists cocktail party on Saturday and the closing banquet with the presentation of the annual Variety Humanitarian Award. Business sessions and elections were scheduled for Friday morning at the Hotel Traymore.

Proceedings at the convention were covered by radio stations with pickups on the leading events by local, Philadelphia and New York stations and a network broadcast of the closing dinner. All five of the major newsreels also assigned camera crews to the outdoor spectacles and the closing banquet of the Variety program.

Major distributors have all indicated they will be represented at the convention by home office executives and stars from their studios. For the Boardwalk Parade MGM will construct a float to carry a collection of beautiful models plugging "Ziegfeld Girl." Arthur Kelley and Monroe Greenthal will receive the Variety members at the United Artists cocktail party to be held at the Hotel Traymore on Saturday afternoon.

Club Activities In the Field

The Twin City Variety Club will hold a Kings-for-a-day luncheon Monday, May 26th, at the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, with Maitland Frosch and Ben Friedman in charge of the program. The Twin City Variety reported an excellent response to its Milk Fund benefit supper dance on May 10th. Since January 1, 1940, the local group has provided 125,000 quarts of milk for needy children; installed two violet-ray lamps in the Lymanhurst Children's Hospital, and has installed 16 radios in wards of the Minneapolis General Hospital, Mr. Friedman reported.

Milwaukee's Variety Club has been reorganized with Harry MacDonald, manager of the Warner theatre, as chief barker. Other new officers are John Medicko, National Screen Service, first assistant chief barker; John Kent, Paramount, second assistant chief barker; William Harmon, Saxe Amusement Management, Inc., secretary, and John Mantzke, Universal, treasurer. The new board members include Joe Rosenfield, Modjeska theatre; Eddie Spiers, RKO; Harry Perlewitz, ITPA of Wisconsin; M. D. Brazee, Warner Theatres; Howard Gleason, Warner-Saxe Theatres, and Jack Lorentz, 20th Century-Fox.

Baltimore's Variety Club sold over 5,000 tickets for its Preakness Ball, held last Saturday night following the Preakness Handicap at Pimlico race track. C. W. Hicks, chief barker, was in charge of arrangements for the ball, which was run for the benefit of city charities by the Variety Club.

Warner Clubs of the Albany district will hold their annual spring dance at the Ten Eyck Hotel on May 24th. Leo Rosen, manager of Warners' Troy theatre, is chairman.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Pictures

Of the nine motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were found unobjectionable for general patronage, three for adult patronage and one film was classified as objectionable in part. The films and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "El Diablo Rides gain," "Los Heroes Del Barrio," "Lone Rider in Ghost Town" and "The Singing Hills." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adult Patronage; "The Big Boss," "Lady from Louisiana," "They Dare Not Love" and "West Point Widow." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "City of Missing Girls."

Two Receive MGM Award

Metro Goldwyn Mayer has awarded Honor Roll Buttons to Leo Trainer of the Rialto theatre in Allentown, Pa., and Dan Terrell of Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C., for their campaigns on "The Philadelphia Story."

CANADA COMPLAINS OF THE HIGHEST PATRONS' TICKET TAX IN THE WORLD

Up to 35 Per Cent Indicated in Quebec under New Law; Exhibitors Predict Sharp Cut in Attendance After May 19th

Unless the proposed 20 per cent tax on motion picture admissions proposed in the Canadian budget by Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley is modified, or provincial levies remitted, Dominion film patrons will pay the highest entertainment tax in the world when the new national assessment goes into effect on May 19th. In the province of Quebec the tax will run as high as 35 per cent, it was indicated.

Canadian exhibitors this week predicted the new revenue measure would "kill the goose that laid the golden egg" for the Government by cutting down cinema attendance and, coupled with local and province taxes, leading to the extinction of many small town independent exhibitors whose narrow operating margins would be wiped out. The consensus held that the public would not be able to absorb the tax and maintain the volume of current film attendance.

Discrimination Charged

Opposition to the new budget was bitter, also, in charging discrimination against motion picture interests. Theatre men and distributors pointed out that the bill does not tax legitimate theatres, sports events, circuses, carnivals, concerts or other events. It is claimed that in contrast to mass attendance at motion pictures the latter events charge higher admissions and attract a segment of customers better able to pay a high impost.

At Ottawa, Mr. Ilsley denied the request of a delegation of Montreal theatre owners that he pare the national levy on motion picture theatres, saying that he believed that if the tax reduced theatre attendance it would be a good thing. The Minister indicated there would be no exemption under the federal levy because of high province theatre taxes.

Hopes of theatre operators for reducing the threatened governmental bite into the public's entertainment dollar centered on inducing provincial governments to reduce, or suspend the collection of their local admission tax pending the war emergency. Appeals were also voiced to representatives in the House of Commons and many were reported to share in the industry feeling that Mr. Ilsley's budget proposal is discriminatory. A thorough airing of the measure in Commons debate was forecast when it comes up for final hearing. Collection of the levy has been postponed until May 19th.

All of the Canadian provinces, with the exception of Ontario have film admission taxes. The highest is in Quebec where it amounts to 15.5 per cent. Other provincial tax scales are: Prince Edward Island, approximately 15 per cent, New Brunswick, 11 per cent, Nova Scotia, 10.5 per cent, Alberta, 8.5 per cent, Saskatchewan 6 per cent, British Columbia 5 per cent and Manitoba 3.6 per cent.

First protest in Commons on the new tax scheme was voiced last week by Colonel J. A. Ross, Conservative member from rural Souris, who said that the 20 per cent scale would put many rural, and small city theatres out of business.

At Quebec Eugene Beaulac, secretary of Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, following the rebuff of the Allied delegation to Ottawa announced he had appealed to Quebec treasurer Mathewson to consider a reduction on the provincial rate. Allied pointed out that the new federal tax would be tax on a tax inasmuch as it would be calculated on admissions, plus the 15 per cent province tax. To date Montreal theatre attendance has been maintained despite the war, but exhibitors are apprehensive at the effect of a 20 per cent hike in admission prices.

Collection of the new national levy was postponed from April 30th, the day following J. L. Isley's budget message, until May 19th in a budget amendment sent to Commons last week by the Finance Minister. Revenue Department officials said the extension had been granted after circuit executives petitioned for more time to print new tickets and arrange revenue controls to collect the extra impost. A few theatres had already started collection in outlying sections and in some instances had forwarded the first week's collection to the government. The Dominion will keep the money inasmuch as it is impossible to make restitution to the ticket purchasers.

Silver Money in Manitoba

In Winnipeg, Man., patrons will still use silver money to purchase their movie tickets, operators announced in re-scaling prices.

"You can't monkey with pennies in the theatre business," said E. A. Zorn, district manager for Famous Players in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

A 50-cent ticket will cost 60 cents from now on. In the past the theatre companies have received 46 cents from every 50-cent ticket, the extra four cents being a 10 per cent province and local amusement tax. In future they will receive 46.8 cents from a 60-cent ticket, but it is anticipated that the shrinkage in attendance will not make up for the fractional increase in returns.

RESTRICTIONS HOLD ON BORDER TRAVEL

Strenuous efforts on the part of American exhibitors located in towns fronting Canada on the United States border to recapture "international" patronage which they lost because of war conditions are proving futile. Restrictions on border travel and on the use of Canadian money in the United States remain strict despite vigorous campaigns for modification.

Canada's government has declined to relax the money export ban on the ground the Dominion would be heavily penalized by exchanging Canadian money into U. S. money at a time when Canadian taxation is at an all-time high in an effort to finance the Dominion war effort and to maintain the status of the Canadian dollar in the United States, to pay for war purchases. The United States also demands passports at the border, which cost Canadians $3.

A maximum of $5 may be taken over the border by Canadians for social visits, but there are strict limits on what it may be spent for. Theatres are out of bounds, financially.

The price increase will not come into effect until managers receive official notice of the tax either from the government or from their superiors. Meanwhile millions of tickets will have to be printed showing the new prices, and they must then be distributed through Canada.

Neighborhood movie houses which now charge 25 cents for admission will raise prices to 30 cents, it is expected. Most exhibitors in Winnipeg expressed surprise at the size of the assessment and were certain the tax would develop some resistance to sales.

Motion picture operators estimate that in 1940 there were approximately 151,000,000 admissions to Canadian theatres with receipts, exclusive of provincial amusement taxes, totalling almost $37,600,000. This was an increase of 9 per cent in attendance and 11 per cent in admission receipts over 1939.

War activity in the port of Halifax increased theatre attendance there by more than a third last year, the sharpest rise in the Dominion. Nine motion picture houses in Halifax reported 2,767,340 admissions last year and $644,979 in receipts. Receipts increased 38 per cent and attendance 48 per cent during 1940.

The percentage of increases in the number of admissions in 1940 over 1939 for other cities for which separate figures were compiled included: Montreal, 2 per cent; Toronto 6 per cent; Hamilton, 11 per cent; Ottawa, 10 per cent, London, 15 per cent; Winnipeg, 3 per cent and Vancouver 4 per cent.

The Canadian budget as drafted by Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley in addition to the 20 per cent admission tax proposal contains a limitation on new building and plant expansion which will hit motion picture theatres, Ottawa analysts pointed out. In his budget message Mr. Ilsley indicated the government would limit investments and construction to plants engaged in war production or to essential services. Small repairs and extensions, primary industries and home construction are exempt, however.

Licenses from the Director General of Priorities or the under the Department of Munitions and Supply will be required for all future construction. Architects and builders have not as yet been notified however of the conditions under which licenses will be granted.

They Met in Argentina

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Romance

Comedy and romance vie for top honors in this Lou Brock production. Filmed against the setting of the Argentine and its pampas country, the picture is a tuneful and colorful story of a young man who refuses the love of a girl accustomed to having her own way. Fast moving and ofttimes humorous, it stars Maureen O'Hara and James Ellison.

Further cementing the current policy of Pan-American solidarity and cooperation, the picture introduces to the North American audiences Alberto Vila, star of the Latin American screen, stage and radio. Possessed with a baritone singing voice, handsome and with acting ability Vila is seen as the third member of the romance. Supporting these players are Buddy Ebsen, dancing comedian of the legitimate stage who previously appeared in minor roles in other productions, Robert Barrat and Joseph Buloff, as the Argentine cattle-raising rancher and the foreman of the ranch, respectively. Highlight of the film is the introduction to the screen of the long forbidden gaucho game, El Pato. Somewhat similar to basketball on horseback, this game, banned by the Argentine Government for more than a century for its excessive brutality to man and beast, provides the necessary action to the musical and romantic story.

The story itself is slight and deals with an American, portrayed by James Ellison, and his assistant, Buddy Ebsen, who attempt to buy a famous race horse from a wealthy Argentine rancher. Their negotiations for the horse and the unwanted romance which develops between the American and the rancher's daughter provide the theme for the picture.

Frank Veloz, of Veloz and Yolanda, American dance team, created and directed the dances for "They Met in Argentina," while Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, one of this country's foremost composing combinations, wrote the words and music for the ten numbers which are sprinkled liberally throughout the film.

Reviewed at the RKO Albee theatre in Brooklyn where an early evening audience found the picture interesting, enjoyed the humorous antics and characterization of Buddy Ebsen, and were deeply engrossed with the screen demonstration of the forbidden game of the Argentine, El Pato.—GEORGE SPIRES.

One Night in Lisbon

(Paramount)

Romantic Comedy with Paprika

This is a romantic comedy for the adult customers. It is faster, funnier and freer in its employment of double meaning dialogue than most others in ready memory and it profits by direction and acting of the utmost proficiency and, in surprising degree, by its placement in time and circumstance. It is at core the old tale of a man's way with a maid, honorable in this instance, but with virtually unprecedented insistence upon immediacy.

Edward H. Griffith, producer-director, has used wartime London and Lisbon as setting for Fred MacMurray's wooing and winning of Madeleine Carroll—an enterprise conducted under other conditions and elsewhere in "Cafe Society," "Honeymoon in Bali," and "Virginia." For the information of showmen who have been disappointed in box office returns from war films in general, the war pertains to this one only as background, much of the action taking place during sporadic bombings of London, and as one of the hero's lesser reasons for getting his conquest of the heroine completed right now. Producer Griffith's emphasis on the urgency of this matter, an emphasis used plentifully by picture makers during World War I on the theory that emotions quickened by wartime conditions include the amatory, may or may not foretell a trend.

MacMurray plays an American pilot engaged in flying bombers to Britain and Miss Carroll an English girl of the upper class whom he meets in an air raid shelter and lays siege to forthwith. John Loder plays the formal British suitor who opposes the American's suit, and Billie Burke the acquaintance of all and rooting for the American because she used to be one, who affords a story point on the side of propriety. The girl, serving her country as chauffeur for a statesman, obtains plane passage for Lisbon to spend a night with the American before he catches the Clipper for home but is given a letter to deliver which, unknown to her, is being used to decoy German spies. The statesman, the English suitor, the American's divorced wife and the spies all show up at Lisbon, making her bedroom something of a general cross roads, to her discomfiture and the American's, but it all ends as it should.

It is first as a comedy, second as a romance, and in no case as a war or propaganda picture, that the production stacks up. As a comedy it depends upon dialogue and situation, now alternately, now collectively, with the provoking of laughs its prime function. A specimen of the humour might be the line in which the importunate hero, having invaded the heroine's bedroom and been reminded by her that it's nightfall and she's in negligee and he's a man and also that there's somebody in the next room, remarks, "Oh, that—" adding after a pause, "My fondest memory occurred at high noon on top of a stepladder."

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, where it was shown to the press and to a midweek audience of cash customers uninformed as to what they were to see. So immediate was the effect of the humour that gales of laughter sweeping the auditorium drowned out whole sections of dialogue almost before the story points had been planted. It continued with no more than momentary abatement until the end.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Singapore Woman

(First National)

Salvation-Singapore Style

All the men in the life of the lady of this tabloid title (and the count is reputedly many) came to an unhappy end. The picture opens with one unfortunate male taking his life because of unrequited love; a husband is reported to have sought release by diving into the sea, and even when she goes out on a gin swizzling bender, the low dive bar, scene of her imbibing, turns into a free-for-all brawl. As the cause of all this commotion describes herself, she jinxes everything she touches. Considering such an indictment, the audience may conclude that the hard luck spell extended from the characters to the production angle itself.

In view of her lurid background, the sin saga of "Vicki Moore" (before she forgot she was a lady, her Christian name was "Victoria") is strangely uninteresting and static. The salvation sequences hinge on having the heroine take a peek at her gin-soaked person the next time she lifts her glass. This bit of pointed counsel is given by a young rubber grower, "Ritchie," who in the course of his redemption campaign is wooed away from his fiancee from the States by "Vicki." The lady's supposedly dead husband turns up to add further embarrassment to the sawdust trail activity. However, "Vicki" is finally saved, the husband menace being conveniently eliminated by death in an auto accident.

Brenda Marshall, looking appropriately deshabille but glamorous all the while, plays the lead and, although Miss Marshall has given adequate romance assistance in previous pictures, she has not as yet advanced to the position of being able to carry a film on her stellar shoulders. David Bruce, as the male redeemer, is colorless. Director Jean Negulesco gave his production an exotic setting but the sultry surroundings may be the reason for the failure in plot movement.

Seen at an afternoon performance at the Central Theatre, where a good-sized audience, mostly made up of men, registered not too much interest in the betterment of "Miss Moore"; in fact, the gathering manifested symptoms of restlessness and at a certain dramatic highlight wherein the fiancee discovers the couple in an ardent postural arrangement, the customers indicated their excited state in a series of embarrassing laughs. The audience proportion may be explained by the fact that featured on the day's program was a Bob Hope comedy, the

Exhibitors and Local Air Stations Develop 'Mutual-Aid' Tieup

Radio Climbs to Position of the Newspapers' Chief Competitor for Local Theatre Advertising, Exploitation Campaigns

Radio, long regarded by many exhibitors as one of the chief competitors of motion pictures, has become a medium of local film advertising second only in importance to newspapers, and with Frequency-Modulation a-coming, its position in picture promotion, stands to advance even further.

Tangible proof that newspaper publishers are concerned over inroads being made on motion picture theatre advertising budgets by radio and other local media became noticeable in March, when the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, launched a nationwide approach to the industry intended to develop better relations with the industry, both publicity-wise and for advertising purposes. Through a special study, made for MOTION PICTURE HERALD (March 29th, pages 13-14) the publishers urged that the exhibitor personally make a closer inspection of his position in relation to his local newspaper.

Ill will that formerly characterized theatre-radio relationships now appears in many sections to have given way to a log-rolling fellowship between theatre man and broadcaster on a "You help me, I'll help you" basis, reports from thirty cities indicate, in a study of the airwaves as a medium of film promotion.

Pass-for-plug deals, cooperative quiz programs lobby interviews, the exchange with local broadcasters of screen credit for air time, and tieups between newsreels and air news commentators on a free, or at cost arrangement, predominate in the radio-theatre arrangements.

In certain instances, the purchase of radio time for announcements and special features ranges from two per cent to a majority of the promotion budget.

The use of radio for picture promotion is spread over a wide variety of arrangements, from hour-long network broadcasts of an "institutional" character, sponsored by New York showplaces, to one minute spot announcements arranged by neighborhood managers on small local radio stations. In extent and quality radio-theatre relations seem at a peak in the Pacific states. The airwaves however are also widely used by managers in the Mountain states and Middle West.

Exhibitors, particularly in the key cities, have arranged many continuing tie-ups and promotions with local radio stations. In some cases radio advertising of pictures are being paid for on a "pass-for-plug" basis.

STUDY TELEVISION FOR THEATRES

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, on Tuesday appointed a "Fact Finding Committee on Television for the Motion Picture Industry." Members named were Max A. Cohen, president of Allied Theatre Owners of New York, chairman; Leonard Goldenson, in charge of theatre operations for Paramount, and Arthur Lockwood, Boston.

The action was taken following study of a bulletin sent out Monday by Mr. Cohen to members of New York Allied. The bulletin asserted that acceptance of theatre television by the industry might result in a new form of Government regulation. It was pointed out that television is under the supervision of the Federal Communications Commission. Exhibitors were urged by Mr. Cohen to exert "extreme caution" in considering television and asked for full discussion at the MPTOA convention in Los Angeles next month.

The MPTOA television committee appointed by Mr. Kuykendall this week is to report at the convention.

In the field study of theatre-radio relations, the following was established:

Nature of the arrangement between the radio station and the theatre,

Type of broadcasts used—spot, transcription, interview,

Payment by cash, passes, screen trailer or cooperative,

Average free time given theatre programs by local stations,

Institutional or specific program advertising,

Time of day of theatre-radio programs,

Exhibitor opinion on value of radio publicity,

Plans to utilize television or FM radio for theatre advertising.

The "pass-for-plug" type of radio promotion seems to be most popular with exhibitors and local broadcasters. In some cities the theatre passes are given out by broadcasters as prizes for quiz programs. Short trailers advertising the call letters and special programs of a local radio station are flashed on the screens of a number of theatres which have extensive tie-ins with broadcasters. When this is done the exhibitor usually receives a definite amount of radio advertising. When local air time is purchased it regularly is used to plug a specific feature. Occasionally a local exhibitor will be the "station-break" immediately following a national network program on a certain picture to tell when the film will play at his theatre.

Theatres which feature stage shows and 'name bands' frequently arrange interview type radio programs on a gratis basis. The feature also receives one or more 'plugs' in those cases.

A few theatres have special broadcast studios and others present short radio programs, such as news broadcasts, over the house's sound system in a broadcast tieup. "Man in the street" interviews from the lobby or under the marquee are another type of theatre-radio publicity cooperation.

There is great variation in the time of day of theatre radio publicity and advertising. In many situations such programs are around noontime intended to help build up the matinee business.

New York Is the Key To National "Plugs"

New York City exhibitors, with 24 broadcasting stations in the metropolitan area, do not use radio advertising to the degree which available facilities might suggest. Larger New York stations are keys to national networks, making the cost of local time prohibitive. The smaller units reach limited segments of the city's huge population. Institutional advertising however reaches its peak on the New York airwaves, originating such nationally broadcast programs as Major Bowes' Capitol Family hour and the Radio City Music Hall hour, and guest-star appearances from New York and to New York from Hollywood on national hookups.

The Capitol Theatre program, inaugurated in 1923 by Major Bowes is the oldest regularly broadcast theatre program. It has been heard in over 965 consecutive weekly programs over a succession of New York stations and national networks.

CBS carries the Bowes' hour as a sustaining feature on the basis of its audience and entertainment value. Production costs, musicians' salaries and other expenses are included in the Capitol's advertising and promotion budget. Officials refused to indicate the percentage of the funds allocated to radio but indicated that it was but a fraction of the total advertising and promotional expenditure.

Advertising on the Bowes' hour includes an announcement of the week's billing at the Capitol, a plug for the stage show, if any, and extensive copy boosting the current picture in behalf of MGM's national distribution. Loew's, Inc., parent organization of the Capitol and Metro pictures, contributes to the air program's cost on the basis of its national promotion of

Other radio commitments of the Capitol are confined to an occasional purchase of spot announcements or 15 minute periods for transcriptions to boost an exceptional picture. Time is bought on local New York stations at a relatively cheap rate. More promotion is obtained from station WHN, operated by Loew's, which advertises MGM pictures extensively and mentions weekly billings at the Capitol, State, and other first run houses affiliated with the Loew circuit. The station's gossip columns and "goings on about town" periods in the morning and evening give special attention to MGM pictures playing the Loew theatres

"Loew's Movie Timetable" broadcast by WHN at 6:30 every evening Mondays through Saturdays lists information about feature billings and the screening times at the circuit's theatres and plugs MGM product. Listings are given for 68 houses in New York and suburban Westchester, Long Island and New Jersey.

The Radio City Music Hall hour, broadcast every Sunday by NBC since the theatre's opening eight years ago is one of the most successful of the institutional broadcasts. It features a classic tone in the musical and vocal entertainment and confines the commercial to a conservative announcement of the current offering and coming attractions at the Music Hall. Program material usually consists of the Music Hall symphony orchestra, chorus, and soloists. Programs are built around symphony, opera, or semi-classical musical selections.

Music Hall Program A Sustaining Feature

The Music Hall purchases no network time for the broadcast. It is carried by NBC over 57 stations of the blue network as a sustaining feature, every Sunday, from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M., EDT. Although the Music Hall does not purchase time for spot announcements or other advertising, the publicity department claims an average of an hour a week in air time from columnists, interview programs, reviewers and other outlets. The Music Hall pays for the salaries of musicians, soloists and others on the Sunday program. The large orchestra, rehearsal time, and name soloists bring the cost to approximately ten percent of the exploitation budget it is reported.

Announcements on the Sunday hour conform to the Music Hall's conservative advertising policy, and although mentioning specific pictures and describing current stage shows is considered an institutional plug designed for out of town listeners as well as those within the New York area. W. G. Van Schmus, managing director, calls the program "highly effective" and considers it partially responsible for the theatre's status as a "must" on sightseeing lists of out-of-town visitors.

The Paramount theatre does not sponsor a regularly scheduled air program but purchases varying amounts of time on independent New York radio stations to boost specific pictures, and the house stage show. Theme of most of the air advertising is the house's "Two for One," policy of presenting a first run picture and a stage show built, usually, around a name band. For special openings, interviews with stars, and other exploitation stunts the theatre infrequently purchases local time, and on rare occasions a spot on the networks.

The Paramount also uses publicity ties with a number of commentators to place gossip copy, and gains mention on entertainment listings over WEVD and other smaller New York outlets. The Paramount's advertising agency reports less than two percent of the average advertising budget goes to air time, and even with lobby broadcasts or special spot announcements on top pictures the proportion never exceeds five or six percent.

RKO theatres in the New York area buy no radio time but cultivate relations with radio commentators and report good coverage from film timetables and similar programs on non-network local stations. Over WEVD and WINS the circuit distributes free tickets to winners of sustaining quiz contests. In return the radio station announces the current attraction at first run and key neighborhood RKO theatres.

Warner theatres report no general policy on the use of radio, and although it has been used for special plugs on openings and on featured pictures no figures were available on its cost in proportion to other advertising. Largest radio commitment in several years was the half hour lobby broadcast from the "Meet John Doe" premiere at New York. Outside of New York the use of radio is left to the discretion of individual managers and publicity men. The home office however discourages giving away passes or screen plugs in return for radio publicity.

Syracuse Promotions for Features, Shorts

RKO-Schine theatres in Syracuse air a weekly half hour show from the stage of Keith's theatre Sundays at 1:30 P.M. over WFBL. Show is sponsored by a Syracuse furniture store; patrons get a radio show in addition to picture program.

The four RKO-Schine theatres and Loew's State, all buy spot announcements from time to time on the local stations.

RKO-Schine manages a tie-in with WSYR when their houses play an "Information Please" short. A theatre trailer advertises program's time over WSYR.

Relationships between radio stations and theatre managers here are cordial. The other week, Loew's State arranged a preview of "Men of Boys Town" for the press and ministry at WSYR studio.

Passes for Air Shows in Philadelphia

Philadelphia movie houses, both circuit and independent, get a free ride as far as radio is concerned. The publicity director of each station is receptive to a movie tie-up. Excepting for two of the network stations, local theatres enjoy carte blanche as far as getting plugs for pictures over the remaining eight stations in the area is concerned.

Measured in terms of dollars and cents on the basis of the station card rates, if the theatres paid on the line for radio time the same as the other radio advertisers, it is readily agreed that no single theatre or circuit in the city could afford it. The station executives and owners do make demands upon their program and publicity departments for free movie passes. But there is no limit to the amount of radio plugs available.

Tie-ups are not restricted alone to the downtown first-run houses. The small neighborhood house playing a last run is as much in demand as the center-city palaces—for free passes. Moreover, it is not always the theatres that come clamoring for the radio plugs. It's the radio stations devising various ways and means to justify asking for passes.

Theatre tie-ups are just as frequent with commercially sponsored radio programs. The Marco Dog Food show on WIP and the Contadina Tomato Paste program on WPEN had each 20 independent neighborhood houses cooperating, each theatre getting a current picture plug in return for a single pair of passes. Most of the stations have regular weekly movie review programs, which are in reality readers on the theatres contributing passes to the station. Until recently, WCAU had a movie review program that included playing the actual sound track from the picture.

Excepting in rare instances where an elaborate tie-up is involved, as in providing theatres with election returns, radio stations get no reciprocal plugs on either screen or lobby display. And in those rare instances, a local newspaper makes it a three-way tie-up and it is the newspaper and not the radio station that insists upon screen or lobby credits. Oddly enough, all the radio stations have "swap" arrangements with every newspaper in the city. However, the newspaper pays off in agate line on the basis of the station's card-rate to cover the radio time given.

Oddly enough, Philadelphia radio is practically devoid of "Hollywood chatter"s programs. The failure of advertisers to sponsor "Hollywood chatter" shows locally indicates to the station that local public interest in such programs is almost negligible. At present there is only one chatter program on local radio. Betty Hurd on April 28th inaugurated a daily five-minute program on WCAU titled "Hurd in Hollywood."

Radio station officials themselves point out that, on an average basis, they give $30 worth of radio time in return for $4 worth of passes as far as each cooperating theatre is concerned. However, they chalk it off as part of the station's "public service" activities.

Radio-Theatre Tieup In San Francisco

The Telenews theatre in San Francisco originates more than 120 airshows a week from its own special radio studio. The theatre, managed by Ellis Levy, has tieups with three radio stations, KSAN, KFRC and KGO.

A special studio was constructed by Telenews in the basement, seating 100 persons, with stage, from which three weekly quiz shows are relayed to KFRC and 35 stations of Don Lee-Mutual web on west coast. These are sponsored by Roma Wine Company, and conducted by Art Linkletter. . . . The Daily Chronicle's News Conference, heard five nights a week, originates in the Telenews studio for airing via KGO. The program features publisher, managing editor, city editor, staff members, and feature writers of the paper, summarizing all news departments.

In general theatres in San Francisco trade radio announcements for screen slides. Tieups are made chiefly with KJBS, KFRC and KSFO. Theatres using this form of tieup include United Artists, Orpheum, San Francisco theatres (seven neighborhood houses), and Golden State Circuit (twelve houses).

35 Pittsburgh Houses Use Radio Publicity

More than 35 theatres are daily receiving radio publicity on sustaining broadcasts over two stations in Pittsburgh, with total air time for motion picture coverage averaging five hours weekly for the city's five stations. Except for occasional shots on certain attractions with above-normal advertising budgets, no theatres are buying time, either for programs, spot or station-break announcements.

Chief beneficiary of radio plugs are Warner Brothers theatres, through chatter programs conducted over WWSW by Walter Framer and his wife, Nan Grayson. The same station devotes more time to theatre material than the four other stations combined. WWSW is the city's only non-network station, an independent owned by the Walker-Downing Corp.

FILM PASSES GIVEN FOR AIR PLUGS

"Footlights and Stardust," aired 11:30 A. M. to 12:00 N. five mornings weekly over WWSW from the Warner Enright Theatre, has been rated one of the city's most popular A. M. shows on several radio surveys. Its format alternates chatter by Mr. Framer with organ music by Johnny Mitchell. The Enright and 20 other Warner houses in the city receive direct publicity on current attractions and indirect breaks through general Hollywood coverage, in return for broadcast site and material. Mr. Framer sells spots throughout the show.

WWSW also airs a weekly 15-minute show from the Stanley backstage on Friday afternoon when flesh talent is billed. The same program formerly was broadcast over WCAE, local NBC-Red outlet, but when the ASCAP ban went into effect, the show was switched to WWSW, only local ASCAP station. If the bigger outlet signs an ASCAP contract, it is reported that the show will return to WCAE.

The only theatre type of program being broadcast at present by KDKA, NBC-Blue outlet that formerly carried several film-plugging shows daily, is the series "Hear Yourself," Breakfast Cheer Coffee commercial that features interviews in house lobbies. The interview is then rebroadcast on a later program by transcription. During the interview, mention is made of pictures playing at the theatre chosen for that day. The tieup is with Warner Bros.

Another WWSW show handled by Mr. Framer includes mention of shows playing the Fulton. Aired six nights weekly 6:46 to 7:15, the material is miscellaneous.

Formerly tied in with a KQV series broadcast for a tomato paste manufacturer, on a ticket giveaway, and on KDKA with a weekly "sneak preview" taken from a film sound track, the Harris Amusement Company now has no sustaining shows. Occasionally the Harris chain plugs first-run product with spots on various stations. For example, $750 was spent for a radio campaign prior to the opening of "Arizona," and $400 on "Tobacco Road," in addition to newspaper and billboard advertising.

Screen Radio Credits Given in Twin Cities

Twin City theatres use radio time extensively, but in the great majority of cases trade it for screen credits. The St. Louis Park theatre broadcasts from its stage each Saturday a "Kiddie Quiz" over WCCO, 50,000 watt station. The World theatre has 30 word breaks daily on all Twin City radio stations but WDGY, one of the smaller transmitters.

St. Paul theatres of Minnesota Amusement Company have a 10 minute program over WTCN 5 days a week, and a 15 minute period of chatter, music and plugs over KSTP, one of the majors, weekly. The Paramount there has a 30-word break twice daily over WMIN, a minor.

The St. Paul Orpheum has a weekly 15-minute inquiring reporter newscast over KSTP. All this time is traded for screen credits. Mornings and afternoons are times of twice-a-day breaks, others are spotted for afternoons.

The Minneapolis Orpheum buys time at odd periods on all Twin City stations, paying from $50 per station break at WCCO down to $10 for some of the minors. The theatre also has a trade agreement with KSTP for a daily plug, and the station has a line into the theatre to pick up interviews.

The Orpheum, featuring frequent stage shows, also benefits from interview programs, stations and sponsors ordinarily being nicely hungry for celebrity stuff. Most Orpheum headliners appear on every station during their Minneapolis stay, and are featured on newscasting, women's interest, hotel promotion and just general interest programs.

Minneapolis office of Minnesota Amusement Company uses two 5-minute periods a day over WLOL and WDGY, and a 30-word break daily over KSTP, all traded for screen credits. There are six commercial radio stations in the Twin Cities, all billing themselves as representing "Minneapolis and St. Paul."

WCCO is Columbia; KSTP NBC-Red; WTCN NBC-Blue; WLOL Mutual and WMIN and WDGY independent.

Most of the film radio time used in Minneapolis plugs specific attractions, the regular periods listing pictures playing, stars and review comment. Theatres at times may get as much as a couple of hours of free broadcast time.

Exhibitors appear pretty well satisfied with their radio arrangement here and the stations themselves are not complaining.

Frequency modulation hasn't come into the picture here much as yet, although it has been tried in Duluth, in northern Minnesota. Theatre men are keeping their eye on the television bug, but as yet not doing anything much about it; it was reported.

Radio Tieups Hailed In Wilkes-Barre

Judging from the comment from theatre managers in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., they are all excited and enthused about the possibilities of radio as a medium for advertising, especially for transcriptions and spot announcements.

With Comerford theatres dominating the Wilkes-Barre situation it is easier for tieups to be arranged, it was said. Tieups include the Comerford Theatres program, a five-minute movie news report daily; a five-minute daily ad lib program by John Galvin manager of the Penn Theatre on his own play dates and pictures; 30-minute daily organ program emanating from the Shawnee Theatre in suburban Plymouth with listings of the central city and suburban house shows; spot announcements and special transcriptions whenever possible and feasible. Most of the radio-film programs go to WBAX which has a special arrangement with the theatres regarding paid and free advertising. WBRE also gets occasional business. The Galvin and Shawnee programs are gratis as are some of the transcriptions and special features. Average outlay by the five central city Comerford Theatres is reported to be about $35 weekly in all. In addition the Irving and Orpheum Theatres have gratis tie-ups with music mystery tune programs over WBAX.

Most of the programs come about the noon hour with the idea of boosting the matinee business. In practically all the cases the advertising and plugs boosts the specific week's billing at the theatres.

In Hazleton, Pa., with only one station the arrangement is similar with 30-minute gratis organ broadcast daily over WAZL from Feeley Theatre as well as airing of rehearsal of stage show once a week. However, the theatres do spend some money on spot announcements.

First-Run Radio Programs in Chicago

The Chicago theatre (Balaban & Katz) has an arrangement with radio stations WIND (CBS affiliate) and WJJD.

Under the deal both stations give Balaban & Katz theatres nine spot announcement plugs each, daily and Sunday in return for trailers on all Balaban & Katz theatres in Chicago.

In addition to the above, radio station WGN broadcasts a "man on the street" program, every night from 10:15 to 10:30 P. M., Monday through Friday from the front of the Chicago theatre or in the lobby. This is a commercial program sponsored by a furniture company, but in return for use of the lobby the current attraction is "plugged" during the interviews.

The Oriental theatre, operated by Michael Todd, has a deal for radio publicity with station WCFL, the Federation of Labor station, whereby, by granting permission for a "man on the street" commercial program to be broadcast from the lobby, the current attraction is plugged on the air. This show is broadcast Monday through Friday at 1:00 P. M.

Radio station WAAF gives the Warner Bros. theatres a daily plug or sport announcement at 3:00 P. M. in return for trailers on the screens of 19 of the circuit's theatres.

Radio station WGN in a sponsored program titled "Don Norman's Date," broadcasts from the front or lobby of the McVickers Theatre at 1:00 P. M., Monday through Friday. The theatre receives only the plugs about the current attraction. The show is sponsored by a laundry cleaner.

Also there are a few small radio stations in Chicago that at various times plug the shows of neighborhood theatres in return for passes or in a few instances a small fee, such as $10.00 for five spot announcements per week.

Monday through Friday radio station WHFC, in Cicero, Ill., also broadcasts a man on the street program from the studio of the Hotpoint Company at 5600 West Roosevelt Road, in Chicago. Persons interviewed are given passes to the Olympic theatre and plugs for current attractions are also aired over this show. This show is Monday through Friday from 12:15 to 12:30 P. M.

Spot Ads Used In Salt Lake City

Exhibitors in the intermountain area rely on radio chiefly for spot announcements advertising current or coming attractions. Rates vary from station to station and for the various times. Free time, if any, is negligible. Time of day varies but early evening seems to be preferred.

Intermountain Fox finds the importance of radio advertising enhanced in the mountainous areas of Idaho and Montana where high mountains interfere with the reception of stations affiliated with the big chains, leaving the field to local stations until late at night. In these instances, the rates are low enough to get in and it is not necessary to try to compete with the chain broadcasts. Consequently the Fox theatres in those two states do more radio advertising than is done by theatres in other sections. In Idaho Falls, Ida., a quiz program is conducted Friday nights from the theatre stage and the radio time is sponsored by a couple of local merchants. At Pocatello, Ida., the company sponsors a 15-minute quiz program devoted to questions about the motion picture industry and the Chief theatre. This is a semi-institutional broadcast. Tie-ins with "Man in the Street" programs are made in Ogden, Utah, and Missoula, Mont. The radio interviewer makes stops in front of the theatres and gives passes for correct answers to questions about the program. And in Helena, the Marlowe Theatre band broadcasts from the theatre stage every Sunday afternoon. Spot announcements are used throughout the area.

The Huish Theatres chain of Southern Utah allots only about 10 per cent of its advertising budget to radio. It confines its radio time to spot announcements and program tie-ins on local radio stations.

Intermountain Theatres, Inc., of Utah and Idaho also relies chiefly on spot announcements and their use varies from theatre to theatre. Charles Pincus, manager of the Utah Theatre, budgets 20 per cent more for radio advertising than for newspaper space.

"Salt Lake is a small town with a radio-conscious population and with high wattage stations," explained Mr. Pincus. Consequently radio advertising here has a much greater value than it does elsewhere, he said, recalling that two years ago the theatre he is now managing ran five months with radio advertising only, and no appreciable effect was noted at the box office.

Television and F. M. are still in the future in that area and there are no definite plans for utilizing them when thy arrive.

"Pass-for-Plug" Basis in Dayton

Tie-in between theatres and radio in the Dayton, O., area is carried on largely on a "pass-for-plug" basis. Only theatre which pays for its spot announcements is the burlesque house whose advertising is carried by only one station.

WING, 5,000 watt, NBC affiliate, broadcasts every Monday from 9 to 9:30 P. M. a "Quizmaster" show from the Loew theatre stage in Dayton. The program is sponsored by the local Dairy Council and conducted by Ranny Daly. Prizes run up to $250. The theatre pays only for the line installation to carry the program to the radio station. Sam Gilman, Loew manager, reported that the increased business on Mondays varies from $150 to $350 depending on the attraction.

The station also has half-hour programs daily at 3 P. M. which includes plugs for attractions at nine neighborhood and 11 suburban theatres. It receives trailers in these theatres plugging station, with the trailers reaching an estimated audience of some 170,000 theatregoers. Announcements are interspersed with music, Hollywood canned gossip, and biographies.

WHIO, 5,000 watt station owned by the Dayton Daily News has a deal with the four RKO houses in Dayton with tickets being given station for number of announcements daily, averaging about one per house per day. Also have trailer in Colonial, vaudeville house, and in Dale, neighborhood, in return for three spot announcements daily. Tickets are given out on various audience participating programs carried throughout the day and evening, both sponsored and sustaining.

No Screen Radio Ads in Portland

Theatres in Portland, Ore. have no given "plugs" for radio stations on their screens in return for broadcast publicity given the theatres.

Station KWJJ plugs the shows going into the J. J. Parker theatres—the Broadway, United Artists and Mayfair. It was said that this results from a deal under which the station rented its downtown studio from Parker Theatres. Parker Theatres shows are also advertised on KGW. Details of the contract were not available. The plugs simply give the name of the picture, characters and time and house. Frequent "spot" fillers between records are used.

Pass Deal Cancelled In Birmingham, Ala.

There is now no tie-up between Birmingham, Ala. theatres and radio stations. Normally there was a pass deal by which the theatres furnished passes to the three radio stations in returns for certain courtesies such as interviewing actresses and other show people on the air. This worked satisfactory for the theatres, but the deal was called off by the radio stations which felt like they were giving much more than they were receiving, and that the theatres should pay cash for their advertising just as they do in the newspapers. The stations pointed out also that the newspaper amusement rate is plenty high and that the theatres were missing the use of a good medium (the air) and at an attractive rate.

The theatres do get some publicity in certain sponsored programs. The Porter Clothing Company for instances sponsors a "What's Doing in Birmingham" in which a plug is given for current films, but this is paid for by the sponsor. For several years Station WSGN has sponsored a Variety Hour program which is broadcast from the stage of the Lyric Theatre. This program also had a paid sponsor, but is not on the air at this time. The theatre offered the broadcast as an addition to its regular show. The radio station received all of the sponsor's fee.

Interstate Uses Both Free and Paid Time

Frank O. Starz, publicity director for the Interstate theatres said that they both buy and are given radio time over the circuit. He said that time is bought particularly to plug shows which are on national hookups and are currently playing Dallas, such as a 'name' band.

The ASCAP radio war has cut down to some extent the use of transcription shows such as Miss Interstater broadcast in Dallas over WRR, municipally owned station. Shows and programs in all Interstate houses are discussed.

Free radio time comes generally from stations with motion picture commentators who use Hollywood gossip, information on new and current films and similar material.

Mr. Starz said that he believes that radio tieups of all kinds are valuable and that the time of a particular program depends on the station's schedule for that day.

There are no plans for television or FM publicizing of motion pictures in Dallas.

In San Antonio Interstate has a five-minute daily program "The Interstate Reporter" on KABC, Mutual outlet, for which the flat rate is $6.50 or $5.20 for each period when 104 broadcasts are used. The circuit's contract comes under the term rate, it was reported. The program uses a film commentator and special attention is given to Friday openings at the Azrec and Texas theatres and Saturday at the Majestic. The pictures are also mentioned during the week, along with opening dates of other runs in downtown and neighborhood houses.

For special shows Interstate uses WOAI (NBC outlet) and KTSA (CBS) for spot announcements. This however is done so infrequently that there is no contract price reduction. For instance a special announcement following the Kay Kyser program on NBC a few weeks ago advertising the personal appearance in San Antonio cost $1 per word.

Long-Term Program In Lincoln, Neb.

J. H. Cooper's Paramount affiliated Lincoln Theatres Corporation has had a steady 3½ year old contract with KFOR for the station's nightly (except Sunday) "Hollywood Highlights" program, a film gab session formerly conducted by the Journal's movie columnist, Barney Oldfield, and now handled by his wife, since he's in the army. This is the longest period for single sponsorship of a given radio idea in theatre-radio contracting in local history.

In addition, there have been times when, during crucial news periods, KFOR's newscasters have been plugged into the newsreel for flash griddle comment—the talk running through a KFOR mike flasher on the screen. Also, the Lincoln theatres pipe organ was used on both KFAB and KFOR, for reciprocal plugs on the screen show.

With Howard Federer and T. B. Noble, Jr., radio use for their Nebraska Theatres, Inc. has not been so prevalent. However, they have often offered the stage of the Varsity theatre for quiz shows to originate, and have been given "Man on the Street" ballies for passes to be used as prizes.

Charge for the Lincoln Theatres Show is about $60 a week. Airs 6:10 p.m. daily. All others, save on special announcements, are gratis by swap arrangement. Theatres will average, altogether, less than an hour's time per week.

Theatre Broadcast In Scranton, Pa.

The Strand Theatre, Scranton, Pa. Comerford circuit house, has been experimenting with broadcasts as part of its program.

Every night at 8:55 Elmer Davis has been tuned in through the theatre's sound apparatus hooked up directly with WGBI, CBS affiliate. The comment is preceded by a brief trailer showing him in a closeup. The trailer fades out about 40 seconds after the voice comes in and from there to the finish of the broadcast there is partial lighting in the front of the house. The newsreel follows the broadcast.

The public's reaction to the broadcasting is "pretty good," Willard Matthews, manager of the Strand said. He added that he has not yet experienced any trouble in the time of the broadcast with the fadeout of the features although the broadcasting has been conducted for several weeks.

No Radio-Theatre Tieups in Columbus

Direct promotional tieups between theatres and radio stations, are quite unusual in the Cincinnati territory. The chief exception is cooperation between WCKY, Columbia affiliate in Cincinnati and a chain of theatres on Covington, Ky. The executive head of the theatre company and the manager of the station is L. B. Wilson.

Occasionally, when a screen star visits Cincinnati, E. V. Dinerman, RKO division advertising and publicity director, will arrange to plug the star and the picture over one of the local stations. The star, in turn, usually is interviewed on one of the station's programs. Frequent plugs accrue to the theatres when a star or outstanding personality, appearing on the stage show portion of the RKO Shubert, or the legitimate Cox or Taft theatres, in Cincinnati, is interviewed via radio, sometimes in the theatre dressing room, and sometimes in the station studio, the latter however, usually on some appropriate local program. Normally, such plugs are given on a reciprocal basis.

Nothing thus far has been considered along the lines of utilizing television or frequency modulation.

Special Spot "Plugs" In Los Angeles

The relationship between theatres and radio, in the Los Angeles territory, is almost completely confined to occasional paid spot announcements for specific playdates, and to tieups usually arranged through the studios, with the exception of the Warner Theatres and station KFWB.

That station, owned by Warners, carries 25 or more paid spot announcements on specific pictures for the Warner Hollywood and Downtown theatres, each week. In addition, the Warner theatres take one paid spot announcement a week on local network outlets. As pointed out by Harry Maizlish, KFWB manager and former Warner exploiter and theatre man, the station's relationship to the Warner theatres is on a most cooperative basis, as witnessed by the recent case where all Warner theatres in the territory ran a trailer for one month, advertising the wavelength change of KFWB.

Fox West Coast takes paid spots on specific pictures, both current and advance bookings, wherever it is felt the maximum coverage may be obtained, and Loew's State has a regular contract for spots with station KNX. Loew's State is operated by Fox West Coast. Additionally, the circuit has occasional tie-ups in Bakersfield, San Diego and Glendale.

RKO Theatres in the territory have "no hard and fast rule," insofar as radio time is concerned, according to a company spokesman. Radio participation is the exception rather than the rule. Their paid spots average less than $1,000 a year, and they depend upon the studio for any radio tie-ins. Contests and "man on the street" programs are also used to achieve free radio time.

F. & M. Tieups In St. Louis

Fanchon and Marco have made effective arrangements with most of the seven radio stations in St. Louis area and frequently will have at least three 15-minute interviews a week with star of the stage attraction current at its Fox theatre in St. Louis. On the big 50,000-watt KMOX station, F & M will get a plug for pictures at either the Fox or Ambassador in exchange for passes to the theatre—the passes given to winners in a talent contest held weekly at the station

Often Fanchon and Marco will exchange lobby space in its theatres for plugs on the air—plugs to come either before or after the radio dramatization of a film to be played at the company's theatres. Most of F & M plugs on the air concern feature attractions current at its theatres and has little institutional copy. Most of the theatre air shots are in the morning and some in the afternoon; very few in the evening. Most the time is free.

All Denver First-Runs Use Radio

Theatre-radio tieups in Denver is limited to three stations. KOA has a tieup with Fox theatres, both in Denver and in the territory, whereby in exchange for a five-minute period each day—"The Fox Theatre Reporter"—Fox theatres in the city run KOA trailers every day, and four prints circulate in theatres in the territory, about 90 houses. The Denham has a similar arrangement with KLZ in exchange for four to five announcements daily. The Orpheum uses a 15-minute period on KLZ Sundays and three to four announcements daily, also running a trailer for KLZ. KMYR, just starting up, has made a deal with the Civic Theatres, with five neighborhood houses, for a trailer-announcement deal.

With the Denham and Orpheum first run, and five of the Fox houses in Denver first run, radio stations are represented in all of the first run theatres in Denver.

Cooperative Deal Made in Des Moines

For the past eighteen months radio stations KSO and KRNT at Des Moines, Iowa, have had an arrangement with the twelve independent theatres in that city that has worked to the mutual advantage of each.

A 30 second trailer, giving the call letters of the stations and mentioning from eight to ten titles of current radio programs, is shown on the screen of each of the theatres every day of the week. A trailer for KSO is shown at six of the theatres while the KRNT trailer is being shown at the other six and then the trailers are exchanged. The trailer subject is changed every two weeks.

In exchange for this service, a 15 minute broadcast of a synopsis of pictures being shown at the theatres is given at 11:30 A. M. each day over KSO with each individual theatre featured three times a week. The theatres change their programs three times a week so each show is given three broadcasts.

Extensive Use of Radio in Richmond

All first runs in Richmond have various tieups with broadcasting stations. David Kamsky, advertising manager for Neighborhood Theatres, which operate the State and Byrd, has several tieups with all three stations, and is the largest user of radio time. He specializes in the use of spot announcements, having an arrangement by which the time is paid for with passes, which in turn are used by the stations to promote time from local advertisers or used by the studio staff. WMBG also purchases a number of passes each week and allows the theatres the equivalent in time which is generally used to put on special broadcasts of the more important pictures. Here is a sample announcement that is used by the station when they give these passes to the listening public: "Mr. F. L. Smith may secure two passes to see 'The Devil and Miss Jones' starring Jean Arthur, now showing at the Byrd Theatre, by going to Stein's Clothing Store." Stations will run transcriptions of movies gratis.

Edith Lindeman, move editor, Times Dispatch, is on the air over WRNL three times weekly around 6:30 P.M. with a movie gossip and telling about the current shows.

Al Nowitsky, advertising manager for Wilmer and Vincent, uses spot announcements for important pictures playing at the Colonial, first run, for which he pays cash. He set some sort of local record when WMBG gave 72 announcements on the opening day of "Virginia."

Eddie Weaver, organist, Loew's, is on the air three times weekly for fifteen minutes in the morning, over WRVA. Commercials are spotted in the program. A Quiz Program is also a daily feature at midday from the lobby of Loews Theatre, over WRVA. Sponsored by a baking firm the name of the theatre is mentioned through the program.

New Haven Has Radio Tieups

None of the downtown houses in New Haven have yet gone in for paid airtime, but stations are cooperative and many local tieups have been promoted. The theatre plugs, directed almost entirely to specific week's billings, have thus far been limited to daytime advertising and managers are not too sold on their widespred results. The Whitney, new enighborhood house in the Hamden residential section, has a paid four-a-day plug of its billings at the conclusion of WELI newscasts, at 7:45 A.M., 12:30 P.M., 2:45 and 10.:45 P.M.

The M & P first run Paramount sends a daily noon organ program from its pit, with plugs for its shows at the conclusion, and has a 3-a-week music guessing contest with guest tickets on WBRY.

Sam Badamo of the College is only theatre manager to get on the air personally and regularly with a Saturday noon Hollywood chatter "Movie Club" and weekly theatre plugs. In addition, the College gives guest tickets and gets entions on WICC Kiddie Review Sundays and guessing tunes contest on WBRY Thursday. The Loew-Poli is only house to continue a long-standing "Man on the Street" program in front of the theatre, 15 minutes, over WELI, giving guest tickets. A screen trailer is given a local merchant in return for this stunt. In addition a new program with weekly Theatre Party idea for the winners is being launched over the same station.

Theatres Use Radio In Indianapolis

Lyric, Indiana and Loew's are the steady users of radio time in Indianapolis. The Lyric has spent as high as $100 a week on radio, mostly to plug stage shows. All three houses take spot announcements with all three stations to remind the public of the bigger shows. The Circle does the same once in a great while. Olson circuit neighborhoods buy time regularly. The Indiana donates the use of its organ for a 15-minute sustaining program five days weekly on WIBC and pays the line charges, which average about $15 a month. WIBC plugs the current show on each program.

WIRE carries a sidewalk interview six days weekly for a jewelry company, with the microphone set up in front of Loew's. The show is plugged and the announcer gives away passes. A furniture company's quiz program uses the stage of the Apollo each Sunday afternoon and a bottling company's quiz uses the Lyric stage each Tuesday night. Both are carried on WFMB and include mention of the houses.

There has been little, if any, institutional advertising in Indianapolis. Virtually all theatre broadcasts are daytime.

No discussion of television in Indianapolis. WIRE has applied for F-M, but since the owner, Eugene Pulliam, owns a chain of small daily newspapers, prospects are still undecided. WFBM does not plan to seek F-M until receiving sets for it are more heavily purchased in the Indianapolis area.

Warner Air Program In Washington

From 10:15 to 10:30 P.M. each week "Warner Bros. Movie Reporter" is presented over station WOL in Washington. The program was arranged by John J. Payette, general zone manager, and Ted Dunlap is the "Movie Reporter." Hollywood news is featured.

"Dr. I. Q." Show In Seattle

For the past several weeks the "Dr. I. Q." radio program has been presented Monday evenings at 6:00 P.M. from the stage of the Orpheum theatre, Seattle, managed by Don Geddes. Business has been three times over normal for that evening, it was reported.

Band Program in Helena, Montana

The Marlow theatre in Helena, Mont. has inaugurated stage broadcasts each Sunday at 3 P.M. over station KPFE. Nora L. Whittinghall and a band are featured.

Opening Radio Show Held at Syracuse Theatre

On Tuesday the opening program of WAGE, Syracuse, new Mutual affiliate, was held from the stage of Loew's State in that city. The broadcast company bought a number of seats for the show for its guests. "The Great Dictator" was the picture being shown.

MAJORS CONTINUE THE SHIFTING OF PERSONNEL FOR NEW SELLING ORDER

Universal Realigns Production Staff and Duties; 20th-Fox Executives Confer on Product; Republic, Warners In Deal

The shifting and re-shifting of production personnel in the studios, and of distribution staffs in the field continues, as both the "Big Five" and "Little Three" distributors get ready for the new order of selling coming in the new season with the effective date of the consent decree, on Septmber 1st.

Universal during the week shifted almost its entire production-executive personnel, giving to each man certain duties, pictures, and associates. The move was the result of conferences between Nate J. Blumberg, company president; J. Cheever Cowdin, and numerous other Universal chieftains, in Hollywood.

Meanwhile, Twentieth Century-Fox, preparing for a convention late next month, saw, probably, the agenda worked out at studio conferences between its executives, numbering among them Herman Wobber, vice-president in charge of sales; Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; several division managers, and studio heads and producers.

Universal Realigns Production Personnel

Universal has realigned its production and executive personnel, this apparently being the result of conferences at the studio between J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board; Nate J. Blumberg, president of the company; William A. Scully, vice-president in charge of sales; Cliff Work, head of production; Matthew Fox, vice-president and assistant to Mr. Blumberg, and others.

The new alignment is as follows:

Milton H. Feld, producer, will concentrate on high budget films. These will include Abbott and Costello vehicles and Mayfair Productions films. Working with Mr. Feld will be producers Vaughn Paul, Glenn Tryon, and Alex Gottlieb. Jules Levey will collaborate as head of Mayfair. Pictures to be made under the Feld hand are "Mermaid in Distress," "Hellzapoppin," "Hold on to Your Hats," "Butch Minds the Baby."

Jack Gross, with producer-writer-director George Waggoner and Joseph Bernhardt, Jr., will be responsible for an increased number of "big" films. First of these will be "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break," a W. C. Fields film. Others: "Bad Lands of Dakota," "The Yukon Trail," "The Ghost of Frankenstein," "The Wolf Men," and "Captive Wild Women."

Milton Schwarzwald will work with Ken Goldsmith as producer on Hugh Herbert pictures, on the Dead End Kid-Little Tough Guy group, and on a series of musical romances.

Joseph Gershenson will be in a supervisory post, working with Paul Malvern, Marshall Grant, and William Cowan on "idea" pictures, Johnny Mack Brown westerns, and two-reel musicals.

Ben Pivar will head a unit producing seven films starring Dick Foran, Leo Carillo, and Andy Devine.

Henry MacRae will continue producing serials.

The studio executive committee, through which this entire group of men will continue to be cleared, includes Dan Kelley and Martin Murphy.

The company is sponsoring a series of regional meetings for its field sales forces. The first was Friday and Saturday, May 9th and 10th, at the Ambassador Hotel, Atlantic City; the second, in Chicago, this Friday and Saturday; the third in Los Angeles, Friday and Saturday, May 23rd and 24th. Universal branch Universal, in New York, announces that it will have half of its program for 1941-42 completed by September 1st. A total of 32 units of production will be ready for delivery, or in the cutting rooms, by that date, according to stundio executives. Total number of pictures on the new season program, as announced following the company's annual sales meetings last Frbruary, is 65, including three Frank Lloyd productions, seven Johnny Mack Brown Westerns, seven adventure films triple-starring Dick Foran, Leo Carillo and Andy Devine, and four serials.

Several top-budgeted productions are scheduled for filming during the summer, and are included among the 32 which will be completed before the start of the new distribution season on September 1st, it was said. These will include "Almost An Angel," co-starring Deanna Durbin and Charles Laughton; "Hellzapoppin," Jules Levey's Mayfair production starring Olsen and Johnson; "Ride 'Em, Cowboy," with Abbott and Costello; "Heartbeat," co-starring Charles Boyer and Margaret Sullavan; the W. C. Fields picture, "Never Give a Sucker An Even Break"; "Badlands of Dakota" and "Mermaid in Distress," Vaughn Paul's initial production.

Fox Executives At Coast Meeting

New season production, sales plans, budget limitations, and the like, were discussed by a group of Twentieth Century-Fox executives last week, at the Coast studios. Included in the home office contingent were Herman Wobber, distribution chief; Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; and division managers William Sussman, W. J. Kupper, W. C. Gehring.

It is reported the Eastern group saw the final edited print of "Blood and Sand"; and also several other films, some of which are still in editing.

That the executives discussed operations under the decree, and also possible effects of new taxes, among them a rentals tax, was presumed.

The company's sales convention is scheduled for late June. It was said, though not confirmed, that the convention date was set at the Coast conference.

In principle, an agreement has been reached between Republic and Warner Theatres, under which the latter will take the producers' entire 1941-42 product, J. R. Grainger, Republic president, said in Los Angeles Monday. He added he had confirmed the deal in New York last week, with Joseph Bernhard, general manager of the circuit.

Mr. Grainger also said his company had closed deals with the Butterfield, Publix-Saenger, and Fox Intermountain circuits. On the Coast, Mr. Grainger was to attempt to reach similar agreements with the Warner theatres of the area, and with the Fox West Coast chain.

Mr. Grainger said he noted heavy business improvement in all cities visited.

Herbert J. Yates, heading Consolidated and Republic, asserted last week in Los Angeles that the Republic studio would have a heavy production schedule in June and July, to have about 10 or 12 films ready for selling August 1st, under the consent decree. He added that the films on the current season would be finished by July 1st. The company also disclosed assignments, as follows:

Albert J. Cohen, "Memphis Belle," at $750,000, "Pardon My Stripes," "The Devil Pays Off," "Navy Blue Eyes"; Robert North, "Hurricane Smith" and "There Goes My Wife"; Armand Schaefer, "The Big Bonanza" and "Mercy Island"; George Sherman, "Oregon Trail."

Also announced was an intensive production setup for Gene Autry, western star. "Under Fiesta Stars" is beginning. Shortly thereafter will be "Mexico Way." There will also be one entitled "Old Faithful."

RKO Production Stepping Up

After announcing the signing of Samuel Goldwyn, the retention of Ginger Rogers for a long term, the additional signing of members of the Mercury Productions cast, and signatures of other well known personages, including Ginny Simms, and Charles Coburn, and after announcing the obtainment of the services of producer Sam Wood, of a still unwritten novel from I. A. R. Wylie, and more pictures from Walt Disney for release—RKO, in indicating its stepped-up pace preparatory to the consent decree selling which begins August 1st, this week announced its short subjects program was also being stepped up. The first of the new two-reelers starring Edgar Kennedy has begun work. There will be six such for the new season.

George J. Schaefer, president of the company, returned to Hollywood this week, after attending the openings in New York and Chicago, and then Los Angeles, of his company's "Citizen Kane."

Producers Releasing Corporation has delivered 24 of the 38 films scheduled for the current season. The program will be completed by September 1st, it said. Films for May release are "The Lone Rider in Ghost Town," "Paper Bullets," and "The Texas Marshal."

Meanwhile, the company has extended the present long-term contracts of O. Henry Briggs, president, and of Leon Fromkess, vice-president in charge of operations.

Continuing the recently announced policy of decentralization in line with anticipated operations under the consent decree, Warner zone heads will also buy film, the New York home office disclosed this week.

However, it was added, this buying will still be done under the guidance of the home office, where Clayton Bond remains head film buyer.

Monogram has signed the Century Theatre, Coopersville, Michigan, this being the first such deal in the western part of that state. The deal is for 1941-42 product. Al Heffernan operates the theatre.

NO "PROPAGANDA" FOR PARAMOUNT

Claiming a record for story purchases—45 of all types since Jan. 1—B. G. DeSylva, executive producer of Paramount, said this week that the only kind of story not included was the "propaganda or ideological brand of story".

"Paramount will not produce this type of picture," he said. "We believe that the public prefers entertainment, preferably comedy and romance. We have secured the broadest variety of entertainment in the stories purchased by Paramount."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Hot Tip

'Twas 97 in Hollywood on May 7th and about the same in an Inglewood theatre 15 miles distant when the manager noted among the ticket buyers at dinner time a party of strangers to the community who seating themselves en bloc and chatting of this and that in amiable disregard of "That Hamilton Woman" on the screen, puzzled him further by meandering in and out of the theatre in casual indifference to the Pete Smith short, the newsreel and the Bank Night exercises which followed it.

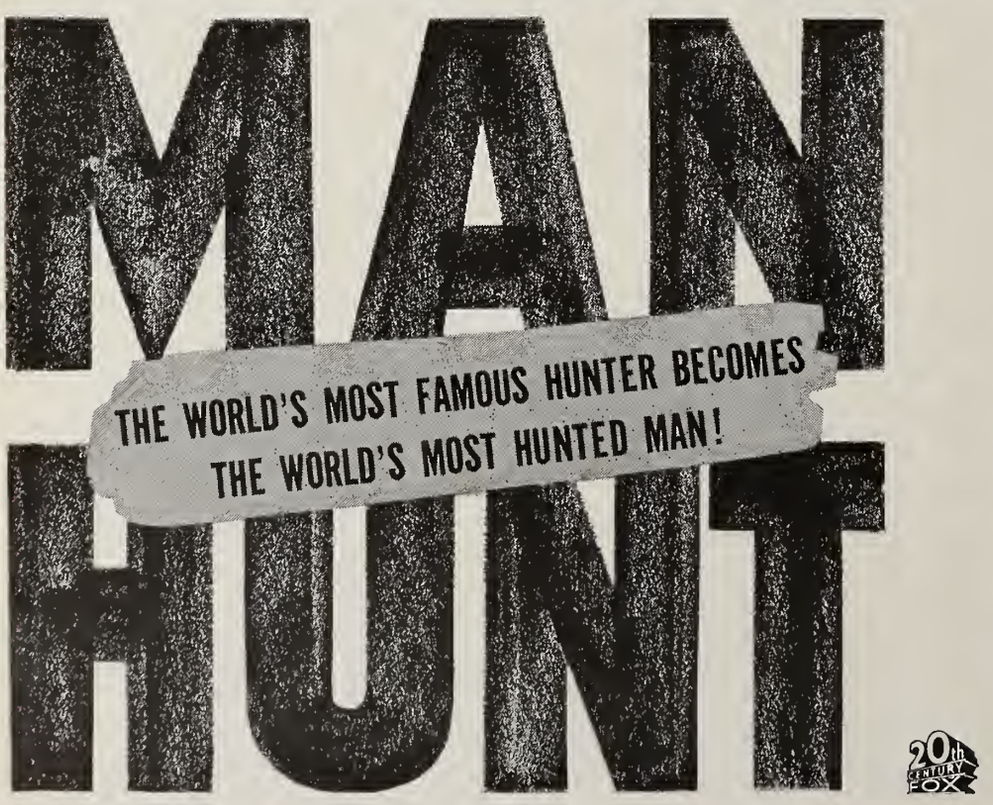
Unrecognized by the manager were the New York Times' Douglas Churchill and a company of the most widely circulated lay press correspondents, columnists and critics in the nation, on the Inglewood scene early and incognito determined to witness, without leave of its sponsor, the unannounced try-out of an unknown picture believed by their confidential informant to be one of the biggest of the big ones recently completed by the studios but not yet revealed to the press.

Opinions exchanged by the waiting scribes as to what treat might be in store for them varied.

It could be MGM's Technicolor treatment of "Billy the Kid," said one.

It might even be Howard Hughes' reportedly hot treatment of the same theme, said another, and the Hughes film, what with the Production Code Administration seal withheld for reasons well worth looking into, would indeed be a source of copy interesting enough to compensate the group for passing up the formal Glendale preview of as big a picture as "One Night in Lisbon."

Or it could be "Blood and Sand," which 20th Century-Fox had been thinking some of dropping into exhibition without press preview of any kind.



What the picture turned out to be was "Scattergood Pulls the Strings," which all present had been invited to inspect at the studio on the morrow.

Thus came humor into the situation created six weeks ago when 22 ladies and gentlemen of the lay press served notice upon the studios, via the Studio Publicity Directors Committee, that they'd have to show them the forthcoming product earlier than they'd been doing or the Churchill group would track down the pictures at point of try-out and review them in whatever state of completion or incompletion they might be.

And humor appears to have achieved for the deadlock what contention, conference and conversation had not.

For by weekend the Publicity Directors Committee had invited the Churchill group to sit down with them and talk it all over again; and the Churchill group had agreed to take up at its meeting this week the matter of doing so.

Laughter, led by the championing Churchhill in person, was general on both sides.

No Change

Forty-six pictures were before the cameras this week, as 16 started and 16 finished. With the number of those in work the same as last week's total, 23 are being prepared and 84 are being edited.

WESLEY RUGGLES, who produced and directed "Arizona" for Columbia most recently, has been signed to a directorial contract by MGM.

HAROLD ARLEN is collaborating with ROBERT ROSSEN and EDWIN GILBERT on the script of Warners' "Hot Nocturne," in which John Garfield will star.

MGM has extended the directorial contract of NORMAN Z. MCLEOD.

SAM WOOD will start directing "Kings Row" at Warners June 9. It will have ANN SHERIDAN, RONALD REAGAN and ROBERT CUMMINGS as the leads.

INGRID BERGMAN will remain in the East for two months before reporting back to DAVID O. SELZNICK for her next assignment.

Radio Guild Wins Closed Shop Pact On Transcriptions

One more entertainment field this week came under union rule. The American Federation of Radio Artists over the weekend secured a contract with the leading transcription companies, providing that all performers making records for such companies must join the AFRA. The contract is retroactive in wage scales designated to May 1st and it is effective until November 1, 1943.

Signers of the agreement were Emily Holt, executive secretary of the AFRA: C. M. Finney, president of the Associated Music Publishers; Charles Gaines, secretary to the World Broadcasting System, and J. H. MacDonald, assistant treasurer of the National Broadcasting Company.

The union agrees, in the contract, to allow new members, and to continue reasonable initiation fees.

Two Classes Set Up

The contract provides two transcription categories: Class A, "custom built" transcriptions used by one sponsor once in each city; Class B, "open end" transcriptions which may be used on any number of stations not over 1,000 watts power. In the first class, actors and announcers receive a minimum of $2 for transcription of one minute or less, up to $28 for full hour shows; singers receive from $14 for a full hour when in groups of nine or more, to $43.75 for soloists on one-hour shows. There are other pay provisions. In the second class, singers receive the same pay, but actors' and announcers' scales differ.

Meanwhile, in the film industry, labor news appeared scarce this week, with Coast executives of labor and production awaiting the National Labor Relations Board decision anent classification of studio workers, and, after that, the expected renewal of the studios' pact with the "Big Six" international unions in the basic labor agreement, with the possibility that the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, with a score of studio locals and an estimated 12,000 studio workers, might rejoin.

Last week, executives of the Western division of the American Federation of Labor intimated they had been asked to investigate treatment of extra players by the Screen Actors Guild. Officers of the latter organization denied knowledge of any such requests, and of any trouble. However, unnamed spokesmen at the AFL headquarters, which is reported antagonistic to the SAG, said the Guild's "anti-democratic" rule would be probed.

In New York, National Labor Relations Board hearings opened last week, on the petition by the Screen Readers Guild for certification as the proper bargaining agency for the readers in the story departments of the major company New York home offices. Hearings continued this week, after efforts to reach an agreement independent of board findings failed.

In the same city, the new owner of the former Consolidated Amusement circuit, J. J. Theatres, Inc. (Julius Joelson), submitted a wage controversy with the city's projectionists' Local 306, to arbitration Wednesday.

The American Guild of Musical Artists on Tuesday barred its members from appearing at a concert scheduled for Madison Square Garden, in New York City, Sunday, unless they are paid. The concert is to be held by the Italian World War Veterans in the U. S. A., Inc., for the benefit of the Italian Relief Fund. The guild explained its ban on services without fee, by noting that the Theatre Authority, Inc., established to "clear" benefits, did not "clear" this one.

In Seattle, more than 300 employees of theatres are receiving a 10 per cent pay increase, and time and a half for overtime—the result of an agreement between theatre unions, and the Seattle Association of Theatre Managers. The agreement is retroactive to May 1st and effective to January 1, 1943.

The Detroit Theatre Managers Union has withdrawn from the NLRB office, the protest it filed against the Schulte circuit. This apparently prevents an expected decision on whether theatres are subject to the NLRB as purveyers of an interstate commerce product. The Schulte's Motor City Theatre, in Van Dyke, was being picketed last week by the union, and it was predicted the picketing would spread to more houses. However, there is no strike: the union is merely demanding union men in the circuit.

Roger Kennedy, international vice-president of the IATSE, said recently in Detroit headquarters that projectionists in Grand Rapids, Michigan City, had been unionized "100 per cent."

In Reading, Pennsylvania, the Theatrical Brothers Association has petitioned the Berks County Court for a charter, declaring the unit will further the interests of musicians, dancers, actors, and actresses.

The Theatre Employees Local B96, IATSE, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, held its first annual dinner dance in that city at the Eagles Home recently. Guest of honor was Richard F. Walsh, international vice-president of the IATSE. Toastmaster was Jack Bradel. Speakers were Frank Hummell, Raymond Conrad, William Sharpe, J. P. Gallagher, William Tosline, Mary Freeman, and Daisy Miles.

Variety Artists Choose Board

Twenty-five members were chosen to the national board of the American Guild of Variety Artists, vaudeville performers' union, it announced Tuesday, after a national election.

This board will select a president, treasurer, and executive secretary in mid-June. The executive committee of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, which has been supervising AGVA affairs, will certify the election of the unit's board at a special meeting in New York City Friday.

Film Libraries In 500 Theatres

A "Library of the Screen," with branches in its 500 theatres throughout the U. S., is to be established by Warner Brothers next Fall, it was announced Tuesday by J. L. Warner, vice president, in Hollywood.

Facilities will be available to the public without charge. Each library will be stocked with material of direct application to the screen, novels and historical works already produced and yet to be produced by Warners and other studios, as well as texts and histories dealing with Hollywood and picture making.

The libraries also will feature stills from Hollywood productions, including stills of nickelodeon days. The albums of photographs, however, will not be available for lending. Interested persons will be able to examine the collections at the theatre libraries.

All branches will make substantially the same material available to the public. In addition to works already filmed, the libraries will be augmented as works are purchased for the screen.

A committee nominated by Warners to collaborate on the administration will be headed by Hal B. Wallis, executive producer.

Scripts of original film stories will be available also. Among the photographic albums of historic films to be placed on the shelves will be "The Sheik," "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Seventh Heaven," "The Iron Horse," "The Big Parade," "My Four Years in Germany," "Tumbleweed," and "The Covered Wagon."

Books about the screen and its history will make up a section, including "A Million and One Nights," by Terry Ramsaye, "The Film Finds Its Tongue," "Romance of the Movie," "Camera Over Hollywood," Hampton's "History of Motion Pictures," "Rise of the American Film," Bardeche's "History of the Movies" and Dr. Leo Rosten's reports on the history of Hollywood, and other reference works on the motion picture industry.

Keith Circuits, Consolidated Report Profits

Reports of earnings for 1940 from Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp., and B. F. Keith Corp. for the first quarter of 1941 by Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and a first quarter dividend from Radio Corporation of America, all of which indicated rising income, highlighted the financial scene this week. Paramount Pictures Corp., also called its stockholders' meeting to elect officers on May 17th and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported further acquisition in Loew's Boston Theatres by Loew's, Inc.

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., for the three months ended March 31, 1941 listed consolidated net earnings, after deducting depreciation and normal federal taxes, but before provision for federal surtax on undistributed profit, at $174,379.98 in a report signed by Herbert J. Yates, Jr., president. The earnings equalled 43.5 cents per share on 400,000 shares of preferred stock outstanding.

Principal order of business for the annual meeting of Paramount stockholders at New York on June 17th will consist of the reelection of the present board of directors it was indicated by the corporation this week.

Members of the board of directors who will stand for reelection are: Neil F. Agnew, Barney Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Y. Frank Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, John W. Hicks, Austin Keough, Earl I. McClintock, Maurice Newton, E. V. Richards, Edwin L. Weisl and Adolph Zukor.

Quarterly dividends on shares of Radio Corporation of America $3.50 cumulative convertible First Preferred stock and outstanding shares of "B" preferred stock, were announced Friday by David Sarnoff, president. The dividend on the First Preferred stock is 87½c per share, and the dividend on the "B" Preferred stock is $1.25 per share. The dividends are for the period April 1, 1941, to June 30, 1941, and payable July 1, 1941, to stockholders of record on June 6 1941.

For the 52 weeks ended April 5, 1941, Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries showed a net profit of $704,232.38 after deducting all charges. This is equal to $11.07 per share on 63,586 shares of 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock. No provision has been made for Federal excess profits tax as the companies do not appear to be liable in this respect. The report follows:

$110,000 Given In Jewish Drive

Approximately $75,000 was contributed by some 400 film industry leaders who gathered at the Hotel Astor in New York on Friday, May 9th, for the annual luncheon of the Amusement Division of the United Jewish Appeal for refugees and overseas needs.

So far the Amusement Division has contributed a total of $110,000 of its quota of $300,000, it was reported from the drive headquarters.

Barney Balaban, David Bernstein and Major Albert Warner were hosts at the luncheon. Mr. Balaban is treasurer of the committee, and Mr. Bernstein and Major Warner are co-chairmen. The principal address of the affair was made by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, religious leader and national chairman of the appeal.

Mr. Bernstein pointed out that three organizations are assisted by the funds raised by the United Jewish Appeal. These are the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal and the National Refugee Service. William Rosenwald, co-chairman of the Greater New York Committee, also spoke.

The campaign for funds began Friday, May 9th, and will continue through June 30th.

Among the contributors of $1,000 or more at the luncheon were: William S. Paley, $20,000; David Bernstein, $12,500; Major Albert Warner, $12,500; Barney Balaban, $10,000; Mrs. Barney Balaban and children, $2,000; Jules Brulatour, $7,000; Herman Robbins, $2,500; Toby Gruen, $2,000; Jack Cohn, $2,000; Abe Schneider, $2,000; Louis Frisch and Sam Rinzler, $1,500; Joseph Hazen, $1,000; Sam Schneider, $1,000.

Disney, Schlaifer on Committee

Walt Disney has been named chairman of the Campaign for Young China of United China Relief, Inc., in New York, it was announced this week by James B. Blaine, national chairman. Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland head the China Stamp Club for Young China, Mr. Blaine said. Proceeds from the sale of stamps, illustrated by James Montgomery Flagg, will be used in supporting Chinese children.

SEC Reports Star, Executive Salaries

Annual reports of registered corporations now coming in to the Securities and Exchange Commission show that motion picture company officials and top-ranking stars continue to be among the best paid persons in the country.

Louis B. Mayer, maintaining the position he has held for several years, again in 1940 achieved the distinction of being the nation's highest paid executive, receiving $697,048 as managing director of production for Loew's, Inc. His closest competitor for first place was Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, whose $478,144, however, fell nearly $219,000 short of Mr. Mayer's figure.

Second best paid official in the Loew organization was Hunt Stromberg, who received $332,267 as production superintendent. Nicholas M. Schenck, president of the company, received $318,881.

Universal paid W. C. Fields $255,000, placing him among the highest paid persons, and followed that with $209,833 to Deanna Durbin and $150,000 to Bing Crosby. Radio Corporation of America was considerably more modest in its remuneration of officials, paying David Sarnoff $100,900 as president, and James G. Harbord $60,940 as chairman of the board.

Distributors Win Schine Dismissal; Folley Suit Off

Finally confirming reports of several months, that the action would be taken, the Department of Justice last week dropped the five majors who are parties to the consent decree arrived at in the New York anti-trust case, from the "field" anti-trust case in Buffalo—against the Schine circuit and the majors.

At the same time, another anti-trust case made news by disappearing. The Folley Amusement Holding Corporation, of Brooklyn, on Monday dropped its case in the New York Federal Court, against the eight majors, Monogram, and the Randforce circuit.

Meanwhile, two trust cases in Philadelphia neared a climax—the Admiral Theatre triple damages $225,000 suit against Warner theatres and the majors, and the Lansdowne Theatre $210,000 triple damages suit against the same. Hearing on both cases is scheduled next Monday.

Five Majors Dropped From Schine Suit

An amended complaint filed in Buffalo Federal Court last week by the Department of Justice, in its field anti-trust prosecution against the Schine circuit and the majors, eliminated the five majors who have been parties to the consent decree entered into last year in the Government's key trust case, New York.

The filing of the amended complaint resulted from an order by Federal Judge John Knight three weeks ago, on application of the "Little Three" majors, Columbia, Universal, and United Artists, defendants along with the Schine companies.

Awaited this week was decision by Department attorneys whether they would still attempt to make the Schine case the first of their field cases to go to trial, in preference to the Nashville (Crescent circuit) and Oklahoma City (Griffith circuit) cases.

However, the Department attorneys have not been able to obtain a trial date in Buffalo before September; whereas the Nashville case is set for trial July 7th. Judge Knight has already requested information whether the Department still intends to try the Schine case first.

The Folley Amusement Holding Corporation, former operator of the Folly Theatre, Brooklyn, has dropped, by stipulation concurred in by all parties, its suit in New York Federal Court against the eight majors, Monogram, and the Randforce circuit, of Brooklyn. The suit had charged conspiracy to monopolize product; that the theatre was forced to close, as a result.

The parties concerned did not reveal reasons for dropping of the suit; nor did the papers filed disclose anything pertinent. The dismissal was given by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum, without costs, and without prejudice.

Two Philadelphia Suits Up for Hearing Soon

Hearing on the suit for triple damages under the Federal anti-trust laws totalling $225,000 by the owners of the Admiral Theatre, Philadelphia, against Warner theatre circuit and the major distributors, is scheduled to come up next Monday before Judge Kirkpatrick in the United States District Court in Philadelphia. A similar suit, seeking $210,000 triple damages, filed by the Harrison Brothers, operators of the Lansdowne Theatre in suburban Philadelphia, is also listed for hearing on the same day before Judge Kirkpatrick. However, the Lansdowne case will be continued and only the Admiral suit tried on that day.

The Admiral case was filed on January 3, 1940, by Irvin A. Winegrad, attorney for Ruben and Harry Shapiro, trading as the Harub Amusement Corp. in the operation of the theatre. The suit charges 12 distributing companies with engaging in "monopolistic practices" in cutting off the theatre's product when it tried to cut the price of admission from 25 to 15 cents to compete with Warner circuit houses in its vicinity. In addition to the chain, Robert Lynch, branch manager of the MGM exchange in Philadelphia, is also joined as defendant, claiming that the Admiral sustained a "substantial loss" when Federick Gladdeck, son-in-law and alleged "straw man" for Lynch, had reneged in a deal to purchase the theatre in January, 1939. There had been numerous attempts made to settle the suit out of court, but no agreement was ever reached.

The Lansdowne case was filed two months prior to the Admiral suit and involves a similar situation. Norman Ball, attorney for the exhibitors, has served subpoenas on all the presidents and sales managers of the distributing companies, returnable May 19. However, since no jurist will sit on two anti-trust actions for the same day, it is a certainty that the Lansdowne action will be continued until the Fall term of the court.

Still on the dockets, but no dates set for hearings, indicating that they also will be carried over to the Fall term, are the anti-trust actions of Block and Sork, operators of the Rio theatres in Reading, Pa., and Schuylkill Haven, Pa., and Milton Rogasner operator of the Iris Theatre in Philadelphia. Both actions, against Warner circuit and the major distributors, were filed last Fall about the time that the consent decree was handed down. Since the arbitration system was set up, no new anti-trust cases have been filed in Philadelphia, in former years, literally a "hot bed" for such actions.

English Film Retitled

The title of the English-made motion picture production, "Three Sailors," produced by Michael Balcon, which has been acquired for release in this country by Edward Small through United Artists, has been changed to "Three Cockeyed Sailors."

Carolina Convention Committee Listed

With indications that more than 300 will attend the annual summer convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, June 29th-July 1st, the convention committee has been appointed, as follows: Thomas Little, chairman; William Enloe, T. D. Kemp, Jr., George W. Parr, Mrs. Runa Curtis, B. B. Benfield, George Carpenter, Lyle Wilson, Benjamin Strozier, Alton Craver.

President of the unit is Charles H. Arrington.

The regional meeting of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and upper Michigan will be held jointly, June 4th, at Chippewa Falls, former first state, with a similar gathering of the Northwest Allied. William Smith, of Menominie, is zone captain and chairman of the meeting.

A meeting, which did not occur, had been scheduled at Antigo, Wisconsin, Maryland.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, an Allied unit, has established a "defense relief investigating committee," being, in the words of an official statement, "ever mindful that the supply of propaganda and relief reels and the promotion of relief drives may in the near future over-burden our screens and our ability to pay, and that we must have some method of at least partial control."

The statement added: "We believe that the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense may possibly in some way prove beneficial nationally; but a local anonymous committee seems to us the only logical solution. Local conditions make local problems; and for a group of nationally prominent men to form a committee—secretly, and without even consulting us, then pledging our screens without even so much as giving us a brief on aims and procedure—seems to us to stifle that committee's ability to receive complete, wholehearted cooperation on its efforts. The logical people to pledge Allied screens are the Allied members; and, to our knowledge, no one else has that right."

Starrett for Columbia

Charles Starrett will make 22 pictures during three years, for Columbia, the company disclosed last week.

RADIO CONFUSED OVER WHITE HOUSE STAND ON FCC'S CRACKDOWN ON AIR

Breach Between Mutual and Broadcasters Widens as MBS Returns ASCAP Music to the Air, Effective Tuesday Night

Position of the Administration on last week's Federal Communications Commission's "crack down" on radio networks remained unclear in midweek

The attitude of Congressional leaders also was not clear. On Tuesday Senator Wallace H. White (Rep., Maine) introduced a resolution calling for a "sweeping" investigation of the "arbitrary" FCC monopoly order and attempts to regulate business activities of broadcasters.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Rep., Montana) said on Wednesday he would support the measure introduced by Senator White.

Hopes of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System that White House action would stay enforcement of the Federal Communications Commission's monopoly report seemed crushed Monday when President Roosevelt, through his secretary, Stephen Early, sent to Mutual Broadcasting System executives a letter interpreted as praising their telegram indorsing the FCC order which will require NBC to dispose of one network and restrict other NBC and CBS activities.

On Tuesday, however, Mr. Early, who signed the letter to Mutual, insisted the President was maintaining a "hands off" policy with respect to the FCC order. Lowell Mellett, presidential administrative assistant, was instructed by Mr. Early to inform the delegates to the National Association of Broadcasters convention opening in St. Louis that the President had made no statement of policy on the report.

Mr. Early said his letter to Mutual officials had been misconstrued as a statement of White House views and was merely a "polite acknowledgment" of a telegram received. He further said his letter merely expressed Mr. Roosevelt's belief that a "just and equitable solution" would be found for the problems dealt with in the report.

Telegram Exchange Cited

Last week Alfred J. McCosker, chairman of the board of Mutual, and W. E. MacFarlane, president, sent a telegram to President Roosevelt endorsing the FCC order which would require NBC to sell its Blue Network and impose other restrictions on NBC and CBS. It was asserted that the two older networks were exercising "excessive control and domination." The Mutual telegram to the President concluded, "The new regulations for the first time bring to the radio industry an opportunity for genuine competition, free of excessive control and domination heretofore exercised over the entire industry by two other national network companies."

On Monday Mr. Early's letter written as the President's reply to the telegram was published. The Mutual executives were thanked for their "fine telegram." It also said, "He (President Roosevelt) wants you (Mr. McCosker) and Mr. MacFarlane to know that he greatly appreciates the conciliatory spirit which prompted your message."

SURVEY MADE ON SONG POPULARITY

The office of radio research of Columbia University, headed by Dr. Paul F. Lazarsfeld, has conducted a survey on popularity of songs. Current song hits are made by promotion campaigns and not by public acceptance, it was asserted.

Dr. Lazersfeld said, "The public, and more specifically the radio audience, has been induced by a carefully scheduled build-up to accept these songs with little active disagreement and critical interest."

Neville Miller, president of the NAB, was reported to have said that the letter of Mr. Early had made it clear that the White House supported the FCC monopoly report and that the only alternative for the radio association was a major legal fight.

Niles Trammell, president of NBC, said Monday evening that an attempt would be made to secure an injunction staying the FCC monopoly order which would require NBC to sell the Blue or Red Network and make it necessary for NBC and CBS to make new contracts with their affiliated stations. Last week in Los Angeles Mr. Trammell asserted that the FCC order was "a death sentence of radio broadcasting as we have known it in this country. The next step is total government control of broadcasting and the end of freedom of the air."

James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, in addressing the NAB convention Tuesday in St. Louis said, "Neither the government, nor two or three small groups shall control broadcasting in this country." He added, "There is no present foreseeable emergency which would result in the government's taking over the broadcasting industry." But he asserted that monopolistic control of broadcasting might be "disastrous" to the public.

Mr. Fly also asserted that "monopolistically controlled sources in the industry, to divert attention from the fact of monopolistic control in their hands, conjure up insistently the bogey man of Government operation."

Mr. Miller in reply said, "May it not also be said that those who favor Government operation consistently conjure up bogey men of monopoly to divert attention?" The statement by the NAB president was applauded by the delegates.

Vice-President Henry A. Wallace addressed the convention from Washington. He did not deal with the subject of alleged monopoly and government plans for radio but talked on the topic, "The Responsibility of the Radio."

The broadcasting industry, the Government and the public were urged in Mr. Miller's annual report to follow President Roosevelt's views in determining radio policy.

"I believe," he said, "that there are those in radio who have the experience and the ability and the patriotism to guide this industry and that radio as a privately operated competitive business will render a greater service than under government control."

The Independent Radio Network Affiliates Tuesday voted unanimously to fight the FCC monopoly order as "impairing services rendered to the public." Specific steps in the campaign were left to the officers of the organization.

Meanwhile, in Washington the FCC radio network order was a subject of study by the Department of Justice and material for controversy for columnists.

At the Department of Justice, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson said the report, which had been sent over by the FCC together with the record in the investigation, was being thoroughly studied. He refused to conjecture, however, whether it would lead to any anti-trust prosecutions.

A criticism of the report by David Lawrence, Washington columnist, that the Federal Communications Commission's new network regulations had been issued without public hearing was challenged by Chairman James L. Fly in a statement to Senator George W. Norris (Ind., Neb.).

The FCC chairman denied that the regulations had been adopted without hearings, pointing out that the matters covered were the subject of extended discussion and consideration during the lengthy hearings on which the report was based.

"I think the attention of the Senate and of the country should be called to the fact Mr. Lawrence devoted his whole column to an attack upon a Government report which he either had not read or fatally misconstrued," he said.

Mutual Restores ASCAP Music, May Quit NAB

The breach between Mutual and the older networks was further increased this week when Mutual signed a contract with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, thereby breaking the radio united front and so far as it was concerned ending the radio music war. Announcement of the Mutual-ASCAP peace was made on the eve of the opening of the National Association of Broadcasters' convention in St. Louis Tuesday morning.

With Mutual backing the FCC anti-monopoly report and negotiating a ten-year contract with ASCAP despite opposition from the other networks on both points, it was reported that Mutual radio stations might withdraw from the NAB. Previously Mutual executives have asserted that Neville Miller, president of the NAB, was acting more for NBC and CBS than for the whole NAB of which Mutual and many of its affiliates were members.

WOR, WGN, and the Don Lee Broadcasting System of California withdrew from the NAB on Tuesday. All three companies are stockholders in Mutual. Mr. McCosker, WOR president and chairman of Mutual, said in a letter to Mr. Miller, "It is entirely clear that your association is no longer representative of the entire industry and that you are taking a position in various matters adverse to our interests and in favor of those of others."

NBC and CBS, according to reports, had thought that the White House and the members of the FCC were not in agreement on questions of radio network operations because the FCC order was issued a short time after President Roosevelt had appointed Mark Ethridge, Louisville publisher and radio station operator, to make a survey of chain broadcasting. Mr. Ethridge, a former president of the NAB, never had time to conclude his survey and made no progress in bringing peace to the radio situation in Washington.

Mr. Ethridge on Tuesday evening announced that he would resign the post to which he was appointed by President Roosevelt on account of the FCC monopoly report. He said that he believed that it would be useless for him to continue his study in view of the action taken by the FCC and indicated that legal steps should be taken by the broadcasters to stay enforcement of the FCC order, or the fight carried to Congress and to the public.

Mutual's acceptance of an ASCAP contract came quickly on Monday, reversing a tentative decision made over the weekend to postpone action on the ASCAP pact until after the NAB convention which ended Thursday.

ASCAP music, off Mutual and the other major networks since January 1, 1940, was returned to the Mutual network on Tuesday evening. A special program, originating from New York and Hollywood, to herald the return of ASCAP music to the air will be presented Sunday over the Mutual network.

All seven Mutual stockholders voted to return ASCAP music to the air, the network reported. The action was taken as a result of a poll of Mutual affiliates which showed that 86 stations voted in favor of the action and 46 against.

Mr. Miller denied the Mutual assertion that "the music war is over," holding that the other networks and many stations, including Mutual affiliates have not made peace with ASCAP. "Even more important ASCAP has yet to offer a licensing plan which complies with the consent decree which ASCAP signed with the Government," Mr. Miller also said.

Edward Klauber, executive vice-president of CBS, said that that network would continue to negotiate with ASCAP for "better terms" than those secured by Mutual.

Speaking for NBC, Mr. Trammell, president, said that the network would wait until it could obtain "the best terms possible" from ASCAP.

However, ASCAP's board of directors adopted a resolution declaring that the contract with Mutual and with individual Mutual stations represent the minimum terms which will be accepted.

Sydney M. Kaye, executive vice-president and general counsel of BMI, announced Tuesday to the NAB convention a 33 1/3 percent cut in rates. The price cut will be retroactive and stations will receive refunds totalling $600,000 for the year ending April 1, 1942, it was said. BMI fees were lowered, it was reported, in an effort to deter other stations from signing with ASCAP. The new BMI rates will range from 1 percent to 1 2/3 percent of gross receipts of radio stations that use its music.

RKO Golf Tournament Plans Set for May 20

The annual golf tournament of RKO will be held May 20th at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y. Both the club's golf courses will be used for the affair. George Schaefer, president of the company, heads the tournament committee, which includes New Depinet, Phil Reisman, Gordon Youngman, L. E. Thompson, R. C. Patterson, Malcolm Kingsberg, J. Henry Walters, Leon Goldberg and J. Miller Walker.

A feature will be a telegraphic match between the RKO Studio and the East, with eight on each team.

Other committees are: Publicity, S. Barret McCormick, Rutgers Neilson, Harry Mandel, Jack Level, Ben Grimm, Maurice Harris and Al Adams; prizes, Dick Gavin, David Canavan, A. J. Kirwan, L. E. Gaudreau; prize award, J. Henry Walters, John Farmer, Dick Gavin, Charles McDonald, Tom O'Connor, Harry Mosley and William Kernan.

New Jersey Allied Prepares For Atlantic City Meet

The New Jersey Allied will hold its 22nd annual convention June 11th through 13th, at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, Atlantic City. A feature of the convention will be a testimonial banquet to the unit president, Lee Newbury. Officers and assertedly large delegations from other Allied units are expected, as also are officers of the national organization. The program, tentatively, is as follows:

On the first day, Wednesday, there will be a general meeting. That night, a night club party at the Nomad Club. Other days will be filled with events, business sessions, reports, and items for the women who accompany the exhibitors.

Interchange of information with exhibitors from other sections of the state, and the country, will be one of the most valuable features of the convention, the officers said, in a special invitational bulletin.

Representatives of the distributors are expected to attend, and perhaps to talk, the unit having invited the general sales managers of all the majors.

On Friday, June 13th, there will be an election of officers and directors.

Lou Gold, Irving Dollinger, and Harry Lowenstein comprise the convention committee.

The organization is to hold an all-day session at the Hotel Cadillac, Newark, next Tuesday, with Mr. Newbury presiding.

Dr. William Davenport Dead

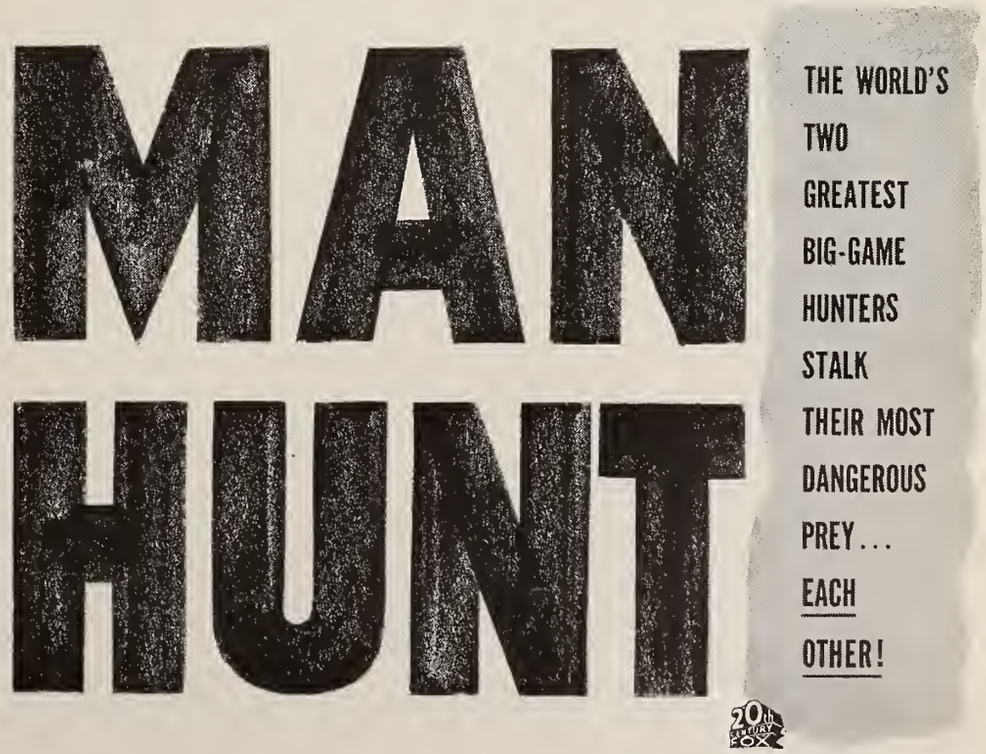
Dr. William Davenport, actor in early movies, died May 11th at Philadelphia General Hospital. He was 74 years of age. Dr. Davenport was associated with the Edison, Lubin and Biograph companies in early cinema days. He later became a Shakespearean actor and in recent years turned to radio dramatics. His wife, a son and a daughter survive.

Waxman Sets Up Offices

A. P. Waxman, formerly connected with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, has established offices for a new public relations bureau in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York.

'Major Barbara' Opens in N. Y.

World premieres are returning to the bigger cities, after a spell in the hinterlands. For the second time within a short period, another "big" film of a major company opened: United Artists' British-made release, "Major Barbara," at the Astor Theatre, New York, traditional home of road show attractions. The first film of note was RKO's "Citizen Kane," which opened two weeks ago at the Palace Theatre, same city, amid a fandango of publicity.



The "Major Barbara" opening occurred Tuesday night, with a celebrity audience and the usual lighting display, the proceeds being given to the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund.

Among those invited to attend were: Gov. Herbert Lehman, Edwin L. Weisl, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, Alfred E. Smith, Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, Solicitor General Henry E. Epstein, Nicholas M. Schenck, T. J. Connors, Margaret Case, Arthur W. Kelly, Harry Gold, Haskell M. Masters, C. C. Moskowitz, J. R. Vogel, Ben Joel, Eugene Picker, Joseph Bernhard, Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Leonard Schlesinger, Malcolm Kingsberg, Fred Meyers, Max Fellerman, E. C. Grainger, Jack Shea, Leonard Goldenson, Sam Dembow, Leon Netter, Walter Vincent, W. G. Van Schmus, Gus Eyssell, George Skouras, John Benas, John Nolan, Sam Rinzler, Louis Frisch, William Brandt, Harry Brandt, Fred Schwartz, Si Fabian and Walter Reade.

MGM's "Gone With the Wind" this week played simultaneously at five Milwaukee theatres, the Oriental, Uptown, Tower, Garfield, and Modjeska.

Monogram held a special preview Tuesday of its "Roar of the Press" for wives of New York newspapermen, in New York.

Playing on a roadshow basis, Walt Disney's "Fantasia" has, through RKO, received four additional dates, at the Strand, Milwaukee, and at the Capitol, Richmond, Virginia, May 28th; at the Majestic, Tulsa, Oklahoma, May 29th; and at the State, Oklahoma City, June 6th.

MPTOA SETS FORUM FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION; STATE UNITS CALLED

Exhibitor-Members to Report on and Discuss Trade Practices at Los Angeles Meeting, June 9; State Units Announce Plans

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week disclosed its program intentions and committees for the annual convention, which will be held this year at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, June 9th through 12th. It announced a round table forum, to be participated in by numerous prominent exhibitors, and a feature of which will be reports by them and others of business conditions and exhibition practices in their sections of the country, so that those attending the convention will be able to take notes and exchange views, to further their operations. The MPTOA statement, over the signature of the president, Edward L. Kuykendall, asserted the forum will be the first of its kind ever attempted by a national organization at a national convention.

Meanwhile, other exhibitor organizations continue to meet, and to plan meetings. The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas ended a two-day convention Monday in Little Rock, that state; the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina are preparing for their annual summer convention June 29th through July 1st, at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina; the New Jersey Allied will convene for the 22nd time June 11th through the 13th, at Atlantic City, honoring its president, Lee Newbury; the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners will convene in Los Angeles June 8th through 12th, and play host to the MPTOA convention there; there will be a regional meeting June 4th, at Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, of the Independent Theatre Owners Protective Association of Wisconsin and upper Michigan, and of Northwest Allied; and the Connecticut Allied, electing officers Monday in New Haven, and discussing proposed Federal taxes, chose Irving Jacocks, Jr., president.

Set MPTOA Meet Plans; To Hold Special Forum

Apart from the anticipated discussion of current industry problems—the decree, Hollywood production, selling in the field, arbitration, clearance, and the like—an announced "big feature" of the forthcoming convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Los Angeles, June 9th through 12th, will be a round table forum for "concise reports and addresses by the MPTOA leaders and leading exhibitors, on what goes on in their own section of the country."

The current MPTOA bulletin notes that the idea "has never before been attempted at a national convention."

The convention will be at the Ambassador Hotel, and approximately 1,000 are expected.

The round table forum is expected to cover the following items most pertinent to the practice of exhibition: taxes, legislation, sales policies, contract terms, buying problems, building and safety regulations, non-theatricals, radio competition, use of games, give-aways, premiums, screen advertising, cut-rate admissions, double features, road shows, drive-in theatres, clearance and run problems, overbuying to deprive a competitor of pictures, music tax legislation, national defense activities, cooperation with civic organizations, schools and clubs, cooperative advertising, overbuilding, modernization of theatres, night baseball, dog racing, daylight saving time.

Participating in this forum will be Charles H. Arrington of Rocky Mount, N. C.; R. R. Biechele of Kansas City; Max A. Cohen of New York; E. M. Fay of Providence; L. C. Griffith of Oklahoma City; H. V. Harvey of San Francisco; A. C. Hayman of Buffalo; S. J. Hyman of Huntington, W. Va.; J. M. Hone of Seattle; O. C. Lam of Rome, Ga.; Arthur H. Lockwood of Boston; Morris Loewenstein of Oklahoma City; Sidney B. Lust of Washington, D. C.; Morris Leonard of Chicago; M. C. Moore of Jacksonville, Fla.; Samuel Pinanski of Boston; Benjamin Pitts of Fredericksburg, Va.; Lewen Pizor of Philadelphia; Roy L. Walker of Lampasas, Tex.; Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis, Mo., and R. X. Williams, Jr., of Oxford, Miss.

Guest speakers expected are Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount studio head, and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association; Walter Wanger, producer, and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences; Frank Capra, president of the Screen Directors Guild; Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild; Sheridan Gibney, president of the Screen Writers Guild; and others of prominence, notably from the distribution companies, and from political life.

Committees for the convention have been appointed. They follow:

Credentials and Rules: E. M. Fay (Chairman), Morris G. Leonard, S. J. Hyman, J. R. Denniston.

Resolutions: Herman M. Levy (Chairman), Morris Loewenstein, Charles H. Arrington, W. F. Ruffin.

Film Buying Problems and Operating Policies: Arthur H. Lockwood (Chairman), O. C. Lam, L. O. Lukan, Harold B. Robb, James C. Shanklin.

Conciliation and Arbitration: A. C. Hayman (Chairman), George P. Aarons, William G. Ripley, Benjamin Pitts.

Public Relations and Community Affairs: Mitchell Wolfson (Chairman), H. V. Harvey, Sidney B. Lust, M. A. Lightman.

Legislation and Taxation: Roy L. Walker (Chairman), Walter Vincent, Joseph H. Brennan, Nat M. Williams.

Music Tax and Copyright: J. M. Hone (Chairman), A. J. Brylawski, Irving C. Jacocks, M. S. McCord.

National Defense Activities: Lewen Pizor (Chairman), Ben Levin, Max A. Cohen, M. C. Moore.

Labor Relations: Fred Wehrenberg (Chairman), L. C. Griffith, Fred Meyn, R. A. McNeill.

Radio and Non-Theatrical Competition: R. R. Biechele (Chairman), R. X. Williams, Jr., George Nasser, Louis H. Ansell.

Committee chairmen for the convention of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, June 8th through 12th, Los Angeles, are E. S. Calvie, hotel committee; Herman Lewis, transportation committee; Jack Berman, special events committee; Jenne Dodge, ladies' committee. Sub-chairwomen will be Mrs. Alice Johnson, Mrs. William Graper, Jr., and Mrs. Vera Hardy. Mrs. R. D. Whitson is on the reception committee. On the convention committee are Rotus Harvey, Robert Poole, Hugh Bruen, and Mr. Berman. Mr. Poole is executive secretary of the organization.

The unit will be hosts to the MPTOA convention, which is to be held in the same city at the same time.

EXHIBITOR URGES MORE CHILD STARS

With the decrease of child patronage in the Pittsburgh territory, John J. Walsh, Jr., of Shea's Fulton theatre, has urged the motion picture companies to uncover some good child actors to attract the younger audience of today who will be tomorrow's adult moviegoers.

"We formerly had a lot of kids' business. Now it's dropped off. We'd better get busy and find some good child stars," Mr. Walsh said. "Where are today's Temples, Durbins, Bartholomews, Coogans, Coopers? We can use them plenty," he opined.

Arkansas ITO Ends Two-Day Convention

The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas on Monday concluded its two-day convention in the Hotel Marion, Little Rock. There was a banquet that evening, with Lieutenant Governor Robert Bailey as guest speaker.

Mr. Bailey urged exhibitors to show films aiding national defense. He praised newsreels, in this connection.

Another guest speaker, Henderson M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for MGM, credited Adolf Hitler, leader of the Germans, for improving American motion pictures. This was done because of the consequent demand, after Hitler's actions, for entertainment from American films which would take the public mind away from crises.

Mr. Richey also asked for increased showmanship by exhibitors, to offset exhibition's competitors, baseball, radio, and the like. He remarked that he believed the films were being "out-ballyhooed" by these mediums.

Other speakers were O. G. Wren, retiring president; K. K. King, retiring secretary; R. X. Williams, of Oxford, Miss., president of Tri-States Theatre Owners Association; B. Bishop, Kansas City district manager of Loew's.

Officers elected were: W. E. Malin, president; C. C. Mundo, vice-president, and Louis Haven, Jr., secretary.

Jacocks Elected In Connecticut

New officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut are: Irving Jacocks, Jr., president; Adolph Johnson and Max Tabackman, vice-presidents; Herman Levy, executive secretary; George Wilkinson, Jr., treasurer. Directors are the officers, Hy Fine, Arthur Lockwood (whom Mr. Jacocks succeeded), Al Robbins, Peter Perakos, Samuel Rosen, B. E. Hoffman, Harry Shaw, Irwin Wheeler, Edwin Raffile, and Lou Schaefer.

The elections were held Monday at New Haven.

At the election meeting, Mr. Levy reviewed proposals for Federal taxes on admissions, warning that such taxes may be expected shortly; and that, therefore, exhibitors should wait before buying tickets.

In the same city last week, approximately 30 exhibitors gathered at an informal luncheon in the Hotel Taft, with Henderson M. Richey, MGM's director of exhibitor relations, who outlined for them the methods by which exhibitors in other sections are meeting problems.

Testimonials for Weiner, Korson Gins and Shaw

More than 2,000 exhibitors and representatives of the motion picture industry in Pittsburgh attended the "Double Feature" testimonial dinner at the Urban Room of the William Penn Hotel, Monday night.

The event, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Variety Club and a group of showmen in the territory honored Abe Weiner, recently promoted from United Artists branch manager in that city to head of the company's Boston office, and Joe Gins, elevated from city salesman for Columbia in Pittsburgh to the branch managership of the organization's Charlotte office.

Art Levy, Columbia's branch manager in that district, and Mark Goldman, branch manager for Monogram, were co-chairman of the affair, with "Rosy" Roswell, radio announcer and sports commentator, toastmaster.

In New Haven, Conn., friends and industry associates plan a testimonial luncheon in honor of Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, next Monday, May 19th, at Cerini's. Mr. Shaw at that time will celebrate his seventh anniversary in his present position.

Chairman of the event is Herman M. Levy, assisted by Samuel Seletsky, treasurer, Arthur H. Lockwood, Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., Samuel Rosen, Lou Schaefer, J. B. Fishman, Lawrence C. Caplan, Daniel Pouzzner, Maurice Bailey, Joseph F. Reed, Morris Nunes, Daniel Finn, Adolph G. Johnson, George Wilkinson, Jr., Lou Brown, Ben Simon, Edward Ruff, Morey Goldstein, Tim O'Toole, Roger Mahan, Lou Wechsler, Barney Pitkin, Ben Lourie, Nat Furst, John Pavone, Max Tabackman, Abe Mattes and Michael Tomasino.

The Philadelphia Variety Club has set May 26th as the date for the testimonial luncheon to be tendered Louis "Pop" Korson who leaves the next day to spend his retirement in California. The luncheon will be held at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Mr. Korson is one of the oldest men in the Philadelphia motion picture industry from the point of years and service, starting as an exhibitor 35 years ago. Until his retirement last Fall, he owned Masterpiece Film Attractions, Inc., an independent film exchange.

H. A. Doman, formerly manager of the Harris Jeanette theatre in Pittsburgh, was guest of honor at a luncheon of the Harris Amusement Co., prior to leaving for a theatre in Winchester, Va.

Southern Theatres Raise $14,917 to Aid Greeks

Through the efforts of theatres in the Atlanta and Charlotte exhibitor territories $14,917.41 has been raised for the Greek War Relief Fund. The Atlanta territory is all of Georgia, Florida and parts of Alabama and Tennessee. The theatres in that section collected $9,317.78.

The Miller theatre in Augusta, Ga., a Lucas and Jenkins house, collected the largest amount in the territories, $1,082.97. Frank J. Miller, exhibitor and a partner in the Augusta operations, and Roy M. Avery, branch manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, were co-chairmen of the drive in the Atlanta territory, while both the Atlanta and Charlotte territories were under the direction of Wm. K. Jenkins, of the Lucas and Jenkins circuit.

Shearer Changes Announced

Hugh Bruen, independent theatre executive operating theatres in Seattle and Whittier, Cal., is now associated with Ben Shearer in the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company. Roy Peacock, manager of the Seattle office branch of the Shearer company, has been transferred to take charge of the Los Angeles branch store replacing Frank Harris who has been granted an extended leave of absence. The firm's recently opened Spokane branch has been closed and the Eastern Washington territory will be handled by the Seattle office. E. R. Bechtol, former manager in Spokane, returns to the Seattle office.

Loew Personnel Changes

Joseph H. Vogel, of Loew's, has announced the following promotions and transfers: Carl Rogers, formerly assistant manager of Loew's theatre, Harrisburg, becomes manager of the Granada in Cleveland, replacing John Newkirk, resigned, George Loukides, assistant Loew's-Poli, Waterbury, Conn., replaces Mr. Rogers in Harrisburg. Sid Voletsky, student assistant at the Majestic theatre in Bridgeport, becomes assistant in Waterbury.

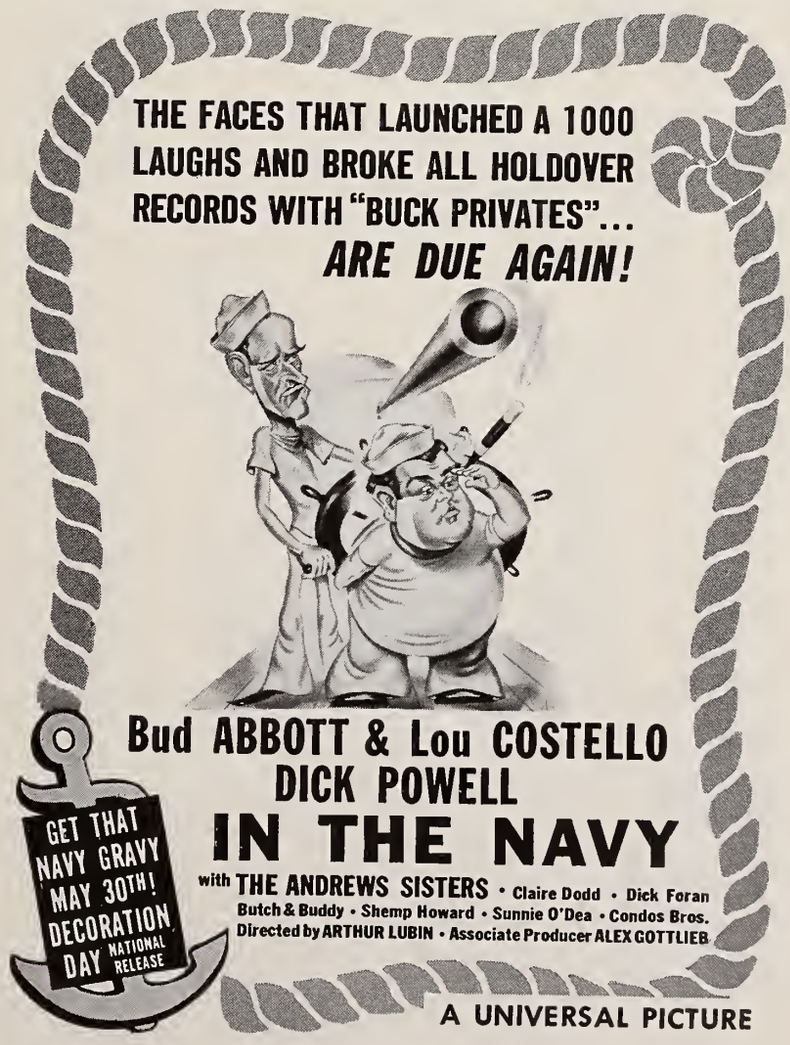
Plans Teaching Films

Ray W. Springer, president of Springer Pictures, Inc., in New York, has announced that John Obold, of the mechanical design and script department, has left for the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Fla., to work on the preparation of a series of teaching films on aerial navigation.

Warners Reorganizes Publicity, Ad Staffs

Following conferences with Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity in the east, on Tuesday, announced a realignment in the home office advertising and publicity department to take effect immediately.

Gil Golden will be in charge of all consumer advertising. Paul Lazarus, Jr., has been given new duties which will include trade paper advertising and trade promotion. Sid Rechetnik has been promoted to press book editor and exhibitor service.



Lee Blumberg has been promoted to take charge of field exploitation department. Don Gillette, formerly editor of Film Daily, joins the department as trade paper contact and editor of the house organ. Morton Gerber has been promoted to head of the Vitaphone short subjects publicity department.

Ziehm Distributes Animal Films

Arthur Ziehm, Ind., has taken over the entire world distribution rights to four Rin Tin Tin Jr., features from Metropolitan Pictures and will release them through his national franchise holders. The first release, "The Law of the Wolf," is now ready.

Simon Replaces Werner

Leo Simon, of San Diego, Cal., has joined the publicity and advertising staff of the Clay and Larkin theatres in San Francisco, replacing Willis Werner, who resigned.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—Very poor business on this one. We figured it for a good bet, but not so here. Many of my patrons said they thought the Charles Starrett westerns had it way over this super-epic and that they would rather see one of them, and so would I. Running time, 120 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

BLONDIE GOES LATIN: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Good business on this one on Bank Night. The two before this we played on Sunday. Not up to par was our opinion on this, although it had more elements of entertainment in it than the others. Running time, 68 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

MAN FROM SUNDOWN, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Very good. Our farm lads gave it a nice hand. Many stayed for both shows, which meant more tobacco juice on the floors. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MILITARY ACADEMY: Tommy Kelly, Bobby Jordan—This was strictly a boy's picture but we take all kinds and whenever we have one that is a let-down from the real good ones, we accept it and look forward to the next coming attraction. Running time, 66 minutes. Played April 26-27.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—
What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

OUTLAWS OF THE PANHANDLE: Charles Starrett, Frances Robinson, Sons of the Pioneers—Fair western. "Sons of the Pioneers" hold this series up. All this series too much alike. Background and musical score would help these a lot. Running time, 59 minutes. Played April 24-26.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

WILDCAT OF TUCSON, THE: Bill Elliott, Evelyn Young—The best of the series so far. My patrons went for it in a big way. Running time, 60 minutes. —A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Ronald Reagan—Not a Sunday picture as I was lead to believe. Should be played on Friday-Saturday, if played at all. The only comment I heard was from the patrons who told me that they didnt enjoy this at all. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr, Felix Gressart, Eve Arden—The Metro Lion and the Russian Bear meet, and, as usual, it is the innocent bystander, played by the exhibitor, who gets hurt. This and "Wild Man of Borneo" tie for honors as the worst feature ever filmed. Clark Gable does his best but he can't put over the show with two such handicaps as Hedy Lamarr and Felix Bressart. Eve Arden should have been cast in the leading role instead of Hedy Lamarr, who is very, very poor. And where did they dig up Felix Bressart? He would ruin the best picture. This has nothing to recommend it. The last sequence of the army tanks would make a very good one reel short and that is all the entertainment there is. It did not please anyone. If you have it on your contract, better close up and go fishing. That is what I should have done. No one is interested in Russia. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 25-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

EDISON, THE MAN: Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart—An excellent portrayal of the life of this great inventor. This was a follow-up of the picture "'Young Tom Edison" and it was well received here. Running time, 107 minutes. Played April 5-6.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

FLIGHT COMMAND: Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon, Marsha Hunt—A grand picture, thrilling, timely and educational, especially to dust bowl dwellers who know little about big ships. Robert Taylor made his usual hit with the ladies; he is not so popular with the men but Ruth Hussey was liked by everyone. She is very, very good. An excellent cast with not a poor number. I have only one criticism. We would have enjoyed a bigger role by Marsha Hunt. That little Southern girl, at least her accent is southern, is tops. I ran this one too late to mean anything at the box office but it pleased. Running time, 112 minutes. Played May 2-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT COMMAND: Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon—If there had never been another flying picture, this one would be a sensation. It is about as good as any previous one, but it seems that all airplane pictures just have to be too much alike to hold the interest of audiences. Running time, 115 minutes. Played April 26-28.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

FREE AND EASY: Robert Cummings, Ruth Hussey, Judith Anderson—Pretty poor stuff from MGM. I didn't take in film rental. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GO WEST: Marx Brothers—I have neglected making reports for some time. Business no good and it becomes difficult to tell a good picture from a bad one when none of them do any business. This one did fairly well, though one would think it too "screwy" for adult minds. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 18-19.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theater, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

KEEPING COMPANY: Frank Morgan, Ann Rutherford, John Shelton—We passed this one and then picked it up. Would advise all who have passed it to play it as it's plenty good. Received many nice comments and business was good on a bargain night. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

Paramount

DOOMED CARAVAN: William Boyd, Russell Hay-

den, Andy Clyde—Fair western. Fair business. Good photography. The "Hopalongs," as a rule, are pretty dependable for satisfying my action patrons. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—We anticipated extra business on this one but find Lamour not so popular. Lowest gross in many months.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

DARK COMMAND: Claire Trevor, John Wayne—Repeated this to good business. This was really a fine picture from all angles. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 29-30.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna, Susan Hayworth—Good picture and good business. Will please any day in the week. Play it quick. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 4-5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee—One of the best Autry pictures we have ever played and in my opinion Mary Lee stole the show. She is a marvelous singer. Here's hoping we see more of her. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 17-19.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

WYOMING WILDCAT: Don "Red" Barry, Julie Duncan—Very good western. Republic has the knack for westerns. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 1-3.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

GIRL, A GUY AND A GOB, A: Lucille Ball, George Murphy, Edmond O'Brien—Originally we had this booked on a double-feature program. Then all the critics gave it such a good write-up that we moved it to Easter Sunday, where it did O.K. It's a screwball comedy that had them in one continuous uproar. We liked it here. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, James Craig—We played this one late to fair business. I believe it was enjoyed by practically all who saw it. If Ginger Rogers received the Academy Award for her part in this one, then I say that one award committee never saw Joan Fontaine in "Rebecca." Running time, 107 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—Jean Hersholt plays his part so well that you can truly transpose yourself right back to your hometown. Dorothy Lovett portrays more romance than the usual nurse in a doctor's office but one overlooks this point because she does her part so well. The entire picture went over very well here. Played with RKO Pathe newsreel and RKO musical "Cupid Rides the Range." Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 12-13.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH: Carole Lombard, Robert Montgomery, Gene Raymond—Very well received to good business. Didn't hear any kicks but did hear several nice comments on this. I believe this was about the best thing that Lombard has made in the last several years. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

YOU'LL FIND OUT: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Dennis O'Keefe, Helen Parrish—We found out all right that Kay Kyser is the answer to our box office for extra business. Did only fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHAD HANNA: Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Linda Darnell, Jane Darwell, Guy Kibbee—This one just missed being "colossal" by about a hundred years. Period pictures do not go over too well but this is excellent just the same. Color is beautiful, Henry Fonda excellent, Dorothy Lamour is good while Jane Darwell, as the fat lady, is a riot. Guy Kibbee furnished plenty of laughs. Patrons expected a little more circus and were disappointed that the trapeze performers did not do their stuff. It is a satisfactory feature that I think could have been better. Played 18-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Thetare, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOUR SONS: Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Mary Beth Hughes—A wonderful show in every respect. A good story well acted. Eugene Leontovich stars in this and I hope we see more of her. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 7-8.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

GOLDEN HOOFS: Jane Withers, Charles Rogers—Without a doubt the poorest picture Jane Withers ever got mixed up in. Business off the second night and with very good reason. Should be double featured. In all fairness I should say that three of my patrons said they enjoyed this one. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Virginia Gilmore, Milton Berle—Very well received and properly so. How can a company like Fox put a crow like "Golden Hoofs" in the same allocation as this one and keep doing business with the exhibitors is beyond me. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

United Artists

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Robert Benchley—A great show that should play everywhere. It is packed full of thrills with plenty of excitement. Running time, 120 minutes. Played March 14-16.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

Universal

MAN WHO LOST HIMSELF, THE: Brian Aherne, Kay Francis—Pretty fair picture. Good business. Could have stood a little action between laughs. Running time, 73 minutes. Played April 27-28.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MARGIE: Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Mischa Auer, Allen Jenkins, Edgar Kennedy—Everybody liked this one. Business very good. Played with a Charles Starrett western to satisfactory week-end business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MEET THE CHUMP: Hugh Herbert, Anna Neagle—Right in the groove for small town audiences when doubled with a western. Laughs and laughing situations closely knit. You can't go wrong on Hugh! Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 1-3.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MODEL WIFE: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Charles Ruggles—Here is as nice a little domestic comedy feature as had been made for some time. Capacity audiences laughed loud and long. Universal should make more of these instead of Durbin's, etc. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 4-5.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

SIX LESSONS FROM MADAME LA ZONGA: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—Screwy but it sure gets the laughs and that is one of the easiest ways to please big crowds. Running time, 61 minutes. Played April 24-26.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

MY LOVE CAME BACK: Olivia de Havilland, Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman, Charles Winninger—"Swinging Classics" should have been the title of this one. A real live picture that chased away the blues very well. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 19-20.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

SEA WOLF, THE: Edward G. Robinson, John Garfield, Ida Lupino—Good picture and good business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING: No. 3—Believe it took O.K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JUNIOR I. Q. PARADE: Quiz Reels—Seen better. Something different.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

MRS. LADYBUG: Technicolor Cartoons—The best one for a long time and the color is superb. Beautiful as well as amusing.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PROSPECTING BEAR, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—Good colored cartoon.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre. Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

in the next issue of BETTER THEATRES

John J. Sefing will detail his recommendations for treatment of the projection ports to assure maximum protection of the auditorium against both fire and projection room noise.

¶ In every issue of BETTER THEATRES, John J. Sefing's "Ways & Means" offer practical, plainly-stated advice on theatre equipment installation and operating practice to get the most out of it, its maintenance, the structures and plans affecting its efficiency. A graduate engineer, he speaks from long experience in many departments of the physical theatre. Mr. Sefing received his degree in mechanical engineering from Penn State University, later taking courses in architectural and mechanical drafting at Columbia, and in radio and sound and electricity. He first entered the automotive field as specifications draftsman, but soon transferred to the theatre business, in which, for the past twelve years, he has been handling construction and remodeling, projection and sound layouts, specification writing and estimating, and "trouble-shooting" concerning all types of equipment.

¶ Mr. Sefing accompanies his description of effective methods of arranging projection port fire shutters, and of sound-proofing these ports, with both schematic and working drawings.

IN COURTS

Davis, Kaufman Motions Denied

Judge Robert N. Pollard in the federal court in Philadelphia on Wednesday, May 7th, denied motions for bills of particulars by counsel for retired U. S. Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, attorney, in connection with their indictments evolving from the bankruptcy case of William Fox, former motion picture executive. Mr. Fox was also indicted but entered an immediate plea of guilty to charges of obstructing justice and conspiracy to defraud the Government. All three are scheduled to go on trial May 19th.

The motion was overruled by Judge Pollard, especially assigned in the case, after the Government characterized the strategy as a fishing expedition to discover "just how much the Government knows." William A. Gray, arguing for the defense, insisted the motion had been filed in good faith and asserted the indictments "were vague and impossible to answer." Mr. Gray pointed particularly to averments dealing with the payment of money at certain times and places, saying that it left the defense "totally and absolutely in the dark" as to when and where they occurred.

"I am of the opinion that all demands for a bill of particulars are without merit," Judge Pollard said at the conclusion of argument in the United States district court. "The motions are overruled.

"I will say, however, I will be here on May 19th prepared to sit as long as necessary to give the defendants a full and fair trial, and if at any stage it appears as though defense counsel are taken by surprise by any of the Government testimony, the trial will be delayed long enough to give them time to meet such evidence."

Earl Jay Gratz, counsel for Mr. Kaufman, presented George Z. Medalie, former United State Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and said he would be associated with him in the case.

Robbins, Casanave Motion Decided

In a unanimous decision from the bench on Friday, May 9th, the appellate division of the New York supreme court vacated the stay of arbitration proceedings involving the contract of Charles Casanave with National Screen Accessories. Herman Robbins, National Screen president, had sought arbitration to terminate Mr. Casanave's employment contract with the company. The arbitration stay had been vacated about a week ago, and Friday's decision upheld that decision, after argument on Mr. Casanave's motion to reargue the decision. On Monday, the appellate division of the supreme court unanimously affirmed the decision of Justice Mortimer B. Patterson, holding that Mr. Casanave has the right to trial of his suit in the Westchester County Court.

Arbitration To Settle Pizor and Segall Case

The legal differences between Lewen Pizor and Charles Segall, Philadelphia motion picture exhibitors and partners in operating the Ace, Chelten, Appollo and Tioga theatres in that city, will be settled out of court by a private arbitrator, it was reported this week. Both men last month filed suit and countersuit in the Philadelphia common pleas court, each seeking to enjoin the other in the operation of the theatres, and asking the court to declare a receivership to liquidate their theatre corporation.

Circuit Suit Settled

A compromise settlement of litigation over affairs of the National Theatre Syndicate, operating a circuit in the northern and central sections of California, has been approved by the superior court in San Francisco. The compromise provides that title to the State theatre in Marysville be transferred to the syndicate; that the estate of Morgan A. Walsh pay more than $20,000 to the credit of the stockholders, along with counsel fees of similar amounts. The litigation lasted three years.

OBITUARIES

Cissy Fitzgerald Dies in England

Mrs. Cissy Tucker, famous in New York and the United States during the Nineties as Cissy Fitzgerald, died in Ovingdean, England, Saturday, May 10th. Her age was not given. As Miss Fitzgerald, musical comedy star, she was claimed to have been among the first women in the motion picture business. During the silent days she appeared in many two-reel comedies as "The Girl With the Wink." Until seven years ago she had appeared in feature pictures, one of her last being with Ronald Colman in "The Masquerader."

After scoring many successes on the Broadway musical comedy stage, she went to Hollywood and appeared in silent and sound pictures. Among the talking pictures Miss Fitzgerald appeared in were "Vanity's Price," "I'll Show You the Town," an adaptation of the novel by Elmer Davis; "If Marriage Fails," "Matinee Ladies," "Two Flaming Youths," "Ladies of the Night" and "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Peggy Shannon, Stage And Film Actress, Dead

Peggy Shannon, screen actress and former Ziegfeld girl, was found dead in Hollywood on Sunday, May 11th. She was 31 years old.

Miss Shannon entered the theatre in 1924 as a result of a press agent's stunt. She was visiting New York and was asked to pose for a publicity picture with Florenz Ziegfeld and was signed for the Follies chorus two days later. In 1931 she signed a contract with Paramount. A few days later, Miss Shannon was rushed to the set of "The Secret Call," starring Clara Bow and Richard Arlen, when Miss Bow was taken ill. She remained in a starring position in the years following. During her film career she appeared in "The Road to Reno," "The Adventures of Jane Arden," "Youth on Parole," "Turn Back the Clock," "Hotel Continental," "The Reckless Age," and, most recently, "Cafe Hostess."

Mary Lawson

Mary Lawson, British stage and film actress, and her producer husband, F. W. L. C. Beaumont, were killed in an air-raid on Liverpool, England, it was reported in an Associated Press dispatch, May 9th.

Miss Lawson, who was 30 years old, began her stage career at the age of seven. In 1933 she entered motion pictures and from that time until her death remained a British film star.

J. C. Bradford

James Charles Bradford, owner of one of the largest libraries of filmed music in existence and considered to be the best in the film music field, died at his home in New York, Sunday, May 11th. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Bradford during the silent film days supplied much of the musical accompaniments for films. In 1926 he began the study of music and sound synchronization with talking pictures and since that time had been in constant demand by all studios.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

TWO GOOD ANSWERS

Trade discussion lately has been pointed at the falling-off in grosses. The reasons, as always, are many. Before dwelling upon whys and whereofs, it may be well to turn the spot upon the handling of two pictures in two removed situations which led to long-run engagements not exactly hoped for originally when the pictures were booked.

In Cincinnati, for instance, we give you "Strawberry Blonde" at the RKO Palace where zone ad head, Dinny Dinerman, with the aid of Warner Brothers' Bill Blumberg, fashioned a campaign in keeping with the acknowledged strength of the picture. First-week business was so encouraging that more, much more, space than the usual was decided upon for the holdover. "The business did not fall off, so we kept the advertising up to higher than normal," writes Dinny, "using gag ads to keep it going."

Well, the answer is that the picture ran for seven weeks downtown, the longest run since the fabulous "Gone With the Wind". Dinerman thinks this about it all:

"Part of the success of the holdover should be attributed to the fact that we seldom used extra space to hypo a second, third or fourth week. The unusual nature of continued strength in continued large space (comparatively) must certainly have had its psychological success.

"I do think that holdover shows should be hit hard and heavy rather than taper off to save the ad budget, because a holdover is one which has proven its merit and constant hammering at that point should be conducive to continued business."

The second instance comes from Providence, at the Albee, another RKO situation, it may be added. Here George French, manager, and Bill Morton, publicist, got behind "Kitty Foyle" for an aggressive opening shot without any defined idea of how long the date would run. But the picture also proved hot stuff in the first week, so much so that the theatremen voted to advertise as strongly for the holdover and not taper off in the accepted manner. Extra space was taken in the suburban press and the selling area otherwise extended by increased radio time and continued car card advertising. Other avenues of advertising were pursued with the same attention and enthusiasm as accompany the advance of a first-week date.

The answer: "Kitty Foyle" ran six weeks and, surprisingly enough, the extra ad expense over normal for the run came to less than 2 per cent.

Returns on the date now commit French and Morton to a policy wherein all attractions, strong or otherwise, will be sold 100 per cent. They expect that consistent, all-over, hard hammering will take them off the nut on the weak sisters, will make more money on the good ones. The necessary increase in advertising expense to make this possible has been proven negligible in proportion to the definite increase in grosses that result.

As we started out to say, there are reasons upon reasons why business is off when it should not be. Might it be that one of the reasons, and hardly the least important, is that theatremen are too habituated in tightening up on the sockeroo when the command should be:

"Full speed ahead and damn the torpedoes."

BUILDING CIVIC POSITION

Widely observed is the custom of "Senior Day" during May, wherein graduating high school classes celebrate "school's out" with group festivities in some nearby city. Last week's issue told how Round Tablers Kempke and Redmond tied in this activity at Fairbury, Neb., with the Chamber of Commerce. As a result, many of the school groups are being brought to town and, having extra funds to spend, are benefiting merchants as well as the theatre. Similarly reported is a like campaign by Harold H. Thomas, Malco city manager, in Fulton, Ky., and attaining like results.

The theatre's prestige depends upon how wisely box-office activities are guided to embrace the widest community horizon. Here again is illustrated another of the countless promotions conceived by theatremen that take on civic proportions.

Results in the RKO Radio - Little Men exploitation contest, set down on a following page, disclose that a much larger than comfortable majority of the prizes, big and small, were taken down by Round Tablers. It usually happens so in these distributor promotional contests. That it happens so consistently is something more than a coincidence—a something we are highly pleased to clarion.

Seven by seven foot animated display was constructed by Sol Getzow for "Night at Earl Carroll's" at the Ogontz, Philadelphia. Cutout girl figures revolved on turntable set against rich red drop.

Special front was created by Frank LaFalce, Warner zone ad head, and Charles Grimes, manager, to sell the double horror show at the Metropolitan, in Washington. Chill copy was featured with the scene stills.

Typical of the eye-arresting lobby displays created by the metropolitan Loewmen to sell the circuit's "Spring Festival", is the one above constructed by Manager Len Grotte at the Prospect, in Brooklyn. Highlight in this instance was compo house, which featured cutout of Hedy Lamarr standing in doorway as advance on "Come Live With Me".

Round Table In Pictures

Week ahead of opening of "So Ends Our Night" at the Tower Theatre, in Dallas, Manager Charlie Meeker, Jr., planted couple in lobby ostensibly reading copy of the book. Tieup card above carried explanatory copy.

Reported by A. B. Morrison at the Warner, Memphis, is the mechanical man bally used ahead of "Man Made Monster". Animation was supplied by blinking eyes. To Earl Davenport, artist, and Gene Dearth go credit for its creation, while Jimmie Barnes was the chief "animator".

Announce Winners In RKO Contest

Winners in the recently concluded RKO Radio-Borden's "Little Men" exploitation contest announced by S. Barret McCormick, the main prizes awarded were as follows:

First run theatres, towns over 100,000: First, Roy Robbins, Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia; second, Ken Grimes, Warner, Erie, Pa.; third, Gene Curtis, Paramount, Syracuse, N. Y. Subsequent run theatres in the same classification: First, Lige Brien, Belmar, Pittsburgh, Pa.; second, John Heflinger, Lafayette, St. Louis, Mo.

Cities 25,000 to 100,000: First, Robert Sidman, Senate, Harrisburg, Pa.; second, Mel Blieden, Forsythe, East Chicago, Ind.; third, Leo Haney, Bucklen, Elkhart, Ind. Subsequent runs in the same classification: First, Harry Goldstein, Morton, Dorchester, Mass.; second, Pearce Parkhurst, Alhambra, Torrington, Conn.; third, O. A. B. Hilton, Park, Sioux City, Ia.

Cities under 25,000: First, Murray Ross, Capitol, Whiting, Ind.; second, R. H. V. Booth, New Family, Batavia, N. Y.; third, S. L. Morris, Palace, Lockport, N. Y.

In the Canadian division, the first prize went to Tom Cleary, Princess Theatre, Montreal; second to Gordon Carson, Royal, Fort William. In the subsequent run, first to George Davie, Shea's, Toronto; second, Bill Novak, Gaiety, Winnipeg.

Special Prizes for RKO Theatres

The RKO division, which was a separate contest from the national contest open to all but RKO theatres, was taken by Jack Granara, who won the national first prize with his campaign from the Boston Keith Memorial. First in the metropolitan RKO theatres contest was taken down by Harry Lyons at the Alden, in Jamaica, L. I., with Ansel Weinstein of the RKO 58th Street, and John Heinz of the RKO Flushing awarded second and third prizes. In addition, large numbers of added prizes were given to other winners in all groups.

Man-on-Street Broadcast Aids "Men of Boys Town"

Discovering that Father Flanagan was sending tickets for members of local Eagle's Home, in Lancaster, to see "Men of Boys Town" at the Grand, in Lancaster, Pa., Manager Bert Leighton made up a 30 by 40 display of Spencer Tracey and Mickey Rooney and displayed it prominently in the club rooms. Weeks ahead a man-on-the-street broadcast was used, questions pertaining to the picture; in addition radio station gave Bert four daily announcements mentioning title, stars and playdates. Announcements were made at Catholic schools and confectioner donated candy for give-away to kids opening day.

For "The Great Dictator," Leighton contacted heads of Kiwanis Club, who used theatre stationery to send out their weekly announcements to all members; included was a theatre pass for attendance prize. At the Franklin and Marshall stunt night contest, two students attended the affair dressed as Hitler and Chaplin, picture plugs given during evening. Photos of the stunt were used in college paper.

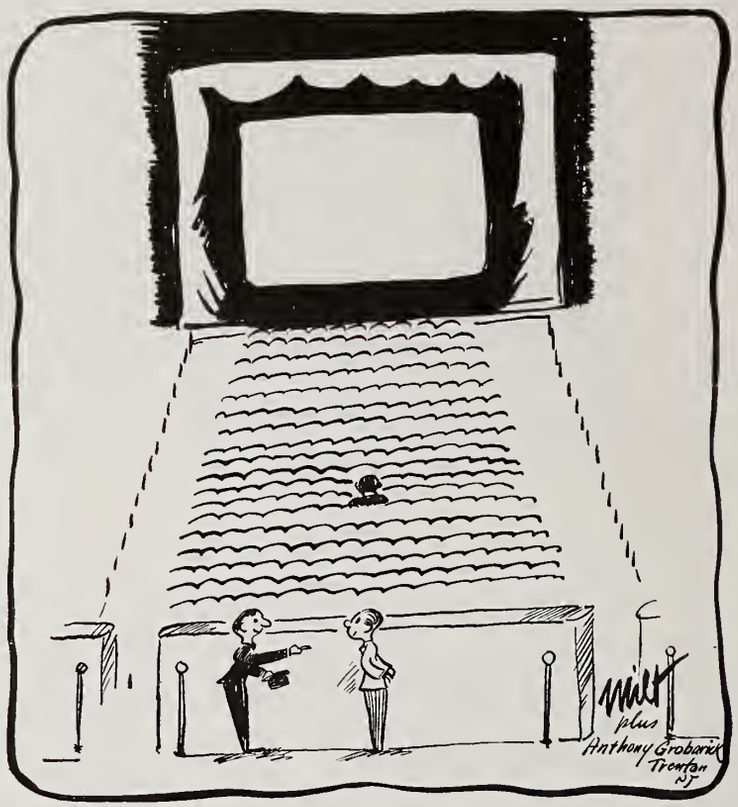
COMEDY



J. G. Samartano MANAGER

When "early bird" morning shows were decided upon at Loew's Poli-Palace, Meriden, Conn., in line with the added factory shifts due to the national defense program, Manager Joe Samartano emphasized the change for newspaper attentions by a reproduction of the theatre time schedule, as illustrated. The editor thought enough of the unique idea for reader-interest to run the display in four-columns, "for free."

Burke's Telescope Stunt Aids "Reaching for the Sun"

Borrowing a genuine telescope from a local astrologer, Bill Burke utilized the instrument ingeniously on behalf of "Reaching for the Sun" at the Brant, Brantford, Ontario, by planting it in the lobby and inviting patrons to look through it. On a building a half block down the street Burke fastened an 11 by 14 on the date, card illuminated at night. Patrons were invited by usher in charge to see if they could read the sign. Without the telescope the display was hardly visible but, seen through the instrument, card was magnified some 50 times, bringing it into plain view.

At one time, Burke says, there were over 50 in line waiting to take a look. He reports very few passersby who could resist the invitation. Used five weeks in advance, it proved to be one of the standouts on the campaign.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Typing Contest Held By Howard for "Foyle"

Contests highlighted Frank Howard's "Kitty Foyle" campaign at the RKO Dyker, in Brooklyn, with a "most popular white-collar girl" search and a typing contest on stage. For the former, a watch and cash was promoted for winner with each girl receiving a consolation prize. For the typing contest, local agency was promoted for use of machines, plugging the tieup storewide and in ads. Merchant also planted girl in window tying picture messages, tieup card explaining the stunt.

'In-Person-Ators' Bow at 'Premiere'

With his date on "Men of Boys Town" set for the recent National Boys and Girls Week, Manager Carmon Phillips at the Onate, in Belen, New Mexico, struck on the idea of making capital of the two events by putting on a "Hollywood World Premiere" in connection with the local unit of Rainbow Girls. The idea was to stage a typical premiere in studio fashion, stars, announcers, etc., to be impersonated by local boys and girls. Deal was set with the girls' club on a percentage basis to insure widest cooperation from local organizations, etc.

Local paper started to plug it well ahead in front-page stories with all of the details, the use of the word "in-person-ated" tipping off the plan. Much was made in the publicity of the tiein with such prominents as bank cashier, president of the school board and others. The press campaign was climaxed with a streamer page one head, the biggest break ever accorded any theatre event locally, the story running a full column and coupled with another feature break carrying entire program of the boys and girls week, issued by Rotary Club.

Stickers printed on the theatre press were distributed to the Rainbow Girls for wide distribution around town and announcements made at important school gatherings and lunch clubs. Parades were held and included were bannered trucks. In addition, the girls set up bannered booths around town to sell tickets. To encourage participation in the parade, the Rotary Club bought tickets at special discount given to the boys and girls participating.

Police Handle Theatre Crowd

For the actual "Premiere," Carmon received permission to have police rope off entire theatre block. Local and state police were on hand to keep the crowds in order. So widely was the event advertised, that crowds gathered an hour ahead and since the "stars" were to be conveyed in special cars, passage was kept open for their arrival. For extra lighting, the theatreman filled the street with photoflood bulbs and reflectors. First to arrive was "Ted Husing," master of ceremonies, impersonated by Phillips himself, who announced the program, the picture and other activities. Some 25 leading men and women stars were impersonated and as they arrived, were introduced by the Round Tabler from a special platform. Presentation of all the "stars" in a 45-minute stage show twice during the evening's festivities highlighted the event. Script for the show was written by Phillips, who also directed the staging with the assistance of Mrs. Phillips.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Jaffa's "Ziegfeld" Teaser

A series of seven teaser cards, each carrying a cut of one of the Ziegfeld Girls, were distributed ahead of that date by Gary Jaffa at Schine's Avon, in Watertown, N. Y. Guest tickets were offered to those presenting complete set at the boxoffice. There were only 50 key cards printed to control the stunt and Jaffa reports that less than 25 complete sets were presented.

The Use of Chalk Plate Mats In Pepping Up Theatre Ads

Easy to Make, Inexpensive and Highly Decorative, Says Round Tabler, Who Tells How

by E. A. ("PAT") PATCHEN
City Manager, Westland Theatres
Boulder, Colorado

Because they are simple to make, speedy and inexpensive, Chalk Plate mats are a special blessing to the theatre manager who keeps one eye on the budget and the other on the amusement page and who has to make both ends meet but wants to snap up his ads.

Chalk mats give the smaller operator all the advantages of having "art ads," at but a fraction of their cost. They also make it possible for the manager who does his own ads to trick them up with angle boxes, rules, etc., that the composing room can't, or won't give him, and, hand lettering, fancy borders, etc., that he could not otherwise afford.

There are many situations where the engraving cost of just one ad would run as high as 10 per cent of the entire week's budget. A chalk plate cut usually averages around 25 to 30 cents, plus the time it takes to cut it. However, regardless of price, many managers would have to send their drawings out of town to have cuts made, and this usually eliminates engraving completely.

Chalk plates are not only for the small operator. Even the most deluxe operations, employing ad artists, can use them to advantage. For example, late bookings, sports events, war bulletins, and all the other important things that so often come up at the last minute—all these could be given quick, effective ad display with chalk plate mats. Even with a two-hour deadline, a chalk plate could be cut and ready for the paper to cast. An ad artist could hardly finish his ink drawing in that time, an engraving would be impossible.

The chalk plate itself is simple in construction. It consists of a layer of soft, chalklike clay over a hard piece of composition board. Making a cut on one is simple, and you don't have to be an artist to do it. If you can make straight lines with a pencil and ruler, if you can trace a drawing with a piece of carbon paper, you can make your own cuts on chalk plates.

The design is first traced onto the soft clay—either directly with a pencil, or by laying the original pattern over the chalk plate and making a "copy" on the chalk by tracing all lines with a pencil. The complete impression will then be visible on the clay surface of the plate.

Explains Construction Procedure

The usual procedure is to first lay out your ad on paper, to size, then trace the design on the clay mat. Then the lines are simply cut deeper and deeper through the clay to the printing surface of the composition base. The chalk plate is then ready to be cast exactly the same as any mat.

A set of cutting tools costs around one dollar. The plates themselves, in seven and nine inch sizes, cost a dollar, and can be used several times. For example, the "Today" reverse slug (see accompanying illustrations) was made on the space inside the border of the "Devil & Miss Jones" ad. Also the "Great," the "scroll," and the "T. Q."—all these were made on one plate, which gives a twenty cent average cost for the individual cut.

The examples attached are simple designs, easy to make, yet each one gives a dressed up touch to your ad that definitely sets it apart from run-of-the-mill stuff. The beauty of chalk plate work is that you don't have to be original, you don't have to "create." All you have to do is spot something you particularly like. It may be from a coffee ad in the daily paper or an automobile ad in a slick paper magazine. A funny face, a tricky border—whatever it is, it's yours if you want to use it.

And unless you're too, too professional, I seriously doubt that you'll be accused of copying. The little "Devil" illustrated was copied from a press sheet ad. Any resemblance to the original, or St. Nick himself, is purely accidental—but it served the purpose.

Classified ad contest for tickets was arranged by Pat Notaro at the Warner Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., ahead of playdates on "High Sierra." Ten questions pertaining to previous roles played by Lupino, Bogart, Robinson and Garfield were featured. Miniature Western Union blanks were distributed carrying picture message and postcards mailed from New York further plugged the date.

For "Lady Eve" at the Schine State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., Clayton Cornell effected a tieup with wholesale fruit store for costless apple giveaway. Each piece of fruit had a card attached with title, cast and playdates.

"Happiness licenses" were distributed by Chris Chamales, in the form of heralds to call attention to his opening of "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" at the Roxy, in Delphi, Ind. Copy also included admission prices, playdates, etc.

"Little Nelly Kelly" date at the Schine Webster, in Rochester, N. Y., as arranged by Joe Goldstein, brought a contest in local paper with guest tickets going to those presenting best Irish jokes or wisecracks. Dummy copies of the sheet music with tieup copy were distributed. Imprinted paper bags, window cards were used and fan photos of Judy Garland available at kid matinees.

Red-headed gal seated in the lobby of Schine's Opera House, Lexington, Ky., distributed heralds as part of Trent Roberson's advance on "Lady with Red Hair." Heralds took the form of sheets torn from calendar which were imprinted in red with title, etc. To complete his campaign, Trent arranged with beauty salon to give free permanent waves in connection with red-headed beauty contest.

As an attention attractor for his date on "Sis Hopkins" at the Majestic, in Paragould, Ark., Paul Dodson used a three-piece string band which rode through the city and in outlying districts playing hit tunes from the picture. For his front, special cashier was dressed in keeping, sunbonnet, braids, etc.

For the personal appearance of Sammy Kaye at the Broad, in Columbus, Ohio, Joe Sloan effected a tieup with local Wurlitzer agency whereby a machine with the bandmaster's records was used in outer lobby ahead and during date. In addition six Sammy Kaye records were placed on juke boxes in the city and vicinity with tiein stickers on each machine. Better spots in town also featured a "Sammy Kaye Cocktail."

NO, you're not seeing things! The type-setter's nightmare above is a weighty problem, that Manager Fitzpatrick of Loew's Poli has, and youcan win guest theatre ticket awards by helping him solve it!

All you have to do to enter our competition is unscramble the spelling of the words above, and fit them into the blank boxes of the marquee, or theatre sign, above. It's not as difficult as you might imagine, because the words are in correct sequence (that is, they will be after you decipher the spelling) and all the hints you need are the following paragraph. Read it carefully!

Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney arrive at Loew's Poli Saturday in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's important new production " Men of Boys Town. " This is Metro's sequel to their Academy award winning " Boys Town " film of two years ago, and like its predecessor it gets its story from real life incidents of Father Flanagan's refuge for youth in Boys Town, Nebraska.

NOW, its up to you! Decipher the spelling of each word, and then write the words as neatly as you can fit them in the marquee above. Then mail, before 12:00 midnight Friday night, April 11th, to the Manager of the Loew Poli Theatre

The 10 best entries will each be awarded a pair of guest tickets to see " Men of Boys Town" during its engagement at Loew's Poli starting Saturday, April 12th.

Scrambled letter contest by Ed Fitzpatrick for "Men of Boys Town" at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn., is illustrated above in the card distributed widely by the Loewman for buildup on the date. Rules are self-explanatory with guest tickets awarded to those turning in best entries.

Chalk Plate Mats Explained by Patchen

Of course halftones can't be done on chalk plates. However, halftone mats can be cast and star heads, scenes, etc., taken from them and used in combination layouts with chalk plate borders, sigs, slugs, titles, etc. There is no limit to the combinations possible.

In doing reverse layouts (see "Today" slug illustrated) all chalk is cut away except the actual letters. The printing surface of the base board is black, so that the finished cut is exactly like the picture you have cut in the chalk. Every line that shows solid black on the plate when you have finished your drawing, will show black in your ad.

Most newspapers have someone around who is familiar with chalk plates and can give you a hand with them. Quite often the plates can be bought at the paper, or, from some local art supply dealer. Or, they can be purchased directly from the manufacturer, Redimat Products Co., St. Petersburg, Fla. If requested, they will send a complete set of instructions with your first order.

Contest which attracted for J. E. Murdock, publicity head at the Stanley in Camden, N. J., consisted of guest tickets going to those best defining "This Thing Called Love." Reader was also run in cooperating paper offering tickets to couples taking out marriage licenses on opening day. An "alarm clock" sundae, inspired by Rosalind Russell, was featured, tickets going here too if customers were indulging in one in cooperating five- and ten- when the alarm clock went off. Girl and man in top hat and tails covered main streets on bannered motorcycle, copy reading: "We are on our way," etc.

For his date on "Maryland" at the Civic Theatre, in Adelaide, Australia, Gordon Currie promoted many window displays, one of which featured a racetrack background with jockey suit, bridle, cap, riding crop and other similar paraphernalia. Similar display was also planted in lobby. Out front, Currie stationed a lifesize wooden horse with appropriate tiein copy. Heralds were distributed and tacked to racing boards two weeks ahead, advance screening was held and banner strung across street in front of theatre.

Imprinted silver folders were distributed in advance of "Nice Girl" at the Junction, in Grand Junction, Kan., as part of Johnny Sanders' campaign. A list of "dont's" for the gals was included, featuring such copy as "Don't give your boy friends the run around," etc., ending with "Don't fail to see." Second page carried scene still and cuts of the stars. For lobby display, Sanders used a bust size cutout of Deanna in reclining position centered in a large question mark with copy "At last she jumps over the traces."

George Flicker, manager of the Hiway Theatre, York, Pa., made capital of the fact that the local York Safe and Lock Co. has a contract to manufacture the guns described in "Great Guns." Cards were placed on the bulletin boards at the plant plugging the picture and its importance.

Leo Trainor, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Allentown, Pa., arranged for the city Mayor to issue a public proclamation, together with a laudatory editorial in the local press, for his showing of "Land of Liberty."

On the opening day of "International Forum," Frank Shaffer at the Warner Dixie, in Staunton, Va., landed an editorial on the short which is reported to have helped considerably in putting over the date. Break resulted after having held a special screening for editor of the cooperating paper.

Members Report On "Liberty"

Various tieins have been effected by theatremen across country for their dates on "Land of Liberty," highlights of which are herewith set down.

With the County Musical Organization, in Springfield, Mo., hosts in connection with a statewide musical convention and confronted with the need of funds to sponsor the event, Joe Ruddick at the Gillioz Theatre presented the idea of conducting a benefit ticket sale on "Land of Liberty" to raise money for the convention. Advance screening was held and representative people selected to attend, pledged their support and enlisted help of their respective clubs. Such organizations as the American Legion, VFW, PTAs, Scouts, Civic Clubs and other groups otherwise difficult to reach were brought in on the event. Announcements were planted on all cooperating club bulletin boards, country-wide mailing lists were covered and generous publicity landed. Special student shows were arranged for 8 a.m. each morning of the engagement, schools selling the tickets in advance, making it necessary for pupils to buy tickets in order to be excused from morning classes.

An elaborate campaign was instituted by Paul O. Klingler at the Rialto, in Lewistown, Pa., in which all schools in the county were dismissed to see the picture at three days of special performances, students making a pilgrimage to Bedford, Va., national home of the Elks, with officers of that organization. Special caravan was provided for the occasion and the tour gained publicity both locally and through the nation medium of the Elks magazine.

Ties Date to Local Boys Town

Arnold Gates at Loew's Park, in Cleveland obtained permission from the Director of that city's Boys Town, to get merchants to sponsor Boystown Members to see the picture. Tickets were distributed by director of the recreation department of the boys club to deserving members. A proclamation by the Mayor was planted on front page of paper, special editorials were also landed and stores in the immediate neighborhood of the theatre featured "Land of Liberty" opportunity sales. In each case, cards in the shape of the United States were used with individual copy letters on them.

Cooperation of school officials was generous in Waterloo, Iowa, when Bob Fulton at the Paramount received permission to have teachers mail mimeographed letters to parents urging the attendance of students at the show. Letter included coupon idea which required parents' signature agreeing to have children attend on a designated day.

Slogan Contest Featured

Front page breaks were garnered by Fred Forry at the Colonial, in Lancaster, Pa., for his date which included a contest for children with prizes of 16 trips to Washington for those writing best slogans in connection with the picture and the local Democracy Days observance. Members of Scout troops acted as ushers and program opened with all children singing the National Anthem.

DUNEDIN WAR COPY

Newspaper Contest Aids Wexo on "Hudson's Bay"

In connection with "Hudson's Bay" at the RKO Strand, in Far Rockaway, Manager Sigurd Wexo planted a contest in local daily whereby scene still was run and guest tickets went to those finding redskins in the drawing. In addition, schools were visited, window cards placed on bulletin boards and promoted tinted heralds distributed.

For "Four Mothers," Wexo held a stork derby contest in which promoted layettes were given to mothers whose youngsters arrived on opening day of picture. Papers ran stories and all local hospitals were contacted as were doctors who were asked to notify expectant mothers about the contest.

Australians Plug Paramount Dates

How hard the Australian theatremen are hitting to keep morale high in the face of war conditions is indicated currently in late campaigns forwarded from "Down Under," and represented by the comprehensive campaigns put together in Sydney on "Arise My Love" and in Melbourne, on the premiere of "Northwest Mounted Police."

Prepared by Manager Mel G. Lawton and Hermann G. E. Flynn, Paramount publicity head, for the Sydney date at the Prince Edward, the fashion slant was built up with art and feature material on frocks worn by Claudette Colbert. In furthering the interest for women, a special screening was held for the women members of the local papers which stimulated publicity and word-of-mouth in the various departments.

Featured outdoors stunt was a series of lettered box kites flown over the crowds at popular beaches and other exploitations stressed displays in leading windows showing frocks worn by the star. Mattress window in furniture store also attracted, the title being appropriately tied to the display as it was to a showing of clocks of all descriptions in jeweler's window. The newspaper campaign concentrated on the comedy angles of the picture.

"Mounties" Campaign Plugs Color

Aimed largely to sell the color background of "Northwest Mounted Police" in addition to the drama, the campaign for the date at the State, Melbourne, obtained the cooperation of leading stores in stressing fashion, cosmetic and other angles of promotion. As an instance, "Mounty Red" and "Rocky Red," two fashion shades were exploited by the leading department stores, in windows and otherwise, one of the stores cooperating on a coloring contest, plugged heavily in displays and on counters for valuable prize.

To arouse interest on the date and also to announce a change of policy a regular technicolor trailer was shown via a portable projector on special screens in leading spots around town. These included windows of leading papers and department stores. Max Factor cosmetic tiein was plugged widely through the women stars.

Theatre Issues Special Magazine

For the theatre front, star enlargements were featured and a giant banner from roof to marquee announced the showing. Other general exploitation took in radio broadcasts, concert by the theatre orchestra in the foyer, the music transferred to the street via loud speakers. Arrangements were also made to publicize the engagement vigorously in an eight-page house paper distributed by a furniture company to over 100,000 homes. Credited for the campaign were Manager Bert Snelling, and Bill Tinkler, publicity manager, working with E. F. Lane, circuit publicity head.

With the local papers breaking with pictures of victims rescued from an actual Nazi raider in the Pacific, the Empire, in Dunedin, tied in copy on the date for "Mystery Sea Raider" with the happening, as noted in the 300 lines on three-column reproduction on this page.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama (Technicolor)

A Mervyn LeRoy Production. Produced by Irving Asher.

SYNOPSIS

It is the year 1906, and there is great excitement at the Kahly home, where arrangements are being made for the double wedding of Edna Kahly (Greer Garson) and her girlhood chum, Charlotte (Marsha Hunt). The double marriage never comes off for Edna meets Sam Gladney (Walter Pidgeon), a young man from Texas, and breaks her engagement. Charlotte, who is to wed Allan Keats (William Henry), commits suicide when Allan's gossiping mother (Kathleen Howard) spreads the word that Charlotte is an adopted child.

Edna and Sam are married, and go to Texas. A baby boy is born to Edna and the Gladney's are ideally happy. Then Sammy, the baby, is killed. Edna, who can never have another baby, goes to extremes in her social life. One night Dr. Breslar (Felix Bressart), who had attended Edna at childbirth, brings a child to the Gladney home, because the mother, a mill worker, is ill. Edna becomes interested in the underprivileged children of the mill workers. With Sam's help, she starts a nursery.

Then Sam loses his mill and the Gladneys go to Forth Worth for a fresh start. There Sam makes a new fortune, while Edna continues her child welfare work. Soon, she is supervising the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society, with Dr. Breslar aiding her. Edna is particularly fond of a crippled baby, whom she calls little Sam.

Edna goes to the state legislature, and, after a dramatic plea, forces through a law making all adopted children legitimate. Then Sam dies. Edna is disconsolate.

It is Christmas night, and Edna is going away with Little Sam, when another feeble baby is brought to her. Edna makes up her mind. She takes little Sam to a couple who wish to adopt him, happy in the thought of continuing with her foundling home.

IN THE NAVY (Universal)

Abbott and Costello Comedy

Associate producer, Alex Gottlieb. Directed by Arthur Lubin.

SYNOPSIS

Russ Raymond (Dick Powell), a radio singer, secretly enlists in the Navy under his true name, Tommy Halstead. At his base, San Diego, Russ is tentatively identified by Dorothy Roberts (Claire Dodd), news camerawoman. Dorothy shoot several pictures of him but Russ destroys the negatives. Dorothy next escorts the Andrews Sisters, booked for an appearance at the Naval Station, past the sentries, and resumes her hunt for Raymond. There her trail crosses those of Smoky (Bud Abbott)) electrician's mate; Pomeroy (Lou Costello), Navy pastry cook, and Dynamite (Dick Foran), hard-boiled chief petty officer.

Still trailing Russ, Dorothy stows away on the battleship Alabama, where he has been assigned. Smoky and Pomeroy, also on the Alabama, discover her, en route to Honolulu. Smoky and Pomeroy attempt to crash the Royal Palms, where the Andrew Sisters—who had preceded them by Clipper—are singing. They are tossed out. Russ offers to gain admission for them if they will help him avoid Dorothy but they have already promised Dorothy.

It is visitors' day on the Alabama when an order for maneuvers comes through. The Captain is asleep in his quarters, having been accidentally drugged by Pomeroy. Pomeroy takes command, issuing instructions to officers on the bridge for the benefit of the Andrews Sisters while believing the communication system is out of order. The Alabama goes into action. Smoky and Pomeroy become heroes to the Andrews Sisters; Dorothy and Russ finally get together; the Captain wins promotion, and Pomeroy even avoids the brig.

THE RELUCTANT DRAGON (RKO Radio)

Benchley in a World of Fantasy

Produced by Walt Disney.

SYNOPSIS

Robert Benchley is urged by Mrs. Benchley (Nana Bryant) to persuade Walt Disney to produce a motion picture based on Kenneth Grahame's short story, "The Reluctant Dragon." At the studio, book in hand, he is escorted around by an alert young guide, Humphrey (Buddy Pepper), who fills Benchley's head with unwelcomed statistics. Engrossed in his speech, Humphrey fails to notice Benchley entering the sound effects stage. There Benchley discovers that a pretty girl, Doris (Frances Gifford) is holding a Sonovox to her throat, giving voice to such sounds as wind, train whistles and trombones.

Benchley wanders into another room, where he finds an orchestra and two people about to sing an operatic aria. They are Clarence Nash and Florence Gill, who do the voices of Donald Duck and Clara Cluck. Humphrey locates the humorist and takes him in tow but Benchley slips away again, intrigued by a sign reading "Art Class." He looks for a model and finally discovers the model is an elephant. Next he finds himself in the camera department and sees a shot from "Bambi," another forthcoming feature, and also a Donald Duck.

Following a visit to the Rainbow Room where the studio paints are made and the celluloids are painted, Benchley is taken to the department where models of characters and "props" are sculptured. Animators show him how they create the Disney characters. Benchley finally winds up in a projection room where he meets Walt Disney. Just as he starts to mention his mission, a motion picture is thrown on the screen. It is "The Reluctant Dragon." It's about a not fierce dragon, and a not valorous Sir Giles, and their collusion in faking their blood-and-thunder fight, so the villagers will not be deceived.

As the picture ends and the lights go up, Disney turns to Benchley for advice. There is no Benchley—only a note and the book on his chair, saying "Dear Walt: This was it."

NAVAL ACADEMY (Columbia)

School Drama

Directed by Erle C. Kenton.

SYNOPSIS

Steve Kendall (Freddie Bartholomew), Dick Brewster (Billy Cook) and Tommy Blake (Jimmy Lydon) enroll at State Naval Academy. Steve, who comes from a family of sailors, easily adapts himself to academy life. Dick, the snobbish son of rich parents, and Tommy, a product of reform school, fare less better. They are hazed by upper classmen. Bunking together in the same room, Steve, Dick and Tommy embark on several adventures as the year advances. Steve and Tommy go out for crew.

Dick, in a bad frame of mind because of the attitude of the upper-classmen and because he is only allowed two dollars a week allowance, blackmails Steve, who is temporarily assigned to the student bank. Dick had seen Steve copy examination questions in order that he might pass the exam and be able to row in the big race. Dick takes the money and leaves for home. Steve tells Tommy, who offers to run away and take the blame. Steve, however, tells all to the authorities. Dick is brought back by his father and verifies Steve's story. The boys go back to their rooms together, each a better youth for their experience.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Psychological Melodrama

Directed by Victor Fleming. Based on the novel by Robert Louis Stevenson.

SYNOPSIS

The Bishop (C. Aubrey Smith) is delivering his Sunday sermon at All Souls Southwick Church, London, when the quiet is broken by the raucous voice of Sam Higgins (Barton MacLane). The man seems possessed. Among the parishioners is Dr. Harry Jekyll (Spencer Tracy), who is with his fiancee, Beatrix Emery (Lana Turner), and her father, Sir Charles Emery (Donald Crisp).

Dr. Jekyll, a specialist in mental disorders, takes charge of Higgins and orders him sent to Camden Hospital. There Dr. Jekyll asks permission to test his theory—a theory based on Jekyll's claim of his power to separate the evil from the good in a man's soul. All discourage him, including his friend, Dr. John Lanyon (Ian Hunter). Jekyll and Beatrix are separated by Sir Charles' demand that they wait a year before marrying.

On their way home from a formal dinner party, Jekyll and Lanyon rescue a young girl, Ivy (Ingrid Bergman), from an assailant. They accompany her to her poor lodgings, where, attracted to Jekyll, she makes a play for him. Home again, Jekyll determines to make the final test of his experiment. He, himself, drinks the potion. He emerges into his evil self—and calls it Mr. Hyde. Sir Charles and Beatrix go abroad and Jekyll continues his experiment. As Hyde he goes in search of Ivy.

When Beatrix and Sir Charles return, Jekyll tries to forget Hyde completely but without benefit of the potion he emerges into Hyde. As Hyde he returns to Ivy and in a frenzy murders her. Jekyll no longer can control his transformation into evil. Even as he tries to explain to Beatrix, he finds Hyde coming into being. He clubs Sir Charles to death. Lanyon leads the police to Jekyll's home, where after a furious struggle the monster is killed. He dies as Dr. Jekyll.

For the present version, George Grossmith has written the song "See Me Dance the Polka."

THE GAY VAGABOND (Republic)

Comedy-Drama

Associate producer, Robert North. Directed by William Morgan.

SYNOPSIS

Arthur Dixon (Roscoe Karns), although indispensable both to his family and to the Wilbur Knitting Mills, is too shy and backward to realize his worth. At the office he is A. J. Wilbur's (Ernest Truex) favorite stooge, while at home his wife, Kate (Ruth Donnelly), is always after him to win a fortune so that their daughter, Betty (Lynn Merrick), may marry Franklin Atwater (Rod Bacon), the town's most eligible bachelor.

Kate decides to gamble on her own. She mortgages the family home, draws all his savings and buys an option on some worthless land near the knitting mills, at a cost of $5,000. Arthur has a twin brother, Jerry (also Karns), his temperamental opposite, whose death was recently reported. But Jerry, very much alive, turns up in town on some mysterious deal. Mr. Wilbur sees Jerry at a local bar, and thinking he is Arthur, orders him to leave. Jerry throws him out of the bar.

Meanwhile, Arthur has been struck by a car and the anxious driver fills him with whiskey to revive him. Jerry's girl friend puts him on the train thinking Arthur is Jerry. When Arthur comes to, he walks back to town. Arthur is fired but gets his job back when Wilbur discovers that Mrs. Dixon holds the option on the adjoining land. Then Arthur is again mistaken for Jerry by hired assassins. After a general mix-up, Arthur suddenly turns from a mouse to a man and tells everybody off, including Wilbur. Kate makes a big profit on the land.

TIGHT SHOES (Universal)

Comedy

Produced by Jules Levey. Directed by Albert Rogell. Based on a story by Damon Runyon.

SYNOPSIS

The heat is on "The Brain," Horace Grover (Samuel S. Hinds), and he is taking it out on the persons of Blooch (Ed Gargan), a mugg racketeer, and Okay (Shemp Howard), also the same. Meanwhile "The Brain's" right-hand man, Swifty (Brod Crawford), is suggesting putting a nice, refined game of craps in the rear of Amalfi's shoe store. Amalfi (Leo Carrillo) doesn't see the point but Swifty "convinces" him. While there Swifty buys a pair of shoes and has an argument with the clerk, Jimmy Rupert (John Howard), over the correct size. Swifty takes a shoe two sizes too small. Swifty goes to the races with his sweet pea, Sybil Ash (Binnie Barnes) and bets on a horse called Feet First. He loses.

Swifty decides to re-arbitrate the matter of the shoes, causing Jimmy to lose his job. This doesn't sit so well with Ruth (Anne Gwynne), who has been waiting a matter of some small years for him to marry her. Jimmy interrupts a political caucus and becomes the Voice of the Public Conscience. Jimmy runs for the city council and with the help of Sybil, who will have no part of Swifty, and Ruth, wins the election against "The Brain's" candidate. Sybil starts going for Jimmy in a big way, which distresses Ruth no little—not to mention Swifty.

MOON OVER MIAMI (20th Century-Fox)

Music and Romance (Technicolor)

Produced by Harry Joe Brown. Directed by Walter Lang. From a play by Stephen Powys.

SYNOPSIS

Kay Latimer (Betty Grable) and her sister, Barbara (Carole Landis) work as car hops and their aunt, Susan (Charlotte Greenwood), as cook in a Texas drive-in stand. They receive a letter from Iowa informing them that a relative has left $4,000 to be divided among them. They agree to use the money to finance a trip to Miami where Kay hopes to bag a millionaire. Kay poses as a wealthy heiress, Barbara as her secretary and Susan as her maid.

Kay loses no time in making the acquaintance of a millionaire playboy, Jeff Bolton (Robert Cummings), who lives in an adjacent bungalow. She is helped along by a bellboy, Jack (Jack Haley), who believes her to be the genuine article. At a party given by Jeff, Kay meets Connie Fentress (Cobina Wright, Jr.), society girl and Phil McNeil (Don Ameche). Jeff and Phil, friends since childhood, vie for Kay's favors.

Phil finally manages to get Kay alone and proposes to her. Kay, who is in love with him, tells Phil of her hoax. He, in turn, tells Kay that he too is penniless and also had planned to marry money. Kay is furious and leaves him. Jeff proposes and Kay, inwardly raging, accepts. He takes her to his father's island near Miami. On the eve of the wedding, Phil and Jack arrive. Phil forces his way into Kay's room. A quarrel ensues but in the end Kay falls into Phil's arms, whereup Jeff and Barbara burst into the room. Jeff confesses that he's really in love with Barbara, relieving the situation.

WEST POINT WIDOW (Paramount)

Comedy Drama

Producer—Sol C. Siegel. Directed by Robert Siodmak.

SYNOPSIS

Nurse Nancy Hull (Anne Shirley) is forever turning down bids from persistent suitors. Dr. Jimmie Krueger (Richard Carlson), who really loves her, discovers by accident that she is the mother of a six months old daughter.

Nancy tells Jimmy her story. Two years previously, she had married Rhody Graves (Richard Denning) Army's star football player, but since married cadets are not permitted at West Point she was persuaded by his mother to agree to an annulment. When she became a mother, she kept it a secret lest Rhody resign and ruin his career. Now she is waiting for him to graduate and claim her as his bride.

Jimmie, skeptical as to the probability of Graves returning, agrees to be "just a friend" but the friendship grows warmer and closer. One day fellow workers at the hospital discover the couple with the baby at the beach, and the gossip spreads that Jimmie and Nancy are secretly married and have a baby. He is called into the office of the hospital director, denies that he is married, but to prevent the Rhody Graves angle from leaking out, admits that he is the father of the baby and agrees to make an honest woman out of Nancy.

Two weeks before West Point graduation, Nancy quits her job, confident that Rhody will come to claim her. Rhody comes to Nancy and confesses he is engaged to another girl. Nancy faints from the shock; but is determined to provide for her daughter's future. Rhody's mother still feels that her son should marry the girl he is now engaged to.

Meanwhile, Jimmie has joined the Army Medical Corps and is ready to sail for Panama. He reads of Rhody's engagement and decides to see Nancy before leaving. The baby is so happy to see Jimmie that Nancy agrees to go to Panama with him where all three can be happy together.

HURRY, CHARLIE, HURRY (RKO)

Comedy

Produced by Howard Benedict. Directed by Charles Roberts.

SYNOPSIS

This story deals with a hen-pecked husband, who manages to get himself into a peck of trouble, at home, every time he turns around or opens his mouth, but who by his persistence and energy and the employment of the wiliest stratagems, manages to come out all right in the end.

Through a combination of highly comical though unfortunate happenings, the planned elopement of Beatrice Boone (Mildred Coles) and Jerry Grant (Kenneth Howell) falls through at the last minute, when they are caught in the act by Beatrice's mother (Cecil Cunningham). A domineering lady with great social aspirations for her daughter, limited to the small Indiana town of Katichug where Daniel Jennings Boone (Leon Errol) her husband, is the town's leading and only banker.

Banker Boone likes Jerry as a prospective son-in-law and has really engineered the elopement, but Mrs. Boone knows nothing of this. A series of events finally results in bringing about the elopement of the two young lovers, but only after Mr. Boone, through his strategy, succeeds in having his wife stage a party, at which even to the surprise of Mr. Boone, the Vice-President of the United States—visits as the guest of honor.

HERE COMES THE NAVY (Warner Brothers) (Reissue)

Comedy-Drama

Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

SYNOPSIS

Chesty (James Cagney) joins the Navy when he loses his girl, Gladys (Dorothy Tree) to petty officer Biff (Pat O'Brien). He is assigned to Biff's ship. Then the brawling between between the two, contrasted by Droopy's (Frank McHugh) running gag comedy, rises to a crescendo when Biff finds that Chesty is loved by his sister Dorothy (Gloria Stuart). As the Navy tries to make a man out of Chesty, he fails to respond to treatment and even though he is decorated for preventing a turret room disaster, the Navy decides he'd be better off elsewhere and transfers him to the dirigible Macon. Again disobeying orders, Chesty rescues Biff from the end of a rope dangling in midair as the Macon is unable to make a landing. The pair continue to brawl until the parson silences them so that he can proceed with the wedding ceremony.

SUNNY
(RKO Radio)

Musical Comedy

Produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox. Based upon the stage musical comedy.

SYNOPSIS

A musical comedy, "Streamlined Sawdust," is playing New Orleans during Mardi Gras. Sunny O'Sullivan (Anna Neagle) is the star of the slow. Sunny and Larry Warren (John Carroll), scion of a wealthy automobile family, who has escaped the vigilance of Henry Bates (Edward Everett Horton), the family lawyer, and Elizabeth Warren (Frieda Inescort), sister, are literally thrown together by the revelers. The "Queen of Hearts" (Martha Tilton) and her court "The Sportsmen," who, in swing harmonics, refuse to let them pass until Larry has kissed Sunny. That is the beginning of their romance.

Sunny leaves the show and Larry takes her to the family home, as his fiance. Although Elizabeth remains aloof, Sunny is heartened by the reception given her by Larry's Aunt Barbara (Helen Westley), head of the family. Most of the Social Register turn out for Sunny's wedding. Bunny Billings (Ray Bolger) and his "Streamlined Sawdust" troupe appear. Elizabeth, snatching at a last minute opportunity to humiliate Sunny, suggests the actors go on with their show before the ceremony. Under the leadership of a dizzy debutante (Grace Hartman) and Sunny's screwball brother (Paul Hartman) the troupe starts showing off.

Sunny is stunned when Larry tries to throw the troupe out bodily. Sunny walks out on Larry and returns to the show. There is great excitement at her return and that night every seat is taken. The story then moves through a kidnaping, considerable romance and melody to the finish.

TOO MANY BLONDES
(Universal)

Musical Comedy

Associate producer, Joseph G. Sanford. Directed by Thornton Freeland.

SYNOPSIS

Dick Kerrigan (Rudy Vallee) and his bride of two weeks, Virginia (Helen Parrish), make a radio singing trio with Ted Bronson (Jerome Cowan). Bronson is fond of Virginia. They take a train to Hollywood to fulfill a radio contract. On the train, Dick meets some old friends of vaudeville days—all blondes. Virginia is jealous at first and later incensed when Dick, playing poker with the boys in an another car, is cut off at the junction and arrives in Hollywood a day later than she.

Bronson persuades Virginia to divorce Dick and also persuades the radio manager to fire Dick for failing to appear. Dick pretends to agree to the divorce. He offers to save his money, from a solo crooning job, if Virginia will save hers, to obtain the $500 necessary for the divorce. They settle down in the same apartment to reduce expenses. They watch the money in the sugar bowl like hawks.

Bronson fearing the newlyweds will make up, steals some of the money, which causes them to accuse each other of the theft. Then Dick starts flirting with a waitress, Hortense (Iris Adrian), who agrees to help him give Virginia "evidence." When Dick takes a sock at the radio manager, he retaliates by firing Virginia and Bronson. The group leave on a trip to Mexico for the divorce. Meanwhile, the radio manager gets a sponsor who insists upon hiring only Dick and Virginia. The radio manager effects a reconciliation between the two.

THE NURSE'S SECRET
(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

Directed by Noel M. Smith. From a story by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

SYNOPSIS

As man's figure slips into the doorway of the Mitchell home, a man and a woman are arguing in a car in front of the house.

Miss Juliet Mitchell (Clara Blandick) goes to her nephew's room and discovers his dead body. Hugo (Leonard Mudie), the butler, his wife and Mary (Virginia Brissac), the maid, enter. Inspector Tom Patten (Regis Toomey), although the position of the body indicates an accidental shot, believes it is a murder. Patten has his girl friend, Ruth Adams (Lee Patrick), assigned as a nurse to Miss Mitchell.

When Ruth arrives, she meets Paula Brent (Ann Edmonds). Paula gets into the coupe that was in front of the house the night of the shooting. Ruth notices that Hugo and Mary act strangely. Florence Lentz (Julie Bishop), secretary to Glenn (Charles Trowbridge), Miss Mitchell's lawyer, is attacked as she arrives with the will but manages to hold on to it. Charles Elliott (George Campeau), who had been in the coupe with Paula the night of the murder, is arrested. Paula confesses she was married to the dead man. Then Miss Mitchell dies of arsenic poisoning.

The denouement comes with the discovery of Glenn's guilt. He, Hugo and Florence had rearranged the will and planned to split the money.

ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON
(Columbia)

Political Melodrama

Produced by Charles R. Rogers. Directed by Alfred Green.

SYNOPSIS

John Coleridge (Herbert Marshall), U. S. Senator from the Silk Stocking District of New York, arrives in Washington for the opening of Congress. Jane Scott (Virginia Bruce), radio commentator, urges the senator to discuss naval appropriations over the air but is given the cold shoulder. In his office, the senator finds Jim O'Brien (J. M. Kerrigan), First District boss, who talks Coleridge into sponsoring Marty Driscoll (Gene Reynolds), orphaned son of a former New York political boss, as a Senate page boy.

Marty reaches Coleridge's office the same time Jane does. They become acquainted and he helps her to eavesdrop on a press interview, from which she had been barred, and to scoop the other correspondents. Marty, tough and smart, is contemptuous of the other page boys and burns up when they gang up on him and sent him on foolish errands. Frank Conroy (Pierre Watkin), a shady lobbyist, tries to bribe Coleridge into divulging defense bill information, so he can profit on the stock market, but is ignored by Coleridge.

The defense bill contents leak out, nevertheless, and Coleridge accuses Marty. Marty, in anger, goes to Conroy. Then Coleridge is accused and brought before an investigating committee. Over the air, Jane pleads for the guilty person to come out of hiding. Marty, now a dish washer in a Greek restaurant, hears her and confesses. Marty is tried by a jury of page boys and, defended by Coleridge, is exonerated.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE (20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Romance and Music

Produced by Milton Sperling. Directed by H. Bruce Humberstone.

SYNOPSIS

Ted Scott (John Payne), Phil Corey (Glen Miller) and their band, are waiting in agent Don Murray's (William Davidson) office for an audition with their press agent, Nifty Allen (Milton Berle). Murray is listening to Vivian Dawn (Lynn Bari) rehearse with a band. There is an argument between Vivian and the band leader. As Murray has to have an outfit ready to put into Sun Valley he hires Ted's band.

Ted is served with a paper which advises him that he has to appear to adopt a refugee for whom he had applied, which he had entered into originally as a publicity stunt. He draws Karen Benson (Sonja Henie), a Norwegian girl. Karen falls for Ted and sets her cap for him. At Sun Valley she tries to attract Ted's attention with some fancy skating but Ted isn't looking.

Meanwhile the romance between Ted and Vivian progresses to the point of a proposal of marriage. Being a good skier, Ted tries to interest Vivian in the sport but she isn't having any of it. Out by himself, Ted discovers Karen on skis. They become constant ski companions. Vivian, jealous, tries to ski but finally gives it up as does Nifty. Nifty, who is trying to further a romance with Vivian, is ever being pestered by Miss Carstairs (Joan Davis).

When Vivian announces her engagement to Ted, Karen frames things so that she and Ted are stranded in a ski cabin high in the mountains. Ted's explanations are logical and acceptable but Karen twists things around to make them look compromising. Vivian's pride causes her to break the engagement and quit the band. Karen from then on is featured in an ice ballet.

Melodrama

Associate producer, Marshall Grant. Directed by Noel Smith.

SYNOPSIS

Cliff Weldon (Charles Bickford), a tough soldier-of-fortune from Kansas City, leader of the suicide squadron of trucks running munitions on the Burma Road, halfway between Rangoon and Shanghai, has made up his mind to return home and open a garage. Anne (Evelyn Ankers), daughter of Lloyd McBrogel (Cecil Kellaway), keeper of the hotel in Lashio, takes this news pretty hard.

Mike (Frank Albertson), Cliff's kid brother, suddenly appears on the scene. He intends to become a driver. Entering Mike's room, the brothers get a glimpse of a native rifling Mike's suitcase. The Burmese escapes. They discover Mike's suitcase has been switched with another by mistake. In it they find a secret transcript of the Burma Road schedule, obviously intended for enemy hands.

Mike tries to track the native, but is killed. Cliff and Anne by accident discover Victor Harrison (Truman Bradley), the trucking manager, to be the guilty party. Cliff is overpowered and Harrison, himself, sets out on the Burma Road to turn over equipment to enemy troops. Cliff, freed by Smitty (Willie Fung), heads a motor posse after Harrison, who is bested in a gun duel.

Associate producers, Walter Morosco and Ralph Dietrich. Directed by Ray McCarey.

SYNOPSIS

John Worth Hyndman (George Montgomery) is first vice-president of the corporation owned by T. J. Triton (Thurston Hall) earning $20,000 a year. But John is anything but happy. First, he is against T. J.'s raising rent in tenement districts and secondly, he is unhappily married to Triton's daughter, Linda (Cobina Wright, Jr.). In desperation, John tells his boss to go jump in the river.

He applies for a WPA job but is turned down. Coming upon a WPA project, John watches the men digging under the watchful eye of the Portuguese foreman, Manuel Lombroso (J. Carrol Naish). John hocks his watch and clothes and buys working clothes and a shovel. He joins the workmen, refusing to stop digging at the order of Manuel. John wins the Portuguese over and Manuel takes John home with him. There he meets Osa (Osa Massen).

John takes up the cause of the tenement dwellers and threatens Triton with some bad publicity if rents are raised. They argue and wind up in a police station. Leaving the station, John outfits his father-in-law in overalls, has him dig with the WPA workmen, ride on a subway and see the way the Lombrosos's live. Through a misunderstanding, the Lombrosos and Osa turn on John, but in the end Linda obtains a divorce and John, who has convinced Triton of the error of his ways, is returned to favor with Manuel and his friends.

HELLO, SUCKER (Universal)

Comedy

Associate producer, Ken Goldsmith. Directed by Edward Cline.

SYNOPSIS

Fast-talking Conway (Walter Catlett) sells a dying vaudeville agency to simple E. Worthington Clippe (Hugh Herbert). Clippe soon realizes that he cannot make it pay and protests to Conway, who agrees to re-sell it to some other sucker.

Bob (Tom Brown) and Rosalie (Peggy Moran), small town young people, meet in the city under unhappy circumstances. Their luggage is switched and Rosalie has Bob arrested for "stealing" hers. Both have come to the city to answer Conway's advertisement and before either knows who the other is they are partners. Conway has sold them the dying vaudeville agency.

They soon realize they have been suckers, and with Clippe, pound the pavements looking for work. Then they get the idea of offering their vaudeville talent to demonstrate merchandise in "living show-windows" from coast to coast. They act on it: aerialists swing by their teeth from stockings; fire-eaters demonstrate fire-proof glassware and asbestos gloves, etc. They plan a celebration after six months prosperity.

Meanwhile, Rosalie's country sweetheart, Walter (Lewis Howard) shows up to claim her. Rosalie, who is now fond of Bob, goes to the celebration with Walter because she had seen a blonde model leave Bob's office scantily clad. Bob goes to the celebration with the model, Vera (June Storey). Ironically, Walter falls for Vera. The result is a free-for-all in which Rosalie douses Vera with water, Walter knocks out Bob and Rosalie knocks out Walter.

SING ANOTHER CHORUS (Universal)

Comedy and Music

Associate producer, Ken Goldsmith. Directed by Charles Lamont.

SYNOPSIS

Arthur Peyton (George Barbier), sole owner of Peyton Frocks, Inc., is having business and paternal troubles. His son, Andy (Johnny Downs), returning from college, is determined to gain recognition as a writer of stage revues. In this he is spurred on by Francine (Iris Adrian), ex-chorine who has starring ambitions. Edna (Jane Frazee)), his father's secretary, who wants to be a designer, and Stanislaus (Mischa Auer), Peyton Frocks' janitor, are readying an amateur show to celebrate the company's 25th anniversary.

Andy volunteers to direct the amateurs and induces a self-styled producer named Gateson (Walter Catlett) to agree to give a commercial production to the musical Andy wrote in college. Gateson obtains $50,000 from Mr. Peyton and disappears. The plans for the revue goes on apace and is finally presented. The revue gets a real producer; Gateson is caught with the $50,000; Stanislaus and Francine discover they like each other, and Edna and Andy discover the same.

CRISIS IN THE ATLANTIC (RKO)

March of Time, No. 10 (13,110)

This latest issue of March of Time reflects the headlines of the daily newspapers as they concern Britain's effort to keep open the sea lanes over which war material and vital food stuffs must safely and quickly be carried to England. Canada's participation and this country's ever increasing aid are depicted as is the United States' "protectorate" over Greenland. There are scenes aboard a British tanker in convoy from Canada to England filmed by March of Time cameramen, which have a good deal of dramatic impact. Other aspects of the subject includes sequences showing the U. S. Navy in action and ex-Colonel Lindbergh speaking against U. S. participation in the war.

IT HAPPENED TO CRUSOE (Col.)

Fable (2755)

The King of the cannibals disowns his son, Westchester, because he is a vegetarian and refuses to follow the old cannibalistic traditions. Westchester leaves the tribe and trudges through the jungle until he arrives at Robinson Crusoe's hut and becomes his man Friday. Friday's first task is to drive Crusoe in his old jalopy on a tiger hunt. Soon they are captured by cannibals and brought before the king, who recognizes his son and holds Crusoe prisoner. The King praises his son for his single-handed capture. Just as Crusoe is being tied up for execution a tiger appears and all the cannibals scatter. Crusoe plays his violin which agonizes the tiger to such an extent that he is easily subdued by the cannibals, who then make Crusoe King of their tribe.

OUT OF DARKNESS (MGM)

Passing Parade (K-284)

John Nesbitt here has chosen La Libre Belgique, an underground newspaper published during the first World War, as his latest subject for "The Passing Parade." There were 24 editors of this newspaper, which made its appearance during the first German occupation of Belgium. Twenty-two of the editors are discovered and shot but when the 23d appears, the German secret police officer collapses. For the 24th, Nesbitt points to a 1940 clipping which tells that La Libre Belgique is being published once more, and the reel ends with a call for courage by the people of all occupied countries.

YUMPIN' YIMINY (Col.)

El Brendel (2430)

El Brendel, the comic with the Swedish dialect, returns to Columbia studios in a new series of two reel comedies of which this is the first to be released. In this yarn he is arrested for vagrancy and the judge tells him to get a job or go to jail. Looking for work, he innocently gets into all sorts of trouble. A notorious jewel thief engages him for his valet and thinking he is going to work in his master's home, he finds out later that it is the residence of the judge, who is away for the night. The thief is ransacking the place when Brendel disguised as the "maid" plays up to the thief, retaining his interest until the judge returns, and proves himself a hero by turning the robber over to the police.

(2857)

Ken Murray, at his home in Hollywood, takes the audience into his private projection room where he runs off some new film he recently photographed. He shows some trick shots of Preston Foster in a triple role. Another scene is that of the birthday party to Larry Simms with the Bumstead Family and Daisy participating. There is also a sulky race with Andy Devine, Al Pearce and Jackie Searle riding in it, with many stars in the stands cheering them on. Glittering is the scene showing Geraldine Fitzgerald wearing a $600,000 display of diamonds and sapphires. Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy also appear at a ceremony where Charlie is being made a Captain of the U. S. Army.

LADY AND THE LUG (W.B.)

Elsa Maxwell (6102)

Elsa Maxwell, famed party giver and social advisor, is put in charge of the entertainment for a milk fund bazaar, run by society leaders. A young friend of hers wins the contract of a prize fighter in a poker game and prevails upon Miss Maxwell to sponsor the fighter and put on a boxing exhibition for the milk fund. The fighter turns out to be Maxie Rosenbloom, as punch drunk as ever. He moves into Miss Maxwell's home and does his training from there, under her constant supervision. Maxie becomes interested in Shakespeare and spends more time reading than in the ring. On the night of the big fight, Maxie refuses to fight when he discovers that he is going to be the main attraction at the benefit on a Long Island estate. Elsa finally prevails upon him to fight, convincing him that he is "noble" to do it. Maxie takes an awful beating and finally his opponent fouls him. With that, Elsa becomes angered and jumps into the ring and with one solid punch knocks his opponent out and the fight is over.

RED SKINS AND RED HEADS (RKO)
Ray Whitley (13,503)

Ray Whitley and his boys are to play a Saturday night dance. Virginia (Virginia Vale) and students from White-Fox school for girls are on a camping vacation. Their chaperones (Jane Kigley and Ricca Allen) refuse to allow their charges to attend the dance. Ray and his boys hide in a farmer's wagon and sneak to the girl's camp. The boys play a hill-billy number while the girls dance. This is interrupted by the two chaperones.

Virginia hides the boys and later arranges for them to pull a fake raid on the camp by pretending to be Indians with Ray as the hero. The old dowagers are frightened and the boys leave them in camp tied to a tree. While the boys and girls are enjoying the dance, the chaperones escape. At the dance hall the chaperones mistake a real Indian for one of the boys and a fight is started. Ray saves the dowagers from the real Indian.

SO YOU WON'T SQUAWK? (Col.)
Buster Keaton (2429)

Keaton is a porter at a swanky roadhouse where confidence men hang out. A new mob takes over and mistake Buster for "Wolf," the leader of the opposition. They flee from the place. When the real "Wolf" finds out how scared his enemies are of Buster, he appoints him his official collector. A series of exciting and humorous events transpire as the gangsters try to kill Buster by throwing him over cliffs, gassing him and knocking him out of windows. He turns up each time and they think they are seeing ghosts.

DUTIFUL BUT DUMB (Col.)
Stooges (2406)

They are expert photographers in this comedy, assigned on an expedition to the Kingdom of Vulgaria from which no photographer has ever returned alive. With their camera snapping everything in sight, they get into no end of trouble with local police, the King, himself, and finally, the army pursues them. Lined up for execution, the boys make one last request—to smoke. The request granted, they produce cigars two feet long and before they can finish them several days have passed, the soldiers are overcome by smoke and the Stooges make their way back home.

GLIMPSES OF KENTUCKY (MGM)
FitzPatrick Traveltalk (T-219)

The scenic highlights of the "blue grass state" of Kentucky are the subjects of James A. FitzPatrick's latest Traveltalk. First shown is the Cumberland River which winds through the state creating a fertile valley. Kentucky at present, it is pointed out, is still an agriculture state with about seventy per cent of its population living on farms and depending on farm produce for existence. Also shown in the subject are the tiny log cabin where Stephen Foster composed "My Old Kentucky Home," and the breeding of thoroughbred horses.

INFORMATION PLEASE, No. 9 (RKO)
(14,209)

In this session of the quiz experts they are called upon to identify song titles acted out in pantomime with Alice Marble, guest expert, answering the first correctly. The panel is then asked to name the literary works in which certain phrases appeared, followed by the identification of various sports figures. The panel is asked to imagine that they are on a desert island and to give the reason why they wouldn't want certain people of fact and fiction to be there with them. The effect of drinks on certain characters of fiction is the next question fired at the experts. Other questions concern old songs and works of literature.

A GOOD TIME FOR A DIME (RKO)
Disney Cartoon (Color) (14,104)

Donald Duck goes on an experimenting tour of a penny arcade with some amusing experiences. He finds a movie machine and inserts his money but is disappointed when the machine jams and doesn't go beyond the sixth veil in "The Dance of the Seven Veils." An iron-claw machine yields a number of prizes which he blows back when he cannot suppress a sneeze. Then a mechanical airplane gets out of control, which contributes to Donald's already bad humor.

HOW TO USE IT

Motion Picture Herald's new and valuable exhibitor service section, Product Digest, is a master index to all information available to date on 1940-41 product and which has been published in the several preceding issues of Product Digest.

Check the title of any feature that you want to look up, turn to the designated page or pages, and you will find all buying and booking information available up to this very minute — synopses, casts, credits, release dates, production numbers, running time, review references, Round Table references and Legion of Decency ratings.

Product Digest is published every other week alternately with the regular Release Chart.

The Release Chart carries, as always, an alphabetical index of titles, a breakdown by companies, star information, release dates, running time and review references. The Release Chart, published every other week, is a compact compilation of certain important booking information.

Product Digest, on alternate weeks, is cumulative, a more extensive compilation of similar information. The Release Chart is complete in itself. Product Digest carries only current information, but if you maintain a complete file of Product Digest, you will have, at your instant service, synopses, casts and other detailed data which could not conceivably be compressed into one issue. The cumulative alphabetical index of Product Digest, however, is a reference to all information that has been printed to date in all the issues of Product Digest.

An introductory issue of Product Digest was mailed to exhibitor subscribers of Motion Picture Herald. If you misplaced your copy or have not saved the subsequent issues, write for duplicates.

TAXES and CUSTOMERS

THE motion picture industry, from Hollywood to screen, may well now be engaged in some long thoughts about the national economy and war time, as it bears on the box office. . . . And it does.

Foremost come influences, projected, discussed, expected, on the spending capacities and habits of the multitudes, designed by that school of political thought which has for the last decade considered "a planned economy."

Just at the moment some aspects do not appear especially favorable to the interests of the screen theatre.

Taxation, especially federal taxation, is being formulated, we are told, quite as much as an instrument of control of buying power as a source of revenues. The reason advanced most commonly is "to prevent inflation," and sometimes it is just "rising prices."

An examination of the taxation program, and with its paralleling subsidies of a sort, tends to indicate that the persons who make up the preponderance of the box office patronage are not going to come off so well in the comparative picture. Those who have been the spenders, who make up so large a share of that key city buying power which is the backbone of motion picture grosses, are going to have, it appears, the ever larger and ever increasing load of taxation.

It is from among the white collar workers, and the middle income groups, that the motion picture draws its most important revenues. They are also selected to pay the taxes, along with the corporations which pay them. The urging of greater and greater corporation taxes is doing nothing for un-unionized payrolls and salaries.

It would appear from the Washington program as currently disclosed that the farmers are being promised, between loans and payments, something that is called "parity" for basic crops. Also labour, with the special encouragements of Washington, is engaged in increasing its income, and at the moment the rail unions have announced, for instance, determination to go out for a thirty per cent increase.

PURSUIT of indications of what war-and-defense spending may be doing for the box office in centers of production of munitions and armament brings highly variable and, in sum, inconclusive figures, assuredly no positive indication that labour in those regions is rushing to the screen for amusement in increasing numbers. From Detroit alone among the production centers, come reports of important box-office upturn, recorded specifically in the run of "Ziegfeld Girl" and the current "A Woman's Face" at the United Artists Theatre.

Another aspect is presented in discussion by Mr. William K. Jenkins, of Lucas & Jenkins, Inc., who observes, "There is certainly no boom in Georgia. Business is unusually low—the 2,800-seat Roxy in Atlanta and the Mojeska in Augusta are being closed, and the Bijou in Brunswick is running only part time. And there are other closings under consideration."

While voicing optimism for the tomorrow, Mr. Herman Wobber, in a Hollywood expression, has observed that the uncertainty of the United States in the international scene "has momentarily poisoned the box office" but that "as soon as the public makes up its mind on the grave issues confronting it, there will be boom times in this industry." Mr. Wobber did not go into the matter of the processes of making up the public's mind.

Also, observed Mr. Wobber, motion picture attendance habits appear to be suspended. "Under present circumstances the millions being spent in national defense have been a disappointment to theatre men everywhere. Circulation of these great sums has had little effect in the major cities. Benefits to showmen are to be observed only in those towns where in addition to the spending of government funds there has also been an increase in population."

From the independent sector and in the person of Colonel H. A. Cole of Texas comes parallel observation, as recorded in Motion Picture Daily, that: "Theatre business around the country is spotty and does not measure up to the expectation of what the defense spending would bring." He found business better than elsewhere in the region of army camps and munitions factories.

SALES managers and home office statisticians in New York contend that they have not yet seen enough of the countryside picture to warrant a judgment of what the spending trend with respect to the motion picture may be. And commonly the answer is, "The good pictures do good business." That is not indicative of a stampede.

Recent examination of the spending of defense industry payrolls in some of the Great Lakes cities, including Cleveland and Buffalo, tended to indicate that the first attention of the wage earners returning to work was for long neglected and postponed necessities like dental repairs, house furnishings and the like. One whimsical observer remarked that there was indication that some of the people who spent relief money on frivolities and amusements took money they earned somewhat more seriously.

As the news pages of this issue record, up in Canada they are having some "planned economy" now and the Finance Minister of the Dominion has directly stated to motion picture exhibition that, regardless of protests, Canada's program is addressed at reducing expenditures for amusements and driving savings into defense bonds.

The motion picture has a selling job to do.

This Week in the News

Defense Film Freight

THOSE exhibitors who have been paying parcel post for U. S. Government defense films have been doing so in ignorance of the fact that the Government agencies responsible for the films, and also the National Film Carriers, Inc., have been transporting the films free of charge. This was the answer given in New York Wednesday by officials of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, to reports that exhibitors in some sections are complaining that they are paying postal rates and that in some instances these are as much as film rentals for shorts.

The MPCCND executives said they were astonished at the reports; and that none had reached them direct. They asserted that Film Carriers serviced some 85 per cent of the nation's theatres; and that, in the instances of the remaining 15 per cent, the Social Security Administration and the U. S. Army each had ordered their offices in exchange centers to pay postage to and from theatres. Exchanges which had been paying postage had been advised by the committee they did not need to.

Only one U. S. agency has not been able to pay postage, thus far, the U. S. Defense Commission, for the film, "Power and Defense"; and this situation is being remedied now, the committee said.

Mister Shaw!

BRITISH official "circles" in New York are said to be expressing annoyance with portions of George Bernard Shaw's screen speech in prelude to "Major Barbara."

Remarks in protest also to advertisements in cartoon form quoting Mr. Shaw are reported to have emanated, at least quasi officially, from the office of the British consul general.

"I must make you a little speech," said Mr. Shaw in his curtain raiser. "... I am sending you my old plays, just as you are sending us your old destroyers. Our Government has thrown in a few naval bases as well; it makes the bargain perhaps more welcome to you."

Rialto Television

THEATRE television, by broadcast pick-up, not wired in the manner of the RCA demonstration at New York's New Yorker Theatre, will make its commercial appearance on Broadway at the Rialto theatre, now famed as the house of murder and chills and thrills. Since television seems for a while to find prize fights the most available events, it may be said to be a vehicle for what a famous sports editor used to call "the art of modified murder." That makes the departure fit the policy at Arthur Mayer's corner.

Mr. Mayer announces a contract with Scophony Television, Inc., of London, represented on this side by Arthur Levey, a director of the corporation, and long a figure in the international film trade.

Scophony television has been shown commercially, for about a year, at the Odeon and the Monsiegneur in London. War has discontinued that program in England so the Rialto will have the world's only theatre television show.

RCA continues demonstrations of wired television at the New Yorker.

Sparks Deal On

E. J. SPARKS this week was reported negotiating the sale of his interests in the Sparks Circuit, Florida, to Paramount, with which he has been, to now, a partner. Mr. Sparks' interest in the Florida circuit of approximately 100 houses, is said to be around 40 per cent.

Confirmation of the reported negotiations could not be obtained from Mr. Sparks Wednesday.

It was said the deal would probably leave Mr. Sparks an advisor to the Paramount Florida holdings.

A ten per cent interest in the Sparks circuit, according to the story, will remain with B. B. Garner, Fred Kent, Marian C. Talley, and Frank Rodgers, his associates.

Box-Office Barometer

FEDERAL admission tax collections of $5,627,394 in April were the lowest since last August, but were still 150 per cent above the $2,000,902 reported for April last year, the Internal Revenue Bureau announced Wednesday at Washington.

April's receipts were approximately $1,500,000 under the $7,104,956 collected in March, reflecting a sharp drop in grosses, occasioned to a large extent by Holy Week, in the first week of April, and by unusually mild weather for that month.

Reduction of the ticket tax exemption to 20 cents, it was reported, resulted in an increase of slightly more than $39,675,000 in tax collections during the first ten months of its application. Revenues from July 1, 1940, to April 30th, 1941, were reported by the Bureau as $58,126,453 against $18,451,217 for the corresponding period a year ago. Another $55,000,000-a-year is expected to come from the elimination of all tax exemptions.

Tax collections in the Third New York (Broadway) District declined in sympathy with receipts nationally, totaling $514,220 for April against $650,007 for March.

Taxes ranging from 10 to 20 per cent would be imposed on the gross income of broadcasting stations with revenues of $150,000 or more a year, under a bill introduced in the House of Representatives Tuesday by Congressman Lawrence J. Connery (Dem., Mass.).

FBI in Hollywood

THE Federal Bureau of Investigation's wholesale roundup of aliens who are in this country illegally reached Hollywood Monday night. The first Hollywood figure to be affected is Rudolph Kilgler, war news commentator for Warner Brothers' Los Angeles radio station KFWB, who was arrested by the Federal authorities and released, on bail, pending a hearing later.

The Government charged Kilgler with having entered the U. S. at New York from Austria on a visitor's visa and of overstaying after landing in Hollywood. The accused set forth that the Nazi's acquisition of Austria had left him in the status of "a man without a country," adding that he once took steps in Washington to have his citizenship established by an act of Congress.

Kilgler is known on the airlanes as Robert Arden, who has a commercial program, sponsored by "Dr. Cowan, the Friendly Credit Dentist."

On returning from the short Federal confinement, Tuesday night, he opened his broadcast by quoting Mark Twain's "The reports of my death are greatly exaggerrated," but he did not refer otherwise to his arrest.

Fifth Columnists

AN ARRAY of nearly twenty allegedly identified Nazi operatives now employed under various camouflages in offices and activities of the distribution offices for American films in the Latin Americas has had the attention of the assorted U. S. intelligence services and is in line for more positive attention at an early date.

A list, with complete dossier attached, with names, real and assumed, nationalities, real and alleged, and detailed as to European and other backgrounds, has been compiled and delivered into the confidential custody of U. S. officials likely to be interested.

Presumably New York home offices will be getting their separate installments of the documents shortly, when U. S. operatives have completed their observations on the scene. Interesting vacancies will be created, some by "resignation."

Priorities

ANNOUNCING the evolution of a process for using glass discs coated with a plastic for sound recordings, replacing current processes, Audio Devices, Inc., claims to thereby release more than a million pounds of aluminum for defense mechanisms. It is claimed that the glass base records give perfect recording and that new packaging methods insure their safety in shipping.

The substitution of glass for metal in many devices and operations has been a commonplace in European countries for several years. Travelers in Italy, where every scrap of metal has been conserved, ever since Mussolini became war-minded, have long noted that even small cabinet locks have been made of glass.

This week the downtown offices of Socony-Vacuum, which have been using 12,000 barrels of fuel oil a year for heating have announced a replacement of their burners with grates to burn coal. This was given out as a "token" procedure for the conservation of petroleum. Meanwhile it was observed by some New York suburbanites that the new Standard oil heating contracts being offered just now are to run to September 1st, only.

Asks for a New 'Sock'

DILATING on "the mysterious relationships" of "The Engineer and the Boxoffice" at a meeting at the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York, on Wednesday of the Atlantic Coast section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Leonard H. Goldenson, Paramount home office theatre executive, voiced the belief that "a revolutionary shock" from the technicians might prove a boon to the industry. Mechanical progress, he observed, must always continue, must always be eyed for its box office potential.

"Maybe we are reaching the point today that the industry reached in 1927 and we need that sock, that entertainment curiosity that came with the advent of sound," he told the engineers. He urged them to "delve into your fertile minds" and "come forth with something new—something startling—something with which we can again shock the public."

As potential box office "shockers" he listed color at lower cost, "fantasound" for every theatre, three dimensional pictures, or, possibly, television.

Showmanship

NEWSPAPER readers in Elkhart, Ind., recently inspected curiously a caricature-illustrated series of "teaser" advertising, signed "Chick." The copy noted the signer's arrival in town and professed bewilderment over what course he was to pursue in pleasing the public. As the series advanced in a 12-day period, it became apparent that the "teasers" had to do with motion picture entertainment and eventually they identified the new Indiana-Illinois theatres city manager, Chick Tompkins, who chose this means of introducing himself locally.

How the showman went about tieing together the three selling points in one and, further, how he created a trick lobby garden display to extend the exploitation, is told in detail in this week's Managers' Round Table.

Congressman Critic

AGAIN Congress, which heard so much about "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," on Monday of this week was entertained by an outgiving from Donald H. McLean (Rep.) Representative from New Jersey, on what he did not like about "An Adventure in Washington," also a Columbia production.

McLean was talking, it developed, from what he had gleaned from the examination of some published stills. He managed to get both himself and the title of the picture into the newspapers.

The picture pertains to a story of page boys of the Senate. Mr. McLean was a page boy, he says, forty-three years ago. Now he says he wants to hold up the picture while he sponsors a resolution for an investigation. He has in mind suggesting a script about page boys who became ministers, actors, lawyers, doctors and bankers.

PCA Waits

THE POST of Production Code Administrator, from which Joseph I. Breen has resigned to go to the studio production organization of RKO in Hollywood, at midweek remained unfilled.

Mr. Breen was still at Malibu by the sea, recovering from a severe cold. Also Will H. Hays, from whom announcement of new arrangements will be coming when they come, was still in the Middle West, also in a process of recuperation from an illness.

No action was to be expected until the return of Mr. Hays, presumably about June 1.

Censoring the Camera

A BILL making it a criminal offense to photograph any kind of United States naval equipment, ashore or afloat, and investing Secretary of the Navy Knox with supreme censorship powers over still and motion picture cameramen, was taken before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, in Washington, Tuesday, by Senator David I. Walsh.

While newsreel cameramen, as well as still photographers, professional and amateur, would be brought under the bill's restrictions, it was explained in Washington that the measure would not end the Navy Department's present sanctioning of newsreel filming of permissible subjects.

Kodak Raises Salaries

SOME $4,000,000 will be added to the annual pay roll of Eastman Kodak by a 10% salary increase, effective next week, for Kodak employees now earning up to $3,000 annually.

The increase, announced Wednesday, applies throughout Kodak Park, the Camera Works, the Hawk-Eye Works, and the Kodak office.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

THE Variety Clubs at work and play made picture news this week and their business and antics at the Atlantic City jamboree last weekend are recorded on this and the following pages. Because even a hard working and tireless photographer could not follow all of the 1,000 guests through the three day round of business sessions and parties, the entire group is pictured in the panorama across the four pages.

CANADA'S 20% TICKET TAX AIMED AT 'LUXURY' SPENDING, BOND SALES AID

Dominion Finance Chief Admits Aim Is to Encourage Civilian Saving; Exhibitors Say Burden Would Become 'Overbearing'

by PAT DONOVAN
in Montreal

Canada's impending drive for a Victory War Loan of $750,000,000 is seen as the real force behind the new 20 per cent tax impost on Canadian motion picture tickets, now in effect. The Government's attitude, voiced by Finance Minister Ilsley is, that, if by reason of the new tax the screen has been put out of reach of many of its patrons, then the lower attendance is favored, because the new tax is seen now not merely as a device to raise additional sums thereby for government war-spending, but to discourage civilian "luxury" spending, and encourage on the other hand, increased investment in war savings certificates, etc. Exhibitors have passed the entire tax onto patrons.

Last week's appeal by the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, Inc., to Mr. Ilsley, requesting that special consideration be given to the tax situation in Quebec, having met with rebuff, the organization's committee has since conferred with the Treasury Department of the Provincial Government.

"Overbearing" Burden Cited

Their proposal is that in the light of the Federal Finance Minister's refusal to consider any special modification of the Federal tax in Quebec, the provincial treasury department should consider the overbearing tax burden there and abolish entirely, or modify at least, the provincial obligatory tribute.

According to a statement issued by Eugene Beaulac, secretary of the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, Mr. Mathewson's department is giving the matter its serious consideration.

The statement follows:

"A committee of the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, Inc., representing the theatres of the Province of Quebec, has been in conference with the Provincial Government in an attempt to obtain a solution of the duplication of amusement taxes which will be heaped on their patrons heads by the imposition of the new federal 20 per cent tax."

(The 20 per cent became effective Monday throughout the Dominion.)

"The Committee pointed out that in a province like Ontario where there has been no provincial amusement tax, a moviegoer might be able, and would be expected to absorb the new tax, but that in Quebec, where the province has already not only an amusement tax but a surtax amounting jointly to 15 per cent it would tax the movie patron about 35 per cent on each ticket he bought—a tax greater than in any other part of the world, including the British Isles.

"It was further declared that the Dominion tax was a discriminating one pointed only at the motion picture theatre, generally regarded as the recreation of the masses and that it had completely exempted the higher priced amusements whose patrons could better afford the impost."

The statement did not undertake to list the "higher-priced amusements."

It is thought that failing the success of negotiations with the Quebec government for a reduction in local taxes, the Quebec theatre owners will agitate with increased vigor for repeal of the law forbidding under-age children to attend movies. (Quebec legislature passed a law forbidding children under 16 years of age to attend movies following the Laurier Palace disaster in Montreal on New Years Day, 1927. Some 80-odd children attending a screen performance here were trampled to death in a panic caused by a fire in the theatre.)

Montreal's first-run theatres have held strictly to the law, and have refused admittance to children under 16. Some neighborhood houses, however, due to non-enforcement of the order, hold special morning shows for children with serials as main attractions.

The Montreal synod of the Church of England, which convened here recently under the chairmanship of Rev. Bishop Arthur Carlisle, strongly recommended that the provincial law be repealed entirely, or at least to the extent of making educational films and particularly colored cartoons available to youngsters. No special consideration is given to films of this type at present.

CANADIAN BUILDING PLANS PROTESTED

Finance Minister Ilsley in Ottawa, Can., has received a resolution of protest against any large-scale theatre building program in Canada from the Edmonton Branch of the Canadian Corps Association. The corps members have asked the Finance Minister to refuse permission for such a project. The members say they have heard reports that a circuit of theatres, including two in Edmonton, will be built this year.

The resolution, which was passed unanimously, said the use of steel and other products that would go into the construction of such a project "would be contrary to the needs and necessities of the times" and inconsistent with the national salvage campaign.

Winnipeg Owners Join In 20% Tax Protest

by ED BAKER
in Winnipeg

Claiming the industry has been discriminated against, representatives of Winnipeg's 43 picture theatres have joined in the Canadian-wide protest against the new 20 per cent tax on admission prices. Protests were made by telegram to Dominion Government authorities.

"We don't know whether the industry can stand a 20 per cent increase in admission charges," said E. Zorn, division manager of Famous Players. "We, in Manitoba, are already paying a 10 per cent provincial tax," he added.

Theatre owners in the city were expecting an increase in taxation with the bringing down of the budget, he continued. They had based their ideas upon a probable five or 10 per cent increase. But the 20 per cent increase has been a blow, in fact, for some theatres, it would be the knock out blow.

Declaring that the Dominion Government must have been under a misconception as to the amount of profit made by theatres, Mr. Zorn produced a price chart which showed the admission base on which the theatres calculate their profit or loss, and the additional amount made up by provincial and federal taxes.

The chart showed the new tax would bring a 30-cent matinee admission up to 36 cents. The base price for this, however, is only 28c, two cents being added for provincial tax, and another six cents for the new federal tax. The present 50 per cent night admission charge will jump to 60c. Of this amount the theatre gets 46 cents, the province four cents, and the dominion 10 cents.

By boosting admission taxes 20 per cent, Mr. Zorn charged, the government was "kicking in the teeth the one industry which is helping them." Amplifying this statement, he explained that theatres throughout the dominion were aiding and abetting the country's war effort by showing pictures of propaganda nature such as, "Canada at War," and many others.

The final blow, thought Mr. Zorn, was that theatre owners had to pay a license fee for the privilege of collecting the taxes.

Nova Scotia Works Out Tax Collecting

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

The Allied Exhibitors Association was in session at a special meeting, in Halifax, N. S., to prepare the way for the new Canadian 20 per cent tax on theatre tickets. An explanation of the tax collection was given the assembled exhibitors and distributors by representatives of the dominion government and by A. J. Mason, of Springhill, N. S., representing the Allied. He owns and operates the Capitol at Springhill, and is chairman of the provincial conciliation board, and past president of Allied. In the explanation, it was pointed out that the new 20 per cent levy included the provincial amusement tax about ten per cent, as well as the theatre admission. Two separate tickets will be sold to each theatre patron, one for the admission and provincial tax and the other for the dominion tax. The collection will add considerably to the work of the theatre staffs, and the exhibitors are keeping their fingers crosed on the score of reduced patronage. Both independents and circuits were represetned at the Halifax meeting, and some of the distributing entities were also represented. W. H. Cuzner, operating the Strand, Sydney Mines, N. S., president of Allied was chairman. Standing in the Famous Players Canadian, were R. S. Roddick, of Halifax, maritime supervisor, and T. J. Courtney, manager Casino, Halifax; for Bernstein & Lieberman, M. S. Bernstein, of St. John, president of that firm; for F. G. Spencer Company, F. Gordon Spencer, general manager, St. John.

Duke's Theatre Course

A course in theatre management is now a part of Duke University's student training in Durham, N. C. Practical experience is gained by the students at the University's motion picture theatre on the campus. Their training is supplemented by instruction by non-faculty lecturers.

Landstrom Joins U.A.

Among the latest additions to Seattle's film industry are Harry Landstrom, who has become salesman for United Artists, and also his son Lewis Landstrom, who takes position in the shipping department at Paramount.

$30,000 WEEKLY SLOT-MOVIE GROSS TROUBLES NEW ENGLAND EXHIBITORS

Trade Organizes to Support Tax and Regulatory Legislation in Massachusetts; See Possible Drop in Theatre Grosses

by MIKE KAPLAN
in Boston

Within six months, slot machine movies have invaded New England in force. Nearly every section has been covered from a distribution standpoint and some 200 locations are reported grossing over $30,000 weekly.

Just how much the independent exhibitor, or even the circuits will suffer as a result of new amusement "leak" in public spending is almost impossible to determine at present. Film exhibitors, however, are almost unanimous in their opinion that the continued growth of the machines will be harmful to some extent to theatre grossses and for this reason, measures imposing heavy taxes on the coin-operated movies have been sponsored by exhibitor groups.

Tax Proposed

In Massachusetts, for example, the legislative committee on military affairs and public safety has reported favorably a measure that would impose a $50 tax on each machine and a $2 assessment on each film shown. This measure would mean the coin-operated movie machines wold be subject to a weekly charge of $16 apiece—the cost of the tax on each of the eight films shown in the box. This measure is mild compared with the measure originally introduced which called for a $10 assessment for each film—a weekly total of $80—plus $50 per week for a certificate of approval. This would have meant a $130 nut for the movie machine operators, before the machine could be placed on location. It is generally expected that the new measure reported out by the committee will be changed again, with the ultimate weekly tax reaching an estimated $50.

Exhibitor groups in other states in the New England area also are reported to be preparing similar measures for consideration by the various state legislatures. Massachusetts was first, due to the rapidity with which the new idea spread in the Bay State. Most of the machines now in use in the six-state area are to be found in Massachusetts. It is understood that exhibitors in other states are awaiting the outcome of the proposed Massachusetts legislation, apparently figuring on basing their legislation on the measure which is finally passed at the state house in Boston.

It is generally agreed that some taxing legislation on the machines will be put through and it is not yet definite as to the amount of opposition which the slot machine movie men will provide. There is very little local organization of the coin-machine men and it is believed that the fighting of the tax measure will not be a unified effort, but rather the attempts of one or two men who are operating the machines.

The chief complaint against the machines is that the locations generally are in small towns or in roadside restaurants. Persons watching the machines in these locations lose their urge to attend the movies. Although all the films are, necessarily, shorts, many exhibitors have expressed the fear that the plan could be developed whereby a cafe or restaurant could charge an admission price and show a feature film. Under the present mechanical setup of the machines, eight three-minute shorts are shown. It would not be too difficult, it is understood, to convert the machines so that they could play one 45 minute feature. Exhibitors are afraid that if this came about, locations near theatres could utilize the machines as business-getters, charging a small admission price. For example, a restaurant could, by adding a cover charge of approximately 25 cents to their regular prices, make a nice profit on one showing of a feature film on the machines.

Of the almost 200 locations already reported, it is understood that the majority of them are near recognized motion picture houses. No figures are available, but comment has been heard along the Film Exchange Row in Boston that grosses have started to slide off in many houses since the slot machine movies were installed in nearby locations.

Exhibitor groups have indicated they have strong support from legislators in the battle to license and tax the new medium and it is generally believed that within the next six months the entire New England area will have more or less unified legislation on movie machines. Although it is impossible to get any definite figures, most exhibitors seem to feel that the average weekly tax of at least $50 is greatly to be desired as it is the only means of making the movie machine a direct competitor with overhead problems similar to those of the theatre. At present, movie machines are untaxed and unlicensed and the total overhead is the cost of electricity.

There have been rumors of a compromise being effected between exhibitors and coin machine men but as yet there is no semblance of fact to back up these stories.

At the present time, the only machines in use in New England are the Panoram machines, manufactured by the Mills firm with the films from Globe Productions in which James Roosevelt is interested. Another firm with which Rudy Vallee formerly was connected is reported ready to enter the field.

BOSTON TICKET LAW HITS SHUBERT SALE

Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts signed a new law recently, the purpose of which is to prevent the Shubert theatre interests from engaging in the sale and resale of theatre tickets through its ticket brokers' agency. The Shubert interests are alleged to have operated the agency, known as Herrick's Inc., through which choice tickets in its various Boston theatres were sold at prices in excess of the regular box office price.

For almost two years other ticket agencies in Boston have complained that they have been unable to obtain good seats at Shubert-operated theatres except by paying the Shubert interests a fee of 25 cents per ticket.

Look to "Jukes" For Tax Revenue

Throughout the country state legislatures still in session, while considering industry problems (see page 52), are mulling over the possibility of taxing "juke-box" movies, slot machines and pin-ball games.

In Florida "juke-joints," night clubs, dance halls, pin-ball machines, billiard and pool halls and bowling alleys would be taxed in a bill presented before the state legislature currently in session at Tallahassee. The new source of revenue, as the result of such taxes, would be used to provide special old age pensions in the state. The tax would be on the basis of ten per cent of the gross income. Marble boards and pin-ball machines listed in the bill as taxable have been outlawed by Florida for the past several years.

License Commissioner Paul Moss of New York City has announced license fees for coin-in-the-slot film devices in the city have been in effect since May 1st. Machines showing sound films are taxed $2 a month, while the silent pictures are taxed at $1 a month.

Other "Juke" Legislation

The Iowa House has passed a bill licensing new soundies at $100 a year after an explanation that only eight were operating in Iowa. Sponsors of the bill claimed one machine took in $146 in its first week of operation in Des Moines, while others maintained the machines were "a bust" and promoters were losing money on them. One representative claims operators are merely waiting until the legislature adjourns before flooding the state with the machines.

Legislation to license and regulate the use of "Juke-boxes" was filed in the Illinois assembly by Representative William A. Warfield of Chicago. The bill would place the licensing and regulation of the music machines in the department of registration and education and would have each manufacturers and distributor pay an annual fee of $100. In addition a license fee of $5 for each machine would be charged. Possession or operation of such machines without a license is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed $100. The bill was sent to the house committee on license and miscellany.

The Common Council's License Committee has requested from the City Attorney of Milwaukee an opinion on the extent of the city's control over coin operated film machines. Proposals being studied call for the licensing of the machines or a requirement that the operators pay an annual $100 amusement license. It was thought that places already holding amusement licenses would be permitted to install the machines without additional fees. The subject of censorship is also occupying the committee's attention.

In Filsboro, N. J., an ordinance, drawn at the instruction of the City Council, calls for an annual license fee on all coin-operated machines. The measure calls for a $20 license for pinball machines, $10 on music machines and $5 on candy and cigarette-vending machines.

Musicians Union Objects

Meanwhile, the Philadelphia musician's union, Local 77, has started a drive against coin film machines, feeling that the music machines are making inroads into the employment possibilities of musicians. All members, in an executive order, were advised to report to the union all instances of private affairs and parties as well as establishments where a music machine has been used instead of musicians.

More than $90,000 is expected this year from coin machine license fees, following an announcement by chief clerk Al Tronzo in the Pittsburgh treasurer's office that $77,000 had already been collected. Prior to the passing of the ordinance raising machine license fees to $25, annual revenue from coin games approximated $25,000. Last year's income was $65,000.

BROWNE NAMES BIOFF TO WATCH DEFENSE

Telegram from IATSE Head Wins Postponement of Trial for Hollywood Labor Leader

William (Willie) Bioff, lately inactive leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees on the Coast, including all studio IATSE unions, numbering among them some 12,000 workers, has been reconfirmed by George E. Browne, IATSE president, as "personal representative," and, an announcement from Hollywood on Tuesday said, will act as liaison officer of the Alliance there, to prevent labor troubles from interfering with production of training films for the U. S. Army.

Bioff on Monday obtained a delay, in Los Angeles Federal court, in the Federal case against him for $85,000 income tax evasions in 1936 and 1937. His trial date had been June 24th. His attorneys read a telegram to Federal Judge Paul McCormick, a telegram from Mr. Browne, giving Bioff his new defense-film responsibilities. With no protest from Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hall, the Judge set the case back to September.

Attorney Hall observed that the Government needed more time to prepare its case.

Labor Troubles Foreseen

Part of the tax-case extenuation advanced by Bioff was the current labor situation: the expected renewal of the basic studio labor agreement between producers and the "big six" internationals; possible reentrance of the IATSE into the basic pact; clamor by IATSE and other studio unions for readjustment of wages and hours; reclassification of studio workers under the Wages and Hours Act; and a possible strike by the Screen Writers Guild, protesting against unsatisfactory producers' counter-proposals for a contract.

In the Screen Writers Guild matter, the members met Monday night to vote on a strike to force producers to terms. The guild directors at the same time invited representatives of all major guilds to a meeting Tuesday night, for a "discussion of common problems," indicating a possible plea for support.

At the Monday meeting, a "war chest" of $50,000 was voted, and the bargaining committee was told to stand by its contract demands. Inferred, was a strike if results from further negotiation are unfavorable.

Meanwhile, emphasizing the fight the cartoonists' union is having with studios of that category, the representatives of the Screen Cartoonists Local 852 met Tuesday with those of Leon Schlesinger. Workers in the latter's studio walked out Monday morning.

The dispute was about the length of a proposed pact, the union wanted it for one year, the producer for three.

Over the weekend, the Federation of Screen Cartoonists, an organization of Disney studio employees, dissolved. The American Society of Screen Cartoonists replaced it, with virtually the same leadership. The studio has been declared unfair to labor, and the federation a company union, by the local National Labor Relations Board. The latter was told on Monday that the federation is officially dissolved. It was told this fact at an NLRB conference before Trial Examiner James C. Paradise, on procedure for opening hearings on charges the Disney studio fostered company unions.

Sessions later this week were to determine whether the hearings should be carried through despite the disappearance of a respondent, the Federation. The Screen Cartoonists union officials described the dissolution as a "dodge."

On the same day's afternoon, Gunther Lessing, vice-president of Disney Productions, agreed to sign a consent decree pledging the company not to interfere with employee unionization.

He also said that the studio would abide by the decision of a forthcoming bargaining election.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is understood to have received a report from its Coast office, with charges that the Screen Actors Guild is controlled by a minority; by its featured player members.

In New York, meanwhile, the local NLRB has forwarded to Washington transcripts of testimony taken in hearings concluded last Wednesday, in the petition by the Screen Readers Guild for certification as the bargaining agency for such workers in the New York home offices of the majors.

In that city, too, the J. J. Shubert management has conceded to demands of the Theatrical Managers and Agents union. Lawyers for both were to confer during the week, on a basic agreement. A threatened strike would have tied up Shubert shows in New York, and also on the road. The Shubert company had objected to union jurisdiction for road shows.

The New York Stagehands Local has re-elected Robert Anstett president. Other officers for the coming season are George Fitzgerald, vice-president; John C. McDowell, executive secretary; John Garvey, treasurer; Edward Mortimer, sergeant-at-arms. Business agents are Vincent Jacobi and Sol Pernick.

The Philadelphia film exchange employees union, B7, held its annual dinner dance Thursday, at the Hotel Stephen Girard. The dinner committee was headed by William Z. Porter, union president.

The Detroit managers' union last week started picketing at the Parkside Theatre, operated by the Moses brothers. Dispute is over firing of a manager. It is also picketing the Oakdale, in Hazel Park, operated by the Schulte circuit; and was said last week to be planning picketing of the Radio City, Ferndale.

Win Wage Increase

In Seattle, operating engineers and electricians of the Hamrick-Evergreen circuits Fifth Avenue, Orpheum, and Paramount, have been granted a 25 per cent wage boost.

The Philadelphia unit of the American Guild of Variety Artists, vaudeville union, elected officers and directors Wednesday.

G. Kingston Howard and Samuel Isaacson have been elected secretary and treasurer, and assistant recording secretary, respectively, of the Baltimore Federation of Labor. Both are active in the city's projectionists' local, 181.

Ten councillors and one replacement will be elected at the annual meeting of Actors Equity in New York, June 6th, at the Astor Hotel. There will be reports of officers, and other business.

Football Newsreel Co. Formed in Hollywood

Norman Sper, recognized football authority, has formed the Football Newsreel Co., in Hollywood to produce a series of 13 subjects to be released during the football season showing the teams in action, their weak and strong points, and an analysis of games.

SIX NEW ARMY FILMS STARTED

Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has announced the start of production of six additional Army Signal Corps training films.

The Hal Roach studios will produce "Conduct of Physical Training"; Universal, "Anti-Aircraft Searchlight Battery"; Warner Brothers, "37mm. Anti-Aircraft Gun Battery"; RKO, "Light Machine Gun Platoon, Cavalry Rifle Troop"; Sol Lesser, "Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun Battery", and Samuel Goldwyn, "Engineer Corps Equipment."

Training films on the "240mm. Howitzer", "The 60mm. Mortar", "Instruction of the Soldier" and "The Basic Principles of Skiing" are also in production at Paramount, Republic, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Twentieth Century-Fox studios, respectively.

Eight additional training films are in preparation, to be assigned to the various studios.

Will Transcribe Documents to Film

With a $30,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, the American Council of Learned Societies, the Library of Congress, and the Musicological Society will transcribe manuscripts of scientific value, in Great Britain, to film. The film is to be deposited in the Library. Copies will be made, for access of scholars elsewhere.

The project is being undertaken because manuscripts and other documents of value to science, are threatened with destruction in the present war upon the British islands.

Columbia Signs Oil Executive

Columbia has signed William K. Hopkin, Union Oil Company executive, as director of personnel and manager of industrial relations. He will continue his $1-a-year duties with the Government.

Duffy Reopens Theatre

Henry Duffy, connected with show business for many years, has acquired the Alcazar theatre in downtown San Francisco, and will remodel for legitimate productions. Mr. Duffy's acquisition of the theatre thwarted a plan to tear it down and make room for a parking lot.

Artists' Bureau Formed

Southern Artists' Bureau, Inc., has been incorporated at Dover, Del., to engage in the business of booking talent. The company listed a capital of $5,000 with S. L. Mackey, J. Slaughter and H. Kennedy of Wilmington as the incorporators.

Portable Shows Planned

McCormack and Greer, who operate the Majestic, Greenfield, Ark., have purchased complete outdoor theatre equipment from Floyd Hill, Drexel, Mo. They plan to show through a circuit of smaller Arkansas towns.

"SOME RUN" COMPLAINT DISMISSED; FIRST APPEAL RULING DUE SOON

Minneapolis Arbitrator Decides in Favor of Paramount; Appeal Board Bans Oral Argument; Three New Cases Filed

An award in favor of the defendant distributor, Paramount, in the first decision on a Minneapolis complaint highlighted the arbitration scene this week as many of the hearings begun last week reached a conclusion and the cases were taken under advisement by the arbitrators. During the week five new cases were filed and four hearings were held. An amended decision was also released in Buffalo Case No. 1.

An early ruling on the first appeal of a motion picture arbitration case appeared likely on Monday when the Appeals Board at New York denied petitions for oral argument and indicated their decision would be based on the record of the arbitration hearing. The first case appealed was Chicago No. 2, in which Ben Banovitz, operator of the Ken theatre, sought clearance from Paramount, RKO, and 20th Century-Fox, naming the Schoenstadt circuit. Charles P. Megan, arbitrator, dismissed the case on the ground that specific run, rather than clearance was involved, making the complaint not subject to arbitration until September 1st.

The appeals board, consisting of Van Vechten Veeder, George W. Alger and Albert W. Putnam, denied the petition of attorneys for Paramount and 20th Century-Fox that they be permitted to present oral arguments on appeal.

Two in Washington

Two new complaints were filed in Washington by L. W. Lea, operator of the Lea and Schoolfield theatres, Danville, Va., naming all five consenting companies. In the first case Mr. Lea asks "some run" for his Lea theatre, and in the second, asks for a review of the clearance of three Kincey circuit theatres and one S. W. Carver theatre over his Schoolfield. It is alleged that the Schoolfield is 74 to 120 days behind the first run. Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, is Mr. Lea's attorney. These are the fourth and fifth cases on the Washington docket.

Phillip J. Mackey, arbitrator, on Monday dismissed the complaint of the Gayety theatre, operated at Minneapolis by David Gillman asking that Paramount Pictures Corp. be ordered to grant "some run" to the Gayety. Mr. Mackey ruled that Paramount had not, in violation of Section 6 of the consent decree, refused to license pictures to the subsequent run theatre. The case was filed on March 12th and two hearings were held, starting on April 22nd. A similar complaint against 20th Century-Fox was withdrawn.

Testimony at the hearings brought out that Paramount had delivered pictures to the complainant, but turned down subsequent applications from the Gayety because the theatre refused higher-bracket pictures, held one-day films for two days, showed pictures with vaudeville and advertised them on dual bills contrary to agreement. Mr. Gillman said he had agreed to the application under the pressure of urgent need for product but considered stipulations of the distributor as "unreasonable booking conditions" and the $20 average rental exorbitant.

ARBITRATION CASES FILED TO DATE

The following is a summary of the arbitration cases filed to date:

Filed This Week:

San Francisco—One on Clearance
Charlotte—One on Some Run
Philadelphia—One on Clearance
Washington—One on Cleaarnce
One on Some Run

Previously Reported:

Clearance	42
Some Run	19
Withholding Prints	1
Total to May 21st	67

Hearings Held This Week:

Milwaukee—Case No. 1
Philadelphia—Case No. 2
Denver—Case No. 2
Albany—Cases Nos. 1 and 2

Settled This Week:

Minneapolis—Case No. 3
Buffalo—Case No. 1

The first arbitration case in the San Francisco district seeks better clearance for the Rita theatre, Solano county, Vallejo, in a complaint filed on May 16 by the operator, William Symfy. The complaint is against RKO, Paramount and Warner Brothers and charges the companies have granted unfair and unreasonable clearances to the Senator, Marval, Strand and Valmar theatres in Vallejo. MGM, 20th Century-Fox and the Majestic theatre were named as interested parties.

Clearance Reduction Asked

Mr. Symfy's complaint asks for a reduction of the clearance at once for his newer Rita theatre. The houses involved are located in a heavily industrialized area at the head of the San Francisco bay area. The all-shifts building and repair program now underway at the nearby Mare Island Navy yard has increased theatre attendance at nearly all theatres in the Solano county area.

A second case was filed in Charlotte, N. C., on May 14th asking "some run" for the Lafayette theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., from Warner Brothers, RKO and Paramount. Ellis Blumenthal, operator of the 450-seat Lafayette, is the complainant. He named the 700-seat Lincoln theatre as an interested party.

Philadelphia Case No. 5 was filed on May 15th on clearance, naming the Warner circuit in Philadelphia for the second time. Samuel and Morris Romerson, operators of the Palm theatre, 1,000-seat house in industrial Frankford, complained that MGM, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox granted unfair clearance to nearby Warner houses.

Waldon D. Smith, arbitrator of Buffalo case No. 1, on May 14th awarded "some run" to the Genesee theatre, Mt. Morris, New York, and in a supplementary award this week specified that the defendant, 20th Century-Fox, offer its 1940-41 product for "some runs." Richard De Toto, operator of the Genesee, filed the complaint March 1st, also naming Warners and the Family theatre. The last two withdrew from the arbitration after reaching a settlement.

Mr. Smith's award ordered: "That defendant offer its 1940-41 product to complainant (De Toto), Genesee Theatre, Mt. Morris, on a run to be designated by 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., and upon terms and conditions fixed by said distributor which are not calculated to defeat the purpose of Section 6 of the consent decree."

The case is one of the first in which an exhibitor has been granted the right to selection of a specific season's new product. The complainant alleged he was not given an equal opportunity with competing theatres to book first run films.

Hearings were completed May 15th in Milwaukee's first arbitration case in which the Evansville Theatre, Inc., seeks elimination of the 14 days' clearance being granted the Jeffric at Janesville by Paramount over its Rex in Evansville. Egon W. Peck, attorney for the Evansville company, was given 15 days by arbitrator Thomas P. Whelan to file his brief, and Stephen Keane, attorney for Paramount, and E. Harold Hallows, counsel for the Jeffris Theatre Co., were granted 10 days to file a reply.

Mr. Peck requested a finding that the clearance granted the Jeffris is unreasonable and that the Rex should have the right to play pictures, if prints are available, at the same time as the Jeffris, or as an alternative, that the Rex be permitted to play pictures immediately at the conclusion of their run at the Jeffris and that the Jeffris shall in no event preclude the Rex from playing pictures which the Jeffris does not set and play within two weeks of their availability.

Mr. Keene maintained that the relief sought by the Rex was not within the power of the consent decree to give because the controversy was one of run rather than clearance, and as such does not become applicable until August, 1941.

At Philadelphia Case No. 2, the "some run" complaint of David Silver, operator of the Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., was heard May 15th.

With an interpretation of Sections 6 and 17 of the consent decree involved in the adjudication, arbitrator Rupert C. Schaeffer, Jr., professor at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, reserved decision. Facts in the case were admitted by both parties, yet, since it involved a situation new to the arbitration system and Prof. Schaeffer's decision will undoubtedly set a precedent ruling for such cases, the arbitrator asked attorneys to file informal briefs and said that he would make a detailed and independent study of the case. As a result, he said, it will take some time before he will be prepared to render a decision.

MGM Named

The complaint, filed April 2, was directed against MGM in a situation involving Loew's Parkway theatre in Wilmington, Del. The complaint asked that Metro be directed to sell its product on the same terms as the other major distributors. The situation is unique since the company sells no second run in the area, playing its product exclusively for the past ten years at the affiliated Parkway house in Wilmington. The history of the case dates back a decade ago when a then sales manager of the company introduced a policy of taking over the operation of a theatre in a territory and selling its pictures exclusively to that theatre. While the practice has been generally discontinued in recent years, it has been maintained in the Wilmington territory.

Arbitration was started under Section 6 of the consent decree, which states that an exhibitor can buy and should be sold some run. However, MGM based its defense on Section 17 of the decree, giving the distributor the right to protect an affiliated circuit house. Philip Stern was attorney for the exhibitor while C. Stanley Thompson represented MGM. In addition to Mr. Silver, testimony was taken from his son, Herman; Thomas J. Connors, Metro eastern sales manager; and from Rudolph Berger, Metro district manager in Washington.

In Denver's second case, the Star theatre, Ft. Lupton, Colo. vs. the Big Five and the Rex at Brighton, Colo., arbitrator John Carroll, former district attorney, on Friday May 16th, took the case under advisement after dismissing the withholding of prints charge, and will rule only on clearance as it might affect future contracts. E. K. Menagh of the Star is asking for better clearance in competition with the Rex at Brighton, five miles away. The Rex at present enjoys a 21-day margin. 20th Century-Fox was excused after it was shown they were not involved. The withholding of prints charge against all five was dropped, and Loew's withdrew after reaching an amicable agreement with Mr. Menagh on clearance. Hearings lasted three full days.

Albany Cases Ended

Albany Cases No. 1 and 2 reached the end of hearings on Monday after four full days of testimony before Morton J. Hall, arbitrator. Both cases are clearance complaints filed by Alex Papayanakos, operator of the American theatre, Canton, N. Y., against Warner-Vitagraph and RKO.

Attorneys must file briefs by June 12 and rebuttals by June 19th Mr. Hall, life insurance special agent who heard the case, ruled. His final decision is not due until July 19th.

Hearing on Philadelphia Case No. 3, the clearance complaint of Rose Hexter, operator of the Breeze theatre, postponed because of the Variety convention, was set for May 28. The complaint, filed April 3rd, is the first of a local exhibitor involving the Warner circuit and is directed against Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and Warner Brothers. Galvin H. Rankin, of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, is the arbitrator.

Postponement of the hearing on Cincinnati Case No. 1 from May 14th to 2 P. M., May 28th, was ordered this week at the request of the parties involved by Appellate Judge Stanley Matthews, arbitrator. Willis H. Vance, operator of the Ohio and Eden theatres, Cincinnati neighborhood houses, and the State, Newport, Ky., names Loew's, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, and Vitagraph, with the Strand and Hippodrome theatres Newport, as interested parties. He requests "some run."

Arbitrator Named

Roland J. Christy, local attorney, was selected as arbitrator in the Philadelphia clearance complaint of Bryant Wiest, operator of the Hollywood theatre in Elizabethville, Pa., against MGM. The case, filed April 22nd, has been set for a May 26th hearing, and seeks the same availability as the Theatorium theatre in Lykens, Pa. R. J. Budd, operator of the Theatorium, filed as an intervening party on May 7.

Arbitrators were named at New York for Cases 9 and 10 on Monday. Robert A. Bruce, attorney, will arbitrate the clearance complaint (No. 9) of the Colony theatre, Sayreville, N. J. William E. Stevenson, attorney, will hear the clearance complaint of the Temple, Union City, N. J.

At Los Angeles Herbert Cameron, attorney for the State Railroad Commission, was named arbitrator of Case No. 1, clearance action filed by the Mission playhouse, San Gabriel.

New Haven Case No. 1 was set for hearing on May 26th after a postponement from May 19th. Frederick H. Wiggin is arbitrator of the clearance complaint filed by M. Cascioli, operator of the Forest at West Haven, Conn.

New York Case No. 6, Andora Amusement Corp. against RKO, Warner, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox on clearance was postponed on Monday until May 26th.

GREENLAND WELCOMES NEW U. S. PICTURES

Captain Otto Nielse, upon completing a journey from Greenland with 28 passengers and a cargo of cryolite, used in making aluminum, said that one of the more powerful reasons why natives of Greenland welcomed the intervention of the United States there, was that the Coast Guard cutters now brought them new American made films, while the motion pictures that were exhibited there previously were always several years old.

Revivals in Wisconsin

Fox has been staging Saturday midnight revival shows at various spots around Wisconsin. The policy is being conducted at the circuit's Beverly in Janesville; Orpheum, Green Bay; Fox, Marinette; Odeon, Bever Dam; Brin, Menasha and Fox, Stevens Point. It includes the showing of three films at one admission price. A sample schedule of a request night program is the following from the Fox at Stevens Point; "March of Time," "Cherokee Strip," newsreel, "The Great Lie" and "Cat and Canary."

Dismisses Suit Against Blumberg

Judge Bernard L. Shientag on Wednesday in New York Supreme Court dismissed the $200,000 action of Emil Neugebauer against Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures and his secretary, Lawrence Waterman, for commissions claimed to have been owed Mr. Neugebauer as an agent. The latter claimed that he discovered the child star, Gloria Jean, and arranged for her to sign with Universal. Judge Shientag ruled the plaintiff could not hold the defendants personally on the alleged contract.

Twist Named Producer

John Twist, author of numerous screen successes, has been elevated to producer status by George Schaefer, president of RKO. He will receive twin credits for his first assignment, the production of his original story and screen play "Four Jacks and a Queen," a comedy with music.

Russell Borg Promoted

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warners, has announced the appointment of Russell C. Borg as Kansas City branch manager. Mr. Borg has been a salesman for the company there. He succeeds Clarence K. Olson, who resigned from the company.

Michigan Rejects Block Sales Bill

The score of state-right tests of the Federal Government's consent decree blocks-of-five selling provision stood this week at two to one, the House of Representatives in Michigan having nullified a bill to compel distributors to offer all of their product and give exhibitors the right to cancel 20 per cent. The decree provides that the "Big 5" signatories offer only blocks of five, and no cancellation, at advance trade screenings.

Florida had previously killed an anti-blocks-of-five bill, and last month Minnesota passed one.

The Michigan House appeared at first to have killed HR Bill No. 335 by re-referring it to the Committee on State Affairs, after Representative James B. Stanley, of Kalamazoo, asserted it conflicted with the Federal Court decree. "If we pass this bill," he declared, "it would mean you would go to state prison for violating it, but if you obeyed it you could go to a Federal penitentiary for disobeying the Federal decree."

However, and unexpectedly, on Tuesday, the House nullified the bill by passing it with an amendment which subjects it to the provisions of the consent decree and to any "decree regulating the practices of the licensing exhibitor."

The amendment defeats the purpose of the bill and renders the measure inconsequential, if passed by the Senate, to which it now goes.

The amendment to Section 2, subsection "A," follows: "Subject to being trade shown and offered in blocks of not more than five, and otherwise subject to all provisions of any decrees of any court of competent jurisdiction regulating the practices of the licensing exhibitor."

The bill, introduced by Representative Raymond J. Snow, of Flint, made violation a felony on the part of distributors.

The Minnesota Bill

The distributors affected by the Minnesota anti-blocks-of-five selling restriction have been preparing a court case for a test of the law. Meanwhile State's Attorney General J. A. A. Burnquist, of Minneapolis, is leaving enforcement to the various county prosecutors.

The Attorney General has made no ruling whatever on whether the film companies will or will not be permitted to sell pending determination of the law's validity.

Thus far none of the county attorneys has said or done anything about the matter.

It appeared likely that there would be no need for enforcement. Most major exchanges have halted the sale of pictures within the state until the status of the law is cleared up. There were reports that any violations, should they occur, would be deprecated by the authorities, but they naturally would not say, privately or otherwise, that they intended not to enforce the law.

Colonel H. A. Cole, of Dallas, president of Allied States Association in New York, Tuesday, declared the Minnesota antiblocks of five law and any similar state interference with the consent decree, would be declared unconstitutional when it reaches a court test.

"The only thing to do is to go along with the decree," Colonel Cole declared, as he forecast the overthrow of the Minnesota block booking law. He observed there were sound legal grounds upon which to argue for the overthrow of the Minnesota law or similar enactments.

FITZGIBBONS NAMES NEW F-P SETUP IN CANADA, ACQUIRES 25 THEATRES

Nathanson Reported Planning to Assume War Work Post with Government; Famous Players Acquires Control of Hanson

Swift developments in the Canadian circuit scene this week followed the resignation, ten days ago, of N. L. Nathanson as president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, in Toronto.

J. J. Fitzgibbons, who was Mr. Nathanson's general manager in the FP circuit, acting in his new post as the circuit's president, set up a new personnel structure, on Monday.

The 25 theatres of the Hanson Circuit, originally believed to have been under Nathanson influence in the latter's reputed plans to build a large circuit in Canada in competion to Famous Players, unexpectedly went to the control of FP.

Mr. Nathanson, it appeared, would forego immediately outward new circuit participation in favor of war work for the Government.

Officers Named

In his first official statement as president of Famous Players Canadian, Mr. Fitzgibbons named the officers and department heads who will be associated with him in the operation of the company.

The board of directors elected R. W. Bolstad, formerly comptroller of the company, to the position of vice-president and treasurer and he will continue to direct financial affairs.

The board also elected N. G. Barrow to the office of secretary to replace T. J. Bragg who will retire shortly.

Angus MacCunn and W. E. Kerr have been appointed assistant treasurers and will also head their own departments. Mr. MacCunn is manager of the real estate department and Mr. Kerr is chief accountant.

L. G. Geering has been appointed assistant secretary and will also direct the audit department as general auditor. J. A. Troyer continues to head the statistical department.

Ben Beldsaler, with Ralph Dale as his assistant, will be in complete charge of buying and booking films. There will be no changes in the booking departments throughout the circuit.

Morris Stein will continue as general manager for the eastern division and will have under his management all theatres in Ontario and Quebec (with the exception of those in the city of Montreal) and will have added to his division the theatres in the Maritimes with R. S. Roddick of Halifax as district manager for that group.

Jack Arthur will supervise the theatres in western and northern Ontario in Mr. Stein's division.

L. I. Bearg will carry on as general manager of the British Columbia theatres and with him will be associated Frank Gow and C. S. Neville.

In the Prairie Provinces, E. A. Zorn will direct as general manager, with Frank Kershaw as supervisor of the Saskatchewan and Alberta theatres and Don Gauld as supervisor of the subsequent-run theatres in Winnipeg.

James R. Nairn continues as director of all advertising and publicity, with C. J. Appel as associate.

Ben Witham assumes the post of head of the department of purchasing, maintenance and construction for the east with Charles Dentlebeck as eastern projection supervisor. In the west, Victor Armand continues as supervisor of projection, purchasing, maintenance and construction.

The insurance department at the head office continues under the management of R. G. Darby.

As soon as arrangements can be completed, all managers will be called in to various points in the east and west for discussions with executives.

Nathanson Plans War Work

N. L. Nathanson reportedly has been offered and will accept a war post with the Dominion Government, following his resignation as head of Famous Players Canadian, six weeks before his five-year contract was to expire.

Informed circles in Toronto believe he may be associated with Leonard W. Brockington of Winnipeg in a reorganization of the Dominion's Bureau of Public Information, which includes films. Such a reorganization is expected to include abolition of the National Film Board.

Announcement regarding Mr. Nathanson's new Canadian theatre circuit is not expected for some time, pending organizational developments. However, it is understood that Morris A. Milligan, who resigned last February as general manager of Paramount Film Service, Ltd., acted for Mr. Nathanson in the recent purchase of three Fred Guest theatres at Hamilton, and more recently in acquiring theatres in the Eastern Maritime provinces.

Other Resignations

Following Mr. Nathanson's resignation from FPC, the resignations of Ed Harris, supervisor of theatre maintenance for the company, and Jay I. English, FPC supervising architect, were received. Canadian associates of Nathanson who retired from the FPC board were W. D. Ross, Major A. P. Holt, F. B. McCurdy and A. E. Dyment.

Harry S. Dahn, previously associated with Nathanson in an executive capacity in FPC, and later supervisor of Hanson Theatres Corp., has resigned as general manager of Consolidated Theatres Association, an organization of Ontario independent exhibitors. It is believed that he will be associated with Mr. Nathanson in his new theatre interests, reported to number about 75 houses.

Mr. Nathanson revealed that Paramount owned approximately 90 per cent of the stock of FPC. His own interest is believed to be less than 10 per cent, so that whether he retains or disposes of it is of no corporate significance.

FP Canadian Gets Hanson Group

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has absorbed the Hanson Theatres Corporation circuit of 25 houses in Ontario. This consolidates the FPC setup.

For years headed by Oscar Hanson as a presumably independent circuit in opposition to FPC, the group was regarded as under Mr. Nathanson's influence. Hanson resigned as president of the corporation two weeks ago.

Mr. Fitzgibbons, new president and managing director of FPC, summoned the managers of the 25 Hanson houses to a meeting at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto last Friday and informed them of the new operating plans. R. W. Bolstad, FPC vice-president, and Morris Stein, operations supervisor, attended the meeting.

At the FPC meeting, Mr. Fitzgibbons announced the convention would be held in Toronto in August.

Notice was given of the dissolution of Theatre Operating Service, Ltd., former subsidiary of Hanson Theatre Corp., handling equipment and supplies. It is to be absorbed by the General Theatre Supply Company which is linked with Famous Players.

The resignations of three Hanson Theatres officials were received prior to the meeting. These were H. T. Long, general manager; H. C. D. Main, chief supervisor, and James Kadurka, assistant supervisor.

When asked if FPC planned to close any former Hanson houses to reduce opposition in Ontario towns, an FPC spokesman intimated all would remain open. Observers in the trade regarded this as a measure to prevent possible new opposition from the Odeon Circuit, of which Paul Nathanson, son of N. L. Nathanson, is president.

The Allen Circuit of 40 theatres, banded under the Premier Operating Corporation, announced through Raymond Allen, general manager, that it would not be affected by the FPC reorganization. This circuit operated under a measure of cooperation with FPC under the Nathanson regime.

It is understood also that the Bloom and Fine circuit of 15 houses in Toronto, a recognized subsidiary of FPC, will remain intact.

U. S. NOW RADIO PROPAGANDIST

Under unconfirmed, but generally assumed, suggestions from the Administration, National Broadcasting on Thursday, May 16th, began a 24-hour daily schedule of short wave "goodwill" broadcasting, 16 hours of which are for Spain, Portugal and France. The action followed the disclosure by the French Vichy government that it was "collaborating" with Germany. The broadcasts are from New York, on a directional beam for the country which they are intended to reach; and they are at 100,000 watts. The British Broadcasting Company also is relaying the programs. The broadcasts begin at midnight, last 16 hours. The remainder of the 24 hours is devoted to programs for Latin-America.

Columbia Branch Changes

Robert Kimmelman is the new office manager and head booker, George Tice city salesman, and Jack Kohler main line salesman for Columbia Pictures in Pittsburgh, as the result of changes made when Joseph Gins, former city salesman, was moved to Charlotte, N. C., as exchange manager of the company.

Hughes' "Outlaw" Approved

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has approved the revised version of Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw," to be distributed by Twentieth Centurty-Fox, and directed that a Production Code seal be issued for the picture. The decision was made following a number of changes.

Chicago to Have Drive-In Theatres

Two Chicago companies have announced plans for construction of several "drive-in" theatre units within the next two years. Ground will be broken for two theatres in a few days and one is already under construction.

The Lucas Theatre Corp., headed by B. A. Lucas, has been franchised by the Park-in Theatres, Inc., Camden, N. J., to use their plans and patents for the state of Indiana and southwest Cook County, Illinois. Two units will be started shortly and both are expected to be ready for opening at mid-July. An outstanding feature of the Lucas units will be individual speakers for each automobile.

The company also plans to build eight more "drive-ins" in the early future. One, located on a 15-acre tract on Route 12-20 between Gary and Michigan City, Indiana, will have a capacity of 500 cars. The other, located on the Southwest Highway in southwest Cook County, will have facilities for parking 700 cars. Policy for both will be a 3½ hour show comprising a single feature and short subjects.

The Illinois Drive-In Co., Inc., headed by N. S. Barger, operator of the Rialto theatre in Chicago, has had an open air unit under construction for the past four weeks on a two-acre site at Waukegan and Golf Roads, near Morton Park, Ill., which is expected to open on or about May 30th with a double feature policy. It will have a capacity of 1,160 automobiles and is said to be the largest "drive-in" theatre in the world. Each car will have its own sound outlet, the sound coming from speakers in the ground, differing in this respect from the Lucas plan of speaker installation. Usherettes on bicycles will direct the parking of cars.

This unit is the first of a series of eight to be built in various sections of the country by the Illinois Drive-In Theatre Co.

Sherman, Steiner Buy Cohen Interest

Benjamin Sherman, president, and Charles Steiner, vice-president of the Belle Theatres, Inc., and Greenville Theatre, Inc., have taken over the interest of Max A. Cohen, who has withdrawn from the circuit of which he was treasurer. Greenville Theatre, Inc., is the corporate operator of the Star theatre in New York, and Belle operates several other theatres on East Side Manhattan.

Belle Theatres will move their offices from 214 West 42nd Street to 62 Delancey Street, New York.

Sign Megan Taylor

Megan Taylor, of London, 20-year-old champion figure skater, has been signed for the "Ice-Capades of 1941" review by Pete Tyrell, manager of the Arena, Philadelphia, and business manager of the Arena Managers Association. The star will join the show April 18th in Los Angeles.

Guild Points to Big Market in Actor Employment as Cue on Boom in U. S.

"Class B actor placements zoom," shouts the Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood, with war-and-defense production and "consent decree" filming combining with "a healthy box-office demand to send Hollywood employment skyrocketing".

After the third worst year in seven, in 1940, Hollywood employment in April, 1941, boomed, as indicated by the employment of daily averages running as high as 2,700, up from previous low averages of 450—all attributed, says the Guild, to Hollywood's "snapping out" of its worrying about lost foreign markets and by recognizing that the U. S. A. generally was rolling up its sleeves for riveting aircraft, laying ship keels, and speeding the production belt of big plants.

That 1940 was a bad year was shown in a special report of Central Casting Corporation to the Screen Actors Guild.

Since 1933, there have been only two years as bad for Class B as 1940—1934 and 1936. The following table shows relative earning power of Class B members in the seven preceding years:

Year	Total Placements	Dollar Value	Year	Total Placements	Dollar Value
1934	219,856	$1,984,697.54	1938	264,268	$2,848,445.68
1935	278,486	2,571,293.64	1939	294,432	3,124,671.64
1936	268,436	2,420,453.55	1940	228,342	2,529,766.00
1937	294,307	2,986,372.89

The Guild observed, "The Federal Government clamped on an anti-trust decree on principal majors which, in effect, ruled that, unless pictures are shot and in cans to be shown to the trade, they couldn't be sold; and this meant that at the first of the year Hollywood was faced with the biggest demand in the last 10 years for pictures. Then began the scramble for names and contracts. Failing in this, many studios had to borrow players. Finally, today, in certain groups of Class B players studios are finding difficulty in filling ranks of atmosphere men and women."

Testimonials for Stern and Shaw

Over 150 representatives of all branches of the motion picture industry and other friends in the New Haven, Conn., territory gathered at the seventh anniversary testimonial luncheon in honor of Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, at Ceriani's in that city on Monday, May 19th. At the request of Mr. Shaw the proceeds of the affair were turned over to charity. Among those who were invited were Mayor John W. Murphy of New Haven, Fire Chief Paul Heinz, Chief of Police, Philip T. Smith, Lieut. William Schatzman, Rabbi Edgar Siskin, Father Affleet and Judge Joseph Weiner. Herman M. Levy, executive secretary of the Connecticut MPTO, was chairman of the affair.

Charles Stern, former district manager for United Artists in New York, recently appointed to the same position in Chicago, will be tendered a testimonial luncheon at the Hotel Astor on Friday, May 23rd, by the Motion Picture Associates and local exhibitors.

The following are on the arrangements committee for the luncheon: Joe Lee, Sam Rinzler, Harry Brandt, Clarence Eiseman and Jack Ellis. Mr. Lee is president of the group.

Theatre Ballroom Built

Harry Hendel, owner of the New Granada theatre in Pittsburgh, has built a ballroom accommodating 2,000 dancers above his theatre, and will operate it for the benefit of Hill City, juvenile municipality. Booking name bands, Mr. Hendel will contribute all profits to Hill City, which was established several years ago by Mr. Hendel and Howard McKinney as a juvenile crime prevention agency.

Stage Shows Dropped

The Oriental theatre in Chicago is dropping stage shows for the summer in favor of double features. Due to the product situation in the downtown district of the city, films booked will necessarily be second and third runs. The house remains under the management of Michael Todd with Jack Hunt as house manager.

Harry Lee Book

Duell, Sloan and Pearce have accepted for publication, "O All Ye Green Things," an appreciation of Henry D. Thoreau by Harry Lee of Warners' home office publicity department. The book will be published during December. Other books by Mr. Lee are "The Little Poor Man," which won the prize offer by the Poetry Society of America, and "High Company."

Fabian Sponsors Opera

Si Fabian, well-known theatre operator in the east, in a goodwill gesture sponsored a trip to Albany, N. Y., of the Metropolitan Opera Company to render "La Boheme." The gesture resulted in a 3,500 audience and a $10,000 gross for the performance at the Fabian Palace.

Louis Ramm Promoted

Louis E. Ramm, former sales promotion manager, has been promoted to resident sales manager of the recently opened Washington branch of Equity Film Exchanges.

Suchman in New Post

Al Suchman, former general manager of the Consolidated circuit, of New York, which last week was sold to Julius Joelson, announced he would shortly disclose a new film industry affiliation.

FILMS GOING INTO NATION'S ARMY CAMPS UNDER REDUCED CLEARANCE

Showmen, Army Officers See Formation of Committee as Beginning of Centralized Order; Vaudeville Units Planned

Concurrent with indications from Washington that the top officials of the War and Navy departments are preparing to give extensive official attention to the problem of suitable entertainment, stage and screen, in draft camps and training stations, the organized motion picture industry, through its committee for cooperation with national defense turned its attention to clearance problems affecting motion picture theatres on army posts, speeding up clearance for the benefit of Army showings.

The committee of distributors and exhibitors appointed eight weeks ago by George J. Schaefer, RKO chairman of the motion picture industry's national coordinating committee, has been working on clearance problems for over 220 army theatres during the past three weeks. A. Julian Brylawski, MPTOA Washington representative, is chairman of the committee which includes Nathan Yamin, New England theatre man and E. C. Grainger, Shea circuit, representing exhibitors, and Neil F. Agnew, Paramount and A. Montague, Columbia, representing the distributors. Francis S. Harmon, defense coordinator for the industry's basic defense committee, is cooperating with the clearance committee.

Individual Cases Considered

Problems of clearance between army theatres and houses in towns and cities adjacent to military posts are being attacked by the commitee on an individual basis, it is reported. The committee decided to seek an adjustment in each dispute, as a more effective remedy than establishing a general policy of clearance for army camps. It was believed that a solution for the circumstances of each location would be most equitable to both exhibitor and distributor and would end complaints from Army post commanders and soldiers that they were not receiving the latest film fare.

Almost 200 hundred separate army clearance cases have been submitted to the committee, it was reported, involving negotiation with theatres in towns adjacent to training posts, distributors, and circuit heads. More than half of the cases have been adjusted to date, it is understood, and the committee is hopeful of solving all specific Army clearance problems within a few weeks.

At present neighboring first-run theatres, often in small, one-theatre towns, have as much as 90 days clearance over the Army's theatre. Average clearance over the Army camps is 60 days, and sometimes the theatre which has clearance over the Army post will itself be 60 days behind adjacent metropolitan centers. Such a situation means that films are three to four months old before reaching Army screens. The clearance committee in many cases has arranged for clearance adjustments all along the line to the benefit of soldier audiences and is hopeful of securing a uniform maximum of thirty days' clearance. This will enable the Army Motion Picture Service to standardize its booking service and bring new pictures to Army screens many weeks earlier than at present

Two weeks ago the War and Navy departments moved to clarify the "live" entertainment situation in the services by appointing the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, Inc., as the official organization to "receive, coordinate and supervise offers by the citizens of the nation of entertainment and other such services as the Army and Navy may care to accept for use in Army camps and naval reservations at the discretion of commanding officers" (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, May 17th, page 8). The group will have complete charge of supervising all live entertainment at Army camps.

Showmen, morale officers and harried post commanders hailed the designation of the New York committee as a hopeful sign that Washington intended to impose a centralized order on the current entertainment chaos. The subcommittee on theatrical entertainment appointed by the Citizens Committee included leaders in all divisions of stage, film and radio entertainment. Observers waited to see if it was to be a figurehead agency or an effective clearing center for bringing topflight professional entertainment to the camps.

Vinton Freedley, Broadway producer, is chairman of the sub-committee of entertainment personalities which will draw up the entertainment plans to be administered by the Citizens Committee. Thomas J. Watson, of New York, president of the International Business Machine Corp. heads the Citizens Committee, which was expanded to a national scale from a smaller group known as the "Friends of the New York State Soldiers and Sailors" which was organized a year ago. The group will open permanent offices in New York with a full time clerical staff and an executive director. It will work with, and receive part of its funds from, the United Service Organization, now raising $10,750,000 for army and navy welfare work.

"Live" entertainment is intended by the Army morale division as a supplement, not competition for the film entertainment provided by the Army Motion Picture Service, it is stated authoritatively. Construction work on the 36 new film theatres on 29 posts is continuing and army plans to add 37,000 new theatre seats, raising the total number of post theatres to 216 at a cost of $1,500,000 are being rushed. (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, April 19th, page 14.) Where feasible, stage facilities will be added to plans for the new theatres and it is understood that part of the $5,000,000 allotted by the War Department for morale equipment (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 29th, page 18) will be used to add stages to existing film theatres. Citizens Committee funds may supplement available equipment and the use of portable tent or motor truck stages is under consideration.

Meanwhile the Army Information Service for the Second Corps Area at New York, through Lieutenant Colonel Frank J. Pearson, has sent a questionnaire to post commanders throughout the country asking them to detail information on their theatre facilities. Commanders and morale officers are asked to list the number of seats, type and age of projection and sound equipment and facilities for handling stage shows.

Information compiled from replies to the questionnaire will form the first unified statistics on which to plan stage entertainment units which can play at any post. The questionnaires will be available to the Citizens Committee and from them they are expected to draft recommendations for new or changed equipment to accommodate stage shows.

Serving with Mr. Freedley on the Committee on Theatrical Entertainment are: Edward Arnold, president, Screen Actors Guild; Irving Berlin; Gene Buck, president, ASCAP; George M. Cohan; Bette Davis; Y. Frank Freeman, president, Motion Picture Producers Association, and chairman, Motion Picture Defense Committee; Helen Hayes; Emily Holt, American Federation of Radio Artists; Elsie Janis; Bert Lytell, president, Actors Equity Association; George Kaufman; W. S. Macfarlane, president, Mutual Broadcasting System; Burns Mantle; William Morris, Jr., of the William Morris Booking Agency; W. S. Paley, president, Columbia Broadcasting System; Bill Robinson; Billy Rose; Noble Sissle, president, Negro Actors Guild; Jules Stein, president, Music Corporation of America; Lawrence Tibgett; Niles Trammel, president, National Broadcasting Company; and Paul Whiteman.

Mr. Freedley will supervise the program developed in consultation with Robert E. Sherwood, Frederick Osborn, chairman; Brigadier General James Ulio, chief of the Army Morale Division, and other members of the Joint Committee of the Army and Navy on Recreation and Welfare. The committee consists of ranking army and navy officers and civilian advisers.

Scope Unlimited

Members of the entertainment committee, according to present plans will be called upon from time to time to organize contributions to army and navy entertainment from members of their specific field or profession. Scope of the committee is theoretically unlimited in coordinating entertainment offers and eliminating competitive or duplicate efforts to bring shows to the boys in camp.

Alfred Harding, editor of the Actors Equity Magazine which has campaigned vociferously for an officially designated authority empowered to coordinate all live entertainment for the services hailed the recent announcement as a great step forward in formulating a successful system of organizing top-flight entertainment for the army.

"This development is along the lines for which we have worked for eight months," he said. "We hope the War and Navy departments will trust this committee with the formulation of a policy of entertainment in the camps and give them the authority to organize a program under this policy." He announced that Bert Lytell, Equity president, had accepted the committee post and pledged the full cooperation of the organized acting profession.

Other members of the parent Equity organization, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, which includes the Screen Actors Guild, and radio performers, have also pledged full cooperation. The screen group, it is understood, will not function as an independent motion picture "personal appearance" unit. Instead members will join in the general program of variety, dramatic and musical entertainment devised by Mr. Freedley.

34 THEATRES AID CITIZENSHIP WEEK

Thirty-four San Francisco theatres took the lead in making that city's recent "Citizenship Week," a strictly local affair, a huge success. The theatres distributed more than 150,000 copies of a pamphlet titled "Have You the Answer?" dealing with national defense and Americanism topics, and published by Mayor Rossi's Citizenship Week Committee.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Wake Up and Sing Department, being an almost exact copy of a press release to newspapers from Western Union:

Establishment of "Wake Up Telegrams" as a regular service for the numerous people who send telegrams to themselves was announced today by Alexander Simon, metropolitan division general manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Surprising as it may seem, a lot of people send telegrams to themselves, reading: "Wake Up. It is now 8 o'clock," Mr. Simon pointed out. The demand for such service has been so persistent, he said, that the telegraph company has now decided to give it official recognition.

One employer, Mr. Simon recalled, for a month sent a daily "Wake Up Telegram" with a cup of coffee to a valued member of his staff who habitually had strolled into the office an hour or two late. However, "Wake Up Telegrams" are designed, the telegraph official emphasized, for delivery only to the persons who send them.

Occasionally a person with a bad habit of going back to sleep files two "Wake Up Telegrams" to be delivered at fifteen-minute intervals, and one young woman amazed telegraph folks by sending seven to herself. She sleepily answered five calls, but on the sixth she told the operator she was thoroughly awake and to cancel the seventh. She'd been celebrating at a bachelor girl party the night before, she explained, and was being very sure not to be late for her wedding.

"I won't need this service again," she told the operator. "No more getting up in time for work."

Somewhere in North Africa, fighting the Axis, is Second Lieutenant Laurie Hamilton Webb, of No. 8 Movement Control of the Royal Engineers. He's a Londoner and an assistant movie director. Every morning, when he puts on his special tropical trousers, he mutters, "Good old Walter, Good Old Joe . . . and to hell with Musso." Here's why:

Back in 1937, when American producer Walter Futter left London for the Soudan for backgrounds for "Jericho," the production which starred Paul Robeson, he carried with him a fine kit of clothes and things suitable for the heat and the sands of Africa. It was the kind of a kit you would expect of a Hollywood producer. With the picture finished and returned to London for distribution, Mr. Futter deposited his kit and clothes with Joe Rock, an American producer, in London, his friend. Somehow, Rock got the equipment to Lieutenant Webb, for use in Africa. And only recently, Futter, in New York, heard about it. Seems that kits like that are pretty scarce now, and Webb, in a letter to Rock, asked that Futter be told how his old desert pants are, "in their own peculiar way, helping to keep Europe, Africa and even the U.S.A. free from the hands of the bloody thugs."

Like the old determination of the Postal Service that, "Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night shall stay these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds," so, too, nothing shall stop the peaceful continuance of arbitration under the motion picture industry's new Federal Consent Decree system. Nothing, not even the loud borings of pneumatic street drills or the soft chirpings of a little canary.

Because of noise from pneumatic hammers doing street repair work in the vicinity of the building housing the arbitration offices in Milwaukee, the hearing in the case of Evansville Theatres, Inc., vs. Paramount, was transferred to the offices of Carner, Koester and LeBow, stenotype firm recording the case, where a harmonious and peaceful atmosphere prevailed only after removing an office chirping canary from his corner stand.

Someone in the United States Department of Commerce once said that American commerce abroad follows American motion pictures, meaning that American manufacturers gained much in trade from sales inspired by articles shown in Hollywood films. Some of that commerce, of course, has been temporarily restrained by the war. But other lines are building. For the first time in history, London's famous Bobbies are to carry revolvers—made in Worcester, Massachusetts, by the Harrison and Richardson Arms Company. They have been commissioned to provide the London police with 25,000 typical American "six-shooters" of the kind made so famous by our own Hollywood shoot 'em up cowboys.

Recently Mr. Wood received a letter from one of his correspondents. One paragraph stated:

"Members of our chess club are annoyed at having to stop playing when the air raid sirens sound. Chess," as you know, "is a game requiring concentration."

"I wonder," said a well-dressed man behind them, "if you would let me have a cigarette. I've come without any."

"Why, yes," said Mrs. Tag, "I seem to have two packs." And she gave him one that was unbroken.

"And how," interposed the man, "do you like your cigarettes opened?"

"Open them your way," said Mrs. Tag, "I want you to have them. I have another pack."

"Oh, I couldn't."

"For Britain, then," came back Mrs. Tag, laughing. "Have a package on Britain."

"Thank you very much," said the man, subsiding into his seat.

He left after the newsreel and as he went out he gaily tossed something onto Mrs. Tag's lap.

"That for Britain, too," he said, in passing.

When the lights came up Mrs. Tag examined it. It was a ten dollar bill.

Britain got it the next day.

Paper Organizes Army Stage Units

Last week at Chicago the Herald-American, Hearst newspaper, leaped into the army entertainment picture with full page exploitation of a plan whereby the paper would organize units of five of six vaudeville acts to tour the Illinois camps. Admissions would be scaled from 15 to 25 cents, with the paper underwriting expenses. Profits, if any, would go to post entertainment funds. The paper volunteered to act as a booking office for post commandants and morale officers seeking material for their camps, and suggested that other Hearst papers throughout the country would be willing to organize similar shows. Players were to receive compensation, and work under union auspices, with a slight cut in regular scales.

In New York, Billy Rose, entertainment wizard of the World's Fair, was boosting a scheme to send "medicine shows," with top stars including Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Bill Robinson, George M. Cohan, George Jessel, Burns and Allen and others, to nearby draft centers to play to the sodliers from the tailboard of army trucks. Stars would donate services with the army and navy paying expenses.

A similar scheme broached by the New York Daily News also contemplated truck shows, and proposed reviving the rolling stages used by the WPA caravan theatre. Burns Mantle, News critic, reported the WPA stages were stored on a Staten Island pier. The plan, he said, would permit four or five performances a night, in different areas of the camp, and would overcome the inadequacy of existing theatres.

The Sherwood committee has ordered the preparation of a collection of short plays and sketches and a song book by Leonard Sillman, to provide material for amateur actors in the ranks. Interstate Buys Interest

The Interstate Theatre Circuit has purchased the remaining 50 per cent interest of the University theatre in Houston, Tex., from D. F. Luckie. The sale marks the departure from the film business of Mr. Luckie, who at one time owned seven theatres. Interstate will enlarge the theatre and modernize the interior.

Harvard University's Theatre Receives 25 Film Scripts

Harvard University's theatre collection has been given the scripts of 25 outstanding films of the past six years. The gift was made by the individual studios through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO, Warner Brothers, David O. Selznick and Samuel Goldwyn were the studios donating the scripts.

Authorities said the gift will form the nucleus of the collection of motion picture scripts now being built up as part of the theatre's collection. The scripts will be used in connection with a course to be given at the Harvard Summer School and will also be available for study by all members of the university.

Blood and Sand

(20th Century-Fox)

Spanish Melodrama in Technicolor

The melodrama of the bull ring that made box office history in 1922 as a vehicle for Rudolph Valentino is a more intense and vivid picture as filmed in Technicolor for today's audiences with Tyrone Power in the Valentino role. This version is as sensationally emotional in its impact as that one was and more so in the measure that the technology of production has progressed in the interim. It is of course adult in subject and treatment, and the ending is tragic.

First of the studio's films in some while to bear the signature of Darryl F. Zanuck, the picture is packed with those essentials of commercial appeal which distinguished his early hits. On the side of redbloodedness there are bull ring sequences, some of them stunningly staged and photographed, which approximate in potency a first hand witnessing of the spectacle represented. On the side of passion there are episodes as torrid as any screened in the era of Bara and Naldi. Contrasted with these are passages of domestic calm and interludes of religious devotion which are dwelt upon with like sincerity and perserverence. It was by his skill in the presentation of extremes that Mr. Zanuck made his first successes and this one fits that formula.

Direction by Rouben Mamloulian extracts a maximum of effect from every line of dialogue and utilizes every character fully in the development of a powerful whole. Power's performance is doubtless his best to date, but he is by no means left to carry the picture alone. Rita Hayworth, in a role recalling the period when vampire was the word for it, is a blazing opposite to Linda Darnell's portrait of pious wifehood, Anthony Quinn, John Carradine and J. Carroll Naish play ruffian companions of the hero and Laird Cregar, as the newspaper critic amenable to bribery, furnishes an unforgettable characterization flecked with the picture's only flashes of humor. (Rex Downing, Ann Todd and Cora Sue Collins are standouts as the principals in childhood.)

It will be recalled that the story (detailed on page 111 of the Product Digest) traces the life of a bull fighter from childhood through struggle to fame and married happiness in Madrid and thence, under the sapping influence of a wealthy seductress, down through dissipation and despair to death in the bull ring. As told, the story is a denunciation of bull fighting and its patrons, though primarily a tale of old Spain in which the primary emotions run riot.

Robert T. Kane, serving Zanuck as associate producer, supplied a format seldom equalled for sheer effectiveness. Settings are on the grand scale and shout their authenticity. Technicolor confers upon these and the naturally brilliant costumes a beauty in itself a challenge to attention.

Previewed for press and profession at the Four Star Theatre, Los Angeles, on a Monday afternoon, the capacity turnout displaying intense interest throughout. Ripples of applause greeted several sequences and a number of strikingly brilliant camera shots, rising to ovation proportions at the close.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Producer, Darryl F. Zanuck. Director, Rouben Mamoulian. Associate producer, Robert T. Kane. Based on the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. Directors of photography, Ernest Palmer and Ray Rennahan. Technicolor director, Natalie Kalmus. Associate, Morgan Padelford. Musical director, Alfred Newman. Art directors, Richard Day and Joseph C. Sunny

(RKO Radio)

Old Favorite Better Than New

Bright and tuneful as the day it took Broadway by storm, the "Sunny" of the title springs from the Herbert Wilcox workshop a tip-top piece of entertainment made to order for big towns and little, young, adults and children.

For retaining the Jerome Kern music of the original—and in particular the song-hit "Who," played, sung and danced a dozen ways as theme number of the picture—Producer-Director Wilcox rates a vote of thanks and a round of applause.

For enacting the title role to the maximum of its potentialities, in her best straight performance to date by wide margin, Anna Neagle merits many more assignments in kind.

Close to Miss Neagle's lead are John Carroll, proving beyond question his vocal ability and his right to stardom, and Ray Bolger, given at long last an opportunity to display the dancing genius which the films have kept under cover and capitalizing it to the full. And close up to these are Helen Westley and Edward Everett Horton in comedy characterizations that click soundly.

The story (Page 136, Product Digest) will be recalled as having to do with a wealthy young man whose marriage to an actress is delayed for a time by family interference. It is sufficient as a framework for the entertainment predicated upon it. The setting is New Orleans at Mardi Gras season, later the estate of the wealthy young man, still later a river boat. The time is now.

Previewed at the Academy theatre, 10 miles from Hollywood and Vine, on the fifth of five consecutive preview nights and, therefore, to a press turnout fed up with and weary of pictures. What the picture did to and with this satiated group, and to and with the paying audience which filled the rest of the theatre, is promise of a profit entry on any exhibitor's ledger and a revived appetite for motion pictures on the part of any customer. They loved it.—W. R. W.

A Shot in the Dark

(Warners - First National)

Detective Melodrama

Herein presented another of the familiar stories of a detective and a reporter vying for the affections of a girl while tracking down a murderer. Regis Toomey is the detective and William Lundigan the reporter always on the spot. Supporting these two who carry the burden of the production are Ricardo Cortez as the night club owner who remains on the straight and narrow, Nan Wynn, portraying a night club singer who keeps both the detective and reporter dangling on the end of the romantic strings, and others whose performances make for enjoyable detective-gangster fare.

The story concerns a murder and the usual number of suspects with the detective and reporter attempting to expose the guilty one. The real murderer is, of course, not exposed until the end but the developments in the case and its progression under the directorial guidance of William McGann will keep fans of this type of picture interested and guessing.

Plus the above mentioned elements of romance and melodrama a few of the scenes also incorporate musical renditions by Miss Wynn with an orchestral background.

Reviewed at the Brooklyn Strand theatre during supper hour when only a few persons attended the performance. Nevertheless those that comprised the audience watched carefully.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Shining Victory

(Warner Brothers)

Psychiatric Melodrama

Hero of the grim melodrama based on a play by A. J. Cronin, who wrote "The Citadel," is a doctor intent upon discovery of a medicinal formula for the treatment of mental derangements. Principal scene of the story is a sanitarium for the mentally afflicted and the atmosphere and tone of the production, which is in no sense a horror play, are sombre and clinical. It is a work of much seriousness, only slightly relieved by incidental comedy, and its appeal is to the studious and thoughtful rather than the seeker for simple and refreshing amusement.

As produced by Robert Lord and directed by Irving Rapper, the Cronin account of the doctor's devotion to science at the sacrifice of all routing considerations holds attention firmly and commands respect for its earnestness and sincerity. As played by James Stephenson, the central character is an achievement in characterization. Geraldine Fitzgerald is passively effective as the girl who risks and loses her life to protect the doctor's note books from flames started by a sex starved rival for his affections. Barbara O'Neil scores roundly as the rival. Other performances satisfy story requirements.

Stephenson portrays a doctor unfairly deprived of recognition and expelled from Budapest who takes a minor post in a Scottish hospital for the insane so he can continue his quest for a medicinal palliative, with patients on whom to experiment. A death of a patient is essential to the proving of his discovery, by autopsy, and when one occurs he performs the surgery without legal permission. In this crisis a girl whose suppressed emotion for him has unbalanced her mind sets fire to his laboratory and another sacrifices her life in the flames to save the notebook in which he has kept his case histories which prove his experiments a success. He dedicates his life to carrying on missionary work in China for the girl who had planned that as her life work.

Although handled with care in the details which relate to aberration, the subject matter is not of a kind to interest children.

Previewed at Warner Beverly Theatre, Beverly Hills for press and profession exclusively. It seemed to hold interest steadily and to generate audience tension toward the end. One of the principals whose remark to a reviewer on leaving the theatre was "Grim isn't it?" voiced the apparent sentiments of the crowd.—W. R. W.

The Great Swindle

(Columbia)

Arson Melodrama

Another of the Jack Holt series of action pictures produced by Larry Darmour for Columbia has the star again in the role of a private detective, this time hired by an insurance company to uncover the cause of a fire. Although action and mystery are the primary elements throughout, romance and comedy are present but not prevalent. Lewis D. Collins, who has directed other Holt adventure pictures for the past several years, again wields the megaphone on this making the picture a steady if not a swift recounting of the film facts.

Based on the theme of retribution Holt and his assistant, portrayed by Don Douglas, run the gamut of adventure in tracking down a firebug who has destroyed a warehouse and uncovering the real head of the gang who has been prominent throughout the picture.

Support is given by Jonathan Hale, as the warehouse owner who is nearly framed into having the police believe that he set his own property afire for the insurance, Henry Kolker, a bank president trying to get control of the property and later uncovered by the detective as the instigator of the plot, and Marjorie Reynolds as the girl in the case who has little to do but be a party to a flirtatious romance. The picture is on a par with other Holt adventure films.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre in New York attended by an afternoon audience who watched with silent interest.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced by Larry Darmour and distributed by Columbia. Directed by Lewis D. Collins. Assistant director, Carl Hiecke. Film editor, Dwight Caldwell. Music by Lee Zahler. Sound engineer, Tom Lambert. Billy the Kid

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Sentimental Western

This is a highly sentimental piece moving at a leasurely pace in spite of its legendary hero and great open spaces background. What action there is has a quality of heaviness and calculation rather than spontaneity. The western scenery is magnificently reproduced in color, so much so that attention is apt to be distracted from the continuity.

The legand of William Bonney, known to outlaw history as Billy the Kid, has appeared in many versions since it was first told around the campfires and in the desert bars of the great west. All versions agree on how he became an outlaw but most of characteristics from there on are open to argument. The present plot stems from the version which has him killing to avenge the murder of his father and then forced to kill to save his own neck.

Robert Taylor is "Billy," a self-assured, independent coyote, until he meets an Englishman, Ian Hunter, who has become a rancher in the west and who shows "Billy" the value of a peaceful life. "Billy" is at first resentful and is never truly convinced but he tries the Englishman's philosophy, is happy for awhile and then goes berserk when the Englishman is murdered. He kills the crooked sheriff and five other men and heads for the open spaces. (See Product Digest, page 97.)

Brian Donlevy, who has grown in cinematic stature this past year, competently plays "Jim Sherwood," the Englishman's foreman and childhood pal of "Billy." Gene Lockhart, the top villian of the piece; Mary Howard, the Englishman's sister, Henry O'Neill, the local editor, who is in his own words: "A man of peace, but not at any price," and others in lesser roles make a good supporting cast.

One of Billy's characteristics open to discussion is whether he was right or left handed. Here he draws with his left hand except once. That was his last draw.

Reviewed in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's projection room in New York. Only a handful was at the screening. Definitely audible were the comments praising the photography—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Family Trouble—Double Dose

The "Dixon" tribe (nee the "Higgins" household with a different family tree but the same crop of domestic ups and downs) is herewith presented in an unpretentious and none too outstanding comedy of homespun hijinks. Pa is on the order of a "Caspar Milquetoast;" Ma is a broomstick boss with an urge for keeping up with the Jones and Daughter is interested in hooking the town's most lucrative bachelor catch. To make the fireside crisis more acute there are added to the family portrait a twin brother with a reputation of a man of fortune from the "Dixon" side, a pair of Oriental mugs out to snatch the adventuresome gent, an escaped lunatic and a pair of females who turn up at the most embarassing moments. The double identity theme is played to monotony.

mister and missus, with Karns, of course, playing his twin self as well. Ernest Truex has a few moments of brief amusement as a dictatorial employer and others in the cast are Lynn Merrick, Margaret Hamilton, Abner Biberman, Rod Bacon, Bernadine Hayes and Gloria Franklin. William Morgan presided at the family scene in the capacity of director for Robert North, associate producer.

Ma Dixon goes into real estate in order to scare her husband out of his inferiority rut. A brother-in-law and twin to her husband, reported dead, turns up unknown to his relatives as he is going on to Detroit to complete a mysterious business deal. Pa Dixon is mistaken for his brother and tangles with a quartet of amorous ladies and killer gents. Ma believes the worst and threatens divorce. Her real estate transactions have hit a snag but the difficulties are ironed out when it is revealed that her customer is an escaped madman and the lady is able to sell the property to a more normal prospect. The other domestic difficulties are settled when the principals, perhaps because of utter exhaustion from scurrying down corridors and in and out of rooms, finally bring the twins together face to face.

Pirates on Horseback

(Paramount-Sherman)

"Hoppy" Rides Again

Harry Sherman's action westerns, featuring Bill Boyd, Number Two Money Making Western star in MOTION PICTURE-HERALD-FAME's poll of exhibitors, as "Hopalong Cassidy," achieve the well nigh impossible in production—each succeeding picture improving upon the one before. "Pirates on Horseback" is no exception to the Sherman rule, and it turns out to be a rootin', tootin', shootin' picture, full of everything that makes for grand entertainment of the outdoor type.

Action and comedy predominate, and the scenery, the slopes of Mt. Whitney, does so well that it was given screen credit.

With Boyd again are Russell Hayden, as "Lucky" and Andy Clyde as "California," the plot deals with their efforts to uncover the killers of a prospector and find his hidden gold mine for his heirs.

Supporting them are Eleanor Stewart, Morris Ankrum, William Haade, Dennis Moore, Henry Hall and Britt Wood.

Lesley Selander, who has guided numerous other pictures based on the Clarence E. Mulford characters, directed this with a deft hand. Joseph W. Engel was the associate producer.

She Knew All the Answers

(Columbia-Rogers)

Love in Wall Street

Producer Charles Rogers proves herewith that a comedy about a chorus girl and Wall Street can be smart, sophisticated, funny and clean at one and the same time. It's quite a feat and quite a picture, a substantial money's-worth for any theatre's customers.

Joan Bennett, improving upon most or all of her past performances, plays a chorus girl who hires out as switchboard operator in a broker's office by way of obtaining a letter of recommendation from him which she plans to use as means of forcing his consent to her marriage to his playboy ward. (The details are on page 116 of the Product Digest).

Franchot Tone plays the broker whose interest in the girl mounts as her office blunders send his profits skyward, and John Hubbard portrays the playboy who doesn't marry the girl after all because his guardian does. Eve Arden adds a sparkling secondary lead.

The scene is New York and the time now. The plot is, at bottom, as old as pictures, but the treatment is as new and fresh as this morning's cream. Direction by Richard Wallace is of the kind that gives the impression of effortlessness, his timing giving every line of dialogue and quirk of incident its maximum value without a suggestion of planning.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to a midweek audience composed of paying customers, press and profession, the laughs coming in equal volume and number from all sectors.—W. R. W.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Emergency Landing," "Her First Beau" and "The Nurse's Secret." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "I'll Wait For You," "Shining Victory" and "Singapore Woman." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "One Night in Lisbon."

"Exclusive Service" Clause Eliminated by Equity

Actors Equity last week accepted a provision drawn by its legal department on the "exclusive service" clause now in the standard performers' contract. The present "exclusive service" clause will be eliminated September 1st, and only featured players and stars thereafter will be permitted to sign contracts which prevent them from engaging in radio, films and other works without the consent of the stage producer by whom they are employed.

The Equity council also accepted the nominations of eight independent candidates for the council elections June 6th. The nominees are Philip Bourneuf, Madie Christians, Allen Hewitt, Aline MacMahon, Myron McCormick, Theodore Newton, William Post, Jr., and Joanna Ross. There will be 23 candidates in all for the 10 five-year vacancies on the council and two candidates for the one three-year replacement. The nominating committee decided to experiment this year and named 15 regular candidates for the full term and two for the replacement giving the membership wider choice among the regular candidates.

Paramount Employees Question Guild Heads

Leadership of the Screen Publicists Guild of New York, Eastern unit of the national organization, was questioned this week, when seven members of the Paramount publicity and advertising department staff on Tuesday evening made public a letter to Joseph Gould, Guild president, wanting to "know the reaction" of the unit "to the suggestion we form our own union to represent those in Paramount employ."

The letter said the signed persons were "hesitant about joining a union which does not attend strictly to business that concerns our industry" and referred to stands by the Guild on questions of national moment. "We refuse to join an organization that assumes to speak for its members on these subjects, where the real purpose of its existence should be along entirely different lines," the letter declared, adding that it was written because "inquiry has been made as to why we do not join the Screen Publicists Guild."

Signers of the letter were Aileen St. John Brenon, Tom Waller, C. N. Odell, Herb Berg, Henry Larner, Leo Brody, and Paul E. Ackerman, all of whom have been with Paramount six years or more.

The Guild is expecting a decision from the National Labor Relations Board, on its petition for certification as the bargaining agency for advertising and publicity workers in the New York home offices.

Oregon Tax Refunds

In Washington the United States Board of Tax Appeals has held that the Paraport Theatre Leasing Corp. of Oregon was entitled to a refund of $2,512.64 for 1936 and $2,838.13 for 1937 paid in taxes over objection to the International Revenue Bureau.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Youth, etc.

Youth will be served—by the consent decree!

The youngest, and the busiest, executive producer in Hollywood—one who will be responsible for all the important details of 24 features and 18 westerns during the coming season—is of that opinion.

George Batcheller, Jr., in charge of all production of Producers Releasing Corp., is a young man in his early thirties and he looks upon the industry's consent decree not only as a boon to the production company for which he works and other independent firms, but as a boon to all young men of ability who wish to make their mark in the business.

"The consent decree opens the way for the determination of what ability young men have," he thinks. "The industry has been thrown back on its haunches in such fashion that only those of proved ability will survive. The consent decree means that each principal worker in the industry benefits only by his own merits and capability."

Busiest producer?—Batcheller is it or he. Mondays through Saturdays, he works from 8 a. m. to 11 p. m. Sundays are easy days—he works from 11 a. m. to 8 p. m.

The son of the late George R. Batcheller, Sr., founder of Chesterfield Pictures, and who has worked in the film business from salesman, contract department, assistant director on up, is adamant on at least one thing. He says the success of an independent production company lies in its dependability in supplying pictures when and as promised, as well as product of consistent high quality.

With that in mind, Mr. Batcheller, who assumed his present post last January, has virtually completed the task of putting out the first year's program of the company which consists of 20 features and 18 westerns.

Of the thirteen pictures to be made on this year's program, three are in work and ten are definitely set.

Looking ahead to next year's program of 24 features and 18 westerns, Mr. Batcheller, who during "light" weeks manages to read at least 25 prospective film stories, says that they'll be delivered when and as promised.

"Our program," he said, "which is flexible, permits us to make a variety of subjects, and we are concentrating on action melodramas—timely, topical subjects aimed at the general theatre going market.

"We are not in the position of making a 'Philadelphia Story' and our budget would not permit us to do so. However, neither would our market.

"Naturally we are restricted in what we make. This is a young company, and what we make for exhibition has to be tailor made for our purposes.

"We are not trying to get bookings for the top of the bill—we're just trying to fill a need of exhibitors everywhere for good, entertaining, wholesome pictures that can be shown in every variety of house, from the first runs—if we are lucky—down through the smaller houses."

Sam Ledner, general stage director of Buddy G. DeSylva's last three Broadway musical productions, "Du Barry Was a Lady," "Louisiana Purchase" and "Panama Hattie," has been signed as dance supervisor at Paramount, where Mr. DeSylva is now chief of production. Mr. Ledner is currently working on "Louisiana Purchase" at the studio, which is scheduled as a vehicle for Bob Hope.

Irving Cummings has been signed by Paramount to direct "Louisiana Purchase" for the company. The deal also calls for Mr. Cummings to direct another picture for Paramount next year.

ARMY TRAINING FILMS RUSHED

Production of Army training films at the Fort Monmouth, N. J., headquarters of the signal corps is booming, and by July 1st will set an all time yearly production record of 125 sound films, Lieutenant Colonel M. E. Gillette reported this week. The pictures range from the correct crawling technique to teach rookies extended order drill to technical studies of the operation of big guns.

Only five years ago the annual output was 20 pictures. At present 38 enlisted men, mostly technicians drafted from major studios and laboratories, are assigned to the film unit. Eventually 175 men will be making army films. The latest tricks of camera technique and editing are employed, but narrative is strictly expositional, with humor taboo. "We found that a bum joke was sometimes all the men remembered," Colonel Gillette explained.

The army library of training films includes about 200 reels on 100 different subjects. Approximately 100 prints of each subject in 16 and 35mm, with sound, are printed for distribution to army posts, and reserve officers training centers. The films are designed to complement textbook and practical instruction.

VARIETY CLUB CHARITY SPENDING REACHES HALF-MILLION IN YEAR

Annual Report at Atlantic City Meeting Lists $449,251 Spent; Carver Given Humanitarian Award at Three-Day Meeting

The National Variety Clubs of America last Saturday evening ended its seventh annual convention, and with it came the disclosure that the organization's local expenditures for charities are running now at half-a-million a year.

Leading the distinguished list of speakers at the banquet at Atlantic City's Traymore Hotel were Walter Wanger, producer, and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, who called upon showmen to help boost national morale, and William McCraw, former Texas Attorney General, who was toastmaster. Highlight of the banquet was presentation of the annual Humanitarian Award of $1,000 to George Washington Carver, 70-year-old Negro educator. (Pictures on pages 10, 11, 12, 13.)

The convention drew over 1,000 showmen from all sections. One of the largest in the history of the clubs, it was handled by Philadelphia Tent 13, of which Dr. Leon Levy is chief barker, and from which Earle Sweigert came to supervise convention committees.

All officers of the national organization were reelected. They are John H. Harris, Pittsburgh, chief barker; Robert J. O'Donnell, Dallas, first assistant chief barker; Harry Kalmine, Pittsburgh, second assistant chief barker; E. R. Reuben, Minneapolis, property master; and James Balmer, Pittsburgh, dough guy. Mr. Harris was reelected for the seventh time, despite his protest.

$449,251 Spent

Business sessions Friday morning and afternoon, at which the officers were reelected, also disclosed total 1940 charity pledges by tents to be $841,937, of which $449,251 was spent.

National Canvasmen (Variety National Board of Directors) named by the various tents were: Pittsburgh, C. C. Allenberg; Columbus, Virgil Jackson; Cincinnati, Allan Maritz; St. Louis, Louis Ancell; Detroit, Charles Perry; Cleveland, Bert M. Stearn; Buffalo, Robert Murphy; Kansas City, Jerry Zigmond; Indianapolis, Marc Wolff; Washington, Hardie Meakin; Minneapolis, Benjamin Blotcky; Philadelphia, Earle W. Sweigert; Milwaukee, Oscar E. Olsen; Omaha, Walter M. Green; Dallas, Paul Short; Dayton, Herb Byrd; Baltimore, Louis Rome; Memphis, M. A. Lightman; Atlanta, William K. Jenkins; Oklahoma, L. C. Griffith; New England, Martin J. Mullin; Charlotte, H. H. Everett.

Despite the reluctance of John H. Harris to accept the post of National Chief Barker again, the Pittsburgh theatreman was overruled by a rising vote of the delegates, who also voted for the retention of the entire national slate for the coming year.

The Club's annual Humanitarian Award, now three years old, is chosen by a representative committee of 35 newspaper editors and publishers. Significance of the 1941 Award to Dr. Carver was noted in the nomination of the negro scientist and educator by the Atlanta, Ga., Tent.

At the banquet, Mr. Carver received the scroll, for the Award, from Eugene L. Connally, Pittsburgh, chairman of the award committee, and a plaque and the $1,000 check from Mr. Harris, chief barker.

It was the first time a Negro was so honored. Previous recipients were Miss Martha Berry, and Father Edward J. Flanagan.

Mr. Wanger, a Variety member as well as producer and head of the Academy, praised Variety as the "heart of the show business" and noted that Coast members of the film industry had been emulating Variety's service to unfortunates. He also asked that entertainment be "enlightening," declaring it was part of the showman's duty to inform the public.

"Make your theatres lighthouses of the community," he advised. "Accept your responsibility, and mobilize your strength in the interests of freedom."

He added: "There is, in some quarters, fear of Government control. I can tell you with good authority that the Government has no desire to control motion pictures or tell you what to do. It wants you to do your own job. It wants you to do it, however—and you will be left alone, because the Government has plenty of other problems at the moment, and no desire to assume your responsibility."

Another principal talk of the evening was by Senator Tom Connally, of Texas.

Prior to the banquet, delegates marched in a boardwalk parade, in which were floats, an 80-piece girls' band, veterans, soldiers, and screen stars, among them Wayne Morris, Walter Pidgeon, Dorothy Lamour, Robert Young, Jane Wyman, and Ronald Reagan. They then attended the Variety Club circus at the city auditorium, admission to which was free to children of institutions, and admission to which was charged, at another performance that evening.

50,000 Witness Parade

An estimated 50,000 witnessed the parade, and there were thousands at the circus.

Variety members were guests, after the circus and before the banquet at a United Artists cocktail party.

Hosts were Arthur Kelly, vice president in charge of sales; Harry Gold, vice president and eastern divisional sales manager; and Mr. Wanger, a producer for UA.

The turnout of distinguished guests for the banquet was so large that the grand ballroom of the Hotel Traymore featured a three-tiered dais, seated as follows:

John H. Harris, Frank C. Walker, Postmaster General; J. Edgar Hoover, F.B.I. chief; Mayor Thomas D. Taggart of Atlantic City; Walter Wanger, Father Edward J. Flanagan, of Boys Town; Rev. Henry M. Mellin, Protestant Chaplain, Atlantic City; Rev. Sylvester McCarthy, Catholic Chaplain of Philadelphia; Rabbi Henry M. Fisher, Atlantic City; Walter Pidgeon, Jean Hersholt,, Senator Tom Connally of Texas; Senator Elmer Thomas, Oklahoma; Senator Clyde Herring, of Iowa; Senator Albert Chandler, of Kentucky.

Also Barney Balaban, Jack Cohn, Stanton Griffis, Edwin L. Weisl, Joseph Bernhard, U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania; Matthew McGuire, executive assistant U. S. Treasurer; U. S. Attorney General Robert Jackson; Senator James Mead, New York; Edward Halsey, Secretary of U. S. Senate; Dr. Justo Sierra, Secretary of Mexican Embassy, Washington; Mayor John Tobin, Boston; Herman Robbins, Phil Reagan, Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Lew Ayres, Marjorie Weaver, Fay Wray, Dorothy Lamour, Laraine Day, Robert Young, Andy Devine, Ronald Reagan, Eddie Norris, Wayne Morris, Helen Parrish.

Honor dais guests were: Colvin Brown, William F. Rodgers, T. J. Connors, E. K. Special Reception Friday

On Friday, during the afternoon, there was a special reception by T. J. Connors, southern, eastern, and Canadian division manager for MGM, for visiting politicos and film stars. Among those present were Senators Connally, Hatch and Meade; Mayor Thomas Taggart, of Atlantic City; J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief.

Main prizes in the Variety golf tournament, held Saturday morning, and winners of which were announced at the banquet that evening, went to Jack Schulman, of Cleveland, and James Frisina, of St. Louis.

Atlanta won the attendance trophy for the largest number of barkers. Dallas won the mileage trophy. It had a total of 99,000, representing the total distance covered, coming and going, by the entire delegation.

Memphis won the award to the tent making the best charity effort. It had exceeded its quota by more than 100 per cent. M. A. Lightman accepted the citation.

Honorable mentions, in this classification, went, in order, to the Detroit, Dallas, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia tents.

Hollywood will be the site of the 1942 convention, the business session determined. Time will be April, instead of May. Other bidders were Miami and Cleveland.

Invitations to attend the Los Angeles convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, June 9th through 12th, were extended by Mr. Kuykendall, that organization's president.

It was disclosed new tents were being contemplated in New York and Los Angeles.

Exclusive of the events mentioned, the program during the convention was as follows: Thursday—registration, meeting of officers and committees, boat rides and fishing parties, officers' luncheon, producer-exhibitor forum, sightseeing, private dinner parties, special club dinner, boxing show. Friday—morning business session, luncheon, afternoon business session, "Night of Nights" show at Hotel Chelsea.

PLAY TICKETS FOR VISITING EXHIBITORS

According to an announcement from the Columbia home office in New York all out-of-town exhibitors will be given tickets to "Pal Joey" and "My Sister Eileen," the two stage productions which have been purchased by Columbia. Exhibitors may call for tickets at the company's sales office. The two productions will be on Columbia's new season schedule and the company wants exhibitors to get an advance idea of the entertainment qualities, it was said.

MIDWEST SEES DEFENSE SUPPORTING STAGE SHOWS DURING SUMMER SLACK

Industrial Cities Hope Rising Payrolls Will Keep Grosses High Enough to Justify Holding "Live Talent" Shows

Vaudeville performers and musicians are looking forward to a summer season this year with fewer "rest" periods enforced by the customary seasonal policy of dropping stage shows at motion picture theatres that feature a combination screen and live bill during the winter months. Hopes for a more active stage this summer spring from reports, centering around mid-west industrial cities that a number of theatres plan to continue stage offerings through July and August. Rising payrolls in industrial cities are reported to have brought prospects of attendance increases to justify continuing stage shows through ordinarily slack months.

"Layoffs as usual" was the word from booking agents and theatre executives in New York, however, who feel at this time that any increase in booking elsewhere is not likely to be sufficient to offset the customary general summer curtailment of vaudeville in film houses.

Musicians See Increase

The American Federation of Musicians this week calls vaudeville possibilities "greater this year than at any time in the past decade." The prophesy is based on reports from the midwest that theatres which ordinarily drop vaudeville by the middle of May have continued bookings through June. Several other theatres in the two cities, including the Town in Detroit, have recently added stage shows, with apparent success.

Chicago agents, the musicians' journal says, are currently booking bands and vaudeville acts for a total of 27 weeks playing time in approximately 52 theatres in the central states. Detroit appears to lead the demand for live talent with the Harper, Fox, Michigan and Town theatres supplementing their screen shows with stage entertainment. Houses in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio, have extended their stage season to the end of June and in some cases through the warm months.

A check of the principal talent agencies and bookers in the home offices of film companies operating theatres disclosed no grounds for extensive optimism on the part of performers seeking summer engagements. Booking men pointed out that while in certain locales there has been a tendency to continue the stage entertainment the general picture presents the customary seasonal slack. Increased attendance at motion picture theatres is reported from a number of key defense industry centers but theatre executives said it did not necessarily mean more stage shows, although they indicated bands and other units might be added to bills in certain theatres as an experiment during several weeks of late June or early July.

The seasonal layoff is already under way in most cities with theatres that run stage shows during the winter months reverting to straight films, usually on a double-feature policy. RKO has already anticipated the seasonal slack in Syracuse, N. Y., and will close the Strand there on May 25th. The house, which draws largely from students at the University of Syracuse, will reopen with the start of the Fall semester at the school. Name bands and miscellaneous acts are a standard feature at the RKO house during the winter months. RKO will also drop stage entertainment at its theatres in Cleveland and Cincinnati starting June 6th.

Warner Brothers reports no change in its summer policy at the dozen theatres in its circuit which regularly play stage shows. This year as usual the bookings will be curtailed during the summer, although, when available, top bands or other shows will play occasional dates. Paramount continues its stage shows as usual at three top spots, the Paramount Theatre, New York, and the Chicago and State-Lake at Chicago.

Summer bookings will probably be curtailed at the Paramount theatres in Buffalo and Minneapolis, although home office executives and operating partners are to confer next week on possible changes in summer policy. Loews continues its billings at the State in New York and Capitol, Washington, as usual, but has already dropped the stage show at Pittsburgh and Columbus. The company dates stage shows from time to time through the summer if they are of top calibre.

The William Morris agency which books bands, stars and complete units for dates at motion picture theatres during the season reports that they have found no indications that there would be any change from the usual season's slack. The agency handles only occasional dates for film theatre shows during the summer. Personal appearances by Hollywood players are also likely to be fewer this summer, the Morris agency said. The current production boom in the studios and the prospect of continued peak activity to meet the start of consent decree selling with a good product backlog has tied most name players to their home lots in Hollywood, curtailing personal tours. In the past, theatres which ordinarily drop vaudeville for the summer months have periodically played units featuring films stars and younger players from the studios.

Band Dates Popular

There appears to be no increase in the number of theatre dates scheduled this summer for top name bands, now on their annual road swings, according to the General Amusement Corp., Music Corp. of America and other bookers. They pointed out that for the summer months the band men preferred dating one-night and short engagements at outdoor dancing places popular during summer months. In most cases they offer larger crowds and better payment, on percentage often, than can be had for a one night or split week theatre booking.

Fanchon and Marco, in New York, reported the usual seasonal decrease in their bookings in film theatres and said there had been no indication of an immediate upward change. Of the stage units still booked for the summer it was indicated that complete shows, particularly streamlined versions of Broadway musicals such as "Crazy with the Heat," "Vanities," "Du Barry Was a Lady" and others garner the largest percentage of hot weather dates. They are restricted in most cases to larger theatres that play stage shows throughout the summer engagement.

From the field, however, there was some slight confirmation of predictions of a summer stage boom. Theatres in several areas reported continuing stage shows for the summer, and in a few spots have newly installed vaudeville, or postponed closing dates. Where split week shows are continuing there is a growing tendency to concentrate the stage bill on weekends, particularly in the summer, when theatres face competition from amusement parks, swimming pools and other outdoor activities.

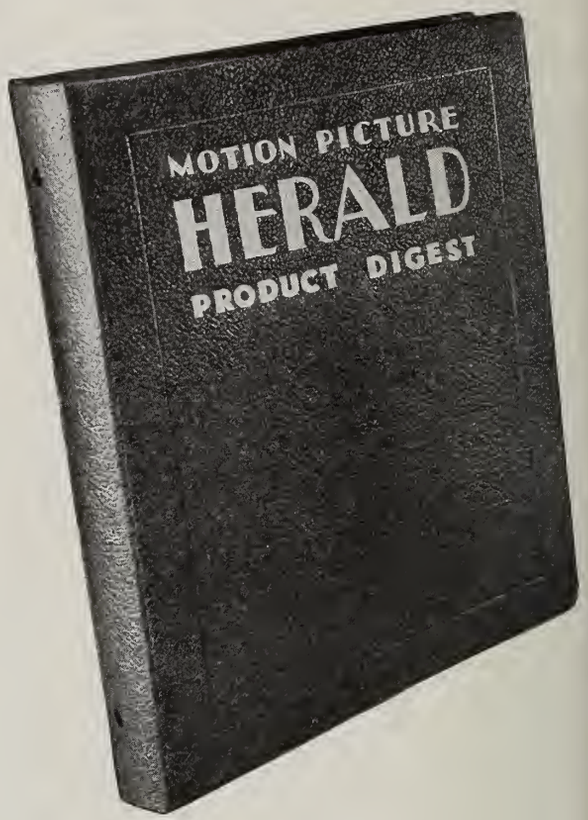
The Earle Theatre, Philadelphia, recently returned to a big name vaudeville policy, booking film, radio and band names for the spring and early summer stage shows. Patricia Ellis, Martha Raye, Wilbur Evans, Edith Fellows and Bill Robinson are among film names playing the Earle recently. Other bills offered included Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra; Will Bradley's orchestra; Eddie Cantor with his own show, including Dinah Shore; Horace Heidt's orchestra; "Truth and Consequences," radio quiz show; Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, and the orchestras of Raymond Scott, Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller.

Independents Plan Shows

Independents planning summer stage shows, on periodic or regular schedules, include the Hippodrome in Buffalo and several neighborhood Detroit houses operated by United Detroit Theatres, such as the Vogue. St. Louis will get summer stage fare at the Shubert Rialto, recently reopened by Charles S. Miller for vaudeville and musical shows. At Salem, Mass., the Paramount, operated by Salem Realty Co. last month booked the first vaudeville unit ever to play the house on a regular basis. Prices were raised to 40 cents, matinee, and 55 cents evenings and the experiment may be repeated this summer.

The Flatbush, Brooklyn, and Windsor, Bronx, members of the William Brandt circuit, which plays name bands during the season last week returned to summer stock policy, operated for the last few years by Wee and Leventhal. "The Little Foxes" and "Charley's Aunt" were among initial summer stage offerings.

In Ohio the RKO Shubert at Cincinnati dropped its stage shows to play "Fantasia." At Columbus, the suburban Main, playing subsequent double features, added a stage show for Saturday nights. The Century, Rochester, N. Y., has added a summer stage show for Friday nights, featuring orchestras and a dance contest. A five-act Sunday vaudeville bill was added recently by the Egyptian, DeKalb, Ill., and Chicago agents report 19 weekend stage dates in their area. The National in Richmond, Va., in March dropped a trial full time vaudeville run to return to a Thursday-to-Sunday split-week stage show.



The Lake theatre, Salt Lake, remodeled from the first gutted Roxy, reopened in March under the management of Andy B. Floor with a policy of musical revues and variety shows. The Lake has its own band and scenery and is staging many of its own shows with a cast of 18 girls and 16 principals, directed by Bert Smith, of Philadelphia. A first run picture from one of the independent distributors accompanies each stage show. Prices will be advanced from 40 to 55 cents top, with 25 cents remaining as balcony scale.

MERCHANTS HELP REOPEN THEATRE

So that the Milton theatre in Kirkville, Mo., might be reopened and stimulate business in the town, the local merchants donated a fund to Campbell Lowe, owner and operator of the theatre, to be applied to the rent of the building. The house will now operate Saturday, Sunday and Wednesday nights.

"I believe that the information contained in Product Digest will be invaluable to our managers, first, because the importance of this new service lies in the fact that the data on pictures is made available much farther in advance than it ever has been in the past, and will make it possible for the managers to check their bookings more intelligently, as well as give them a little more advance dope for their campaigns. It seems to me that this Digest could be used by the subsequent run managers to good advantage. The Digest also includes shorts. It is indexed alphabetically and by Exchange.

"Further in my opinion it is particularly valuable for our managers in that the 'Data' section refers to the Herald issue, page number, where exploitation ideas and reviews can be found. This eliminates the necessity of thumbing through issue after issue and accidentally finding what you want on a particular picture."

MEXICO PLACES BAN ON 'OFFENSIVE' U.S. PICTURES

Federal Censor Board Refuses Permit for "Kit Carson" on Grounds of "Slight" to Mexico

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

The policy of Mexico's recently federalized picture censoring and supervision department, under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Interior, with regard to films that it regards as slighting Mexico, has been demonstrated with the banning of "Kit Carson" (U. A.) from exhibition in this country. This is the first American film to be banned since the department began to function in March.

"Kit Carson" was forbidden because the department considered a character in it, a bandit who was represented as a Mexican, insulting to Mexico and the Mexicans. The department insisted upon the ban even when exhibitors who had contracted the picture volunteered to cut out the scenes to which the department raised objections. The department's stand was that inasmuch as this picture had implications detrimental to Mexico it was altogether unfit for showing in Mexico.

Long Range Policy Set

The department further announces that it intends to ban all pictures that give a disparaging or unfair interpretation of Mexicans, Mexico, Mexican customs, manners and institutions, as well as those that distort Mexican history or in any way ridicule this country and its people.

The department has the following personnel: Felipe Gregorio Castillo, chief; Lic. Adolfo Fernandez Bustamante, technical counsellor; H. Ortiz Mugica; Manuel del Campo and Mario Alvarez and Elvira Vargas. The Ministry announced that these censors and supervisors, who deal with between three and four films a working day, were appointed because of their wide cinematographic experience, good judgment and taste and sense of fairness.

There is some speculation as to whether or not UA will follow the example of the distributor of the French film, "Arlette and Her Two Papas," who gained a precedent by inducing the national supreme court to upset the censors' prohibition of this picture last summer on the ground that it was too spicy. The high court ruled that the picture should be approved for adult audiences but must not be shown to minors. This picture has since done enormous business here and in other parts of Mexico.

The censors and supervisors have brought about a new arrangement of the Sunday theatres matinees, which are always held in the morning and which are highly popular, in that some theatres must give these shows exclusively for adults and others exclusively for minors. This action was taken when it was found that many pictures shown at these matinees were unsuitable for children and that large numbers of minors in the audiences annoyed adults. Pictures shown at the children's matinees must be of educational value, the censors have ruled.

Jesus Grovas, producer who some years ago was Paramount's manager here, is backing plans of Miguel Contreras Torres for production here of "The Life of Simon Bolivar," the Venezuelan liberator. Contreras Torres spent much time, trouble and money in gathering data in Venezuela for this picture. He was granted special facilities in this work by the Venezuelan government.

Mr. Grovas, it is said, has assured a large investment in this film, no less than $215,000, a record sum for any Mexican picture. He is to distribute the film exclusively in Mexico and abroad. The picture, the most expensive to be produced in this country, is to be released in September, anniversary of the date, in 1810, when practically all the American countries revolted against Spanish rule.

Alonso Sanchez Tello, pioneer producer who withdrew from the local field because of troubles with labor, and his associate, Chano Urueta, well known director, announce that they will start late in May a series of 12 pictures in Monterrey, a little south of Laredo, Texas. They picked the northern city as a fresh field for films. They hope to get around animosity the film unions have for them by releasing their products exclusively abroad, including Spanish-speaking centers of the United States.

Mexico had 849 legitimately conducted theatres in operation on May 10. This number does not include several clandestine theatres that exhibit obscene and otherwise forbidden films. All the theatres in the 849 abide by all government rules concerning safety, sanitation, patron comfort and tax paying.

A case that is regarded as a test of the authority of the municipal government to order the closing of theatres in cases where the exhibitor fails to obey its orders to make repairs has been filed with the first district court here by Eduardo Chavez Garcia, owner of the Cine Regio, a subsequent run theatre.

Mr. Chavez Garcia said the government ordered him to repair his theatre and allowed him 30 days in which to do so. This term, it was found, was too short because the repairs were more extensive than it was at first believed would be necessary. The government extended this term by ten days. But work was halted in that time for the chief contractor was taken so ill that he had to be operated upon. The government refused to accept this as an excuse for failing to complete the repairs and ordered the theatre closed.

The longest run any picture has ever had at one theatre in Mexico, that of 14 consecutive weeks, has been concluded by "All This and Heaven, Too" (W. B.) at the Cine Rex, a 1,000-seat cinema here. This film was priced at 65 cents during its first two weeks; 45 cents for the next fortnight and 35 cents the rest of the time.

"Gone With the Wind" (MGM) is the runner-up to "Heaven" in exhibitions here, playing six solid weeks at the Cine Alameda and three, concurrent with the exhibitions at the Alameda, at the Cine Iris. The third best long stayer here was "Rebecca," which remained at the Alameda for four straight weeks.

Archibald Honored

George Archibald, joint managing director of United Artists in England, was the guest of honor at a luncheon tendered him by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of U. A. in charge of distribution, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on May 14, which was attended by U. A. executives, department heads and producers' representatives.

Havana Studios Prepare Shorts

by RAMON PEON
in Havana

Saica Films, recently formed independent production company, has released the first two-reel musical short in a projected series of six such subjects. Starring Estelita Rodriguez and Rene Cabell, radio stars from CMQ, Havana, the short is titled "Cuban Rhythms." It was directed by Ernesto Caparros who has been signed by Saica as co-producer. Senorita Rodriguez is reported to have been signed for a screen test by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Peliculas Cubanas and Chic, the two largest production studios in Havana, are reported preparing new production efforts. The success of the local newsreel "Noticiario Cubano CMQ," directed by Manola Alonso, editor of the humor weekly, Chispa, has brought a plan for a series of travelogues. Royal News is also producing the "Royal Miniatures" of which the first three issues have been quite successful. Luis R. Molina, president of Royal News, also has produced "The Son of the Returning," a feature length comedy drama which is now being released in South America.

Martinez and Borbolla, film distributors, have signed to produce a series of advertising shorts to run exclusively in all first run houses and neighborhood under a controlling contract with the theatre owners. They have opened a new laboratory in Cojimar, a few miles from Havana.

Government help for domestic production is indicated in a move now under way under the sponsorship of Secretary of Commerce Dr. Onate and Senator Rivero.

Academy Proceeding with Public Relations Series

The Academy's recently organized Public Relations Institute has begun to function. Following the recent first exhibit of studio still photographs, running 13 days in Hollywood, New York's Museum of Modern Art will next display most of the 636 11x14 mounted exhibition prints and then the best 100, plus the prize winning 16, are to be shown in stores, galleries, theatres and museums (gratis) to keep the display alive for a year. This exhibit has done much to give rival studio still men an opportunity to view the work of competing artists and for publicity and still photography departments to compare their work.

After an analysis of this film publicity art, the Public Relations Institute of the Academy has given the first of a series of technical lectures to members of the Still Cameraman's Union, explaining to the still men the need for greater thought in making stills, the need for motion picture stills to compete with the candid, active, living stills news photographers are sending in from the war and from the streets of every American city.

"Photographic competition for free space in periodicals was never greater and 'static,' stiff, posey still photographs are taboo," the Academy explains.

The Institute starts another series of lectures and forums on 'Publicity today' for all studio press agents, shortly, as another step in a campaign to improve the industry's public relations.

BROADCASTERS SEE CONGRESSIONAL FIGHT WITH FCC, BLAME COMMISSION

Support Grows for Probe of Commission after Charges, Countercharges at St. Louis Convention of Broadcasters

The broadcasters of the nation, confused and antagonized by a Federal Communications Commission which, it is charged, is exceeding its powers in recent orders to realign commercially the presently organized industry, this week is countering, unofficially, with threats of a Congressional investigation of the Commission. Observers at Capitol Hill, sense a concerted effort by some Congressmen, who have been itching for an FCC probe, to begin that probe now. That effort has at least the support of the broadcasters.

The melee possibly to come, is a result of continual tension between the FCC and radio and television interests, which culminated in an order by the FCC several weks ago that the National Broadcasting Company, owner of two networks, the Red and Blue, divest itself of one; and in the verbal and almost active fracas at the National Association of Broadcasters convention in St. Louis last week.

Fight at Convention

At that convention Mark Ethridge, general manager of Louisville station WHAS, and a former NAB president, resigned from a commission named by President Roosevelt to survey the radio industry; and further charged the President had been "deceived" and almost "betrayed" anent asserted troubles in the industry. He referred to the FCC order to the NBC, and said of the President's contemplated survey, "That work has been destroyed not only by the text and tone of the commission's order, but also by the evident determination of the commission, by precipitate action, to forestall the expression of views by any other agency." He assailed the FCC for exceeding its authority, and said, "If a fight comes the majority of the commission (headed by James C. Fly) must be blamed."

Mr. Fly, who had told the convention previously the Government did not want to take over radio, heard Mr. Ethridge's attack; but, not being called upon for an answer, left the convention in a reported bad humor. Neville Miller, NAB president, told newspaper men later he had called Mr. Fly at his hotel room, offering the FCC head a chance to reply.

On Thursday, May 16th, the NAB directors demanded Mr. Fly's resignation, in a public statement, which read in part:

"The broadcasters have contended that regulation under the present chairman of the FCC, Mr. Fly, has been punitive, capricious, biased, and destructive."

Referring to an attack, via statements to the press, by Mr. Fly on the NAB and Mr. Ethridge, the NAB statement said: "Mr. Fly's violent statement was the strongest substantiation of the truth of what we have been saying. We leave to the public the judgment whether the state of mind exhibited by Mr. Fly qualifies him to be chairman of a government commission calling for judicial impartiality. . . . (Mr. Fly) made his attack after he had declined repeated invitations to address the NAB convention in reply to an address critical of Mr. Fly's administration of the FCC, which had been delivered by Mr. Ethridge. . . . Mr. Fly was repeatedly invited to address later sessions of the convention . . . but refused to do so."

Mr. Fly had said, in part: "I could not but admire the facility with which the Louisville pair (referring to Messrs. Ethridge and Miller) functioned yesterday in that great forum of debate, the so-called Association of Broadcasters. One man let loose all the unsupported and unsupportable scandal that suspicion and a given state of mind could conjure.

"As the nation's free press started to roll, the other gentleman from the Blue Grass country made a clever move with the gavel. The 'debate' was over. That is democracy in flower—carrying, however, a none-too-fragrant odor."

Mr. Fly also questioned "whether the NAB exists as an effective vehicle for the exchange of ideas and the formation of expression of member-station opinion."

He added: "I cannot but conclude that this type of management of the industry and its membership has been all too clever, too brilliant. As John Randolph of Virginia has said, it reminds me of a 'dead mackerel in the moonlight. It both shines and stinks.'

"I want to reiterate in all sincerity: the whole effect of the FCC report is to return to this industry its freedom, and to make it a truly American system."

The FCC in Washington this week, opposed by the broadcasters, embarrassed by the exchange of comments during the NAB convention, and a target for irate Congressmen, did not even appear certain of support from the White House for, after Mr. Ethridge's resignation, Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, and openly his spokesman, declared, non-committally, but significantly:

"I think Mr. Ethridge is a gentleman of great honesty and sincerity of purpose."

President Roosevelt, questioned at a later press conference, asserted he had not read, nor approved, the FCC report assailed by Mr. Ethridge.

Mr. Fly, apprised Thursday night, May 16th, of the NAB directors' demand he be removed, declared it was of "real concern to the nation that official posts be held by men of sufficient strength of character to do their duty in the face of the strongest pressures which can be turned against them."

Craven, Case Minority

The FCC report ordering elimination of certain types of chain radio operation, was written by Mr. Fly and four FCC members. Commissioners T. A. M. Craven and Norman S. Case opposed the order, and are regarded in the clear, in event of probing.

At the final business of the NAB, Mr. Miller announced the directors would appoint a committee charged with waging war against the FCC report. He also remarked, "We cannot believe that we are as far out of step with the American people as some would have us believe we are."

Over the weekend, Mr. Fly told newspapermen the argument was over; that the FCC monopoly in radio report was a "closed issue." The regulations are in effect, he noted, adding that, to his mind, there was no question on the authority of the FCC to issue those regulations.

He had nothing to say about the resolution by Senator Wallace H. White, of New Hampshire, calling for a Senate investigation of the FCC, and asking that its recent regulations be suspended while the inquiry is in effect.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, commented last week, anent the FCC report, that the domination of 85 per cent of night broadcasting by the NBC and the Columbia Broadcasting System, was "alarming." He is chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. He refused to comment on the wisdom of the FCC regulations, saying he had not had time to study the report thoroughly.

Ethridge Attacks Commission

Mr. Ethridge's statements to the NAB convention, in which he announced his resignation from the Roosevelt radio commission, and which precipitated the Fly-NAB controversy, were, in part, as follows:

"Regulation, to be successful, should be intelligent and deliberate. The new order, both from its text and from the tone of utterances of its authors in public and in private, is founded on a basis of bad temper, impatience, and vindictiveness. It is intended to be punitive, not constructive. It will impair the very service which it is charged with protecting. To my mind, the Commission has embarked upon a continuing process of adjustment that will lead us sooner or later to the easy solution of having the whole thing taken over.

"The chairman of the commission (Mr. Fly) denied that is his intention: and, of course, he speaks in good faith; but people who set houses on fire frequently do not intend to do it, too.

"In fairness, I must point out to you the chairman's statement of yesterday, that he is willing to sit down with responsible representatives of the industry to discuss the implementation, the timing and the procedure in connection with the rules and regulations. I venture the personal comment that the offer is equivalent to asking you whether you want six or eight pallbearers, and whether you want to be cremated, or put underground."

FCC GRANTS FOUR FM RADIO PERMITS

In recent weeks the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, has granted construction permits to four Frequency Modulation radio stations, and has received requests for licensing to build from two others.

The Evening News Association in Detroit, and Station WBNS in Columbus, Ohio, have been granted permits by the FCC with authority to operate a 3,000-watt transmitter for a period of 60 days. The St. Louis University, St. Louis, is to construct an FM station to operate in the 45,-100-kilocycle channel to cover 13,000 square miles with a population of more than 1,500,000, while the Milwaukee Journal has been authorized by the FCC to proceed with the construction of a new FM station.

The Commission has under consideration a request for two construction permits—one from the M. A. Leese Radio Corp., Washington, and another from the Lake Worth Broadcasting Corp., Lake Worth, Fla. The M. A. Leese Radio Corp. asks to operate in the 47,100-kilocycle channel to cover 5,600 square miles with a population of 899,946. The Lake Worth station for a permit to operate in the 1,340-kilocycle channel in the Lake Worth territory.

HAYS, HOOVER, BRADEN ON MPTOA'S PROGRAM

Long Program Arranged for Coast Convention in June; Record Attendance Predicted

Corraling of speakers for the annual meeting at Los Angeles on June 9th to 12th highlighted MPTOA organizational activities this week.

Speakers at the convention, to be held at the Ambassador Hotel, were listed by Edward L. Kuykendall, president, as follows: Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association; J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Judge J. F. T. O'Connor, of the U. S. District Court for Southern California; J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association; Austin Keough, vice president and general counsel of Paramount; Walter Wanger, Leonard Goldenson, and Edward Arnold, among others.

Mr. Braden is expected to deliver a report on the first five months of operation of the motion picture arbitration system.

Mr. Kuykendall predicted a record attendance at the convention which will be held in conjunction with the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners. Railroads have reduced fares to the meeting, he said.

Allied Directors Meet

The board of directors of the Allied States Association will meet at Cleveland on Monday for an executive session to discuss current problems facing exhibitors. Col. H. A. Cole, national president of Allied, called the meeting. Taxation, the effects of the New York consent decree and the selling provisions effective September 1st, and the situation on Minnesota where a nullifying state law was passed, are understood to be on the calendar for the Allied directors. All are expected to receive a thorough airing during the two-day session.

An open meeting of theatre owners will follow the directors' meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 1 P. M. in the Cleveland Hotel for a round table discussion of theatre problems with the Allied directors. P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a bulletin to the membership this week urged attendance at the open meeting. Saying that the problems involved were vital to all and that Ohio theatre men would profit by common discussion, Mr. Wood wrote:

The Allied directorate ordinarily meets at this time in preparation for the national convention. The 1941 convention has been postponed until September, but Mr. Cole said that it was felt that present conditions warranted a special gathering. The gathering was transferred from Washington to Cleveland because of overcrowding at Washington hotels.

Circuit Meet in Iowa

Executives and managers of all theatres in the Tri-States circuit met on Monday and Tuesday at Des Moines for a discusssion on operating policies for the coming season. Compliance with goverment distribution rules under the consent decree was given special stress. Over one hundred managers, bookers and executives were present.

Guests included Claude Lee, New York, public relations agent for Paramount; R. C. LeBeau, of Kansas City, Paramount district manager; Bill Lansberg of Kansas City, Paramount exploitation manager; Manuel Brown of Denver, manager of the Denver-Omaha district; C. J. Duer of Denver, shorts manager, and L. Taylor, manager of the Paramount Omaha office.

Illinois Allied Conference

Members of Illinois Allied gathered in Chicago at the Congress Hotel on Wednesday at the call of Jack Kirsch, president, for a general meeting to discuss the problem of falling revenues. A general downward trend was reported in grosses at Illinois houses. Mr. Kirsch said that it was hoped that intelligent discussion would determine "if it's the pictures we are getting, the war, double and triple features or what" that is causing receipts to fall off despite a general business upswing.

Theatre Building Plans Underway in Wisconsin

A spurt in theatre construction and renovation has been apparent in the state of Wisconsin the past months. The announcement has been made of new theatres for Appleton, Whitehall, Two Rivers and Eau Claire. New Appleton houses are scheduled to be built by Marcus, Swirnoff and Loew, Ripon; J. H. Silliman and Eskin Theatres, Inc. The latter is also planning a new theatre for Whitehall, while Standard Theatres Co. has announced plans for the Two Rivers theatre. The New Eau Claire house will be erected by the Minnesota Amusement Co., which currently operates the State, Badger and O'Klare theatres there.

Recent reopenings have included the Chief at Kenosha, formerly the Cameo, by Standard; the Hollywood in the same city, formerly the Butterfly theatre, by Michael Lencione, operator of the Lincoln theatre there. In addition, Warners' Majestic in Sheboygan is undergoing extensive renovations and will reopen shortly.

PRODUCERS ACQUIRE 34 PROPERTIES FOR NEW SEASON'S FILM PRODUCTION

RKO Buys Untitled, Unwritten Novel by I. A. R. Wylie; Paramount Purchases Film Rights to the Life of Texas Guinan

Hollywood producers, further stacking their story vaults for film selling under the consent decree, during April purchased 34 properties. Of these 17 were original stories, six were stage productions of past and current seasons, and 11 were books and novels including one radio script and two magazine stories.

During the month one of the most unusual deals in recent Hollywood history was closed when RKO purchased the screen rights to an untitled and unwritten novel by I. A. R. Wylie.

Miss Wylie, it might be remembered, was the author of "Vivacious Lady," the Ginger Rogers-James Stewart vehicle which RKO is currently reissuing. Upon her arrival in Hollywood a short time ago Miss Wyle presented the idea for her novel to company executives. The deal calls for her to write a novel which will be a modern American story and adapt it for the screen after its publication.

Royalty Scale Used

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer about the same time purchased the motion picture rights to "Drivin' Women" by Elizabeth Chevalier. Negotiations for the story were completed upon agreement that the final purchase price of the screen rights would be determined by the number of copies sold, with a maximum price of $75,000. The film company made a down payment to the author of $10,000 and will pay a similar amount when the book is published this fall. After that MGM will pay $2,500 for each 10,000 copies sold, after the first 100,000 has been reached.

Paramount, during April, concluded a deal with the heirs of the late Texas Guinan to produce a picture based on her life from the days when she was a two-gun western star in silent pictures until she became New York's night club queen. Buddy G. DeSylva, who knew Miss Guinan during her heyday as America's most celebrated night club impresario, plans to produce the picture as one of the company's lavish musicals of 1942. It is expected that either Paulette Goddard or Barbara Stanwyck will appear in the title role.

Following the purchase of 11 novels, four stage plays and six short stories and originals since the beginning of the year, Twentieth Century-Fox expanded its story department to the greatest strength in the company history, it was announced during the month by Julian Johnson, story editor.

Additions to the story department include David Matthews, who has been assigned as associate story editor to work with Robert Bassler, Mr. Johnson's assistant. James Fisher, formerly story editor for B. P. Schulberg, has been assigned as editorial assistant to Ernest Lubitsch. Louis Moore and William Tunberg have been promoted to posts as special editorial assistants.

Properties acquired during April with all available credits follow:

Caviar for Two, an original story purchased for motion picture production by Universal.

Changed Identity, a radio script purchased by MGM.

TWO CONVENTIONS FOR COLUMBIA PICTURES

Montague Announces Extension of "Decentralized Sales" Policy; To Meet First in Chicago

Columbia has announced it will hold two national sales conventions, the first in the form of a national executive meeting for the company's top executives only. This meeting will be held in Chicago on June 7th and 8th, and at that time plans for the second meeting, bringing together the entire sales force, will be formulated.

At the Chicago executive meeting, home office executives and sales heads, as well as division and branch managers, will discuss product and plans for the 1941-'42 selling season.

Dencentralized Policy Planned

This first meeting will be the means whereby Columbia's decentralized sales policy, operated successfully in years past, will be extended in authority to an even greater degree than in the past, A. Montague, general sales manager, said in announcing the plans for the executive sales meeting. Through decentralization each member of the Columbia sales organization is permitted considerable leeway in acting on his own in solving selling problems.

Mr. Montague further expalined that Columbia would continue to distribute its product this coming season as it always has. An analysis of the company's forthcoming line up will be an important part of the executive sales sessions.

Republic's Quarterly Meetings

Republic held quarterly regional sales meetings at the studio on Monday and Tuesday for the Pacific Coast staffs, followed by meetings in Chicago on Wednesday and Thursday. On May 27th and 28th, next Tuesday and Wednesday, the company will hold another meeting for its New York and Eastern staffs.

Herbert J. Yates and James R. Grainger, Republic executives, disclosed that the western sales division was running 35 percent ahead of last year in playdates and contract liquidations.

Previously, M. J. Siegel, president of the company, announced the company planned to spend about $1,750,000 in new construction in Hollywood in the next two and a half years, $250,000 of which will be spent in the next four months. He said $750,000 has been invested in new construction since October 15th. Contemplated are a new sound stage, property department, dressing rooms, business street sets, restaurant, and permanent sets on the back lot.

Universal Meetings

The second of Universal's three regional meetings for its home office branch operations executives, office managers, bookers and auditors, was held at the Drake Hotel in Chicago last Wednesday.

It was a two-day session presided over by branch operations manager F. T. Murray. The following attended the meeting: J. J. Jordan, contract playdate manager; G. C. Craddock, assistant to western sales manager W. J. Heineman; J. H. Murphy of the branch operations department; Irving Weiner, of the newsreel distribution department; H. T. Sniffin, auditor; Charles Hurley of Cincinnati; Orval Petersen of Milwaukee; Leonard H. Andrews of Memphis; George Flynn of Cleveland; Arthur Young of Cleveland; Milton Ettinger of Indianapolis; Edwin Greene of Dallas; Edward Stevens of St. Louis; J. E. Mitchell of Dallas; Walter Hyland of Chicago; Louis Berman of Chicago; Lawrence Klein of Kansas City; Jerry Slutzky of Des Moines; Eugene Alexander of Detroit; John Kane of Kansas City; Sol Yeager of Minneapolis; Mark Holstein of Oklahoma City; William Barker of Omaha.

Warner Zone Manager Meetings

Warner theatre managers in the Albany, N. Y., territory held their second meeting within a week at the call of M. A. Silver, zone manager, May 19th. Subject of the meeting was the Joseph Bernhard drive, inaugurated a week previous, as well as general industry topics.

Speaking, besides Mr. Silver, was C. A. Smakwitz, district manager. Managers present were Andy Roy, Stanley; Arnold Stoltz, Avon and Lincoln; Jack Breslin, Utica, Utica; Leo Rosen, Troy; Sid Sommer, and Jack Swartout, American, Troy; J. E. M. Curley, Strand; Al LaFlamme, Madison; Eddie Selette, Albany and Mel Conheim, Ritz, Albany.

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres, attended a meeting of managers of his New Jersey zone in Newark, to discuss summer policies, emphasizing selling of pictures that have exploitation values. Harry Goldberg, advertising manager of Warner Theatres, also spoke at the meeting.

Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, this week left New York for Hollywood after conferring at the home office for three weeks.

McCormick Leaves for Studio

S. Barret McCormick, RKO director of advertising and publicity, left last Friday night, May 16th, for Hollywood to confer with George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, on advertising plans for next season. David Strumpf, director of the art department, accompanied Mr. McCormick.

Terry Turner, head of the field exploitation staff for the company, left Friday night also for the coast, to prepare for the opening of "Citizen Kane" at the Geary in San Francisco, May 27th and "Sunny" at the Golden Gate the following day.

Meanwhile, RKO's announcement book for the 1941-'42 season will contain the company's first block-of-five pictures and as many titles of succeeding product as have been determined.

Mendenhall Promoted

Ted Mendenhall, Paramount exchange manager in Omaha, has been promoted to a new post created by the company—district manager of short subjects—and goes to Kansas City where his office will be located. Al Taylor, of the San Francisco exchange, will become exchange manager.

Seagle Joins Altec

Altec Service has added George P. Seagle, of Norfolk, Va., to its staff of service inspectors. Mr. Seagle formerly worked for Electrical Research Products, Inc., and De Forrest. He has been assigned to the Roanoke area.

MGM Transfers Two

Claude Morris, Metro Goldwyn Mayer field exploitation head in St. Louis, has changed places with Irving Waterstreet who held the same job in Kansas City.

Aylesworth Choice Receives Approval

The selection of M. H. Aylesworth to function in radio activities of the current program of wooing our good neighbors of the other Americas has the editorial approbation of Broadcasting, national weekly of the radio, which in its issue of May 12, says:

"No better man than Merlin Hall Aylesworth could have been selected by Nelson A. Rockefeller to head radio activities of the Office of the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics. The $1 a year job brings 'Deac' Aylesworth, founder president of NBC and one of the true pioneers of modern broadcasting, back into the field of his most fruitful endeavors, albeit in a temporary Governmental capacity.

"In the half-dozen years since he left NBC, 'Deac' Aylesworth as a motion picture executive, newspaper publisher, lawyer and public relations counsel has never lost the radio touch; he has maintained his contacts with the executives of networks and stations, with sponsors (he sits on the boards of several big radio advertising firms), with agency men (on the Rockefeller Committee he works with Don Francisco, president-on-leave of Lord & Thomas) and with countless friends among the rank and file.

"Even now, we learn, some of his brightest young proteges have gathered around him for the new task. Recalling his brilliant job in attracting major advertisers to the new-born medium of radio not so many years ago, it is a certainty that shortwave broadcasting to Latin America, sponsored and sustaining, will get a greater impetus from his efforts. Everyone in American radio should be heartened in his desire to contribute to the vital cause of hemispheric solidarity by reason of the fact that 'Deac' Aylesworth has been selected for leadership on the all-important radio front."

RKO Lists Field Sales Staff Changes

Eight changes in RKO-Radio sales personnel in the field have been announced by sales manager Andrew Smith. The offices involved are Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha and St. Louis.

Errol Sanders joins the Denver staff, succeeding Fred P. Brown, who resigned. E. E. Gruenberg, formerly Minneapolis salesman, goes to Des Moines to fill the vacancy left by the transfer of E. J. Smith, Sr., to Buffalo.

Ed Lebby, who resigned as a Pittsburgh salesman in June, 1940, after having been with RKO for six years, rejoins the staff as a salesman in Detroit, replacing Fred Bonnem, resigned. Richard Saenger joins the Milwaukee staff as salesman.

C. H. Noodleman joins sales staff in Minneapolis, filling the vacancy caused by the transfer of Mr. Gruenberg to Des Moines. W. G. Carmichael is employed as a salesman in Omaha, succeeding J. P. Smith, who resigned. William Hoppe joins the staff at St. Louis succeeding L. S. Gruenberg, who was recently promoted to Salt Lake City manager. J. Arends is promoted from office manager to salesman at St. Louis.

Orchard Joins Navy

Thomas Orchard, associate producer of the March of Time and a lieutenant (junior grade) in the U. S. Naval Reserve, has been called to active duty. He will be stationed in the Bureau of Aeronautics in the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., in charge of the Navy's corps of 250 cameramen.

20TH-FOX DIRECTORS ELECT PLACE, RENEW KENT FIVE YEAR CONTRACT

Chase Vice-President to Head Executive Committee; Profits for First Quarter $404,089; Loew's Half Year $5,141,135

Stockholders of Twentieth Century-Fox at the company's adjourned annual meeting on May 15th elected 12 directors to serve for the ensuing year. The board of directors now consists of: H. Donald Campbell, Chase National Bank; John R. Dillon, Hayden Stone & Company; Wilfred J. Eadie, 20th Century-Fox; Daniel O. Hastings, Industrial Building, Wilmington, Del.; Felix A. Jenkins, Sidney R. Kent, Edwin P. Kilroe, and W. C. Michel, 20th Century-Fox; William P. Philips, New York; Hermann G. Place, Chase National Bank; Seton Porter, National Distillers Products Corp.; and Sydney Towell, 20th Century-Fox.

803,560 Shares Represented

Represented at the meeting were 803,560 shares of preferred stock and 1,051,975 of common, out of 916,264 shares of preferred and 1,741,995 of common outstanding, the company announced. There was no information as to how the shares were voted.

At an organization meeting immediately afterwards the new board of directors named Hermann G. Place, for many years a vice-president of the Chase National Bank and a Fox director for two years to the chairmanship of the company's executive committee. Mr. Place will leave the bank to assume an active executive post with the film company in what was characterized as a move "in the interest of reinforcing the organization in New York."

The directors also voted a five year renewal of the contract of Sidney R. Kent, president and elected the following officers: W. C. Michel, executive vice-president; Darryl F. Zanuck and William Goetz, vice-presidents; Sydney Towell, treasurer; Wilfred J. Eadie, comptroller and assistant treasurer; Felix A. Jenkins, secretary; John P. Edmondson, J. Harold Lang, and George F. Wasson, Jr., assistant secretaries; Read B. Simonson and Fred L. Metzler, assistant treasurers.

The directors also declared a 37½ cents per share dividend for the second quarter of 1941 payable on June 30th on preferred stock outstanding on June 16th.

Profits for the first quarter of 1941 ended March 29th after deduction of federal taxes were announced by W. C. Michel, executive vice president at $404,089 after providing a reserve of $350,000 to balance frozen foreign assets. The net compared with a profit of $353,376 in the 1940 period after a comparable reserve of $100,000. Net profit in the fourth quarter of 1940 was $558,275 after a $600,000 reserve and including a $693,000 dividend received from the National Theatres Corporation. No dividends from this company were received in the first quarter of either year.

Gross income from sales and rentals of film and accessories in the first quarter of 1941 amounted to $10,301,552. Total income was $10,637,610. Federal income taxes were $74,300.

Loew's Six-Month Profit Falls Off

Loew's, Inc., on May 15th reported a six month net consolidated profit of $5,141,135 for the first half of the fiscal year ended on March 13th, compared with a net of $6,789,828 for the same period last year. The return, computed after deduction of all taxes and charges amounted to $2.80 per common share compared with $3.79 per share in 1940. Preferred stock earnings were equal to $37.60 per share compared with $49.66 in 1940.

Total consolidated operating profit of Loew's after subsidiaries' preferred dividends was $9,473,534 for the first half of the current fiscal year compared with $11,101,356 last year. Deductions included $3,432,399 for taxes this year compared with $3,411,528, and an allowance of $900,000 for contingencies both years. Blocked foreign earnings were not computed in the report.

Stockholders of Technicolor, Inc., meeting in New York on Monday were advised in a message from Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president, that the company in the first half of 1941 was "substantially ahead of its position in 1940" and likely to exceed this year's profit by a large margin. Dr. Kalmus wrote that the company would manufacture at least twenty color feature pictures this year compared with 12 in 1940.

Production of technicolor prints is at 47,000,000 feet for the first six months of 1941, or seven million feet ahead of the same period last year. The production volume is likely to offset a one cent a foot price reduction, he said.

Mr. Kalmus said that the laboratories of Technicolor, Ltd., London affiliate, were carrying on despite the war with both government and private production, and "offers good promise of eliminating the loss which was sustained last year."

The stockholders reelected Dr. Kalmus, Eversley Childs, L. G. Clark and J. L. Anderson to three year terms as directors. Officers were also promised indemnification for law suits which they are compelled to defend by reason of their corporate position except in cases of negligence or misconduct. The company board of directors will meet again at New York on June 10th to reelect officers.

Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., radio and television equipment manufacturers on Monday reported a net loss for 1940 of $78,599 compared with $95,105.

Directors of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., this week declared a dividend of 25 cents per share on the $400,000 outstanding shares of preferred stock. It will be paid July 1st to stockholders of record on June 10th.

Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., at New York this week listed a loss of $88,796 for the year ended January 31, 1941. The loss compares with a net profit of $29,976 for the year ended January 1940.

CHILDREN SEE PLAY FOR FIVE CENTS

As a preview of the full program of school children's matinees which will start next year, about 1,300 New York City school children will have the opportunity to see Katharine Cornell in "The Doctor's Dilemma" at the Shubert theatre in New York on May 30th, it was announced by Alfred Harding, chairman of the central control board of the School Theatre Program.

All theatrical unions will permit their members to work without pay for the special matinee. Only electric current, heat, if necessary, printing of tickets, and salaries for ticket takers, doormen, ushers, cleaners and porters will be paid from the receipts. For this show it is estimated that about $52 will be required and the five cent charge will cover the cost. The plan is intended to aid the school system and build a potential audience for future years.

John Vincent Smith, Drama Editor, Dead

John Vincent ("Jack") Smith, drama editor of the New York Journal-American, died early Wednesday morning in New York City. He was 56 years old. Mr. Smith had been associated with Hearst newspapers in that city for 43 years, beginning as an office boy for the New York American.

Included in his newspaper experience, in which he gathered scores of friends among stage and screen celebrities, was service as a war correspondent, with Pershing in Mexico, and at Camp Mills, Long Island, during the first World War. He worked in politics for a while; and for a while, too, was purchasing agent for the New York American.

He leaves two sisters, Miss Rose Mary Smith, and Mrs. Katharine E. Bellew, both of New York.

Court to Decide on Blumenthal

Whether A. C. Blumenthal will be punished for contempt of court, for failing to appear during the trial on income tax evasion charges, of Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century Fox, is to be decided by Federal Judge Grover Moscowitz, who on Tuesday took under consideration a Government motion to punish Mr. Blumenthal. The latter, in Mexico, has submitted affidavits asserting illness. Also under the judge's consideration is Mr. Blumenthal's motion to quash the Government subpoena.

Koenig to Stay

Twentieth Century Fox has extended the contract of William Koenig, as general production manager.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS FIGHT SUNDAY OPENING TAX

Defeat of Morrison Plan in Commons Spurs CEA; Levy May Force Theatre Closings

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Far from dispiriting British exhibitors into a defeatist inaction, the recent dismissal in the House of Commons of Herbert Morrison's scheme to extend the legal range of Sunday entertainments has spurred them to a keener effort, an effort in the direction of a change not so much in the law, as in the local interpretations thereof.

Nothing very much can be done now towards an extension of Sunday opening. Exhibitors are concentrating greatly on the terms under which they are locally allowed to open. In more than one district a bid is being made to have the conditions alleviated, chiefly the charity tax. Principal champion of the British exhibitor in this regard is the London Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitor Association who are currently waging a vigorous campaign to get the tax—which stands at 12½-13 percent on takings, reduced to a figure nearer the ethical and the economic.

Sunday Revenue Important

On the success or otherwise of this campaign depends greatly the survival or otherwise of many exhibitors. The all round drop in box office takings in many areas, such as the consistently "blitzed" London area, and the complete changeover in filmgoing habits, which has now translated the weekend into the only profitable patch in the week, has transformed the charity tax from a levy on Sunday takings into a penalisation of the exhibitor's whole trading. In many districts the amount taken from the exhibitor by the charity tax which is imposed on all cinemas as a sine qua non of Sunday trading, if retained, would be just enough to save him from loss.

This economic fact, plus the increasing tendency of local authorities to impose what are considered unjust and fantastic regulations, of the types of films to be shown, the patrons to be admitted, and the prices to be charged, have provoked an all round revolt against the present operations of the Sunday opening law.

The London CEA, in presenting a case to the London County Council for a cut in the present tax, has drawn up an audited statistical document which is believed to be economically incontrovertible. Its details have not yet been published but it is possible to forecast the line of country likely to be explored by the London exhibitor, a line of country which, though in this instance exclusively local, can be paralleled in many other British areas and is likely to be used as a model for other CEA groups in their efforts to secure a change in the situation.

Already, out of some 277 cinemas represented by the London and District Branch, over 100 have gone out of action thanks to Hitler's Luftwaffe and enemy action generally. Those which remain find conditions vastly different from those obtaining a year and more ago.

Originally most of the British exhibitor's business was done during the weekdays. Now it is concentrated mainly at the weekend, people, certainly during the bulk of the blacked out year, either working late hours in factory or workshop, or preferring the sure safety of the air raid shelter to the attractions of the picture house. To-day weekday trade has dropped over 50 per cent in many areas. Sunday trade has not dropped so much. The decrease figure is variably around the region of 30 per cent. The essential consideration is that irrespective of how much Sunday has relatively increased as a trading day (as related to the whole week) it is still between only 60 and 70 percent of prewar.

In areas like that covered by the London County Council, where the continued imposition of the Charity tax of 12½ percent plus a sum for Privy Council grants brings the total up to 13 per cent, the effect on this economic change is to increase the yield of the tax on the whole week's takings from 1.77 percent, the prewar figure, to 2.58 percent. Inasmuch as the whole week's revenues have dropped over 50 percent, the tax on the exhibitor's trading has thus more than doubled.

(It is estimated on a national average that on £100 taken by an exhibitor in a week, 40 percent goes to film hire and another 40 percent to cover wages, lighting, publicity, etcetera.)

Sunday, it is contended, can no longer be considered as an individual trading day. It is an essential part of the whole week, and any tax designed originally to be levied on that one day is now levied automatically upon the whole week's takings.

Five Percent Cut Sought

If a tax is still to be retained—and it is contended there is still no ethical justification for it—a figure nearer seven and a half, or even five percent, would be fairer than the present virtual thirteen.

In some British areas the tax is applied differently. A tax of a farthing (.50 cents) exists in more than one licensing district. The London tax is the highest in the country. If it is retained many exhibitors will almost certainly close down, finding it not worth while to stay open, working as they do on an extremely narrow margin. In some cases exhibitors are actually running at a loss but continue to operate because of the many commitments they have which can be covered by whatever income accrues.

Coupled with all this are demands being made by the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees for special wages and working conditions for cinemas newly opened on Sundays.

In Cornwall Sunday opening is only permitted if children are excluded. Manchester exhibitors have met the accusation that their opening had attracted children from Sunday Schools, by charging full price to all ages.

Though in the blitzed areas and in those swollen by reception of evacuated families, and by troops nearby, this changeover in filmgoing habits has translated Sunday into the business peak of the week, there remain areas which will not touch Sunday trading, refusing either on commercial or ethical grounds, even in some instances because of an absence of popular demand, to take any action. The CEA leave the matter to individual local discretion.

Nevertheless, since the war, 180 areas have opened their cinemas on Sundays under the Emergency regulations.

In some districts exhibitors are not renewing application for Sunday licenses because their experience has been unsatisfactory.

In London itself, though the opening hours have been progressively stepped forward and houses operate until 10.30 during the longer days, the statutory five and a half hours opening period has not been increased. Into this the picturegoing public is pouring its major patronage, Blitz or no Blitz.

658 CINEMAS CLOSED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Final figures, which, although official, this week had not been published in England, establish that 658 motion picture theatres in Great Britain had been closed because of war damage and other causes between September 3, 1939, and May 19, 1941. Of these, approximately 500 were estimated to have been direct war casualties from bombs, evacuation, depressed trade, etc.

Universal Withdraws Argentine Picture

"Argentine Nights," the Hollywood feature attacked in Argentine, last week, in the midst of U. S. efforts there to have films build goodwill between the Americas, was withdrawn in Argentine over the weekend by Universal Pictures, "at the request of the Argentine Government." Some Argentinians charged that the film did not properly portray the country, its people or customs.

The company's statement in New York, announcing its decision, explained, "The picture was produced over a year ago as a harmless musical comedy in which no offense to any people or nation was intended.

"It is not the policy of Universal," continued the statement, "to produce any pictures of controversial nature, and in line with this policy, the company has recently created a special department in its studio empowered to delete from scripts and sets any dialogue and scenes which, by any stretch of the imagination, might be interpreted as being derogatory to the customs and feelings of foreign nations. In the case of 'Argentine Nights,'" it was charged, "the unfavorable reception was obviously inspired by unfriendly (presumably Axis) interests in Buenos Aires."

Shakespeare in Films

Four Shakespearian plays will be produced in 35 mm full-length features in September by Bald Eagle Productions, New Haven, Conn., for the past two years producers of 16 mm films. The features will be "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "Twelfth Night" and "All's Well That Ends Well." It is planned to build an actual replica of the old Globe theatre in England as one of the stage sets. Release will be first roadshow, then through educational and art theatre channels. Wallace Rosenthal is director; Joseph Einhorn, producer, and Harry Alpert, director of cinematography.

Universal Forms in Trinidad

Universal Pictures of Trinidad, Inc., was incorporated at Dover, Del., to deal in motion picture films in Trinidad. The company listed a capital of 100 shares of no par. The incorporators were R. F. Lewis, L. H. Herman and Walter Lenz of Wilmington, Del.

Mervine Becomes Inspector

Calvin E. Mervine has been appointed Altec service inspector in Pottsville, Pa.

Soskin Ready

With but a few details now awaiting finalization, Paul Soskin's epic of Fleet Street at war now approaches its initial day of shooting. With David Niven, released temporarily from his Army duties, to star in the film, and Frank Owen, editor of London's Evening Standard responsible for the story, Soskin has now reassembled much the same production team as worked on his eminently successful "Quiet Wedding." Anthony Asquith once again takes up the directorial reins, and "Bernie" Knowles, whose camerawork was a distinctive feature of the other film, will be in charge of photography on this. Mickey Anderson is again assistant director, Paul Sherriff in charge of art direction, and Dillon Damen controls publicity.

Meanwhile Paramount advanced their plans for another ambitious picture, a screen version of A. J. Cronin's "Hatter's Castle." Grafton Films, at the head of which is I. Goldsmith, producer of "The Stars Look Down," will make the film, and Lance Comfort who has recently concluded work on British National's "Penn of Pennsylvania" will direct. It is expected that the film will be launched at Denham on May 26th.

Noted Parisian caravanserai for prewar Americans—and Americanophile Britishers—war Harry's Bar, ("Sank, Roo Doonoo"). Over it presided that impresario of bonhomie and apertifs, Harry McElhone. Harry's Bar and Harry himself are both featured in the new Warner Brothers Teddington film "You Can't Escape Forever." A replica of "Sank, Roo Doonoo," has been built in the studio, and Harry himself has played in sequences set against this nostalgic background. Among those seeking consolation there are potential barflys Ben ("I Don't Get It") Lyon, as "Butch", American reporter, Griffiths Jones in role of a British Intelligence Officer and Ann Dvorak.

The nostalgic flavor is further intensified by sets representing the Cafe de l'Aigle Americain and Florian's dress salon.

Combing the galleries of radio fame for his popular audience films, producer-distributor F. W. Baker, chief of Butchers Film Service has persuaded two of Britain's most popular women artistes, Cockney comediennes Elsie and Doris Waters, to make their screen debut. They are to appear in a film—first of a series—which Bakes is to make in July with Maclean Rogers directing.

Another radio comedian persuaded to motion pictures by Baker is Yorkshireman "Bunny" Doyle, at present making his first film "Facing the Music" at Elstree—Maclean Rogers directing. With radio broadcasting featured considerably in the film many of the sequences will unveil the processes of outside broadcasts, works concerts relays, etcetera. Other luminaries shining in this vaudevillian firmament are Betty Driver, Ruby Miller, cartoonist, Paddy Drew and illusionist Will Goldston.

Also in production for Butchers currently are a Pan-European Production "Flickers" and "Shepherd of the Hills."

No cessation of activity would seem to be the policy of the British National interests, who, with "Penn of Pennsylvania" now in the cutting room, are approaching shooting date on yet another John Baxter subject, "The Common Touch." Greta Gynt is to play in this, as are also Geoffrey Hibbert, and Joyce Howard, who played to the admiration of the trade critics in "Love on the Dole."

Meanwhile, at Denham, John Greenwood, composer, and Muir Mathieson, musical director, have been working and recording for the Leslie Howard film "Pimpernel Smith." The London Philharmonic Orchestra, one of Britain's top musical organizations, recorded Greenwood's score.

In July another "Old Mother Riley" subject will be launched, with Arthur Luncan in the title role. It is possible that a British National unit will make yet another concurrently with "The Common Touch."

To celebrate the fact that they have been filming throughout the blitz with 16 to their credit Gainsborough Studios, where films are made for 20th Century Fox and G.F.D., staged a party this week. The British Broadcasting Company sent its recording van and ultimately broadcast a program around it.

To the party came Arthur Askey, Richard Murdoch, Wally Patch, Moore Marriott, Graham Moffat, Phyllis Calvert and others, staging a short play, in what, because the personnel lived there while making films he became known as "Studio Hotel."

"KIPPS" PREMIERED IN BATTLE ZONE

The Twentieth Century-Fox production "Kipps" was given its world premiere last week at Folkestone in Kent, well within range of Nazi guns on the French coast and to the music of British fighter planes patrolling the air above. The audience of 1,350 in the crowded Central cinema included complete representation of the London press and American film representatives.

"Kipps" was started during the heavy German raids of last September and its completion was hailed by the press as an expression of the "Anglo-American" spirit of endurance. Michael Redgrave and Diana Wynyard are starred.

Phonetics

Phonetic difficulties surrounding Arthur Askey's celebrated catch phrase, one of wartime Britain's most popular clichés, have decided producer Edward Black that the Gaumont-British-Gainsborough film now in production shall be called, not as originally planned "Ay Thang Yow," but simply "I Thank You."

One of the settings of this film will be a reconstruction of an Underground railway station used during the blitz as an air raid shelter. In this a concert is given with Askey and Murdoch doing their vaudeville turn and Cockney comedienne Lily Morris singing some old time numbers.

Marcel Varnel is directing.

Having recently completed "Cottage To Let," Anthony Asquith has been signed as a director for Gaumont-British-Gainsborough on a long term contract.

Asquith's record during the last few years includes some of the most pronounced box office successes to date: "Pygmalion," "French Without Tears," "Freedom Radio," "Quiet Wedding."

Into the epic subject matter of Ealing Studios' Fleet Air Arm film, "Ships With Wings," further sex appeal has now been introduced with the casting of Ann Todd as leading lady jointly with Jane Baxter. Whilst Jane is the Admiral's daughter, Ann has the role of a singer in love with Naval Officer John Clements, a singer so imbued with devotion that she gives her life for her hero.

Also added to the cast recently is Hugh Williams, given leave from the Army to play in the film. He has the role of a German spy.

Currently in production at Denham Studios is a new unit, Tansa Films, at the head of which is Marcel Hellman, and on the board of directors of which are C. M. Woolf, Oscar Deutsch and J. Arthur Rank.

Tansa is making "Jeannie" for release through General Film Distributors. Harold French is directing and the cast, at the head of which is daughter of Aran, Barbara Mullen, making her first screen appearance, also includes, says the publicity department, ninety sheep!

Harold Boxall is the production manager.

Nearing its end at the Denham Studios, after a lengthy and vicissitudinous career, is "49th Parallel," the Ortus-Ministry of Information film with a Canadian setting.

Scheduled to take the floor at the Rock Studios, Elstree, on May 21st, with Geoffrey Hibberd and Greta Gynt in leading roles, is "The Common Touch," which John Baxter is to make for British National.

STATE ADJOURNMENTS KILL 1,200 FILM BILLS

Majority of Unfavorable Bills Rejected; Minnesota Measure Outstanding in Those Passed

During the current state legislative sessions, now mostly all adjourned, some 1,200 bills affecting the motion picture industry, directly and indirectly, have been introduced in 43 states. This number is more than double the annual average for some years prior to 1940, yet more than half of the unfavorable bills already have been defeated and only one such measure—the Minnesota anti-consent decree law—has been enacted.

California had the greatest number of bills affecting the industry of any state, a total of 259 having been filed this year.

State capital reports were that despite the unusually high number of bills affecting the industry this year, lawyers representing film interests appeared only in connection with the anti-consent decree bills, and that no recognized professional representatives appeared for the industry in any state capital. The bulk of the unfavorable measures were opposed, and the favorable ones supported, either by local members or by voluntary local action of those familiar with industry problems.

Some 16 legislatures are still in session of the 43 states, and indications are that few of the approximately 600 measures before them which are considered unfavorable will be enacted.

Twenty-seven legislatures have adjourned and ten more are expected to adjourn before the beginning of June. These are: California, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas and Wisconsin. The Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Pennsylvania legislatures will not adjourn until after June 1st.

In years prior to 1940, the total of measures affecting the motion picture industry was about 550 in an average of 30 to 40 legislatures which met simultaneously. Last year the number jumped to approximately 750 bills in 39 convening legislatures. Only five state legislatures did not meet this year. They are: Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia.

Government Fearful Of Raising Ticket Tax

Since the motion picture screen has become a medium utilized by the Government for recruiting, selling defense bonds and other activities, officials are fearful that the levying of the proposed higher tax rate on theatre admissions might result in the loss of theatre patronage. Administration officials concerned with the development of new tax revenues were reluctant to suggest an increase in the tax, as well as the broadening of the base already urged, yet are hard pressed to find ways of raising more than the $3,500,000,000 originally set as the goal for tax legislation now before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Other than to admit that the tax legislation was "a mess," officials refuse to discuss the situation, but have not denied rumors of the past few days that much more than $3,500,000,000 in new money will be necessary if the Treasury is to make good its policy of financing two-thirds of the defense program by taxation and one-third by borrowing, in the light of the heavily increased expenditures now seen as probable.

There was no confirmation of the reports that an increase in the admissions tax was to be proposed, but it was understood that every possible avenue of revenue had been canvassed, which would indicate that some consideration had been given the matter.

The indications this past week were that the Treasury would accept the suggestion of the exhibitor representatives who appeared before the committee, and content itself with entire elimination of the admission tax exemption. At the same time, it was seen probable that the proposal for a film rental tax would be dropped as creating a burden on the motion picture industry out of proportion to the return to the Government.

The greatest influence against an increase in the admission tax rate is the desire of the Administration to make the fullest possible use of motion pictures in carrying governmental messages to the public via the short subject and the motion picture screen. The knowledge that an increase in the tax would tend to reduce patronage in some areas and among some classes of people. At the same time, it is realized that motion pictures are practically the only recreation and amusement of millions of people, even in the most prosperous periods, and that they contribute greatly to the maintenance of morale.

Other Tax Matters

In Lansing, Mich., a ten per cent amusement tax—the first additional tax levy favorably reported this session—has been recommended by the House General Taxation Committee. It is estimated that such a tax would bring $2,000,000 annually. It would apply to films and the legitimate theatres, as well as football games, baseball, night clubs, dances and similar attractions.

From Chicago, Illinois Allied's president, Jack Kirsch, said Allied would fight the new state wages and hours bill introduced last week at Springfield by Representative Anthony Daly, with a minimum wage of 30 cents hourly.

Allied is reported to be supporting Representative Tom Bolger's daylight saving time bill confining daylight saving time through September 30th. If passed the bill would nullify the Chicago bill ending daylight saving on October 30th.

Opposition to double and triple features spread to the Illinois legislature this week when a bill was introduced in the Assembly at Springfield to limit motion picture programs to a maximum of 135 minutes unless there is a 15 minute intermission after each 60 minutes of performance. Assemblyman Sandquist of Chicago introduced the measure.

The bill, patterned after similar proposals in Missouri, was the first to reach the Illinois legislature. It includes penalties of $100 to $500 fines and up to six months imprisonment for violations. The measure is under consideration by the Public Health Committee of the Assembly.

Meanwhile, the anti-triples bill in the Missouri legislature, limiting film program to 150 minutes, has been amended to apply only in cities of 1,000,000 populaiton, or more. This week, it is in the House. Observers say it has a chance of passage, and assert the Governor, Forrest C. Donnell, favors it.

In the Wisconsin legislature, the assembly has passed and sent to the senate the Doyne bill, No. 430A, which increases the penalties for possession, publication and sale of obscene literature and motion picture film. The bill amends the present obscenity statute by changing the violation from a misdemeanor to a felony.

Expected to receive the approval of the assembly judiciary committee is the Schmitz Bill, No. 527A, which strengthens the statute applying to persons or concerns seeking to collect money for playing of copyrighted music.

The bill provides that license fees on copyrighted music cannot be collected in the state without first obtaining the required state license and class for filing of lists of such music so that the public will be informed as to the title, owner, distributor, date of copyright and other specified information.

A measure which would permit the exhibition of motion pictures on Sunday throughout the state of Florida has been sent to Governor Holland after the House passed it with only four dissenting votes.

While Sunday films are permitted in virtually every city in the state, sponsors of the bill said it would relieve theatre owners of any possibility that showings might be halted by court injunction.

Florida seeks the two odd cents left from a nickle after payment of the federal theatre tax in a bill introduced in the House at Tallahassee on Tuesday by Representative Lane of Manatee county and Leaird of Broward county. The measure levies two cents on all Florida theatre tickets regardless of price. It is designed to raise approximately $1,500,000 a year of which $150,000 would go for free school books, $375,000 for old age pensions and the remainder to county school boards on a population basis. Mr. Lane said he had been assured a favorable finance committee report.

Following a legal opinion by the Scranton, Pa., City Solicitor that daylight saving time is illegal in Pennsylvania under an old state statute, several Pennsylvania communities took action adopting daylight saving time after the "fast" time was inaugurated in most of the country. Mauch Chunk and East Mauch Chunk adopted the new times to conform with the surrounding municipalities of Tamaqua, Palmerton, Weissport and Lehighton. Merchants in Montrose, Ga., adopted the new schedule after the Montrose Borough Council ruled it had no authority to take regarding saving time.

Representative Lawrence Connery of Massachusetts, has introduced into the national House a bill to tax radio stations from 10 to 20 per cent of their gross incomes.

EXHIBITOR ATTACKS PROPOSED LEVY

Albert J. Finke of Portland, Ore., representing Hamrick-Evergreen Theatres, telegraphed Congressman Homer D. Angell of Oregon to point out the burdens the proposed film rental tax would put on the shoulders of exhibitors.

Mr. Finke said in part: "There has already been levied on theatres a 10 per cent tax on practically all theatre admissions. . . . The new proposed 5 per cent film rental tax, if passed, will result in a staggering blow to the theatre industry. Distributors will pass it on to exhibitors," he explained, "but the exhibitor has no way of passing it on to the public, with the result that the burden will be upon the exhibitor and will be, in fact, a discriminatory sales tax that will change many theatres into losing propositions and force some theatres to close."

He estimated the tax would cost Oregon exhibitors alone in excess of $125,000 a year.

Selective Service Draws Film Folk

Theatre and distribution personnel ranks continue to be depleted by the calls issued by Selective Service Boards. The following were called or inducted in recent weeks:

Howard Clausen, secretary to Jack L. Warner in Hollywood, and James Finnegan, Warner property man, have been drafted. Sol Levy, film salesman, of St. Louis has been inducted.

Richard Hagstrom, of Warner's Oakland theatre; Hugh Ward, of the Shore theatre, and Jack Fleming, of the Cosmo theatre, all in Chicago, also have been inducted. Larry Ayres, of Twentieth Century-Fox home office distribution, has been inducted into the service. Robert Skillman, of the contact department, for the company is at Fort Bragg, N. C. Derr Neagley, of the Los Angeles Twentieth Century-Fox office, has reported for duty.

Harold Marshall, of the Metro Goldwyn Mayer exploitation staff working out of Indianapolis, has volunteered for a year's service. James Gavin, of Comerford Theatres, Inc., in Scranton, Pa., has reported for a year's service. George Buell, assistant manager of the Tivoli theatre in Fort Worth, Tex., is now at Fort Bliss, while Thurman Lumpkin, until recently assistant manager of the Palace theatre in Fort Worth, is now manager of the Army theatre at Camp Bowie, Texas. Edward Dunn, assistant at the RKO Temple theatre in Rochester, N. Y., is in the Army.

From Syracuse, N. Y., Jack Merckel, of the RKO-Schine Keith's theatre, has enlisted in the Coast Artillery, while Harry Joslin, Jr., formerly of Keith's and Loew's state in Rochester, has signed with the Marines. Inducted into service recently was Ernest Curtis, formerly associated with James Constantino at the James theatre in Rochester, is now at Fort Niagara.

In Cincinnati, Sam Oshrey, head booker for Warner and Paramount's Mark Cummings were feted by the Booker's Club at the Hotel Alms, on their departure for the Army. Fred K. Martin, assistant manager of Loew's state in Norfolk, Va., is now at Fort Meade, Md.

Lieut. Robert Pullin, formerly associated with his father in the operation of the Linden theatre in Columbus, Ohio, has reported for duty with the Army at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis.

53 Women Selected

Among the 53 women selected by the General Federation of Women's Clubs for "The great strides made by women in the past 50 years," the following were included: Broadcasting, Judith Waller of Chicago; exploration, Mrs. Clark Getts, the former Mrs. Martin Johnson; motion pictures, Mary Pickford; opera, Geraldine Farrar, radio, Margaret Cuthbert, director of the women's division of R. C. A., and Kate Smith, singer; stage, Ethel Barrymore, May Robson and Maude Adams, and in the motion picture industry, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, a past president of the General Federation in Hollywood.

Fan Magazine Change

Inaugurating a new editorial policy, Spot Magazine with its August issue will have two editors, one in New York and one in Hollywood. Fred Feldkamp has been appointed to handle the Hollywood office. Frank Fraysur, formerly with Life, has taken charge of the New York office. In Hollywood, Mr. Feldkamp will also supervise pictorial assignments for the Fawcett publications.

Test-Reel Replacements

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has announced the availability of a replacement excerpt, consisting of new dialogue recording to be included in the Research Council theatre sound test reel (ATSR-2). As part of the theatre sound standardization program, the Council plans to continue to make available from time to time new test reels and new tools to assist the theatres in maintaining the best possible sound quality.

Segal to South America

Jack Segal, foreign branch operations manager for Columbia Pictures, sailed recently for South America, where he will join Joseph A. McConville, foreign manager, on a tour of Latin America offices. John Nathan, Paramount managing director for Argentina, is in New York for conferences with home office executives. John Day, the company's managing director for Brazil, is expected to arrive in New York later this summer.

Thornton Leaves Small

C. W. Thornton, for the past two years treasurer and business manager of Edward Small Productions in Hollywood, has resigned, effective with the appointment of a successor

Boyter Opens Agency

Athel Boyter, formerly assistant booker for the paramount exchange in Oklahoma City, has opened the Boyter Agency to serve 23 independent theatres in the state.

M. & P. Names Goodwin District Manager

Jack C. Goodwin has been appointed district manager of the North Shore division of M. & P. Theatres. For the past several years he has been managing director of the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston. Mr. Goodwin has been succeeded in that position by John B. Carroll, former manager of the Paramount theatre in Boston. Mr. Goodwin assumes the position formerly held by Chester L. Stoddard, who has taken over the supervision of the M. &. P. Theatres in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire, filling the vacancy created by the death of the late Armand J. Moreau.

Ben Rosenberg, former manager of the Fenway, has been appointed manager of the Paramount in Boston and has been succeeded at the Fenway by Abner Pinanski, manager of the Modern Theatre in Boston. Harry Goldberg, former assistant to Mr. Pinanski, is now manager of the Modern Theatre.

Murphy Joins Dipson

Robert T. Murphy joined Dipson Theatres, Inc., in Buffalo, N. Y., this week as director of film buying and booking for its six operating theatres, Nikitas D. Dipson, president, announced. Mr. Murphy resigned last week as Shea Theatre's city manager in Niagara Falls.

Tri-States Acquires Two

The Iowa and Onawa theatres in Onawa, Ia., owned by Roy Lepowitz, have joined the Tri-States Circuit. Under the deal Mr. Lepowitz will continue to manage the two theatres.

IN COURTS

Cincinnati Strand Receiver Named

Judge Alfred Mack, of the common pleas court in Cincinnati, has appointed Harry Abrams receiver for Strand Enterprises, Inc., operating the Strand office building and Strand theatre, upon application of the Delta Realty Co., in a suit in which judgment for $2,856 also is asked.

The petition points out that the defendant company negotiated a ten-year lease for the property March 1st, 1938, at a total rental of $260,000, payable in weekly installments of $500 each during the life of the lease, but is in arrears of $2,690 as rent up to April 30th. Petition further sets forth that since the death in March of William H. Vollman, president of the defendant company, "the business has been greatly interrupted and it has been impossible to maintain operation thereof in a profitable manner." The receiver was authorized by the court to continue the business.

B.M.I. Decree Conformed To ASCAP's by Court

An order which eliminates technical differences in the consent decrees signed with the Government by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and Broadcast Music, Inc., has been signed by Judge F. Ryan Duffy of the federal court in Milwaukee.

The modifications, which put ASCAP and BMI on a parity, had the approval of Thurman Arnold and Victor O. Waters, special assistants to the United States Attorney General.

Godfrey Goldmark, counsel for BMI, told the court that ASCAP's decree permitted it freedom in contractual relations with its licensees which was not made available to BMI in the latter's decree. He asserted that the freedom referred to gave ASCAP a competitive advantage which the Government did not contemplate in making the decrees.

Loew Examination Asked

Edward P. Wagner, owner of 50 shares of Loew's common stock, filed application in the New York supreme court Monday for an order to direct Loew's to make available its books and records for an inspection. The petition charges Loew's with having spent company money in settling out of court a large number of stockholders' actions. The plaintiff complains that the company turned him down on a request to examine its books.

Withdraws Building Application

Faced with the overwhelming opposition from adjoining property owners and representatives of nearby churches at a hearing before the zoning board of review, Albert H. Cipriano of Providence, R. I., last week withdrew his application for a permit to build a motion picture theatre in Cranston, R. I. Mr. Cipriano, a nephew of Domenic Annotti, one of the owners of the Uptown theatre, Providence, planned to build a neighborhood house of about 600 seats. It is not certain whether he will apply for permission to build on another Cranston location.

Writer Sues Paramount

Jack O'Donnell, writer, has filed suit in the federal court in Los Angeles, for $50,000 against Paramount. He alleged breach of contract under which he sold a story, "At Your Service," and received a down payment of $30,000, but did not receive screen credit for the picture allegedly made from the story, which, he said, was "Arise, My Love."

Fox Testifies In Davis Case

Upon the opening of the trial of retired U. S. Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis on Monday morning, May 19th, it was announced William Fox, bankrupt former film executive, would be the Government's star witness. Judge Davis is charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States, a charge arising out of litigation over Mr. Fox's financial affairs. Mr. Fox, who pleaded guilty to the same charges, was not in court when the trial opened in the United States district court in Philadelphia before Judge Robert N. Pollard.

Walter Gahagan, Jr., special Assistant U. S. Attorney General, opened for the Government, saying $12,500 loan, without collateral, and in cash, was given by Mr. Fox to Judge Davis in a Philadelphia rendezvous; and he charged: "These men conspired to deprive the United States of the conscientious, faithful, unbiased determination by J. Warren Davis, of cases coming before him."

Mr. Fox later testified on the circumstances of the loan. He added that, before that event, he had made another loan to the Judge, of $15,000.

In telling about the $12,500 loan, Mr. Gahagan emphasized that, "no note was given, no collateral, and no interest; and none of the money was ever paid back; and there was no intention of ever paying."

A jury of eleven men and one woman was chosen to hear evidence against Judge Davis and his co-defendant, Morgan S. Kaufman, a Scranton attorney and former Federal referee in bankruptcy, who is facing the same charges as the Judge.

William A. Gray, criminal lawyer here, represents Judge Davis. Walker H. Gahagan, Jr., Special Assistant to the U. S. Attorney General heads the Government's legal array.

Circuit Court Studies Rental Tax Test Case

The United States circuit court of appeals in a suit brought by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue heard a test case on Thursday, May 15th, in New York to determine the year when rent deposits paid on the leasing of theaters are taxable. The suit was brought by the Commissioner to recover a claimed deficiency of $78,157 charged against the Schine Chain Theatres, Inc. The Commissioner contended before the high court that the tax could be charged for the year in which the rent deposit was forfeited to Schine Theatres after cancellation of leases on 20 Schine theatres to the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc.

The Schine circuit contested the tax successfully, claiming that it should have been charged to the year 1929, and that the statute of limitations now barred collection. The U. S. board of tax appeals in January, 1940, ruled that a rent deposit must be paid during the year it was received.

Schwartz Wins Suit

A supreme court jury by a 10 to 2 decision awarded $25,000 damages to Benjamin Schwartz, musician who made several series of musical short subjects for Masterart. The verdict was against Dr. Samuel J. Kopetsky who operated on Mr. Schwartz to restore his hearing. The operation, it was charged, resulted in almost complete deafness of the right ear and paralysis of the right side of the head and face.

Fox Sued on Title

Allan W. Wells has filed a suit in the federal court in New York against Twentieth Century-Fox, alleging that the title of his syndicated newspaper column, "Cavalcade of Hollywood," was infringed in the title, "Hollywood Cavalcade."

OBITUARIES

Thaddeus A. Nolan Dies

Thaddeus A. Nolan, 56, research engineer, who opened one of the first motion picture theatres in Cincinnati, and invented a device which removed flickering from films of that day, died at his home in Cincinnati, Friday, May 16th, of a heart attack. His wife and two daughters survive.

Leo Ryan

Funeral services for Leo Ryan, 54, assistant manager of Neth's State theatre in Columbus, Ohio, and brother-in-law of J. Real Neth, were held May 12th. Mr. Ryan died at his home in Columbus, Friday, May 9th, of a heart attack. He is survived by his mother, a brother and two sisters.

Harry E. Thurston

Funeral services were held in Columbus, Ohio, May 12th, for Harry E. Thurston, 70, a former Columbus resident, and previously a vaudeville performer, who died in Miami Beach, Fla., Friday, May 9th. He was a brother of the late Howard Thurston, magician. His wife and one daughter survive.

Edwin L. Berth

Edwin L. Berth, 51, for a number of years operator of the Pastime theatre at Keil, Wis., and a former alderman of that city, died May 11th, after several months' illness. He is survived by four children, his parents, two sisters and a brother.

William Kalcheim

Funeral services were held in Chicago recently for William Kalcheim, who died at the Henrotin Hospital there, Wednesday, May 14th, following a stroke. He was the father of Harry Kalcheim of the staff of the Paramount theatre in New York, and Nat and Jack Kalcheim of the William Morris agency.

Joseph Heim

Joseph Heim, 67, who operated the Luna theatre in Danville, Pa., for many years, died of a heart attack in Shamokin, Pa., Saturday, May 17th. Survivors include his wife, a daughter and a sister.

George L. Baker

George L. Baker, 70, nationally known theatre executive, formerly head of the Baker Stock Co., for many years, and for the past 16 years mayor of Portland, Ore., died at his home in that city, Sunday, May 18th.

Clifford Braun

Funeral services were held Monday at Mankato, Minn., for Clifford Braun, president of Ottumwa Theatres, Inc., affiliated with Tri-States, who died at Rochester, Minn., Friday, May 16th. He is survived by his wife.

Lee Acquires British Film

Arthur A. Lee has acquired the American distribution rights to the General Film Distributors' picture, "Window in London," starring Michael Redgrave and Paul Lukas. Mr. Lee will visit the United States shortly.

Distributors Ask for Particulars in New Haven Case

The eight major distributors have requested bills of particulars on the claims made in the $5,452,575 anti-trust suit brought by the owners and lessees of the Pickwick and Greenwich Theatres, Greenwich, Conn., in the U. S. District Court at New Haven. The defendants also ask 30 days after service of the bills of particulars upon their solicitors, as extended time in which to answer the original complaint, or, if requests for the more definite statements are denied, 30 days from such denial. The motions were filed by Edwin F. Morse, of New Canaan, for 20th Century-Fox, and by Charles Lyman, of New Haven, for the other distributors.

Skouras Denies Service

At the same time Skouras Theatres, George P. and Spyros P. Skouras, and Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., by their attorneys, asked that the "purported service" of the summons and complaint upon them in this matter be "squashed" and dismissed, since service by registered mail is "null and void," and further they are "not within the territorial jurisdiction" of the District Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

Charles Henchel of New Haven appeared for Fox Metropolitan and Edwin F. Morse for the Skourases. These defendants claim they operate no theatres or maintain no offices or agents in Connecticut, and that they were served illegally by mail at their homes and offices in New York State.

With reference to the complaint alleging conspiracy to monopolize and restrain interstate commerce in films by the defendants with reference to the clearance schedule of the Pickwick, at Greenwich, defendants ask Cummings and Lockwood, attorneys for the plaintiffs, Prefect Theatres, Inc., Fairfield Holding Corp., and Greenfield, Inc., to answer whether shipments of films from these companies crossed state lines. The motions also ask plaintiff to identify license contracts claimed prepared by distributing agencies and "substantially identical in form"; also to distinguish whether various alleged changes of policies of the companies with respect to the Greenwich theatres were "pursuant to a combination or conspiracy among them," "concerted action," or "similarity of action."

Buffalo Case First

Whether it would try the Schine "field" suit against the majors instead of other anti-trust cases against the three "little" majors and large circuits in Oklahoma City and Nashville, was to be decided by the Department of Justice this week, and be communicated to Federal Judge John Knight, Buffalo, presiding in the Schine case.

Judge Knight told reporters last week his understanding was the Department intended to try the Nashville case first, inasmuch as trial date there is July 7th; and the Schine case could not go through before autumn. The Crescent circuit is named in the Nashville case.

Settlement of the Admiral Theatre $225,000 triple damages case against the Warner circuit and the majors, in the Philadelphia Federal Court, is under way. The case had been scheduled for hearing Monday. It was then postponed to Friday, pending talks between attorneys for both sides. Chiefs of the MGM distribution company had been prepared to take the stand Monday.

George H. Armistead, chief of defense counsel in the Government's "field" anti-trust case against the majors and the Crescent circuit in the Nashville Federal Court, said Monday in that city answers by the defense to two remaining Governmental interrogatories would be filed Saturday. He added this would complete the defense case, prior to trial.

Hearings resumed last week in Boston Federal Court, before a Special Master in the Waldo Theatre Corporation's anti-trust suit against the majors. Attorneys predicted the case would last throughout the summer.

Currently, Mullin and Pinanski circuit representatives have been examined by George Ryan, plaintiff's attorney. Among these have been Mildred Sheel, former secretary to Al Bevan, and Al Seletsky.

Clark Heads Film Carriers

James P. Clark of Philadelphia was re-elected president and treasurer of National Film Carriers, Inc., at the closing session last week of the association's convention at the Park Central Hotel in New York. Thomas Gilboy of San Francisco, vice-president, and Clint Weyer, secretary, were also reelected. Appointed to the executive committee were Mr. Clark, George Callahon of Pittsburgh, Earl Jameson of Kansas City, Charles Trampe of Milwaukee and John Vickers of Charlotte.

Koerner Welcomed

Charles W. Koerner, newly appointed general manager of RKO Theatres, was guest of honor at a welcoming luncheon May 16th at the Hotel Warwick, New York. Malcolm Kingsberg, vice-chairman of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, was host.

Brooklyn Film Council Launches Campaign

The Motion Picture Council of Brooklyn, N. Y., met last week at a luncheon-meeting to launch a petition urging the industry to exercise greater control over the selection and treatment of subject matter of films. They urged in their petition that "the super-gangster, super-horror and super-sex pictures be eliminated; that no film be produced that may lower the moral or ethical standards of American life, or that oversteps the bounds of established standards of common decency, so that the production seal may in truth be regarded as a guarantee of entertainment that is worthwhile and without offense."

At the luncheon it was announced that more than 5,000 names had been signed to the petition and that more were coming in. Among those who spoke were Matthew J. Troy, Justice of the court of special sessions, Miss Regina C. M. Burke, associate superintendent of the Board of Education. Helen Parrish and Charles Lang, young Universal stars made guest appearances.

Appeal Luncheon Postponed

The luncheon meeting of the Committee of the Amusement Division of the United Jewish Appeal, originally scheduled for the Hotel Edison in New York on May 27th, has been postponed until June 3rd. The luncheon has been arranged by Barney Balaban, David Berstein and Major Albert Warner, co-chairmen of the division. Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, European vice-chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee, recently arrived from Lisbon, will speak.

"I'VE QUIT KIDDING MYSELF!"

"When changes do occur to sound, I know where to turn for advice on what I should do. Altec has consistently shown me how the sound in my theatre can be made to keep pace with improvements in recording. I've quit kidding myself that I know machinery—and when new sound methods are perfected, I'll save headaches and money—by relying on Altec's technical advice." Change to Altec today.

CHANGE TO ALTEC SERVICE • A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BEWARE SPOOKS: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—The audience was in the aisles with this one. Not his best but still not his worst. If there was just a little more of the "spook house" it would have been a real scream (as if it isn't already). Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 1-3.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST: Loretta Young, Melvyn Douglas—A marvelous comedy. The communistic party was the whole comedy. Patrons extremely well pleased. Weather fair. Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 20-23.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur—This was just about Frank Capra's greatest hit. James Stewart did a brilliant job of acting. Audience completely enjoyed it. If Columbia keeps them coming like this, they will be top ranking film company in no time. Running time, 130 minutes. Played April 24-26.—Crist C. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE PANHANDLE: Charles Starrett, Frances Robinson, Sons of the Pioneers—Fair action western that didn't quite come up to the standard set by the rest of the series. Good business on it, though. Running time, 61 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. General patronage.

OUTSIDE THE THREE MILE LIMIT: Jack Holt, Eduardo Ciannelli—I have never known any of these Jack Holt series to be good. Patrons very displeased. Weather good. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 6-9.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Melvyn Douglas, Rosalind Russell—The public likes this type of comedy but not too often. Rather risque. Business good.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

First National

STRAWBERRY BLONDE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—In the groove. Plenty O.K. Everyone happy. Box office cheerful. Running time, 97 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Ian Hunter, Kathryn Grayson—MGM must vary these Hardy pictures if they want them to keep the box office clicking. Poor story, routine acting. Rooney held up the receipts. Running time, 101 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—This feature was much enjoyed by my patrons. A take-off on the Soviet system. Some good comedy, and the action with the tanks was a good finale. Stars were a great help in drawing power; both favorites with my patrons. Play it. Running time, 93 minutes. Played May 3.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—People expected more of this picture; of course, it's good, but seems like it wasn't good enough material for these two stars.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PENALTY, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Erward Arnold, Gene Reynolds—While not an epic this is swell small town entertainment. Gene Reynolds is swell as the tough son of gangster Edward Arnold, who is converted by Grandpop Lionel Barrymore. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRIKE UP THE BAND: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Paul Whiteman—Fine. Rooney is really an artist. Is there anything in the entertainment line that he cannot do?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

> IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Miscellaneous

HELL'S ANGELS (Reissue): Jean Harlow, Ben Lyon, James Hall—Good picture but rather dry in places. Both young and old enjoyed it. Picture very old and Jean Harlow's looks didn't do her any justice. If she were alive she would still be a box office draw. Running time, 120 minutes. Played May 1-3.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

Monogram

GOLDEN TRAIL, THE: Tex Ritter—Very good. I understand Ritter has signed a contract with Columbia. Monogram, why not give us a series of westerns with Smith Ballew?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

TAKE ME BACK TO OKLAHOMA: Tex Ritter, Bob Wills—This one had the patrons in the aisles, yes, in the aisles—leaving. Ham acting by the actors and it was so "hammy" the horses in the feature laughed. Patrons disappointed. Weather fine. Running time, 63 minutes. Played April 24-26.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Paramount

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken—Good program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, "Rochester"—Have seen better; have seen worse. Business OK; it satisfies the radio fans.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour—Had the patrons in the aisles with laughter. Weather fine. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 24-26.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR, THE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Una Merkel—Very good picture and excellent business. Pleased all. Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SAFARI: Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Not much in dialogue or interest. Weather good. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 6-9.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Paulette Goddard, Fred Astaire—Paramount stuff certainly looks good on paper. But I'm still to play one of their pictures that mean box office. It's a shame to waste P. Goddard in such a weak sister. Had to find receipts through a microscope.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Excellent. Patrons well pleased. Weather fair. Running time, 74 minutes. Played April 20-23.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

VICTORY: Fredric March, Betty Field, Sir Cedric Hardwicke—Why do producers make these pictures? Probably they think public are still suckers. No business and a waste of time to run. Might get by with arty class. Running time, 78 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

WORLD IN FLAMES: Documentary—Every theatre should definitely play this picture. It carries a most timely message. I'm proud we played it. Business very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Republic

BARNYARD FOLLIES: Mary Lee, Rufe Davis, June Storey—You can't go wrong on this one or any other Republic picture. Batting average 100 per cent. I give this company lots of credit for their endeavor in making everyone happy. Running time, 68 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

IN OLD CHEYENNE: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Good western which pleased average week-end business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—The best of these series yet. Patrons well pleased. Weather fine. Running time, 66 minutes. Played April 10-12.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Noah Beery—We played "South of the Border" for the third time and "Mexicali Rose" for the second time, and did outstanding business. If you have an Autry town, double these two features and you should have no regrets. We certainly have not. I don't know of any pictures that you can do the same with and do such business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BULLET CODE: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—Just an average western. Did average business, too, on cash nite. Quite a bit of action; very little comedy. I think that if they had some music with these O'Briens, they would go better. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 7.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy—A side-busting comedy. Patrons pleased. Weather rain. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 27-30.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, James Craig—Picture pleased everyone. Exceptionally fine acting. Business average. Would be lots better if played earlier. Running time, 104 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

LET'S MAKE MUSIC: Bob Crosby, Jean Rogers—Good little musical—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LI'L ABNER: Granville Owen, Martha O'Driscoll, Buster Keaton—This did above average business, but personally think it's terrible. However, I heard no complaints from customers.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Just fair. Patrons pleased and some displeased for lack of action. Weather good. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 17-19.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney, Laird Cregar—This semi-costume picture featuring a combination of a cast of English actors and Paul Muni's

French Canadian dialect was difficult to understand and holds no appeal for our patrons. Business poor. Running time, 94 minutes. Played May 11-13.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

MARYLAND: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, Charlie Ruggles, John Payne, Hattie McDaniels—Good story, good acting and beautiful color. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Jane Withers' best by far. If it was not for the Ritz Bros. it would have barely gone over. Patrons well pleased. Weather damp. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 13-16.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND LOVE: Jean Rogers, William Frawley, Robert Kellard—Fair. Patrons pleased. Weather fine. Running time, 56 minutes. Played May 1-3.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Virginia Gilmore, Milton Berle—A sleeper. Very pleasing. Marvelous story with good angles. However, not strong enough for top billing. Running time, 77 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Milton Berle, Virginia Gilmore—An excellent picture that holds your interest and well acted by the entire cast. Business above average. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 4-6.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari—Very good historical western, but they did not turn out as good as they should. Did about average on this one. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 3-4.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—Very good picture and people turned out good for it; must have been because so many read the book. At least I did quite a bit extra on it, which is something. Running time, 130 minutes. Played April 26-27.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

STELLA DALLAS (Reissue): Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Feature hasn't changed much but the attitude of the people has. Weather fine. Running time, 103 minutes. Played May 1-3.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—Truly a great picture. Never though much of Fredric March until this one. Patsy Kelly helps the picture quite a bit. Virginia Bruce is tops in this picture. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 20-23.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Frederic March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—A very good comedy drama which will go over anywhere. Patrons well pleased. Weather damp. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 13-16.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Universal

BACK STREET: Margaret Sullavan, Charles Boyer, Richard Carlson—Universal should take this one and put it in a back street. Very poor reception. Business below average. Running time, 89 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

BANK DICK, THE: W. C. Fields, Una Merkel—O. K. for second feature. W. C. Fields doesn't mean a thing at the box office. Business poor. Running time, 73 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

BANK DICK, THE: W. C. Fields, Una Merkel—The audience would rather see W. C. Fields as a circus clown than as a movie actor. Maybe that's why they stayed away. Business poor. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 11-13.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

I'M NOBODY'S SWEETHEART NOW: Dennis O'Keefe, Constance Moore, Helen Parrish—Good little program picture for Bargain Night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE WOMAN, THE: Virginia Bruce, John Barrymore, John Howard, Charles Ruggles—Some comedy. Rather enjoying. O. K. for lower half of double feature. Box office invisible. Running time, 73 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

SANDY IS A LADY: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer, Eugene Pallette, Nan Grey, Tom Brown—This is a very good Baby Sandy series. Patrons pleased. Weather good. Running time, 62 minutes. Played April 17-19.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne, Broderick Crawford, Mischa Auer—I have yet to see Marlene Dietrich ever make us a dime. I was quite sold on this picture to make us a profit, but it did not, although everybody liked it who saw it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SKI PATROL: Philip Dorn, Luli Deste—Not a bad picture; they seemed to like it although it is a war picture similar to the invasion of Finland. Very good photography and picture carried along pretty good. Did a little above average on Cash Nite. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 30th.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

DISPATCH FROM REUTER'S, A: Edward G. Robinson, Edna Best—Robinson not suited for story. Story not suited to the public. Strictly a washout. No business. Running time, 90 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—A fine feature but no drawing power. Weather fine. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 10-12.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

HONEYMOON FOR THREE: Ann Sheridan, George Brent, Jane Wyman—For such a company that makes "Sea Wolf," "Strawberry Blonde," etc., no orchids. They certainly can ruin a star. No box office. Running time, 77 minutes.—Phil Schwartz, Parkway Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains—A colossal feature but no draw. Guess Muni and Davis are dead box office names here. Patrons, what there was of them, well pleased. Weather rain. Running time, 126 minutes. Played April 27-30.—P. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MONEY AND THE WOMAN: Jeffrey Lynn, Brenda Marshall—Very good program picture which pleased on family night. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CALLING ALL CURS: Three Stooges—If this isn't their best I don't know what it is. Curly is still the tops in comedians or if not the tops at least second to Eddie Collins, who I think is first. Running time, 18 minutes.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABDUL THE BULBUL AMEER: Technicolor Cartoons—Very good color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BARON AND THE ROSE, THE: Passing Parade, No. 16—Fine one reeler. Stars George Tobias.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BUYER BEWARE: Crime Does Not Pay Series—Fine two reel subject.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

FISHING BEAR, THE: Cartoons—A good colored reel enjoyed by the chidlren. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT MEDDLER, THE: Miniatures—Good single reel relating the cruelty to children and animals some years ago. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HOME MOVIES: Robert Benchley—The usual Benchley. My people do not care so much for this series.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PLEASE ANSWER: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

PEOPLE OF CANADA: Very good, instructive, and timely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

ACROBATIC ACES: Sportlights—Very entertaining; as good as a circus. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CANINE SKETCHES: Sportlights—Entertaining one reeler dealing with various kinds of dogs. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RAGGEDY ANN: Special—Very good two reel cartoon in color. Running time, 18 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BRITAIN'S R.A.F.: March of Time, No. 2—Always appreciated.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

RIVETER, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Yes, I

truthfully can say that Disneys are tops. Any showman who doesn't play them is his own worst enemy. Thanks for your letter, Leo Plottel.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO PATHE NEWS: Always good.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BABY SEAL, THE: Terry-Toons—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEN OF THE LIGHTSHIP: Special—Good two reeler dealing with war at sea between England and Germany. Some realistic shots. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOUCHDOWN DEMONS: Terry-Toons—Very good black and white cartoon.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

CLASS IN SWING, A: Two-Reel Musicals—Don't overlook booking this one. I believe it should take anywhere. Our patrons enjoyed it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CONGAMANIA: Musicals—Timely. Well received. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Fair to Middlin'. Running time, 9 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

100 PIGMIES AND ANDY PANDA: Lantz Colored Cartunes—This Andy Panda O. K. Everybody liked it and laughed. Running time, 8 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

RECRUITING DAZE: Lantz Colored Cartunes—Very good and timely, too, since we are in the defense support. Running time, 7 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: Not bad. Made a pretty good combination with "Ski Patrol." Running time, 9 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

Vitaphone

CIRCUS TODAY: Merrie Melodies—Really different but really good.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

LADY AND THE LUG, THE: Elsa Maxwell, Maxie Rosenbloom—Fairly good two-reel comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF STEEL: Technicolor Specials—Very good airplane subject in color. Play it. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Fire Damages Three Houses

Two Kansas theatres and one in Texas were damaged by fire recently. The Klock theatre, Neodesha, Kas., operated by Glen Klock, suffered loss of part of its projection room equipment, but opened the day after the fire when the equipment was replaced. The Park in Edorado Springs, Kas., operated by Walter Lovan, closed its doors for almost a week, since part of the destroyed equipment had to be shipped from the east. In Mesquite, Tex., Bernard Galtzki's Colonia theatre was destroyed by fire recently.

Shapiro Leaves Selznick

Victor M. Shapiro has resigned from the exploitation department of Selznick Productions on the coast to open his own publicity office there. Milt Watt will be associated with Mr. Shapiro. They have been contracted as press relations counselors for the Screen Writers Guild.

Columbia Signs Hilliard

Columbia has signed Harriet Hilliard to a contract under the terms of which she will make two pictures for the company. She recently had a role in the company's production, "Sweethearts of the Campus."

Ohio, Chicago Censor Cuts

Thirteen eliminations, the smallest number since July, 1939, were ordered from a total of 481 reels reviewed by the Ohio censors in April. During March there were 53 eliminations ordered from 617 reels reviewed. The figures for April, 1940, were 16 eliminations from 589 reels.

Of the 104 films reviewed during the past four weeks by the Chicago Censor Board, none were rejected, only 30 cuts were made, and six were picked for adult audiences. Combined length of the subjects was 481,000 feet. Lieutenant Harry Costello, head of the board, commented that film quality is improving.

Legion Hits "Wings"

The Catholic Legion of Decency of the Twin Cities—Minneapolis and St. Paul—has registered protest with the Minnesota Amusement Co. against the showing of Paramount's "I Wanted Wings" because of the appearance of Veronica Lake. Father R. G. Bandas, St. Paul, head of the Legion in the Twin Cities, asked a special screening after several Legion members protested to him that they believed the film objectionable, at least in part.

Meanwhile, the Wisconsin assembly passed and sent to the senate the Doyne bill which strengthens the statutes controlling the sale and possession of obscene literature, films and the advertising of indecent or immoral shows by making the violation a felony instead of a misdemeanor.

Paramount, RCA Tieup

Promotion material for a Latin-American tieup on Paramount's "There's Magic in Music" has been sent by RCA Victor to record dealers and distributors in all South American countries. The material consists principally of a window hanger for dealers with the film's Spanish title, with record supplements and dealer ad mats plugging the title and selling Allen Jones as an exclusive Victor recording artist.

Jacock's Selected

The Connecticut MPTO's vice-president, Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., operator of the Branford theatre in Branford, and a first-termer in the state legislature as representative from Branford, has been voted to a tie first place as "the best type for state ticket" in the poll of reporters and editors taken each session. The newsmen also voted him to a tie third place with Stanley Mead as "most valuable for reelection."

Lukas Gets Drama Prize

The medal awarded by the Drama League of New York, known as the Delia Austrian Medal, in memory of its donor, has been presented to Paul Lukas for the "most distinguished performance of the season." Mr. Lukas is appearing in the current prize-winning play, "Watch on the Rhine."

Turner Names Cronin

Frank Cronin has been appointed by Terry Turner, head of the RKO field exploitation staff, to cover the Boston and New Haven territories.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THAT POWERFUL "BUG"

One of the members, out of the business for some time as a commercial salesman, writes in to say he is returning to the theatre. Prospects in the sales job are good but, it seems, "I can't get the theatre bug out of my system," sez he. It fascinates him.

And just about then another Round Tabler drops in to visit. Doing all right, too, but seeks another spot, in or out of the business. Reason? Seven-day weeks. Wants to work where he can have some time to spend with his family, a job which allows a man to dust the cobwebs out of the old beano at least one day in every seven.

Now this lad likes the business, too. But it's wearing him down, "fascinating" or no. He wants to switch before that good ole "fascination" just about ruins him.

Of all the different fields we know of, showbusiness, more than any other, probably includes more workers genuinely "fascinated" with it and willing to take plenty to stay in it. The same "fascination", however, places the theatreman at a disadvantage in those situations where he is overworked and in the matter of days off receives little consideration.

That should not be. Disregarding all other issues, the manager with a definite day off each week returns a better profit to the bossman. The manager rested in body and mind is keener, more enthusiastic, clearer eyed on keeping down the nut, quicker on the trigger to execute gross-building ideas.

The fascination of showbusiness is no gag. The "theatre bug" that nourishes it can make a manager or ruin him.

THE PAY OFF

A popular juvenile radio feature leaving the air for the summer, the station manager in Trail, B. C., was open for an idea that would insure sufficient audience requests to bring back the program in the fall. Immediately, Les Campbell, at the F. P. C. Strand, suggested a Saturday matinee ticket for each child writing in, and offered a slight price concession to the radio manager on the tickets. The deal was made, the youngsters to be admitted by presenting the envelopes of their letters stamped by the radio station. Over 700 children availed themselves of the offer.

Confronted by merchandising problems, outsiders often turn to the theatre for an answer. As Campbell currently attests, there appears good reason for the outsiders to do so.

Until recently, the member was an active Round Tabler, his name landing often in the Awards columns. Earlier in the year, the lad forwarded a swell campaign. It was duly recognized in that current Fortnight. Not voted further recognition in the Quarter-Master, the member writes in to ask why.

The reason we gave was a lack of material for consideration by the Judging Committee. The Round Tabler neglected to send along anything additional in the following Fortnights.

The rulings state that, with everything else equal, the Quarter-Master Awards are to be voted among those entrants represented most often in the Fortnight periods that make up each Quarter. That's only fair, isn't it?

One or two entries in each three-month Quarter seems hardly enough to rate the fullest consideration for the Quarter-Master Awards. Especially since scores and scores of theatremen sweat for recognition by participating in a majority of the Fortnights during the year.

THREE DIRECT HITS

Transferred a short time ago to the post of Elkhart, Ind., City Manager for Indiana-Illinois, Chick Tompkins found himself with three different things to sell at the same time. The first, to introduce himself to the public. The second, to put over a new policy. The third, to dig up a new selling slant for his coming Andy Hardy picture. Either of the three assignments would be a challenge to smart showmanship. But Chick took it all in his stride.

In the Round Table photo section and on a following page are detailed and illustrated how he did it to start the whole town talking, to swamp the theatre with 'phone calls, to bring top boxoffice results.

Showmanship did it. Showmanship always does it.

And to all the Round Tablers met up with at the Variety Clubs convention in Atlantic City, Gert and Mike give deep thanks for the opportunity to visit with you again.

A-Mike Vogel

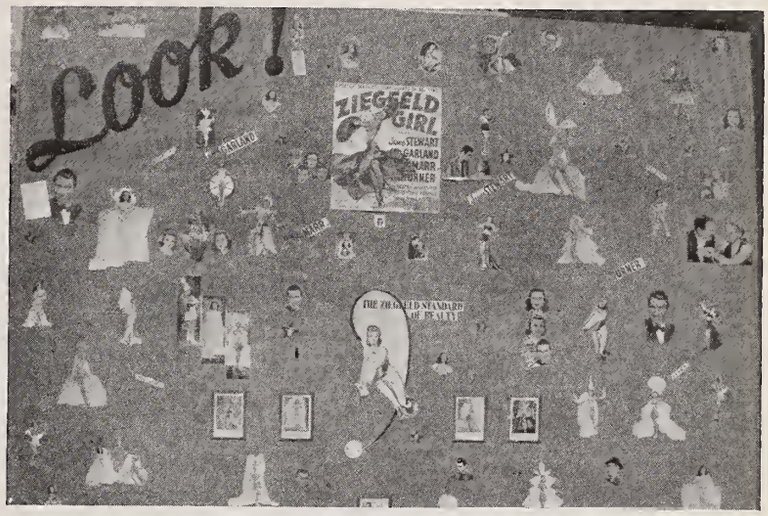
Above and below are the teaser lobby displays created by Round Tabler Chick Tompkins as part of his campaign at the Elco, in Elkhart, Ind., to announce a new policy and told about on a following page. Top photo shows beginning of the "garden", started with five loads of dirt and rural art background. Life-size figure in foreground with hoe is that of Tompkins himself, the idea being that the Round Tabler was busy cultivating a lot of hit pictures. Additional copy was added from time to time, the garden coming into "full bloom" in photo below.

Folks visiting the Jeffery Theatre, Chicago, were advised by Robert Busch, through ingenious display, not to "kick yourself later for not seeing 'Mr. and Mrs. Smith' ". Odd assortment of shoes was attached to disc; small concealed motor kept shoes in motion as though kicking someone. Card alongside featured title, cast and playdates.

Round Table In Pictures

Lobby table topped with large array of candles was employed by Manager Dave Martin and his cohort, Bill Erickson, for "Mad Doctor" date at the Fox Granada, Inglewood, Calif. Patrons afraid to go home alone in the dark after seeing film were invited to help themselves.

Ned Wayburn, left, who staged and helped create the Ziegfeld Follies, poses with Manager Matt Saunders in lobby of Loew's Poli, Hartford, in connection with his personal appearance for opening of "Ziegfeld Girl" at the theatre. Stunt was good for newspaper breaks.



To sell "Casados y Descasados", Spanish title for "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" at the Cine Magerit, in Mexico City, Rafael Gonzalez Laffargo, owner, arranged attractive lobby display featured above. Cutouts of Carole Lombard and Robert Montgomery were shown talking over telephone to each other.

Local jitterbugs received an advance note from Round Tabler Bill Israel at the Fox, in Philadelphia, for "Pot o' Gold", featuring Horace Heidt and His Musical Knights. Theatreman promoted music box from cooperating merchant, planted it in his lobby ahead, and invited patrons to listen to Heidt recordings. Appropriate tiein card alongside was self-explanatory.

Through the efforts of Bill Burke at Schine's Rialto, in Amsterdam, N. Y., city officials agreed to allow Boy Scouts to run the city for the day in connection with the opening of "Men of Boys Town". Boys from eleven different troops are shown above at City Hall.

All-color photos from the MGM "Ziegfeld Girl" pressbook were utilized to good advantage by Carl Rogers at Loew's Granada, Cleveland, when the theatreman cut them out and pasted photos to large lobby board with appropriate tiein copy ahead of opening.

Effective and eye-arresting window display was promoted by United Artists' publicity department in connection with opening of "That Uncertain Feeling" at the Radio City Music Hall, to tie in with exhibit of sleep-inducing accessories at Lewis & Conger.

"HELL" OF A TEASER

Arnold Stoltz's novelty herald for "Devil and Miss Jones" at Warners' Avon, Utica, was a two-fold teaser. Folding over to right, places "Hell" in "Hello" next to devil cut. (To illustrate, fold herald along pencilled line. Teaser copy will then read: "Hell is needed today. The Devil will be in Utica starting Friday, May 9, at the Avon.)

Kirsh Uses Trailer For "Life with Henry"

A unique trailer stunt was devised for "Life with Henry" by Dick Kirsh, Warners' Aldine Theatre, Wilmington, Del. Before showing the trailer, he closed the curtain, brought up the footlights and played a transcription of the opening of the Aldrich Family radio program made in cooperation with local radio station. This played on non-sync machine, after which regular trailer was flashed on the screen. He also tied in to the network radio program with local spot announcements.

Kirsh promoted recommendations from local Physicians Exchange for "The Mad Doctor" and arranged window display at physician supply house. Rich rewards were reaped from a screening of "Land of Liberty" for the Better Films Council and women's clubs members. In addition to publicity breaks in the newspapers, patriotic organizations cooperated in giving access to mailing lists and bulletin boards. The radio stations did their bit as well.

For "You're the One" Kirsh arranged with WILM for announcer to tell the audience that at a certain hour persons selected at random from telephone book would be called and informed "You're the One Who Gets a Pair of Tickets to See the Musical Comedy Riot, 'You're the One' if you can tell what tune the radio station orchestra is playing right now." This was put over once a day two days in advance and one day current.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Kraus' "Smith" Contest

Eddie Kraus of the Fargo Theatre, Fargo, North Dakota, set several "Smith Family" contests in his campaign on "Mr. & Mrs. Smith." The contest was based on a search via Station WDAY for the Smiths longest married, the tallest and shortest Smiths, the prettiest Smith twin girls, the heaviest Mrs. Smith, the newest married Smiths, most freckled Smith twin boys and the largest Smith family.

Sunday Comic Section Tied To "Blondie Goes Latin"

Snipes folded in the comic section of the Sunday papers were used for "Blondie Goes Latin" by Charlie Moyer, Warners' State, Hanover, Pa. The first Sunday, the snipe said: "Watch for a special announcement in next Sunday's comic section." The follow-up was "Here it is, folks—Your favorite fun family, 'The Bumsteads,' will be at the State Theatre next week in 'Blondie Goes Latin'—a family treat for all kiddies from 6 to 60." At the bottom in a box was a large number. Readers were asked to bring the number to the theatre and if it coincided with the lobby board number, the patron was admitted.

For "This Thing Called Love," Charlie arranged numerous snipes for store windows, reading: "What is This Thing Called Love—See for Yourself at the State Theatre." He made "Strawberry Blonde" the toast of the town, using special tie-ups and heralds. And at a dinner meeting of the Elks, he promoted a quartet to sing "While the Band Played On" and then announced the picture and playdates. For the opening day of "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," he had a stooge in front of the house all morning with a snipe on his back reading: "I am waiting here for the theatre to open to see."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Theatremen Observe National Want Ad Week

National "Want Ad Week" was celebrated variously with theatremen tying into the newspaper event for definite gains, an instance being Bob Fulton at the Paramount, in Waterloo, Ia., who received approximately 120 inches of gratis space over a period of a week. Contest angle was brought in with guest tickets going to those running classified ads for a seven-day period. All ads plugged current attractions.

Another Tri-Stater at the LeClaire, in Moline, Ill., was Francis Gillon, who gathered over 50 free inches. Here, too, guest tickets went for week's insertion of ads.

Ties "Blackout" To War Program

Considered especially appropriate in his situation at this time, the campaign on "Blackout" at the FPC Strand, in Vancouver, B. C., was pointed effectively by Manager Norman Duncan to emphasize the picture's war background, as well as the entertainment values. With this in mind, the Round Tabler started two weeks ahead with an unusual trailer announced with a siren and the house completely blacked out. Over the "mike" back stage, Duncan spoke as follows: "Get ready for a blackout. 'Blackout' is coming with excitement and thrills—from the depths of London's blackout." Then as the siren again sounded, the trailer was shown. A week ahead, all outside door windows were blacked out and in white letters "Blackout is coming." Sandbags were piled around display frames with cards carrying similar copy as were jumbo window cards around town, titles and credits in a conspicuous reverse.

War Material Display Featured

Since the city is preparing for an authentic blackout later in the month, the Round Tabler contacted civic officials for display material such as respirators, decontamination outfits, tools for handling incendiary bombs, etc. The local Air Raid Police also cooperated by plugging the date at group meetings. Working along the same lines, ushers and doormen wore armbands lettered "Blackout Warden" and carried respirators over their shoulders as in London. Dummy dressed in decontamination outfit was also used for lobby display, and for street bally, man dressed in gas mask and black cape was also found to attract. Newspaper campaign started with small teasers in reverse announcing "Watch out for Vancouver's first Blackout—Strand."

Lobby displays featured cutout silhouettes of city skyline with the title in large letters in background. The whole display was flooded with a dim blue light over all with flashers behind the skyline set to blink in and out. Other display had to do with authentic government warning posters and carried such copy as "The sharp ears of enemy agents are always listening for scraps of information," etc., etc. The siren idea was also tied in with radio announcements, the alarm sounding before and after. These were put on immediately ahead of the evening news broadcasts with the announcer hooking in the date at the Strand to the coming city blackout.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bickerstaff Calls Smiths

The Smiths in Athens, Ga., were given a bow by Frank Bickerstaff for date on "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" at the L&J Palace, when the Round Tabler struck upon the idea of having all Smiths in the telephone directory called and asked what the name of the feature playing at his house was. Those that answered correctly were advised that a pass would be available for them and those who did not were duly apprised. Since the stunt was a first timer for his neighborhood, Bickerstaff reports it created plenty of comment.

Contests Featured On 'Ziegfeld Girl'

Current reports on early "Ziegfeld Girl" dates indicate strong promotion in many directions illustrated, for instance, by Ed Fitzpatrick's contest to find the most representative local Ziegfeld Girl. Two photographic studios were tied in, each paying for heralds, decorated with star cuts for wide distribution. The heralds also used for entry blanks, studios making a nominal charge for photos of entrants. Idea was widely plugged on radio and winner was guest of honor opening night, pictures being taken in the lobby.

Outstanding publicity hookup was a double truck tied into a coloring contest with streamer head and four-column box with contest details promoted by Fitz for the theatre's end. Other newspaper features included two serializations and a gratifying number of co-op ads. Fitz also used good looking girls in various ways, having one group on the downtown streets with portable phonographs playing hit tunes from the picture. Another group of girls put on different stunts at popular roller skating rinks throughout the city, where the date was announced over the p.a. systems.

Mayor Greets Ziegfeld Girls

In Harrisburg, Bill Elder also utilized the coloring contest for an effective co-op layout with the pen sketches of each of the models planted in every one of the ads. Here, too, the top banner was devoted to the attraction. Other newspaper publicity included a full column on the picture and background of the fabulous Ziegfeld written by one of the city's most popular by-liners. Elder broke his campaign coincidentally with the personal appearance in town of two of the Ziegfeld girls making the tour nationally arranged by Howard Dietz' ad department. Bill built the appearance of the girls with a number of co-op ads, window displays featuring original gowns, which were modeled at special afternoon showings. Girls were greeted by Mayor at City Hall and given key to city, took part in radio interview over WHP.

Coloring Contest Featured

The Kenosha, Wis., campaign at the Kenosha in the hands of Manager Francis Schlax also assumed importance in the development of the coloring contest, which the theatreman used to organize a double-truck in which the leading merchants were represented. In Oneonta, at Schine's, Herman Addison dressed his entire staff of usherettes and cashiers in "Ziegfeld" hats imprinted with title letters and complete set of five framed and colored photos were used on lobby walls 10 days in advance, then transferred to shop window for current run. Numerous other window displays were featured and cards with title sheets and playdate and theatre credits were used at music counters in department store and Sears.

Contest angle was brought in by Clayton Cornell at Schine's State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., through distribution of sets of seven cards each carrying cut of one of the Ziegfeld Girls. To each person presenting complete set at boxoffice, guest tickets were awarded. With his opening falling on Mothers' Day, Clay promoted carnations for giveaway, florist also furnishing lobby display of flowers.

Ingenious Attraction Board Constructed by Shannon

Specially constructed "coming attraction" board is being used currently by Chuck Shannon at the Warner Whitehall, in Pittsburgh, upon which is listed, insert cards and midget window cards. The latter serve a two-fold purpose in that when the picture plays currently, they are inserted in a special frame at the local bowling alleys. These are used on all pictures; if cards are not available, Shannon makes up his own from press sheets.

Tying up with local grocery company, Chuck staged a cooking school class at the theatre, cookware company cooperating with prizes for contestants. Special costless heralds were distributed week ahead by grocery, each shopping bag stuffed with one of these. Notices were carried on regular weekly theatre programs and merchandise prizes were displayed in lobby. Newspapers came through with stories and art work.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Prior to the New York run of "Roar of the Press" and the usual screening for the New York press, Monogram held a special preview of the film for all wives of newspapermen in the metropolitan area.

To sell "Sea Wolf" at the Capitol, in Steubenville, Ohio, Bill Decker offered copies of the book as prizes in connection with a radio quiz program, over which innumerable picture plugs were landed. Displays were landed in book stores, jumbo window cards featured, announcements on school bulletin boards and personal letters sent to teachers. Mat and story on Ida Lupino were landed on women's page of paper, ad, readers and art in four out of town papers and giant postcard was stationed in lobby nominating Ida Lupino for dramatic find of the season.

For "Trial of Mary Dugan" at the Schine Oneonta, Oneonta, N. Y., Herman Addison sent a personal letter to all lawyers calling attention to the film's opening, and promoted a window of mystery stories in corner book store plus another window featuring Laraine Day fashions in leading dress shop. "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" brought taxicab bally fixed up as bridal car which toured the city appropriately bannered and with tin cans, paper streamers, etc. Just before the trailer went on at each show, ushers stalked aisles paging Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

Planting promoted large easy chair in his lobby, Arnold Gates at Loew's Park, in Cleveland, for "Topper Returns" placed easel alongside with tiein card reading: "Here sits Topper, Starting Tuesday you will actually see him in," etc., etc. For "Virginia," Gates distributed thousands of promoted peanuts attached to each being a small sticker reading: "It's the nuts. See," etc.

Full page co-operative spread which featured a jig-saw contest was arranged by Les Preston at the Capitol, in St. Thomas, Ont., for "Gone With the Wind." Spot announcements were landed a week ahead and two 15-minute programs two afternoons during run. Window cards and special cards were placed in stores, hotels and schools in addition to several book store tieups.

"Faint checks" issued on the Fright Insurance Company were issued ahead of "The Mad Doctor" at the Strand, in Westfield, Mass., by Round Tabler Louis Marcks. Brightly colored cards bore copy entitling holder to return and see the picture again if he fainted during the showing.

"Pop" Graver, at Warners' Grove, Willow Grove, Pa., gave "Little Men" a big send-off by bringing in a cow from a local dairy to exploit the "Elsie" stunt. Local schools were contacted personally and teachers plugged a special "Four O'clock Matinee." Lobby mirrors were lettered with teaser copy two weeks in advance. For "The Lady with Red Hair," he sent a baly around town with a sign: "I'm looking for the Lady with Red Hair so that she can see the 'Lady with Red Hair' at the Grove."

KRASKA TABLOID STOPS BOSTON

Plenty of excitement around Boston subways one morning last week, reports George Kraska, on his distribution of special four-page tabloid with front page given over to block type reading: "Peace Pact Signed". Inside layout tied the head to victory won by Charlie Chaplin over forces of gloom on behalf of the "Chaplin Festival" program at the Fine Arts.

Newspaper contest planted by Stockton Leigh at the Keith, in Syracuse, for "Nice Girl" consisted of guest tickets awards to those submitting list of "five best ways to be a Glamour Girl." Second contest featured "romantic boners," stories and art run in connection with both stunts. Nine-foot mounted heads of Durbin were placed atop marquee on either side tying in with selling copy of the picture, columnist running item calling attention to the display. Music store featured window display of hit tunes and scene stills and radio coverage included spot announcements and a musical quiz contest.

For "Tobacco Road" at the Junction, in Junction City, Kan., Johnny Sanders planted a hand-painted, 16-sheet on corner building three weeks ahead with tiein copy. Novelty giveaway consisted of house-to-house distribution of capsules containing picture copy in addition to matchbooks appropriately imprinted. Opening was plugged at cooking school sessions ahead, with special lobby board in lobby of City Auditorium up to and including playdates. Special tabloid heralds were distributed and numerous window cards planted.

Effective teaser ads, ushered in Hal Thomas's "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" opening at the Malco Strand, in Fulton, Ky., with copy reading "Wanted: private secretary for Andrew Hardy," etc. Personal letter on theatre stationery was sent to graduates of local and rural schools. For lobby display table, chair and typewriter were set up for Andy's secretary, shorthand messages lying on table were another teaser, folks being invited to do the translating.

Co-op ad was promoted by Joe Ruddick at the Gillioz, in Springfield, Mo., for "Penny to the Rescue," utilities company buying space and made it up from their own mat service, with copy suggested by Ruddick. Further exploitation consisted of window and departmental tieup displays with gas range and refrigerator dealers imprinting their own pamphlets. Special letter was sent to memberships of county Federated Home Economy Clubs, etc., in addition the theatreman set up an hour's show of special selected short subjects.

Tinted teaser gag heralds were distributed in advance of "Buck Privates" at the Lake, in Devils Lake, N. D., by Art Ableson. Buttons were attched to card with cellophane, copy reading: "Remember to bring this button along with you to replace the one you are going to bust laughing at," etc., etc. Cut of Abbott, Costello and the Andrew Sisters was used at bottom together with playdates.

In connection with his annual Easter Egg Hunt at the Strand, in Waterloo, Ia., Maurice Crew offered bunnies as prizes, stunt breaking local dailies with stories and art. For the women, the Round Tabler promoted corsages which went to the first 500 attending the show.

Taking advantage of suggestion offered in "That Night in Rio" pressbook, for folks to indulge in "Cafe Zin Ho," Brazil's custom of serving coffee several times a day, Dave Bachner of Warner's Cleveland ad department distributed attractive cards at leading hotels, plugging opening of new grill room. For further enjoyment, it was suggested that guests attend the Hippodrome and see the show. In addition, cards were attached to magazine racks at eye level in newsdealers' stores throughout the town.

For his serial "Junior G Men" at the Palace, in Antigo, Wis., Manager Harold Simons contacted Safety Council and received permission to have school police wear small banners plugging date, Simons also presenting school police with special Junior G Man badge. At opening talks were made by local police and membership cards in the Junior G Man Club were distributed. Space was left on cards for fingerprinting which was done second week of serial by police in theatre lobby. Stunt broke dailies with stories ahead and during run.

Al Myers, at Warners' Ritz Theatre, York, Pa., got free plugs directly from maestro Tommy Dorsey when he played "Las Vegas Nights." It seems that Dorsey was playing a one-night stand at the Valencia Ballroom in the city.

A first timer was secured by James Keefe at the Cambria, in Johnstown, Pa., for "Thief of Bagdad," with permission secured from the Schoolboy Safety patrol for distribution of material in classes, with special children's admission prices. Another first time stunt was cooperation received from Superintendent of Schools who notified principals to urge attendance of students at special matinee.

For the showing of "Lady Eve" at the Indiana Theatre, in Bedford, Ind., Manager Carroll Hannah promoted a page of co-op ads from local merchants. In addition an effective lobby display was constructed to sell his Spring Jubilee of Hits. Artificial flowers gave festive air to the setpiece.

Jay King, manager of Warners' Yorktown Theatre, York, Pa., hit the schools with a telegram on "Western Union." He arranged for all the teachers to read his message on the picture to the students.

TOMPKINS SELLS CHANGE IN POLICY WITH INGENIOUS TEASER CAMPAIGN

Twelve-Day Advance Newspaper and Lobby Promotion Idea Tied to Elkhart Arrival of Indiana - Illinois Manager

Recently transferred by Alex Manta to the helm of Indiana-Illinois theatres, in Elkhart, Ind., Chick Tompkins wanted something out of the ordinary to spotlight a policy change at the Elco and while doing so, to introduce himself to the community as the new headman. So, to start 12 days ahead of the change, Chick worked out a featured newspaper teaser ad campaign to whip up interest and also to bow in the first attraction, "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary."

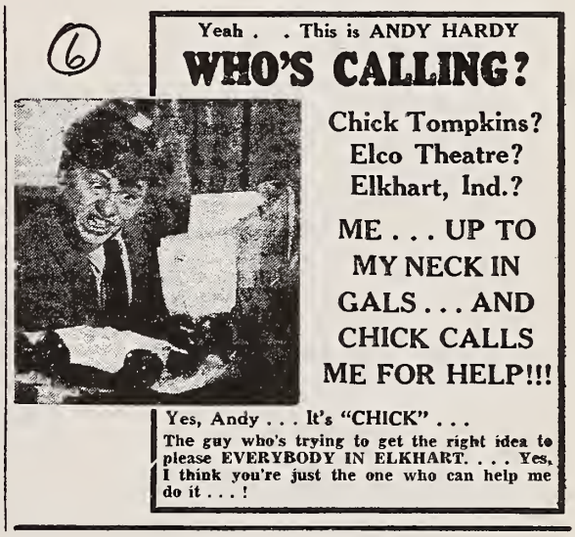
On this page are reproduced the advertising highlights of the promotion, a series of one and two-column layouts and numbered accordingly, following through on a theme wherein, a "bewildered" manager sought ideas to suit all local theatre patrons. Not shown is the final two-column teaser, an elaboration of ad "No. 8" and which stresses "Tomorrow Is the Day," copy urging readers to watch the papers for details on the policy change. The "tomorrow" ad was a four-column with all the policy low-down plus copy for the "Hardy" date.

Tompkins notes the first four which gave no inkling of the campaign, the theatre slant coming in on the fifth ad which carried cut of Mickey Rooney. From then on, Tompkins kept building up to the finale as public curiosity grew and grew, the theatre receiving many calls from the folks who wanted to know. In answer, the girls were instructed to say: "Watch the papers for an important announcement to be made soon."

Plants Garden of Hits

Tied in with the newspaper was an ingenious "teaser" lobby display, and illustrated in the photo pages of this section. Coincident with the ads, Chick put together a lifesize cutout of himself, with hoe in hand, working on a garden plot for which he promoted five loads of dirt, spotting a few rocks, backgrounds and question marks on sticks. Every few days, keeping pace with the newspaper teasers, copy was added, the "growing plants" tagged with cards of explanation and labelled "Idea No. 1," "No. 2," etc. Further changes saw more "growth" in copy until the finale tied in with the ad campaign.

Screen trailers were also a part of the promotion with copy to fit, as was a series of house heralds, copy changed in accordance. An example of how Chick built the new policy and announced himself, is the following front-page copy:



"Thank You. Thank You. I wish to thank the many people that I have met in Elkhart for their kind words and friendliness. After only two weeks' residence here, it is evident that Elkhart is a friendly, hospitable city. It will be my pleasure and ambition to provide a New Novel Method of Motion Picture Presentation. Watch for it."

The five ads here reproduced highlight the continuity of the teaser series by Chick Tompkins, detailed on this page, number encircled in each ad to note its sequence in the 12-day campaign. Sole identification in the first four ads was the "Chick" at the bottom with "Andy Hardy" brought in on the fifth, as noted, to work up interest in date on "Private Secretary." After the picture opened, Tompkins continued to utilize the "Andy Hardy" cuts for extra spotlighting on his new policy.

Speaker Company Acquired

THE ASSETS of the Lansing Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles, makers of theatre horn systems and other sound equipment parts, have been acquired by the Altec Service Corporation, it has been announced by L. W. Conrow, president of Altec. A new company has been formed, called the Altec Lansing Corporation, which is headed by G. L. Carrington, vice-president and general manager of Altec. Mr. Conrow stated that the company will expand the distribution facilities for Lansing products on a national basis.

Making Diffusers of Steel

AS A RESULT of Government restrictions on aluminum, the Anemostat Corporation of America, New York, manufacturers of aspirating type air diffusers, have tooled up to spin the largest and second largest of the Type "B" and Type "C" diffusers out of special ductile spinning steel, instead of aluminum. These are the types widely used in theatres. Other types are already being manufactured entirely of steel, according to August Rust-Oppenheim, president of the company, who states that engineers have found steel to have certain advantages over aluminum, being stronger. Spinning the units of steel, however, is proving more costly; nevertheless, prices have not been advanced.

Named Motiograph Distributors

TWO NEW exclusive territorial distributors of Motiograph projectors and sound equipment have been appointed by Motiograph, Inc., Chicago. The Stebbins Theatre Equipment Company, Kansas City, Mo., has been given the entire Kansas City film service territory, while the Falls City Theatre Equipment Company, Louisville, Ky., covers a corresponding area centering in Louisville.

New Branch Opened

NEW DISPLAY rooms and offices have been established by the Kroehler Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of retracting seat auditorium chairs and lounge furniture, in San Francisco, at 24 Golden Gate. Herbert Jack is manager.

Test Film Addition

AN ADDITIONAL recording of dialogue has been made by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences for its theatre sound test reel ASTR-2. The clip may be added to test reels now in use.

To Distribute Reel

EXCLUSIVE distribution of the reels manufactured by Universal Reels, Inc., New York, has been taken over by Neumade Products, New York, according to an announcement of the manufacturer.

New Supervisors Named

TWO FIELD supervisors for air-conditioning have been appointed by General Electric. Paul M. Hooven, Jr., will handle air-conditioning service in the East, with headquarters in Cleveland; Dorcey F. Hines has the Western section, with his office in Kansas City.

Blower Catalog Issued

A CATALOG describing blowers, air washers and accessory equipment has been issued by the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation of New York. All-steel blowers embrace outputs from 2,100 to 44,000 c.f.m., with motors up to 10 h.p., and a variety of discharge arrangements to meet any installation conditions, and also with twin blowers on a single shaft operated by a single motor. The company's "Coola-Weather" evaporative cooling systems, with rotary atomizer, have capacities from 1,200 to 22,000 c.f.m. Separate washed air chambers are also listed for additions to existing blower systems. The line of ventilating equipment accessories described includes metal grilles, spray nozzles, exhaust fans and roof type ventilators.

Lighting Fluorescent Carpet

A COMPREHENSIVE discussion of methods of activating fluorescent carpeting is presented in a booklet just issued by the Continental Lithograph Corporation of Cleveland. The publication has been prepared by the Conti-Glo Division, which handles the "black light" products of the company. These include both luminescent lacquer-enamels and "black light" fixtures. The text discusses selection and location of light sources, and includes instruction sheets and templates for making lighting layouts.

Named RCA Representative

APPOINTMENT of Walter G. Preddey Theatre Supplies, San Francisco equipment dealers, as representative in Northern California, has been made by RCA. The products include Photophone sound equipment, RCA-Hurley plastic screens, and other theatre products.

One of the new display cases of the Liberty theatre in New York, equipped with slotted chromium still holders. Such inside frames, which greatly facilitate mounting of display matter, are available in a variety of sizes. The entire installation is by the Colonial Sales Corporation of New York, manufacturers of wood moulding display cases finished in metal. Stainless steel is usually employed, but brass, bronze and other metals can also be used. Cases can also be furnished, if desired, with fluorescent or lumiline lighting. All joints are soldered, and doors are hung with continuous hinges and have cylinder locks.

Machining Projector Parts Today

■ Much of the advances in products represent advances in the equipment with which they are made. It is so in projector making, and these scenes at the plant of the International Projector Corporation in New York exemplify the precision which goes into the making of motion picture projectors today. Inspection throughout manufacture plays a vital part. Inspectors are assigned to every machine and operation, and they use almost every available kind of instrument—hand, dial, plug, micrometer, light beam, vernier, and even a comparator. Gauges have less tolerance than parts they check, and a tolerance of .0001-inch is general.

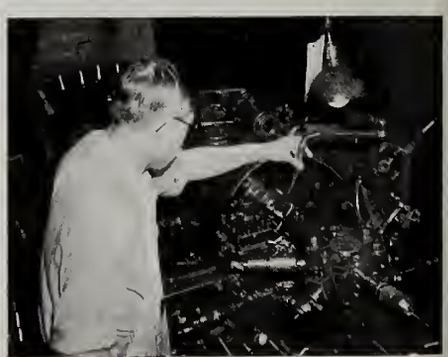
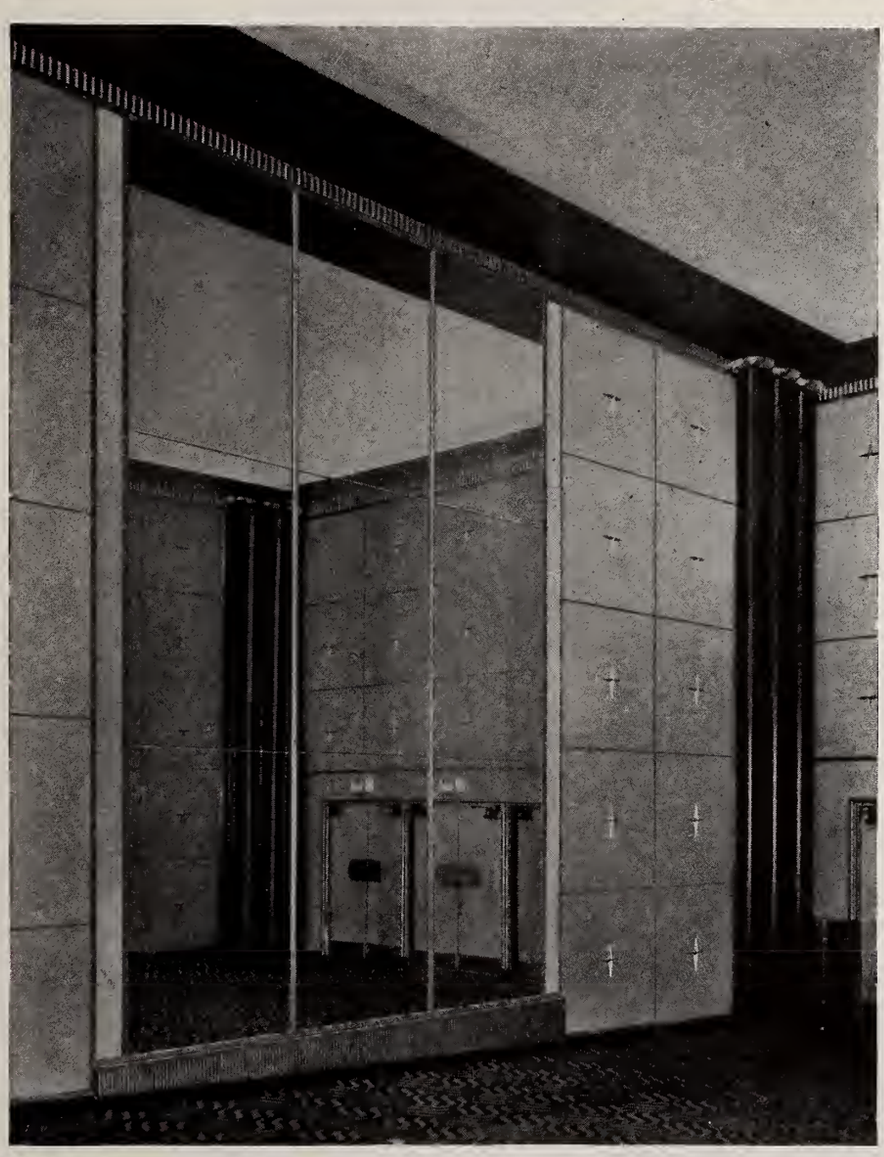
Above, straddle milling process through which such parts as film gate and trap have to go. At left is a surface grinding machine which grinds film shoes and similar parts. And the chap below is an internal grinder, which grinds lens holders and other tubular parts inside.



Checking gauges with which projector parts are checked. Gauges are inspected optically to plus or minus .00001-inch, and also with gauge blocks.



The two bottom views show turret lathe operation, affecting innumerable parts, including intermittent cases and gear shafts. The right-hand machine is practically automatic, requiring infrequent setting.

THERE are lots of things you can do to attract crowds to your theatre. But one of the most successful . . . and most widely used . . . is to offer the public a well-designed interior, made attractive with glass. People naturally prefer to patronize a theatre that's smart and inviting inside. Brighten up your theatre with mirrors, plate glass, glass blocks, structural glass . . . give it the glamor of glass . . . and you'll find it will draw more customers and boost box office receipts. A modest expenditure can often make a tremendous difference in the appeal your theatre makes to the public.

You can improve your theatre's appearance in scores of ways by using Pittsburgh Glass. Send for our free book of examples. We suggest that you call in an architect or interior designer and let him show you the possibilities. If you have trouble getting in touch with a design expert, we'll gladly assist you. Feather Foam Front takes the pressure off the Popliteal *

YES—here is a theatre seat that is wonderfully soft and comfortable. It's American Seating's Feather Foam Front—the latest, greatest achievement in theatre chair design.

Feather Foam Front takes the pressure off the Popliteal. This is done through elimination of hard steel wires and rolled or packed stuffing across the front edge of the seat. It's so soft, legs can't go to sleep!

Feather Foam Front is now available—at no extra cost—on American Bodiform, Commodore, Zephyr and Zenith Chairs. New color schemes . . . new streamlined designs . . . and Feather Foam Front make these chairs indisputably America's greatest buys in theatre chairs. See them.

* Popliteal—according to Webster—"the back part of the leg behind the knee joint." Pressure on the Popliteal causes legs to "go to sleep" and is responsible for discomfort and nervousness.

ISSUE OF MAY 31, 1941. VOLUME 143, NUMBER 9

The SMPE Recommends, Including a Language

NOT THE MOST important, probably, but at any rate one of the most interesting revelations of the spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was a glossary of terms representing an attempt to define various aspects of the motion picture theatre. The fact that this was done by a technical body, including architects, indicates serious recognition of how much the film theatre has become a piece of engineering, suggesting some exact defining so that we all know just what we are talking about.

This lexicon, which we will look at in a moment, and additional defining of projection arc types, formed the most substantial parts of the report of the Theatre Engineering Committee, which now coordinates the principal committees of the Society, under the chairmanship of Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, with Harry Rubin heading the Projection Practice Subcommittee, and Ben Schlanger the Theatre Design Subcommittee. Always likely to break out with something of acute and immediate importance to the planning and operating of theatres, these groups had not progressed far enough in studies undertaken to make any arousing pronouncements. The mills of the gods and technicians grind slowly.

AUDITORIUM LIGHT UNIFORMITY

One of the more casual items of the report, however, did deal with a matter of immediate importance, even though it offered nothing unknown. This was a section on uniformity of light intensity in the auditorium, the desirability of which is constantly ignored in our theatre planning. The following statements from the report, which are substantially as made therein, really constitute a rule:

"It is recommended that the wall and ceiling surfaces within the spectators' field of vision, while viewing the picture, should appear to the audience as a uniformly lighted surface. Anything in the illumination of the auditorium that would distract patrons' attention from the picture should be avoided. Showing of color pictures urges that the lighting and wall surfaces be neutral. No change of light intensity should be made unless it is gradual."

The recommendation goes on to say that spots of light, due to placement of focal light sources along the walls in the field of vision, and decorative devices which cast shadows along the walls, thereby causing intermittent areas of light, should be avoided. Trapping of light from lobby or foyer areas so that it does not get into the auditorium is also urged in another passage dealing with what should be obvious to all designers and exhibitors, but apparently isn't.

GIVING THE THEATRE A LANGUAGE

As for the glossary of terms used in theatre design, thirty-eight terms were defined, covering plan divisions and devices. Many deal with familiar matters, but the aim of the committee is to achieve standard usage, not only in common parlance, but in building codes. An aisle, for example, finds place in the lexicon, despite its presence in common dictionaries; in the proposed theatre-world speech it becomes merely "a passageway in a seating area." Altogether, the terms themselves follow usage long in effect in showbusiness. One might have expected our technical friends to come up with a new word for auditorium, in deference to the performance as a picture; they didn't do this (but somewhere in the report we did note the use, for the plural, of the Latin form auditoria!).

Such matters will not appear to most readers of these lines as bearing very much, if at all, on their affairs, and they don't, directly; however, ideas about these affairs have to be clearly conveyed to one another, and codes, which affect our operations, should be exact, hence this attempt to provide a system of terms for theatre divisions and formations should ultimately have some practical value.

W. E. CONTROL TRACK SOUND

A generous portion of the time of the convention was taken up by demonstrations by Bell Laboratories engineers of control-track sound. These did not represent the development of any specific equipment; they merely exhibited the greater sense of reality that can be produced by the use of several tracks and speaker channels. The system used, employing four tracks, was comparable to that used in the Erpi demonstrations at Carnegie Hall, New York, about a year ago, rather than any which Western Electric has submitted in the Academy Research Council's present work on control-track methods suited to the commercial theatre.

Here it may be interesting to note that for regular theatre use, WE engineers express themselves as dubious about multiple-horn systems that have usually been associated with control track sound, at least for the present. In the Research Council experimentation, WE has submitted a plan for a single horn system with pickup from one film having a control track placed between the standard sound track and the picture. This system is aimed merely at increasing volume at certain narrative points for dramatic effect. At the same time another WE scheme offered for consideration does use three speaker channels with single-film pickup having three control tracks squeezed into the space occupied by the present standard sound track, and the sound track itself squeezed into space between the control tracks and picture.

Seating Preview

Evidence that theatre managers are rapidly become more and more equipment-conscious in their attentions to showmanship comes in most every day, but not always are the stunts as forthright as that of Chuck Shannon of Warners' Whitehall theatre in Pittsburgh.

In addition to newspaper copy on his reseating job, Mr. Shannon placed a sample of the Ideal chair model with which the theatre was reseated, smack-dab in the vestibule, outside, with a placard reading.

"Don't take our word for it! See for yourself; before you purchase your next ticket be convinced of the numerous advantages you experience in our 1,000 modern and luxurious seats. . . . You can now enjoy every show with extra comfort and relaxation in 'Tomorrow's Chair Today'."

Also included in the display were photographs indicating the chair dimensions and the auditorium layout, plus a picture of the chair itself, with copy emphasizing (perhaps our good friend Dave Schmidt of American Seating, and Mr. Shannon should get together on this) that the Whitehall's new chairs relieve pressure on the Popliteal!

"Black Light" Experiment

The obvious advantages of lighting fluorescent aisle carpeting with "black light" sources in the end standards of seating accounts for some persistence in the use of this method. It will be recalled that the first installation of the fluorescent type of Alexander Smith Crestwood Velvet carpeting, in the Kennedy theatre in Washington, D. C., Warner house designed by John Eberson, initially was activated by argon lamps in end standards that the Chuck Shannon's "seating preview" at the front of the Whitehall theatre in Pittsburgh.

Ideal Seating Company made up especially for this purpose. These light sources failed to bring out sufficient fluorescence of the carpeting, and overhead units were used.

More recently other attempts have been made to use the end standard method, with modifications, and apparently with somewhat similar results. In the State theatre in San Diego an argon lamp was placed in each standard of chairs especially designed by the American Seating Company. The architect of the State was S. Charles Lee, who now reports:

"The flow of light was fairly even, although the quantity proved insufficient. We therefore increased the voltage from 110 to 150; however, we decided to discontinue this arrangement because the argon lamps turned black too soon with introduction of the additional voltage."

Yet another variation of the end standard method was applied in the Vogue theatre in Cincinnati. Here three argon lamps were placed in each standard. Responding to an inquiry, Maurice A. Chase, operator of the Vogue, writes:

"While the results are fair, the system is not by any means entirely satisfactory Considering the cost and the results, we do not think the system is worth the money. The charge for the aisle lights and the three bulbs, as well as necessary wiring, amounted to about $5 per aisle standard. This is not due to any fault of the various manufacturers concerned; I realized when I started that it was an experiment."

Mr. Chase adds that when the problem "is finally licked, it will be done by using the aisle standard system of lighting."

Paragraphs

Speaking of "black light" applications, we are reminded of some interesting remarks made the other day by A. Strobl of the Stroblite Company, manufacturers of luminescent lacquers used in "black light" decoration. He pointed out that architectectural decoration calls for consideration of some factors that do not apply to stage production fluorescent effects, to which this technique was originally confined. In stage work, there is always plenty of ultraviolet light available, whereas interior decoration demands restricted placement of special units, while for maximum efficiency, colors must be chosen which give the greatest reaction. These, he said, are green, yellow and orange. Additionally, Mr. Strobl pointed out, the purpose of the stage application is to dazzle, while luminescent decoration should be subdued.

A bill recently submitted to the Illinois Legislature would limit motion picture thetre programs to 135 minutes, unless there were a 15-minute intermission after each hour. . . . You can write your own comment, not forgetting to use the word regimentation, and some others we can't print.

GLASS MURALS

FOYER STUDY: AT RIGHT
LOUNGE STUDY: NEXT PAGE

■ A late development among the ever-increasing applications of glass to architecture and decoration, is the mural composed in mosaic pieces of colored glass (the method is described on the following page). Above is an original design for a glass mural in a foyer, expressing a theme of gaiety in a modern delineation of figures symbolizing the lively arts. Uniquely colorful (this reproduction is of course in monochrome) and fascinating in both its brilliance and figure formation, a glass mural prominently placed in a foyer provides rich and enduring embellishment of otherwise plain walls.

■ An original design (reproduced in monochrome) for a glass mural in a women's lounge or cosmetic room. This is a delicate, but simple arrangement of feminine decorative motifs, in gold and silver. The darker areas, i.e. the rectangle in the center and the conventionalized drape, are intended for gold, the remainder for silver mirror. This may be accomplished on a single sheet of plate by using a mitred line to separate said areas before silvering. The figure of the Blackamoor, also the detail in the drape, are obtained by sandblast on the mirror-face. Such a mirror would be a decorative accessory rather than a focal spot. Being a lighter and less obtrusive form of decoration than inlaid Vitrolite, it lends itself better to the treatment of a women's lounge, which would naturally be entirely feminine.

MAKING A GLASS MURAL

THE subjects adapted to murals in glass mosaic are essentially as varied and numerous as any mural material. The designs prepared for Better Theatres by the art department of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company and presented above and on the preceding page, indicate, so far as possible by reproduction in monochrome, themes appropriate to theatres and how they may be executed in this new technique. In considering the subject possibilities, one should not overlook the appeal of local traditions, or the associations of the name of the theatre (historical, mythical and similar names) when wrought in a colorful, illustrative or fanciful creation of glass mosaic.

After the subject of the mural is decided upon and a color sketch made up and submitted for the owner's or architect's approval, an accurate outline drawing is made to a 1-inch to 3-inch scale, depending upon the over-all size of the design. This is blown up or enlarged to full size and joints of inlay marked thereon. Thin, colored opaque, or mirrored, inlay glasses, about 3/32-inch thick, to correspond as closely as possible to the colors indicated on the approved color sketch, are then selected from a color range of approximately 50 colors (sandblasted tones in varying degrees are sometimes applied to the surface of these inlay glasses, thereby increasing the color range and enabling the designer to achieve much softer and more subdued shade effects when these are desired instead of brilliance).

A panel of Vitrolite structural glass is next covered with a stencil material, which is a heavy paper to one side of which an adhesive has been applied. The full-size detail, or a print of it, is then pasted on the surface of the stencil paper, and when this has dried sufficiently, the outlines of the design are cut through to the face of the glass with a stencil knife. The parts of the stencil representing the inlaid portions of the design are then removed and these openings sandblasted to a depth of approximately 1/8 inch. The pieces of inlay glass are next cut into shapes to conform to those of the sandblasted depressions, then ground slightly smaller and the edges back mitered to the same angle as the edges of the sandblasted areas. Large expanses of inlay are subdivided into smaller sections to achieve an effect similar to that of mosaics.

When the glass to be inlaid is all shaped and carefully fitted into place, it is removed from the Vitrolite background and an asphaltic mastic combed or spread into the sandblasted depressions. The various sections of colored inlay are then pressed into place so that the face is flush with the surface of the background. Any excess mastic is scraped off and the panels permitted to set overnight, or until the mastic has set up and cured. After a final wash down with a liquid cleanser, the glass mural is ready for packing and shipping for installation on the theatre wall.

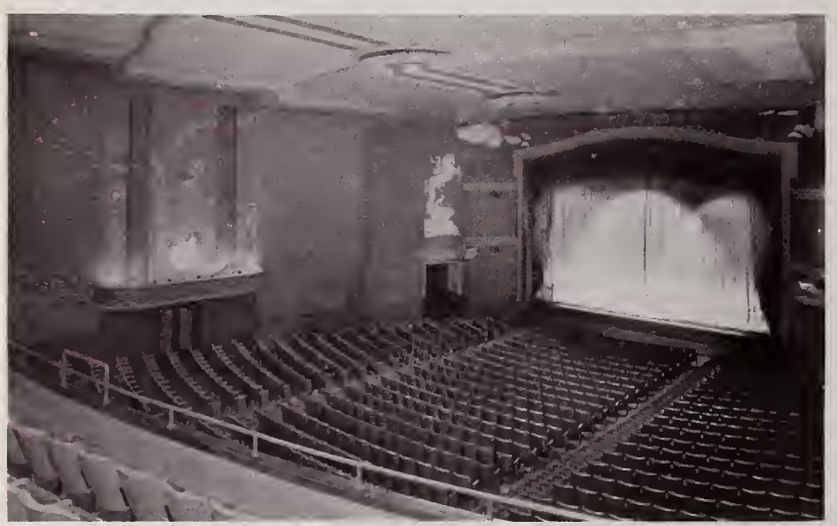
FOYER-STANDEE-LOUNGE SCHEME

■ The scheme offered here represents an effort to make the most efficient use of plot area to provide maximum number of seats without sacrifice of commodious traffic space and attractive lounge facilities. The arrangement also incorporates placement of confectionery vending equipment at the approach to the foyer-standee, so as to "catch" both ingoing and outgoing patrons. The foyer-standee itself is designed to provide lounge space having an adequate "feeling" of privacy without resorting to separate rooms, which would require more space and "cramp" the standee. Mirrors, having a purse-and-package shelf (which is placed low enough to prevent its being mistaken for a seat), are therefore placed on both sides of the foyer-standee, incorporated into the seating nooks as decorative features, yet providing some cosmetic facilities (about as much as most women require). The design lends itself to many variations in treatment; however, the following decorative specifications indicate the style intended: Ceiling, plaster painted pale blue; built-out cornice light cove of Maca-wood, with cove plaster painted off-white; lounge nook formed by rounded pylons just inside doors from lobby having black Formica base, coral Formica wainscot, and upper surface covered with pale blue figured Wall-Tex (which is applied like wallpaper); built-in seats covered with coral simulated leather; murals above seats painted on plaster or canvas, or (for more brilliant effect) done in colored glass mosaic. Incidentally, Flexglass would also attractively finish the rounded pylon above the wainscot.

of many things To make the Theatre Beautiful

SHOWPLACE LUXURY of the OSWEGO THEATRE, Oswego, N. Y.

John & Drew Eberson, Architects



Following the style of colorful elegance readily to be identified with the creative manner of the architects, the Schine circuit's new theatre in Oswego, N. Y., is a veritable exhibit of modern materials and devices with which to provide a luxurious and interesting environment for the theatregoer. Entrance is by cheery bright-toned Formica doors into a lobby (not pictured) having similarly designed pilasters, then by Formica doors to foyer.

Occupying space beneath the balcony, the sloping ceiling is ornamented in a stenciled sunburst effect, while Anemostat air diffusers are supported by decorative plaques. Walls are of damask over rock wool, and this treatment is also followed in lounge area off this foyer (see cosmetic room at upper right), since lounges are left open to general view. Shown at left is the men's, at right the women's lounge at either end of the mezzanine foyer, the picture of which (below, right) shows how wall treatment, ceiling and cove lighting effect integration of the lounge space with the foyer itself. Main carpeted areas are laid with a Mohawk Velvet (in 4/4 width) of vivid pattern in a relatively large scale; carpeting in the cosmetic rooms, however, is in two-tone fabrics in smaller scale, while the men's lounge space has rubber flooring with decorative striping forming center lane to toilet room.

Covered in cotton-rayon damask in an allover pattern, the side walls of the auditorium of the Oswego theatre are punctuated at center with a modern-figure decorative panel painted in Stroblite luminiscent lacquers to form "black light" ornamentation during projection (ultraviolet light sources are concealed in a projecting band at bottom of panel). Relief-painted "Pegasus" figures ornament the front wall at each side of the arch.

FLUORESCENT SPLASH PANEL

One of the most interesting developments in the field of "black light" decoration is Fluorescent Formica, with which designs can be executed in Formica, having the resistant and decorative qualities of that plastic material, with inlays chemically treated in manufacture so as to be fluorescent under ultraviolet light. Fluorescent Formica forms the splash panel of the drinking fountain in the Oswego theatre pictured at left. There are two such fountains in the Oswego—one in the main floor foyer, and another in the mezzanine foyer. The ultraviolet light unit is placed in a decorative fixture just over the panel, reflecting the radiation over it.

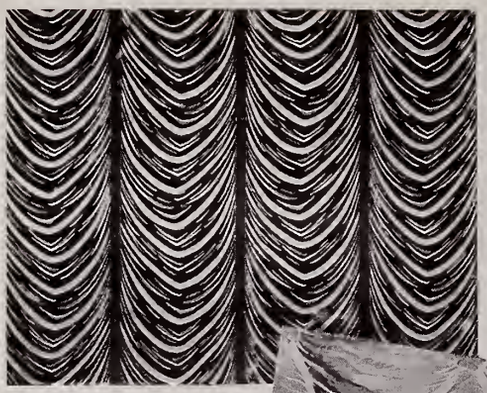
FLOOR CHARM

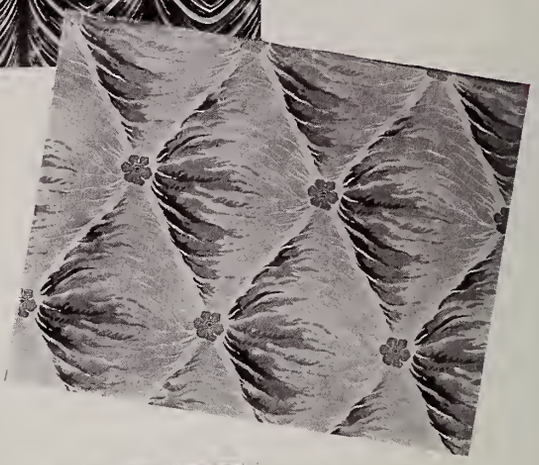
Strengthening the atmospheric treatment of the Beach theatre in Miami (above) is an open floral pattern in Alexander Smith Crestwood Velvet. Below Smith broadlooms are used in homey lounge area of the Telenews, Cleveland, laid variantly to distinguish the rooms.

Above, in the Main Street Playhouse in Kew Gardens, Long Island, a Karagheusian Wilton provides dominant decoration in a cursive pattern.

"BLACK LIGHT" MURALS PAINTED ON VELOUR

Development of distinctive methods of applying "black light" to the decoration of theatre auditoriums continues with the increasing use of this unique newcomer to the arts of interior treatment. These striking examples of "black light" decoration were painted on velour. Designed by Oscar Glas of the Belgian Art Studios, New York, the murals flank the proscenium opening of the Essex theatre in Port Henry, N. Y. The method employing Conti-Glo fluorescent lacquer-enamels on white velour, gives a definite third-dimensional effect. White or pastel velours are most easily worked and give the lacquers maximum brightness. The fluorescent lacquers are sprayed or brushed directly onto white velours; but if a darker fabric is used, best results are obtained by coating the luminescent areas first with white tempera color, or plain lacquer before using fluorescent paints.

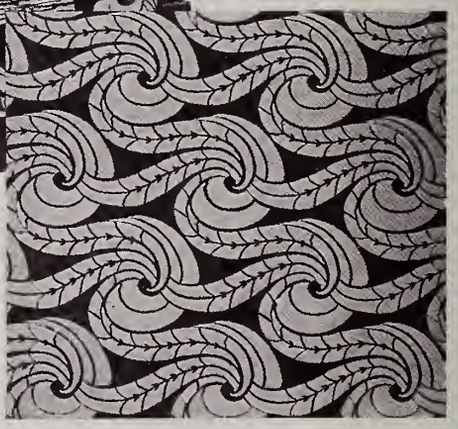




MIRRORS TO ENLIVEN AND ENLARGE

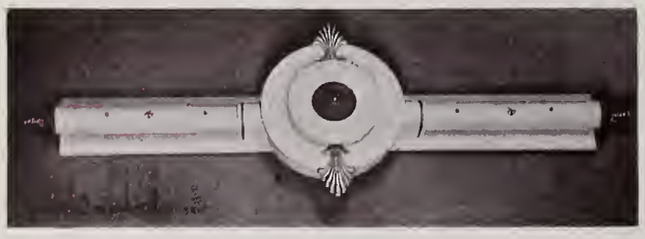
Making in themselves decorative features which are easily maintained, mirrors multiply available light, and multiply room cubage. The impressiveness of a mirror panel reaching from baseboard to ceiling in the foyer, is well illustrated by the above view of the Dennis theatre in Pittsburgh. It has 12 mirror sections by Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company.

NEW WALL AND DRAPE FABRICS



For finishing of auditorium walls, laid over non-decorative acoustical materials, as well as for foyer, lounge and stage drapes, cotton-and-rayon damasks provide a variety of interesting patterns plus durability at relatively low cost.

Above is another new Maharam damask with a drape or festoon effect woven in. This design may be had in blue and gold, red and gold, or rust and gold, or in special colorings woven to order.



Pictured above is the latest creation of the Maharam Fabric Corporation, a damask woven to give a tufted effect. Stock fabrics are available in copper, in blue and gold, and red and gold.

Immediately above is a damask of cotton and spun rayon recently developed especially for theatres by Dazian's, New York, providing a graceful, flowing pattern adapted to most interior styles. Reversible color combinations suggested to bring out the full values of the pattern are pearl, royal blue, coral, green, lemon, beige, light blue, rust or claret against an oyster-white ground. . . . The fabric illustrated to the left of this one is another new addition to the Dazian line—a satin damask designed for any theatre application, wall coverings as well as front stage curtains and doorway drapes. It is available in combinations of red and gold, rust and gold, orange and gold, and blue and silver.

ORNAMENTAL LUMINAIRES

Ornamental light sources, frequently the sole or chief means of illuminating theatres, also supplement architectural lighting. Indicating stock fixtures available in modern treatments are these recent creations of the McFadden Lighting Company. At left is a 3-lamp luminaire in white metal finish with polished castings and crystal rosettes. That below is of fluted metal trimmed with crystal and having a center piece with etched glass bezel designed for efficient light emission. At right is an 8-lamp luminaire of fluted metal.

Snappy— LOBBY PILASTERS & DOORS IN SCHINE'S OSWEGO THEATER

BRIGHT COLORS DON'T FADE

EASY TO CLEAN

INTRICATELY inlaid pilasters of Formica in the lobby are a distinctive feature of this theater designed by John and Drew Eberson. The Formica provides a means of introducing some bright theatrical colors where they will do the most good.

In hundreds of the better modern theaters all over the country Formica doors offer a warm, bright welcome to the public. Nothing is handsomer; nothing can be more practical, for these colorful doors are smooth and easy to clean by the simplest methods. No laborious polishing is necessary. The colors are stable and do not fade. They do not chip or crack, and they wear like metal. After years of use they look as they did when they were first installed.

If you have a theater to build or modernize get the facts about Formica. Literature with color charts on request.

FOR BUILDING PURPOSES

Materials Point the Way

Reviewing some of the older, reporting some of the newer product for finishing the theatre interior

THE METHODS of modern industry, harnessing the scientist and designer into a pretty well co-ordinated production team, have been adding to our stock of building, finishing and decorating materials with such rapidity and ingenuity that in relatively just a few years the architect and interior decorator have become faced with the problem, not so much of what to do, as what not to do—that is to say, they are somewhat hard-pressed to keep abreast of developments so as to be able to make the most advantageous selection from among the newer products that have been pouring into the designer's bag of tricks.

Not so many years ago what one did about the theatre interior, which is the concern of this review, was a matter largely of plaster and paint, perhaps some wood mouldings, plus a few drapes and chandeliers. Today not only have older materials been given radically new uses—for example, glass and metals—but entirely new materials have been wrought out of both nature and the synthetics of the industrial laboratory. Just as words that are sought to express an idea, themselves suggest ideas, so have finishing and decorative products available today suggested new design devices even as they have brought more effective or more economical renderings of the old.

Glass, for example, provides a new treatment for pilasters, bases, framing panels for doors, etc., in the modern structural forms; at the same time, architectural glass suggests luminous insets in doors to lounges, perhaps with sandblasted figures identifying the lounge, or luminous aisle-head markers on the standee rail; fluted translucent glass and glass blocks suggest foyer windows; Flexglass, which consists in tiny bits of white or colored mirror glass on a flexible fabric backing, lends interest to wall areas which otherwise might form dull barriers, and it is as applicable to rounded surfaces as it is to flat; and glass mosaic on glass panels can form a colorful mural brilliant and fascinating enough to provide, together with the carpeting, almost the sole decorative interest of a foyer or a lounge.

FLEXGLASS

Flexglass is an ingenious material of a thousand uses for decorative finishing. Besides being admirably adapted to pilasters and comparable elements, it has been suggested for mirrored ceilings, borders for display frames, rounded sides of archways, especially those forming recesses into which fountains or candy vending machines are set. It has been effectively used to finish off the fascia of built-in candy counters, as suggested in refreshment booth schemes elsewhere in this issue (page 24). Another interesting use of Flexglass is at corners of rooms which have been rounded to eliminate the barren effect of square corners. Wherever shaped surfaces are active elements in the room design, Flexglass during bad weather and heavy traffic!

SAVE YOUR EXPENSIVE CARPETS

Many theatres find Sisalcrest rugs and runners suitable for year 'round service. Others, with expensive wool carpeting, use these colorful, attractive sisal runners in foyer and aisles during bad weather and heavy traffic periods. They not only save wool carpeting, but at the same time provide a rich and refreshing decorative change.

Sisalcrest is an all-sisal rug woven from the finest stock dyed Java Sisal. The clear sparkling colors are colorfast and the rug is easily washed. The subtle pattern is woven through and through the rug, providing perfect reversibility and double wear.

Sisalcrest is available in any length desired and in widths from 27 inches to 12 feet. It can be rolled out in a few moments when needed, then rolled up and set out of the way between periods of use. It lies flat, is cushiony under foot, highly attractive, looks expensive—but the cost is moderate.

monotonous as a decorative device, increases the apparent room size, adds to the illumination by reflecting available light, offers no maintenance problem, and can serve milady, as well as her gentleman, just as well in the foyer as in a lounge to help get the hat or the necktie straight.

PLASTIC AND NATURAL VENEERS

Another great family of finishing materials is that of the ever-expanding plastic and natural veneers. Foremost among the laminated resin group is Formica, which covers a full range of colors from pastel to deep shades, and includes both special patterns and wood-grains. It too is highly recommended by its durability, feel and look of quality, and ease of maintenance. Additionally, for the finishing of entrance and lobby doors, it has the advantage of sealing the door structure perfectly against temperature changes and moisture.

For doors, pilasters, bases, wainscots, display case borders, splash panels, and many other comparable applications, Formica gives a colorful, hard finish. It can be laid in various colors to form any kind of pattern, with the design marked out in metal mouldings, if desired. It offers also other enduring, interesting design possibilities by means of inlaid metals. Yet another decorative application of Formica is offered in the fluorescent type of this material; this permits pictorial or abstract figurations by means of fluorescent inlays, which glow under "black light." This material has been most effectively used in theatres already, particularly for drinking fountain splash panels.
